Poetry.

For the Patriot.

When I Die.

RUTH BASSETT.

I hope that when I die, my whole past life
  Will be like some sweet vision I have dreamed:
Unshadowed by no mean or sinful act,
  Or doubt that things were not just what they seemed.

That every floweret in the shady dell
  Will breathe my name in perfume on the air,
And leafy trees will murmur soft and low
  Some little word I once had spoken there.

While every being I have met in life
  Will love my memory with a reverence deep;
And thoughts of me will rush o'er everyone,
  Whose gaze rests on some thing I'd wished to keep.

In fact the very breeze will call to mind,
  Some tender act of kindness I have given;
My name and deeds will linger on the earth,
  My soul the while be welcomed up in Heaven.

Miscellany.

A KANSAS HONEYMOON.

Crawling across the prairie, came a dusty farm wagon drawn by two dusty horses and holding two dusty women. Any observer could have told that the younger of these was a gentlewoman; as plainly, she was a New England woman. Her gray travelling gown, in spite of the dust, gave her the air of a person accustomed to be both immaculately and appropriately garbed. She sat, unconsciously, as far as the seat would permit her from good Mrs. Armil, who drove.

But, all the same, she had a substantial regard for the countrywoman, whom she had, for two years, supplied with good moral and entertaining literature, as the secretary of a "Post-office Mission." In fact, she was enduring dust and a hot Kansas sun in this particular part of the state, rather than some other, because of her interest in Mrs. Armil. Having been within an hour's ride by rail of the little town that was Mrs. Armil's post-office, she had come the evening before to the village inn, and having visited Mrs. Armil for an hour or two (discovering in that time all that the most curious post-office mission could care to learn of her history and condition,) she was now conscientiously looking up the destitution of Kansas for the congregation's benevolence.

Mrs. Armil thought her a "mighty curis lady;" but Mrs. Armil was from the south, and took things easily without diving uncomfortably for the reason of moral puzzles. Quite satisfied, therefore, she rattled the reins at the horses and discoursed on the misfortunes of the country.

"Well, yes, ma'am, we are pretty bad off," she said, continuing the conversation, "and I was right glad to be able to give round that box you all sent, I was so! I gave a heap of the tea to the sick ones—well, I guess the only well ones got any was old lady Turnyard, who's bedrid, so really you can't jest call her well, and she ain't had any tea since Washington's birthday, and did set sech store by it, she reglerly cried when I gave it to her; and Hetty Armil—she was kinder punying round, didn't know what ailed her, but I reckon she ben working too hard, she is the greatest one to work I ever did see! If Seth Rogers only had her horse sense and would work her way, they wouldn't have a mortgage overdue like they got, no sir!"

"Mr. Rogers is a member of the legislature, isn't he?"

"Yes, he is, and red hot for every fool law that will make bad come to wuss. You see, Seth he's a real nice man, but he's one of them men that reads a heap of things in books, and thinks everything that's printed must be true; and he's got a notion that laws run theirselves, which ain't my experience. But I reckon sence he got up to the legislature he's found out every farmers' alliance man ain't an angel jes' fresh let out of heaven, like he 'lowed they was to first. He's got a sorter obstinate streak in him, too—'tain't all Hetty's fault, though I ain't excusing of her. I told her plum out what I thought of her. 'If you got a righteous grudge agin Seth Rogers,' says I, 'why don't you divide up honest and part, that's fair and decent,' says I; 'but this living in the same house with a man person and never parting lips to him, not so much as a howdy when he comes back home or 'Wish ye well' when he goes away—I call it scandilous.'"

"Then she hasn't much to say to her husband?" asked Miss Brainerd, feeling more interested.

"Much to say!" screamed Mrs. Armil, "law me! Why, she ain't spoke a mortal word to him for mor'n ten years. That boy of hers, Leon, ain't never heard his mother speak to his father!"

"But, what made them do that way in the first place?"

"Well, it's a longish story, but we're a right smart from the house yet. It came about like this: Hetty is from Arkansas, born and raised there, but he comes from Kansas. He come down our way and settled down in the gum woods to make his fortune; but he fell in love with Hetty. Hetty, though she was jest as good a girl as you'd meet the longest day in the year, she was a kinder bearing-malice critter, laid things up and stored them by! So that's how it been; she had a liking for young Robinson, who had a all-sorts store at the cross-roads, and he was waiting on her regular, so 'twas when Seth asked her to marry him one night, she said no, mighty prompt, and he was dreadful taken down. He knew well enough what made her. He did pintedly feel bad; but he kept himself to himself and went on fooling his money away, rafting his timber down Black, and getting aground, and having to pay a heap for boats to tow him off, and that way; and one day Robinson had to go to St. Louis to buy goods, and there he got a good place as clerk and sold out, and she didn't git but one letter, and news come in a month he was married to a St. Louis girl. Then Hetty she took up with Seth, and married him, and 'bout a year after they was married back comes young Robinson, no more married than a door post, and accuses Seth of knowing the story was not true, and having had a letter from the girl they told 'bout saying she wasn't engaged to Robinson, and of sending him the paper with the notice of the marriage, and making him think Hetty had gone back on him, till he met up with some one from our way and got the whole story. I couldn't begin to tell you all the row he made. He drawed on Seth, but Seth was not afraid of him no more than nothing, and knocked his pistil in the river, and said he never did get that letter, and sure's you're born he told the truth, for it come out afterward that she thought she'd sent it, but she hadn't. But you can imagine that Hetty felt terrible. Robinson came up to our house—I was back on a visit then—and he begged me to git him speech of Hetty, once. He wanted to explain, and he cried, he felt so bad. He was a right nice fellow, only a little hard of hearing, and mad if you spoke too low, and he was awful fond of clothes, and used to put pretty smelling stuff on his handkerchief, like a girl. I told him there was no use trying to stick on a chicken's head that was cut off, but he said here he'd come all the way to see Hetty, and how they had played together, and all that when they was children, and how I was a kinder mother to 'em, and so he sorter got me all worked up. I was so taken up with pitying him and looking at his fine clothes that I jest let him wheedle me into promising that I'd give his letter to Hetty. And I did. Hetty read it through, and when she had finished she, that was as strong a girl as you ever see for all her littleness, she fainted dead away right there."

"Did she go?"

"Well, no, ma'am, she did not. She set and set there, she told me afterward, until it looked like her head would fair burst with studying. Then she got up and put on her bonnet, and went out down the road where he was going to be, and I was going to be near by, for I wasn't quite sech a God-forsaken fool as I seemed, and I 'lowed to have an eye on them two heart-broken things, for young things are jest natchelly fools and no knowing. So there, if you please, I had perched myself on a stump high enough to see Christie Robinson matching up and down talking to himself. I give you my word, ma,am, I waited and he waited on Hettie for four blessed hours, and being young and foolish, I can't tell you whether I was most relieved she didn't come or mad at her for not coming and giving me my wait for nothing. But it was like this: as I said, Hettie did start and she got a spell into the woods; when running fast, for she said she felt so tormented that she didn't know which way to turn, mad with Seth for how he had behaved (as she thought) and yet softening, remembering how kind he was to her and worshipping the ground she trod on, as the word is, and being warm-like, she pulled out her handkerchief to wipe her face, and there tumbled out, to the same time, a little bit of crochetin' lace she was doing for trimmin—for Leon, you know—and when she sees it, it all came over her, different, you know, and she burst out crying and run home as fast as she could. But the mischief was, Seth got wind of her being asked to come, and he come home and missed her, and when she did come home, he was off hunting Christie Robinson.

"Yes, they fit, then and there. Seth, he went home and found Hetty and went at her 'bout going to see Christy and meaning to run away with him. She tried to explain and he wouldn't believe her. That did cut Hetty awful; she always was fiery; and she told him that if he didn't believe her word that she gave him solemn, she never would say another to him. And she never has."

"But I think it strange she was willing to live with him at all," said the young minister.

"Well, no, he was her husband, and he begged mighty hard; and then there was the child. I don't know how Hetty ciphered it out; she did live with him and she never did speak to him."

"You have not told me the rest, how did they come to this place?"

"Well," said Mrs. Armil, "I was settled here, and Seth had a little money left him, and he liked here, and so they come, and Seth has been a working and a toiling ever sence to get his farm clear—well, he has paid off all into twenty-five hundred. He has got a mighty nice farm, and Hetty does look after things close. Now, look at their cows, not nigh so ga'nted as most. Hetty didn't let them into the cornfields after crops was laid by, no ma'am, she cut down everything and saved the fodder. They'll do it all right if they kin git the mortgage man to wait, and I got hopes he will, for he waited for Emil. Emil sent him all the money he could raise, but you see the banks are as bad off as the rest of us now. The man wrote a real nice letter to Emil, and renewed it for three years. I feel thankful enough; folks are so poor now; the Gannetts, they was sold out last Thursday, and it was dreadful, eight little children and nobody willing to pay anything for the cows they was so run down. And they've set off for Indian territory. 'It may be our turn next,' said Seth, and he gave the little boy fifty cents. It would jest break his heart to lose this place; but I am helping Mr. Raimund—"

"What is his name? Raimund of my town?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"He is not a hard man."

"Well, so I say, and its hard for them that has money owing a well as them that owes. Well, 'twill be all the same a hundred years from now, but it's hard pickings in the meanwhile! Here we are!"

Mr. Rogers opened the door, a tall man who stopped a little. He greeted Mrs. Armil warmly, and bowed with a courtesy that was not so much rough as untrained to Miss Brainerd.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Armil, who wished to do honor to her guest, had introduced her as "Rev. Brainerd."

She now set the conversational ball in motion with, "Rev. Brainerd's been interested in the destitution round here."

"Yes, its bad," said Rogers, crossing his legs and nervously twisting his fingers, "it's bad, but we could get along if we could get more time on our mortgage!"

"Are the farms about here mortgaged?"

"Yes, ma'am. You may say all about here. Pearl," addressing Mrs. Armil, "have you heard?"

Mrs. Armil told more in detail the story that she had told Miss Brainerd. The interest in the man's eyes was plain, and though veiled, the same interest was in the woman's.

"Ain't you had a letter from him yet?" said Mrs. Armil, with the sympathy of safe people for others' troubles.

"No," answered Mrs. Rogers, "not yet; but we sent Leon to the town to see if we had a letter."

Then the talk drifted into generalities, interrupted by the sound of hoofs. "It's Leon," exclaimed Rogers. He went hastily to the door.

The child of this strange couple came in. He looked like his mother and his father' delicate like the one, dark-haired and smiling like the other. His eyes turned from the man to the woman in a cordial glance that embraced them both.

"Yes, I got the letter," he said. Then for the first time perceiving the guest, he made his awkard school boy bow to the lady, and submitted to be kissed by Mrs. Armil.

"We have a mortgage on hand, too, you see," said Rogers, "will you, ladies, excuse me?" Here he tore open the letter with fingers plainly a tremble. There was no attempt at disguise; every woman in the room stared at him. For him, his jaw fell; he grew paler, until his skin took the tint of gray ashes. His first action was to hand Leon the sheet with its typewritten copy and engraved heading.

"Give it to your mother," he said huskily.

Leon's eyes shone as he obeyed; he was a child and hopeful. Mrs. Rogers read the letter; she may have had more self control than he, for there was no change, only a rigid settling of the muscles. "She is thinking that she told him so," reflected the minister.

"Ma,"—Leon's voice broke the silence—"won't you tell me?"

"There ain't no reason why they shou'dn't all hear it," said the man. "He says that he was expecting to extend, knowing we'd had hard times, but he read my name in the list of representatives that voted for the stay law. He doesn't consider his property safe in a state where they will pass such laws, or with a man that will vote for them." He swallowed something in his throat. "I guess," he went on "there's lots of fellows feels like he does, and lots of poor farmers will have to give up for the same reason. If it was only me, it wouldn't be so bad; but—" for the first time he looked at his wife. She returned his look, a dull red creeping into her cheek; nor did she take her eyes off his face while he remained in the room—"it isn't only me. If we have made a mistake we have ruined all the others along with us. I seem to have missed it all 'round," he went on. "I did try, Hetty, and if I had got the farm cleared off I meant to have asked you—if—things couldn't be different; there was a school we wanted to send Leon—" he did not know how to finish the sentence apparently, but the mute entreaty of the look turned on his wife's unmoved face awakened Miss Brainerd's indignant pity. "Well," he said, quietly, "there is always the prairie schooner for me to take to; for I don't think I was cut out to make laws. I can't harm anybody but myself on the prairie; and Pearl will see you and Leon will have a place to stay. Now, I guess if you ladies will excuse me, I'll go put up the horse, I'll be right back."

As he stood in the doorway, his eyes turned back at Leon.

"Shall I come too, papa?" said the child. Miss Brainerd, at least, noticed a fine quiver pass over the man's face before he answered, "No I shall come back soon. You stay with your mother."

Still, she was looking at him. He walked out alone. Then she rose, her lips set firmly. "Will you excuse me, too," she said, "I want to speak to my husband."

"O Lord," gasped Mrs. Armil. But Miss Brainerd had her word ready: "Tell him, please, that I know Mr. Raimund well; he is in my congregation, and I will engage that he shan't foreclose the mortgage."

"Well, Lord be praised! You're doing right, Hetty," called Mrs. Armil at the empty door, as soon as astonishment released her tongue, "better late than never. But to think of her giving in now when he'd lost all his property, and him the helpless man alive!"

"I think that was why," laughed Miss Brainard, "such slight things are women!" Octave Thanet.

Meat Eating and Temper.

Mrs. Earnest Hart, who accompanied her husband in his recent trip around the world, appears to come to the conclusion that meat eating is bad for the temper. In the Hospital she says that in no country is home rendered so unhappy and life made so miserable by the ill-temper of those who are obliged to live together as in England. If we compare domestic life and manners in England with those of other countries where meat does not form such an integral article of diet, a notable improvement will be remarked. In less meat-eating France, urbanity is the rule of the home; in fish and rice-eating Japan, harsh words are unknown, and an exquisite politeness to one another prevails even among the children who play together in the streets. In Japan I never heard rude, angry words spoken by any but Englishmen. I am strongly of opinion that the ill-temper of the English is caused in a great measure by a too abundant meat dietary, combined with a sedentary life. The half-oxidized products of albumen circulating in the blood produce both mental and moral disturbances. The healthful thing to do is to lead an active and unselfish life, on a moderate diet, sufficient to maintain strength and not increase weight.—Scientific American.

The Power of Dinner.

A distinguished lawyer came out of his private office a few days ago and brusquely told a reporter that he did not care to discuss the private affairs of his clients. He said it was none of the public's business, and then he bounced back into his private office and slammed the door. It was important that the reporter should get the news, and so, on the strength of past experiences, he called at the lawyer's home that night. The lawyer had just finished his dinner, and he came into his parlor, his face beaming with geniality and a prime cigar in his mouth. He shook the reporter's hand and then talked to him for half an hour, and gave him more information than he had any use for. A slight knowledge of human nature is sometimes very useful.—New York World.

—The New Orleans Times-Democrat has made some calculations based upon the recent census figures, and concludes that of the white population of this country fifty-five per cent. only is English, twenty per cent. German, fifteen per cent. Irish, four per cent. Latin, three per cent. Scandinavian, and three per cent. Slav.

A Domestic Drama.

Coming over the Michigan Central the other day, says the Chicago Tribune, a tall, fine appearing man and a handsomely-dressed, refined-looking woman who seated just in front of a plainly dressed, sweet-faced old lady about seventy years of age. Every little while the man would turn and address a remark to the elderly woman, and her eyes would glow with pride, for he was her son, and though his wife did not seem over-cordial—perhaps she was not proud of the old lady—yet she would deign to drop a word or two once in a while.

Finally the son turned—as the porter informed them of the dining-car in the rear—and said: "Well, mother, Emma and I will go now and get our dinner. You know she needs a good warm dinner. You have brought your lunch, I see. I will send you in a cup of hot tea, and the couple rose and passed into the dining-car.

After they had left, "mother" sat looking out of the window, and appeared to be deep in thought—not over happy perhaps. Finally she reached under the seat and brought up the little worn-out basket "son" had noticed and held it on her lap, fingering the ribbon it was tied with in a thoughtful way. Just as she opened it the train stopped at a station. The door was suddenly flung open and a cheery-faced, handsome man stepped in. He appeared to be looking for some one.

Finally his glance fell on the little old lady.

"Mother!" he cried in a delighted voice.

"My John, my John!" and the two were clasped in a loving embrace so genuine as to cause tears to rise in the eyes of one of the passengers, and the rest looked on in an interesting manner.

"Where are Frank and Emma?" he inquired.

"They have gone into the dinning-car. Emma isn't well, you know, and has to have a good hot dinner." She repeated this in an apologetic way, for she saw a look in John's eye that she did not fail to read—and Frank was he not her son too?

"But you didn't wish any dinner, I suppose," and his eyes fell on the little basket. He saw it all at a glance, but he must not hurt his mother's feelings thus.

"Are you glad to see me? Are you not surprised? I found that I could join you here instead of waiting until you got in Chicago. And now tell me, dear heart, isn't this dear little basket the same one Frank and I took our lunch in to school? I thought so as a smile rose on the faded sweet face.

"Well, I'm awfully hungry; s'pose we keep this for supper and you come with me and eat a nice hot dinner. No, no excuses."

As they left the car they met the other couple. "Hallo! John! where did you come from? "How do you do, Emma? I came Frank, just in time to see that our mother had a substantial meal," and they passed on.

When the passengers who heard and saw it all arrived at Chicago they saw a handsome young man with a little black basket hanging on his arm tenderly assisting a sweet-faced old lady through the crowd. A carriage was called and they drove off. No one seemed to see anything of the other couple.

Hardy Flowering Shrubs.

The Horticultural Experiment Station of Canada gives in a late report the following list of flowering shrubs that can be easily propagated by slips from the ripened wood. Cut the ripe wood of this year's growth into nine-inch lengths, and place them in a trench in good, rich soil, well drained, having them stand with the top slanting to the south, and the top bud only above the surface, and press the earth back around them. Use no manure.

Do this in October, and when the ground is slightly frozen cover the tops with a mulch of leaves or strawy manure, which should be removed in the spring. Nearly every one will start if the work is properly done, and they may be removed at any time during the season. Currants, gooseberries, grapes, etc., may also be started in the same way, although we prefer layering grapes when practicable.

The following classes of flowering shrubs are easily propagated in this way:

Honeysuckle (Lonicera), erect and trailing.

Spiræa, including bridal wreath and nine bark.

Barberry (Berberis), also easily grown from seed.

Siberian pea tree (Caragana), beautiful in spring.

Waigelia (Diervilla), spring and summer flowering shrubs.

Japan rose (Rosa Rugosa), summer blooming.

Tamarisk (Tamarix), foliage beautiful.

Snowball (Viburnum Opulus), grows most readily from layers.

Cytisus, closely allied to the laburnums.

Shrubby five-finger (Potentilla), summer flowering.

Sea buck-thorn (Hippophae rhamnoides).

Siberian dog wood (Cornus Siberica), propagates best by layering.

Syringa (Philadelphus), the common mock orange.

Deutzia (Deutzia), white flowers in early spring.

Carolina Allspice (Calycanthus Floridus), spring flowering.

Smoke tree (Rhus cotinus), autumn flowering.

Southern wood (Artemisia).

This list includes a large proportion of the most desirable plants of deciduous habit, suitable for lawn decorations in this vicinity.

Could be Corrected.

"Here is a poem which you may publish in your paper," said a young man with eyes in a fine frenzy rolling as he entered the editorial door. "I dashed it off rapidly in an idle moment, and you will find it in its rough state, as it were. You can make such corrections as you think necessary."

"Ah, much obliged," said the editor "I will give you a check for it at once."

"You are very kind," said the contributor. "I shall be delighted."

"There you are," said the editor, handing him a check.

"Many thanks," exclaimed the young man. "I will bring you some other poems."

When he got to the door, he suddenly paused. Then he came back.

"Excuse me," he said, "but you forgot to fill up the check. You have not written the date nor the amount, nor have you signed your name."

"Oh," said the editor, "that is all right. You see, I have given you a check in its rough state, as it were. You can make such corrections as you think necessary."—Exchange.

Hints on Health.

This department is under the charge of DR. J. NEWTON JONES, of Norfolk Downs, who will each week contribute an article of general interest to our readers.

THE NAILS.

The care of the nails is by no means a new departure, though it is only of recent years that certain specialists or "manicures" have made the art a profession and that we find special instruments on sale under the name of manicures, yet in times long past the subject must have been considered worth attention as this is implied by the fact that the word "onyx" is from the Greek and means nail, and thus when the nails were skilfully managed they were said to resemble the beautiful stone of the same name. The nails are really a modification of the skin of the fingers, and like the epidermis they are constantly shedding new cells which are formed at the root and under surface and gradually thickening are pushed forward toward the tips of the fingers. When the nail is in perfect health, it appears semi-transparent and is devoid of any roughness of surface or discoloration by spots or "gifts," as they are sometimes called. "Gifts" have been constantly associated with certain intellectual powers, and sometimes with fortunes to come, but they only indicate points or marks of failure of nutrition and often owe their origin to ill-health.

The nails should be cut with a pair of nail scissors and not with a penknife, and they should be pared to correspond with the shape of the end of the finger. We hope none of our readers bite their nails, as this practice has lately been advanced as a sign of lunacy. To avoid the formation of the loose shreds of skin that often form at the root of the nail, push the finger into a cut lemon and turn round and round, besides being effective in this respect, it will be found to both clean and polish the nail. It is the undue growth of this skin that causes "upstarts," a troublesome splitting of the tissue at the root of the nail. In some instances when the skin is unduly dry, "upstarts" will put in an appearance with every care, but this can be avoided by the use at night of a little vaseline or carolin. The care of the nails may be said to be complete by the use of a file and a polisher. There are many ointments and lotions sold and recommended to harden or to thin, or to add to, the transparency of the nails, but they are one and all useless, and ought to be avoided.

Veils.

Fashion is queen, but if her subjects could always remember to be sensible in their devotions the burdens imposed by her would often be much lighter, and yet the spirit of the law would be obeyed. This is especially true just now in the matter of veils.

It cannot be doubted that the necessity, if such it was, that invented veils brought forth what under some circumstances may be beneficial; but it is exceedingly doubtful if such praise can be bestowed upon the articles worn at the present time.

On a windy and dusty day veils of a proper sort may be worn with no little comfort. They not only serve to keep the wearer from an appearance of untidiness, but are of benefit in protecting the eyes from particles of dust.

On a blustering winter day, when one is riding, a heavy veil, in the form of a scarf, bound around the forehead and over the ears, with the ends well tied about the neck and chin, is nearly as useful, without being so cumbersome, as the old-fashioned muffler.

But all this does not excuse the risk of injury to the eyes incurred by the continual obscurity of the sight caused by wearing the fanciful fabrics now in vogue.

Of the different styles of such fabrics it is probable that the watered designs are the most harmful, though it is hard to conceive how they can be much worse than the heavily-figured designs.

We are all aware of the intimate relation between the general nervous system and the special senses. Indeed, the relation of this most important sense of sight to certain organic changes in the body has been the subject of much recent investigation. It is probable that the feeling of being "sight tired," which we are all liable to experience, very nearly approaches at times to a special disease.

But whether we understand such matters or not, it behooves all of us to appreciate the gift of sight sufficiently not to abuse it by needlessly straining our eyes.

Let us be sensible first and fashionable afterward.—Boston Budget.

The Danger of Water Filters.

Somewhat of a surprise was created recently by Dr. Swarts of the Rhode Island Medical Society, who declared that water filters, as regards their worth for purifying water, are a failure. According to this noted scientist not alone are they worthless as water purifiers, but there use is extremely dangerous to health. As proof of this assertion Dr. Swarts took some unfiltered water, in which he showed thirty-six different specimens of animal and vegetable matter, poured this through a filter which had been in use for two days, and created considerable surprise by proving that as the water passed through the filter there were thousands of new gems added to it. In explanation of this the doctor says that as the filter is used from day to day it collects the impure substances, and these, as is readily seen, render the water more impure than when no filter is used at all, so that unless some method is devised by which filters can be thoroughly cleaned at least once a day, it is discretion to dispose of their use entirely. —Boston Budget.

Too Many Clothes.

Growing children do not need too great a stock of clothes to carry them through a season. Of course sufficient for cleanliness and comfort is a necessity, but too great a number for the mere sake of variety is to be deprecated.

Little girls and boys outgrow dresses and jackets very fast. It is better to have a few changes, and when they are outgrown or shabby, get rid of them for a fresh set of slightly increased size. A large number of suits or dresses, which must be remodelled and enlarged for use during a second season, is burdensome. Looking over the stock of clothes, which, because they were so numerous, were each but slightly worn, we are apt to regret that we did not buy one-half the number, and let the child wear them entirely out.

"It would have been far less trouble then," thinks the amateur dressmaker with a sigh, "and certainly far less trouble now!"—Harper's Bazar.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCT. 6, 1894.

Granite Cutters Evening School.

Wednesday evening witnessed the beginning, we believe, of the first trade school ever inaugurated in Quincy. The classes in monumental drafting, clay modeling and the hand drawing which have been extensively advertised during the past month, resulted in the registration of thirty-eight young men on the opening night. The majority of these are new member, twenty such having made application for membership since Saturday noon. The following countries are represented as follows: United States, 9; Scotland, 6; England, 4; Wales, 5; Sweden, 4; Ireland, 3; Norway, 2; Germany, 1; Finland, 1; unknown, 3. The average age is about twenty-four.

This new departure in association work will be watched with much interest, not only in Quincy, but elsewhere, for the undertaking is something new in Massachusetts, although a number of associations in other parts of the country have trades school. It is doubtful whether there is another school in the country devoted to the granite business.

Another singular feature about the work is that most associations commence their educational work with commercial studies or the languages, instead of putting industrial educational work first.

Mr. Hodge, of New York, who was present with the industrial educational exhibit Saturday, expressed himself as much surprised and pleased with the manner in which these classes had been planned and advertised. He also congratulated them on securing teachers of such excellent ability, as shown by their work on exhibition at the rooms. Students will be received until the 15th of the month, but all who desire to join are requested to make application at once.

Miller Estate Terror.

Periodically portions of the city seem to be haunted by strange creatures, and the present seems to be the turn for people in the vicinity of the old Miller estate and Faxon hall. Heretofore these fellows have generally appeared under cover of darkness, but at midday on several days last week, the specimen who is now the terror has boldly made his appearance. During the day he has attempted no injury but by reckless exposure of person has shocked the ladies. They regard him as demented, but think at the same time that he is a dangerous character. Several persons have called the attention of the police, but they seem unable to locate the man.

It was the first of last week when he first made his appearance on Bigelow street, and he came daily for two or three days. He or another rascal was there Saturday evening, and chased two ladies on the street, who ran into one of the houses, where one fainted.

Saturday night the fellow changed his stamping ground from the Miller estate to the vicinity of Edwards street where he appeared about 9.30 and frightened two ladies. These ladies, who wish their names withheld, were walking down Washington street and when they arrived at the corner of Edwards street they observed a man seated on Hardwick's stone wall. They crossed to the opposite side of the street and the man crossed after them. They then crossed back again and he did the same. It was then that he began mumbling to himself and exposed himself. The ladies then ran away.

The description these ladies give of the man is that he was tall and slim, about 35 or 40 years of age, and he wore a Derby hat. His actions were that of a crazy man.

The Miller estate terror is said to have made his appearance again Wednesday evening, and chased two elderly women. Many have seen the fellow but the descriptions of him vary, possibly because he changes his mode of dress.

The Faxon Case.

The personal custody of 11-year-old Mary F. Faxon is the subject of inquiry in a petition for habeas corpus which was taken up for hearing in the supreme court in Boston Wednesday, before Judge Barker, which the Herald reports as follows:

Mr. John L. Faxon, the father of the girl asks the court to order Mary's release from the custody of her grandmother, Mrs. Sarah J. F. Carr of Quincy, with whom she has lived six years. Mary's mother died last October at Mrs. Carr's house, where she has been living with her daughter, apart from her husband, more than five years. Mr. Faxon was appointed guardian of his daughter by the probate court, but of this proceeding Mrs. Carr claims to have had no notice, and she wants to rear the child, partly because of a wish expressed by Mrs Faxon the day before she died.

Hon. R. M. Morse and E. B. Hale appear for Mr. Faxon, and Hon. A. Hemenway and William Schofield for Mrs. Carr.

At the hearing Wednesday a host of witnesses were sworn for both sides, Mrs. Sarah J. F. Carr of Quincy, the grandmother, being in opposition to the granting of the writ.

Mr. Faxon and his late wife lived apart about five years, and she and her daughter resided with Mrs. Carr in Quincy.

At the conclusion of the hearing on Thursday, Judge Barker had a little talk with Mary and then took the case under consideration.

Off for Europe.

Dr. C. O. Young, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church, and a member of the Board of Health, left Quincy Monday afternoon for New York, from which port he sailed Wednesday on the Majestic for Berlin.

The doctor and his friends left Quincy on the 4 50 train and there gathered at the depot a large number of his parishioners who came to bid him good bye and wish him God speed. The church is very sorry to lose its pastor, recognizing in Dr. Young one who has done much for it.

The doctor carried in his vest pocket when he left Quincy a handsome gold watch, on the case of which was engraved a picture of the new church. This watch was a gift of his parishioners, who wished in some manner to testify to their appreciation of his worth.

Dr. Young's departure leaves a vacancy in the Board of Health and as the new law requires that one of the board must be a physician, there is a job waiting one of our doctors.

Good Templars.

Merry Mount lodge, I. O. O. F., held an open "good of the order" meeting Thursday evening at Doble's hall, which was largely attended. The object of these meetings is to create an interest in the order and extend its influence.

The meeting Thursday evening was presided over by Alexander Craig, who made a few interesting remarks, following which there was an interesting entertainment consisting of piano and mandolin duet by Messrs. Bigelow and Curtis, comic song, John Phelan; readings, Miss Ellis, Miss B. Lavers and Mrs. Somes; harmonica solo, Miss E. Bowen; solos, F. Craig, Mrs. A. Craig, Mr. Flemming, Miss Turbell, and F. Lawler; banjo solo, W. Gragg; piano solo, Mr. Craft; harmonica and banjo solo, Prof. Charles Barron.

John O. Hall, W. Walter Ewell, Russell A. Sears, and E. W. Adams, were elected to membership in the Norfolk club on Saturday.

Sidney, the elder son of Mr. Jesse F. Curtis of Goffe street is seriously ill with diphtheria. A son of Mr. T. H. Wason is also sick.

The City Council is scheduled to meet next Monday and the following Monday, on each of which dates public hearings will be held.

The Quincys met their old enemy, the Institutes at the Weymouth fair Friday for a purse of $125 and defeated them by a score of 7 to 5.

The successor of the late Hon. John Quincy Adams as State director of the Fitchburg Railroad, will be James Renfew, Jr., of Adams.

Miss Floretta Vining sailed with the ladies of the Woman's Press Association Saturday for Yarmouth returning the following day.

There are quite a number of people looking for houses and people who have tenements to let would do well to advertise them in the Patriot.

N. B. Furnald was at work industriously Saturday on the disfigured inscription on the Canal street bridge and restored it to its original beauty.

Robert McAuliff, a newsboy, was badly bitten in the thigh last week while delivering papers by a dog owned by Benjamin M. Seeley.

If some of the men who get drunk could see what a fool they make of themselves while under the influence of intoxicants it might have a good effect on them.

Have you noticed the new red number plate enclosed in a highly polished ring, on the front of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. locomotives? It is thought to show up better at night.

Miss Alice Adams, daughter of the late Bryant N. Adams, left Saturday for Washington. She has been very fortunate in securing an excellent position as private secretary to the Brazillian Council.

The widening of Coddington street will never cost any less than at the present time. Although the amount seems large, it is a necessity which should not be further delayed. The city cannot afford to put it off.

Revised voting lists with many changes have been posted by the Board of Registrars in all wards and precincts of the the city. It behooves all men to see whether they are registered; and if so, whether correctly.

Typhoid fever is quite prevalent in this city at present, one physician is reported to have nine cases. Has the Quincy water anything to do with such an alarming state of affairs? The water appears to be full of organic matter.

J. O. Mason, the aged contractor for C. T. Hardwick's new house on Chestnut street, donned his overalls Wednesday, but within an hour he lost his balance in the house and fell, breaking a cord in his foot which will lay him up three months.

People attending the Brockton fair will find this memorandum of trains convenient: Leave Quincy for Brockton at 6.04, 8.15 (special), 10.33 A. M., 12.15 and 2.30 P. M. Return at 12 56, 2 15, 3.28, 5.00, 6.00 (change), 6.20 and 10.00 P. M.

Madame See of New York addressed the people of Quincy Sunday evening in Faxon hall in a very enthusiastic manner, relating many truths that should long be remembered, and practiced. Her audience hope to hear from her again in a like manner to awaken new thoughts and new ideas in the sleeping humanity.

Carpets and the Tariff.

The new tariff on Foreign Rugs and Carpets is just about one-half the old duty. Naturally, therefore, prices must drop. The advantage of this state of things is, of course, with the buyer—with you, for example. We ask your attention to our of Carpets and Upholstery Goods, of both home and foreign make.

When we say that our offerings are superior in quality and in extent to any similar ones in New England, if not in the country, we are simply re-stating a well-established fact. Prices are at low-water mark, as befits the times.

The Debating Society.

At a preliminary business meeting of the Quincy Literary society held in Doble's hall, on Saturday evening, it was resolved to reorganize the society for the ensuing term. An interesting syllabus of subjects for discussion during the current three months was compiled, and the following office bearers were elected to serve for that period:

President,—Dr. R. McLennan.
Vice President,—William Traynor.
Secretary and Treasurer,—Alex. Souter.
Editor of Magazine,—Alex. M. Craig.
Standing Committee,—William Taylor, Alex. Cowe, A. D. Smith.

Amid the many facilities for mental cultivation that modern life presents, few mediums are better calculated to promote that end than a literary society. It serves alike to stimulate the young and interest the old. To relieve scholastic asperity, and promote broadly tolerant fellowship. To provide at once a field for the patient specialist, and a definite purpose for the desultory student.

The past meetings of the society have been conducive of pleasure and profit to its members. There is every indication that the coming session will compare favorably with previous years. The presence of old familiar members is assured, and new ones are expected. Membership is open to all, irrespective of sex, sect, or color. Whoever has information to impart, or knowledge to gain is cordially welcome.

The meetings will be held on Friday evenings of each week in the above building.

The inaugural address of the president-elect Dr. R. McLennan will be given at next meeting, together with other social and literary features.

The Gale of Sunday.

The heavy north-east gale on Sunday kicked up an ugly chop sea in Quincy bay. The tide at noon came well up to the banks and over the marshes. Allie Williams' gunning stand was flooded but did not wash away.

But little damage was done to the yachts. The most serious yet reported was the drifting ashore of J. N. Tewksbury's large sloop yacht Gretchen on the Sailors' Home beach. The Gretchen, with Mr. Tewksbury and four others on board, was riding at anchor off the Wollaston beach when the wind shifted and piped up fresh from the eastward at about five o'clock Sunday morning. The anchor held for a time, but as the gale increased it was seen by her crew that she was dragging. Another anchor was got out but that did not hold her, so a third one was put out, but still she drifted. A bit of her jib was then hoisted to see if it would not be possible to work her off shore, but in the meantime the gale had increased to a hurricane and with a lee shore close under her bow Capt. Tewksbury saw that nothing would save her from going ashore. She struck Allie Williams' duck stand, but did no damage to herself or the stand. She rested easy and probably did not start a seam.

Fred Pierce's jib and mainsail boat Thix also came ashore.

Brockton Fair.

There were immense gatherings at the Brockton fair this week. Never have we seen so many there before. All parts of the ground were covered with people, and they all seemed happy; each enjoying the part best suited to his or her taste; and there was no end to the variety of amusements offered. There was a large attendance from Quincy, and we do not think there was one who felt sorry that he or she went to the Brockton fair. To tell what we saw, and what was done, would take many columns of this paper.

Milton's Pride.

The completion of the new Ellsworth block at East Milton makes a great addition to the village and gives it a business look it has not heretofore possessed.

The new block is situated near the depot and is a handsome, well appointed structure. On the street floor are three stores, two of which are already open and the third will be opened this week.

The west corner store is occupied by W. H. Puffer as a druggist, in which will also be located a long distance public telephone station. The next store is occupied by D. E. Wadsworth & Co. as a dry goods store and was opened on Saturday. Mr. Wadsworth, a successful Quincy merchant, has a very pretty store, and as it is well stocked with the leading novelties in that line, his store will fill a long-felt want to this section, which has never had a first-class dry goods store. The third store will be occupied by T. L. Pearce as a grocery and provision store. These stores are all lighted by the new system of kerosene lighting, although the building is wired for electricity.

From the west side of the building there is a broad entrance leading to the upper story. It enters a good sized vestibule in which there is a convenient ticket office. From this vestibule entrance is had to the East Milton reading room, which is a large, well lighted room, well adapted to the purpose for which it is to be used.

There is also another smaller room which T. L. Williams, West Quincy's popular jeweller will open, and also another room. Besides these rooms there is a large gentlemen's room with movable racks and on the opposite side is a ladies' room fitted with all modern conveniences. It has an entrance to the stage and can be used as a dressing room.

There is also on this floor a good sized public hall which is a beauty. The hall is fitted with the Andrew, Damerst Co. folding seats and with its two balconies will seat comfortably without crowding, 330.

One of the balconies is divided into loges of four seats each. There is also ample stage room for concerts and lectures with an addition in case it is wanted for for exhibitions.

On the third floor there is a large banquet room with seating capacity for 100 leading from which is a large kitchen with sink and running water.

The basement has a cemented floor and here is located the heating apparatus, and there is also a room partitioned off for the use of the stores.

The building is 55 to 70 feet, and the contractor was J. D. Chute.

Industrial Education.

Saturday afternoon and evening Mr. George B. Hodge, Secretary of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations of North America, was present at the rooms of the local association and explained to a large number of young men present, the work of the educational branch. Samples of industrial educational work selected from associations all over the country were shown, and it is only fair to state that the average age of the young men who did the work was 23 years, and that they did not know when their work was executed to what use it was to be put.

The exhibition was an interesting one, showing as it did the courses through which the 20,000 young men in these classes have passed, from the time that their unskilled hands took hold of the work until they had mastered the particular branch in which they were interested, and as the young men in these classes are engaged during the day obtaining a livelihood, it showed what it is possible for any young man with ambition to accomplish.

The exhibition showed specimens of courses in free hand, mechanical and architectural drawing and industrial design, leading toward such technical lines as machine construction, boiler making, carriage draughting, wood and metal working, civil, mechanical, architectural and electrical engineering.

The number of associations that have taken hold of this line of work has increased from 4 in 1860 to 3,000 at present, and the number of young men has increased from 12 to 20,000 in six years.

Of the daily occupations of these 20,000 young men 24 per cent. are in offices; 15 per cent. students; 40 per cent. clerks and salesmen, and 10 per cent. in mechanical and several trades.

In Memoriam.

Henry Holton, who departed this life August 28, 1894, aged 47 years, 6 months and 2 days, was a charter member and past president of Granite lodge, 193, O. S. S. G. of Quincy, Mass.

WHEREAS,—It has pleased Almighty God to take from our midst our highly esteemed brother, Henry Holton, and whereas we bow to His supreme will in all things; therefore be it

Resolved,—By Granite lodge, 193, O. S. S. G. of Quincy, Mass., that while we bow in humble submission to the will of the most High, we do not the less mourn the loss of our brother who has been called from his labors to rest.

Resolved,—That in the death of Bro. Henry Holton, this order loses an untiring worker for the benefit of the order, his widow a loving husband and children a tender father.

Resolved,—That we as members of Granite lodge, 193, O. S. S. G., tender to the family of our late lamented brother our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of affliction and bereavement, and we earnestly pray that God may direct and give them strength to bear their sorrow with Christian patience and humility.

Resolved,—That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our lodge and a copy be sent to the QUINCY PATRIOT, also a copy be sent to the family of our deceased brother.

VALUABLE ACQUSITION. The Copley Square school of music and languages has recently secured the services of Mrs. Philip Hale as teacher of piano. This acquisition to the list of instructors give evidence of the progressive spirit of this institution.

Mrs. Hale ranks among the first artists in Boston, having studied for several years with the celebrated teachers, Oscar Raif and Moritz Moszhowski of Berlin.

The technical system of Raif, so popular in New York, will no doubt prove a great attraction to this department of the school.

—Next Tuesday, Oct. 9, one of the grandest military pageants witnessed in Massachusetts in recent years will occur, the entire military force of the State being massed in Boston. The use of ammunition will be dipensed with on this day on account of previous accidents. Heretofore each regiment has held its own fall field day.

The Political Field.

The nominations in which the Republicans of this vicinity are especially interested are nearly complete. There yet remains, however, the State convention to be held next today, the second councillor, and the special county convention to nominate another candidate for county commissioner.

The name of William Walter Ewell suggested by the LEDGER as county commissioner meets with favor by the citizens of Quincy generally who are not slow in recognizing his ability and qualifications for the position. Mr. Ewell was seen the other evening and said he had not thought anything about the office until he saw it in the PATRIOT. In reply to a query as to whether he would accept. Mr. Ewell came out frankly and said he would. This is certainly a case where the office is seeking the man and as no one questions his ability it behooves the citizens of Quincy to come forward and see to it that he is nominated to the office.

Stoughton also has a candidate for County Commissioner, Mr. Thomas Blanchard. But Mr. Lothrop of Cohasset represented the east portion of the county, and his successor should come from this section. The Old Colony towns of Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Cohasset, Holbrook, Randolph and Milton, with considerable over one-third of the population of Norfolk county, are certainly entitled to one of the three members of the board. The towns also have one-third the valuation, and pay one-third of the county taxes; more in fact than all the remaining towns of the county outside of Brookline.

The Republican State committee has issued a call to the Republicans of Norfolk county to meet in special caucus in their respective towns or wards on Friday, Oct. 12, or Saturday, Oct. 13, for the purpose of choosing delegates to a Republican special county convention to nominate a candidate for County Commissioner to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of John Q. A. Lathrop of Cohasset.

The vote of Quincy by wards for Governor at the last State election was:

	Banks,	Cary,	Greenhalge,	O'Neil,	Russell,	Blanks,
Ward One,	12	3	333	1	238	11
Ward Two,	6	1	233	1	240	9
Ward Three,	10	8	[illegible]	1	287	19
Ward Four,	15	57	223	0	386	18
Ward Five,	10	11	293	0	118	4
Ward Six,	6	2	165	0	159	7
The city,	59	62	1544	3	1428	63

October 6 is an eventful day in the political calendar. It is the date of the Republican State convention in Boston. It is the last day for registrars of voters in every city and town, except Boston, to post in each voting precinct preliminary alphabetical list of voters. It is the last day for designating polling places.

A strong influence is being brought to bear on John Q. A. Field of this city, an ex-commissioner, to enter the contest for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner, but he is reluctant to again assume the duties. The pressure comes from different parts of the county, which are willing to make an issue on lower taxes. They argue that an ex-commissioner is needed at this time, one who has a mind of his own. Quincy people know that Mr. Field has, and so do others in the county.

Following are those who have recently filed applications with the City Clerk for naturalization papers: Ernest G. Burke, Walter E. Burke, John N. Malcom, Michael J. Canty, Lawrence Curtin, Thomas McNally and John P. Fitzpatrick.

Delegates of the Quincy and Weymouth Republican Representative conventions met in the Republican headquarters, Quincy, Tuesday evening, and went through the form of ratifying the nominations of the city and town, viz: Charles L. Hammond of Quincy, James H. Flint and George L. Wentworth of Weymouth. All are renominations.

Congressman Morse was renominated by acclamation by the Republicans of the Twelfth Congressional district at Brockton Tuesday.

The Quincy board of registrars will meet Oct. 6, 9, 10, 13, 16 and 17.

The Democrats of this the Second Councillor District will hold their convention in Dedham Oct. 17 at 10 o'clock, A. M.

Hon. James H. Flint of Weymouth has been mentioned as a candidate for County Commissioner.

The election officers recently appointed are calling upon the City Clerk to be sworn in.

The Norfolk county Democrats will meet in Dedham Oct. 17 at 9 A. M., to nominate a county ticket.

The Second Norfolk Democratic Senatorial District Convention will be held in Dedham Oct. 17 at 11 A. M.

Hon. Albert E. Pillsbury will represent this Congressional district on the Committee on Resolutions at the Republican State convention. Hon. George F. Hoar is chairman.

The People's Party held a rally Wednesday evening at Doble's hall. The meeting was addressed by James F. Morton, candidate for Congress from the Tenth district, Thomas A. Fitch, candidate for senator from the First Norfolk district, and Fred W. Hardwick and Albert A. Kingsley, candidates for the General Court from the Fifth district.

The Republicans of the Second Norfolk senatorial district have renominated Robert S. Gray of Walpole.

A meeting was held in Columbus band hall, Sunday, by about fifty Italian voters of Quincy who formed an Independent political club and elected the following officers:

President,—J. Grimaldi.
Secretary,—A. Bianchi.
Rallying Committee,—O. Lancisi, John Franzi, A. Capellini, A. Branchi, F. Franzi and Frederick Trenton.

Time is short and the Republicans of Quincy should quickly unite on the Quincy man they will support in the special county convention for the nomination of a county commissioner. Unless a solid delegation is sent the city's claim is liable not to be recognized. A Quincy man might have received the Congressional nomination had one strong candidate been placed in the field early. Shall it be Ewell or Field? The Herald in its resume says:

> The two names most prominently before the party leaders at present are those of W. Walter Ewell, formerly commissioner of public works of Quincy, and Hon. John Q. A. Field, a former member of the board. Mr. Ewell, who was commissioner of public works in Quincy during Mayor Fairbanks' term of office, won for himself a high reputation as a public official, and is strongly supported for county commissioner by the leading Republicans of the city. There is a strong feeling on the part of the citizens of Quincy that the vacancy should be filled from that city, and a lively hustle will be made by them to secure the nomination. Mr. Field, in his position as county commissioner, proved a most efficient official and would bring to the position, if nominated, a ripe experience.

A prominent citizen writes: The nomination of Mr. Field would be most gratifying to a large number of our citizens who appreciate his sterling qualifications for the office which he has previously so ably filled. Few, if any men in the county are so familiar with the multifarious and complicated questions upon which the commissioners are called upon to pass, as is Mr. Field. His nomination would be hailed with delight by those conversant with his adaptability to public life and his knowledge of state, county and municipal affairs in which he has always taken so deep an interest.

The Democrats of Quincy also have good timber for county commissioner and are alert for any break to place a strong man in the field. Commissioner Eaton and Mayor Hodges are mentioned.

—There were 22 maids of honor at the Ward-Browne church wedding in Brockton Tuesday evening.

The New Voting Lists.

The QUINCY PATRIOT presents today a carefully prepared summary of the voters of the city. It shows the total number of voters in the city and in each ward now and also on Oct. 1, of 1892 and 1893. The figures are obtained by an actual count and are as follows:

	1894.	1893.	1892.	At last election
Ward One,	640	619	578	697
Ward Two,	542	522	495	570
Ward Three,	676	590	562	724
*Ward Four,	724	682	652	765
Ward Five,	461	460	365	518
Ward Six,	389	307	295	399
Totals,	3432	3180	2947	3673

*In Ward Four, precinct 1 has 360 voters, and precinct 2 has 364.

All wards show a gain over the preliminary lists of 1893, which in turn show a gain over 1892. The total gain over 1893 is 252, and over 1892 it is 491.

Naturally all wards have made a loss since the last election but from this out they will gain and it will be an exception if all are not larger at the State election this year than they were at the city election of last year.

Darling for Senator.

The Republican Senatorial convention held Saturday in Boston was very harmonious and a unit for Francis W. Darling of Hyde Park. Russell A. Sears of Quincy was chairman, and Nathan T. Canterbury of Weymouth secretary.

The nomination of Mr. Darling was made by acclamation, on motion of B. H. Woodsum of Braintree, seconded by John F. Merrill of Quincy, the retiring Senator. Both were pretty speeches and the nomination was unanimous.

The nominee was present and accepted the nomination in a spirit which greatly pleased the delegates.

B. H. Woodsum of Braintree was elected a member of the Republican State Central committee.

The chairmen of the various city and town committees were elected a district committee.

H. H. Faxon was present and made one of his characteristic speeches.

Hammond for Representative.

Chairman Fairbanks of the Republican Ward and City Committee called the Republican Representative convention to order Saturday, and organization was effected by the choice of E. W. Sheppard as chairman and John P. Bigelow as secretary.

Messrs. William Teasdale, H. O. Souther and Charles H. Glines, the committee on credentials reported a full representation as follows:

Ward One,	7 delegates
Ward Two,	5 delegates
Ward Three,	6 delegates
Ward Four,	4 delegates
Ward Five,	6 delegates
Ward Six,	3 delegates
Total,	31

The same committee was also appointed to receive and count votes, and it was moved to proceed to an informal ballot.

C. M. Bryant desired to present a name, and the chair ruled it in order.

Albert Keating appealed but the convention sustained the chair.

Mr. Bryant then briefly placed Charles R. Sherman in nomination, and the balloting begun with this result:

Ballots cast	31
James Thompson had	2
Charles H. Johnson had	5
Charles R. Sherman had	8
Charles L. Hammond had	16

A motion to make the ballot formal was defeated on a tie vote, and a formal ballot was taken.

Thirty-one votes were cast and 16 were necessary for a choice. Mr. Hammond had 18, and Mr. Johnson 13, and Mr. Hammond was declared the nominee.

Upon motion of Albert Keating of Ward Two the nomination was made unanimous amid applause.

While a committee waited upon Mr. Hammond, this committee of six was appointed to meet a committee from Weymouth to ratify the nominations: E. G. Cleaves, H. O. Souther, George A. Cameron, T. F. Burke, W. J. Wellington and J. S. Blagdon.

Representative Hammond responded and was received with applause. He thanked the convention for the honor, and hoped the contest for the nomination would leave no scars, but that the party would triumph. He would endeavor to represent the district creditably as in the past. He accepted the nomination.

The convention then adjourned.

Parlor Musicale.

A delightful parlor musicale was given at the residence of Capt. and Mrs. Samuel J. Higgins, Lincoln avenue, Wollaston, on Thursday evening. The musicale was given in aid of the Wollaston M. E. church. The musical selections were enthusiastically received by the large audience, and the readings by little Miss Maud Hathaway of East Boston, who is but ten years of age, were repeatedly encored. All of the ladies who made the affair such a marked success are residents of East Boston.

The programme was as follows:

Overture—"Morning, Noon and Night," Misses Dunbar and Morse.
Reading—"Sue's Wedding," Miss Maud Hathaway.

Song,	Miss Fannie McArthur
Whistling solo,	Miss Bessie Brown
Trio,	Misses Hathaway, Bruce and Staples
Solo,	Everett Higgins

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it.

For the Patriot.

Free Delivery.

The squibs in the LEDGER during the week, such as, "Quincy Point people begin to feel quite citified with the advent of the free postal delivery, which they like very much" sounds, and probably is the gushing of some school girl, in the ear of the reporter.

Free delivery was sprung upon the Quincy Point residents. Only a few politicians had any voice in the matter, it was not the request of the people.

While free delivery might be made a benefit to Quincy Point, it is with the present loss of privileges a perfect farce, and will continue to be as long as the place is without a free post-office station. For over thirty years there has been a post-office in our midst. Since June 13, 1892 three mails a day have been received and dispatched from the post-office at Quincy Point. Immediate delivery letters have been promptly delivered, and money order business has been in operation since July 25, 1892.

With the present arrangement Quincy Point has two deliveries of mail per day by the carrier, and the Neck people have one. Immediate delivery letters come with ordinary mail. If one wishes to send a registered letter, a money order, mail a package or newspaper and are ignorant of the postage required he must travel two miles for the privilege. To say that the Point and Neck residents are not overwhelmingly pleased at the advent of free delivery as at present conducted is speaking mildly. FACTS.

Mischievous Boys.

For the past few weeks the law abiding citizens of Milton have been kept in misery by the deviltry evidently committed by boys and it remained for Chief of Police Maurice Pierce to bring the offenders to justice.

Tuesday afternoon he arrested Dennis O'Leary, Timothy Rush, each aged 11 years, and Timothy English, aged 8 years, and confronting them with several of the crimes they broke down and confessed.

The crimes for which the boys are wanted are breaking and entering, larceny and malicious mischief.

During the early part of September they entered the newly finished house of James McVane where they besmeared the walls of the house with colored paint. They also sawed away the door cases and doors, turned on the water in the sink and down cellar and left it running and then removed all the keys from the doors and threw them away.

They then broke into Titeston & Hollingworth's paper mill but did not steal anything.

Last week they broke into the carpenter's shop of Gregory Ohrnberger, where they stole a silver watch and an $8 railroad ticket. They quarreled over the watch which ended in their throwing it down a chimney which ruined it. They were arraigned in the District court at Quincy.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The gymnasium will open Saturday evening under the direction of Dr. Johnson, who has done such excellent work for the past three years. The boys' class will meet at 4 and the men's at 7.45 P. M. For the present there will only be two evening classes, the third evening will be given to a series of talks on physiology, by Dr. Johnson.

A union missionary rally will be held Sunday afternoon at 3.30 in the Congregational church. Mr. L. D. Wishard will deliver the address. Mr. Wishard is the father of the Intercollegiate Y. M. C. A's., and a prominent worker in the Student's Volunteer movement. All of the young people's societies are invited to join in this meeting. There will be special music by a male quartette.

The educational classes expect to get down to business next week. They will meet as follows, beginning promptly at 7 P. M. Monumental drawing, Monday; clay modeling, Tuesday; free hand drawing Friday. New pupils continue to register.

☞ A general reduction in fares via Fall River Line became effective on October 1st, the first class fare from Boston to New York being reduced from $4 to $3, with a corresponding reduction from all other points in the East. po

☞ We think no one appreciates the kind efforts of the PATRIOT in their behalf more than C. F. —The famous musical composers have taken a hint from their literary brethren, and are securing an advance magazine publication for their compositions just as the authors publish their novels in serial form. The Ladies' Home Journal, which was practically the first magazine to offer this outlet to composers of repute, finds all the musical men rallying to it.

GIVE THEM A REST.

The Only Restorative for Tired Men and Horses.

Is a tired horse, which has worked all day, lashed because his strength is flagging? Sometimes, when a savage or a fool drives him. A wise man lets tired horses rest. Tired organs in the human body are often lashed with so-called "tonics," that are supposed to be strengthening. Nothing gives strength but food.

Paskola is a food, rich in nutritious elements. It is pre-digested, and requires no work of feeble stomachs. So Benjamin Helms of Bridgton, N. J., found out after medicines had failed to relieve him of indigestion. He writes May 4, 1894:

"I felt a beneficial result, from the very first dose, am gaining in strength daily and have a ravenous appetite. In fact, I can eat the most hearty and rich food that has been repulsive to me for a year past. My heart is much stronger, and I am free from sinking spells."

He could eat rich food after a time because Paskola had given his stomach a chance to rest.

Mrs. Charles E. Lathian of 111 West 45th St., New York City, writes:

"For five years I suffered from gastric indigestion, and have tried all the so-called remedies for indigestion, besides courses of treatment from physicians all over the country, from which I received only temporary relief.

"My symptoms were heartburn, flushing heat, dizziness, bloated feeling after eating, depression of spirits, severe and accute attacks of cramps and inflammation and chronic constipation.

"After taking one small bottle of Paskola I felt very much better. I have now taken only seven small bottles, and have never felt better in my life. I have gained ten pounds and now eat anything my appetite craves. My friends say 'How fat and well you look; what have you been doing?' My answer is 'Paskola.'"

You can buy Paskola at any druggists. A descriptive pamphlet, free, if you apply to Bicycle Races.

Quite a large crowd gathered at East Milton Saturday afternoon to witness the bicycle races. The course was from in front of the Rugby building to near the Town House and back a distance of 4 1-4 miles.

The first race was an open one, and should have been limited to local riders but instead of that the management allowed John Weathergreen of Malden, a fast class A man to enter against the amateurs and he was therefore an easy winner.

There were five entries in the race which was won by Weathergreen, time 12 minutes 28 1-4 seconds, Walter B. Skinner second. The prizes were a pair of imported vases and a box of cigars.

The second was called a novice race and there were three entries. On the home stretch a train at the East Milton depot interfered somewhat with the finish, but the first prize was given to Walter B. Skinner.

There was a dispute about the second prize, both R. A. Robertson and Charles Gallagher claiming it.

The judges were really to blame for leaving the tape and running to the depot, and to settle it Mr. Quimly decided to have Robertson and Gallagher run the race over again. Robertson refused to do so and Gallagher went over the course alone and was given the second prize.

The prizes were a gentleman's dressing case and a box of cigars.

During the races the Milton band gave an open air concert.

William Clark, the news agent at East Milton, will hereafter have the LEDGER on sale daily after 4 P. M. Today it is presented to Milton readers by D. E. Wadsworth & Co.

The Kind That Cures

Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Female Complaints, Nervous Prostration, La Grippe, Blood, Nerve, Kidney, or Skin Troubles.

Dyspepsia Cured.

MRS. CHAS. VILLIERS, of SOUTH BRAINTREE, MASS., suffered with acute Dyspepsia, constant Sick Headache and Vomiting. Nothing brought her relief. She finally tried DANA'S; it CURED her. Her words are, "I felt a great deal better before I finished one bottle. DANA'S CURED me, for I can now eat anything without distress; no more vomiting; no more Sick Headache."

Great Faith in Dana's.

MRS. MARY E. FREEMAN, of SOUTH FOXBORO, MASS., had great faith in DANA'S, and it was justified. She suffered greatly from Sores and Ulcers, from Impure Blood. DANA'S CURED her.

Tells his Friends to "Try DANA'S."

MR. WM. F. HUTCHINSON, of WOLLASTON, MASS., says that DANA'S is just what is claimed for it, and he has no hesitation in advising the afflicted to "Try DANA'S."

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE,
Who, after 20 years' personal use, writes as follows: TO THE PEOPLE:

I know by personal observation that DOCTOR H. A. TUCKER'S medicine, popularly called "No. 59," is potent and safe. It ought to be on the shelf in every nursery, and in the satchel on every journey. Going from home I always carry some of it with me, and have administered it to many who in car and steamer have been taken sick. Better smash your brandy flask and the various styles of "Bitters," which are Rum put up under enticing nomenclature, and take with you a bottle of DOCTOR TUCKER'S 59 as a pocket pistol with which to shoot down physical disorders.

Shawmut Spring.

THE Shawmut Spring is located at the base of a high hill near the Metropolitan Park reservation, on land owned by the undersigned.

This water has been in constant use by workmen from all the quarries in the vicinity, as well as residents of immediate surroundings, for fifty years at least.

Workmen and other persons have come from miles away to get water from this spring, while other springs and wells are very much nearer to them, thus showing their appreciation of this water.

The water is very cold in summer, and never freezes in winter.

The location being at the base of the hill, with nothing but trees and rocks above it, no wash from cultivated fields or other polluted ground can enter it.

The unsatisfactory waters we are compelled to drink, and the earnest solicitations of friends, induce me to offer this water to the public at a normal price, trusting that its merits will sustain the reputation with patrons that it now has with those who have long known it.

This water will be furnished to all patrons in such quantities as may be desired.

Water will be delivered at Six Cents per gallon for less than five gallons. Jugs or cases of five gallons at Five Cents per gallon.

Yours truly, F. J. FULLER.
West Quincy, July, 1894.

Having made use of Shawmut Spring water in my family, I take great pleasure in recommending it to others as superior in taste and purity to any other spring water I know of.

The Antiquity of Superstitions.

Why do people shudder when a dog howls near a house where lies a sick person? Why is the breaking of a mirror supposed to portend death or bad luck? Why should touching the hump of a hunchback bring fortune? Why do people indulge in these and all other kinds of superstitions? The answers to these questions are generally shrugs of the shoulders, and frequently those very shoulder shruggers are the most superstitious of mankind. Few people indeed have any idea that when they indulge in superstition they are performing the rite of a religion which dates back so many years before the advent of the Christian era, but such is nevertheless the case.

The popular superstitions of the day are older than our religion and our customs. In the darkest days of ancient history superstitions took their rise in the shape of religious beliefs. The seed was sown not in one place, but wherever man existed, for the same superstitions flourished in various parts of the world among nations who had no communication with each other. They were handed down from generation to generation, frequently remodeled to suit the exigencies of the times, so that the person who today seeks the four-leaved clover or breaks a wishbone is only following in footsteps made hundreds of years ago.—New York Telegram.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach." CARLOS MARTYN, D. D., New York City.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Eructation, Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion, Without injurious medication.

"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results." EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., 125th Street and 7th Ave., New York City.

The Honest Kind

ACKOWLEDGED BY THE HIGHEST AUTHORITY.

IN THEIR 24th REPORT (1893)

make the statement that Sarsaparillas containing Iodide of Potassium are unsafe to use, excepting under the supervision of an experienced physician, and that their continued use tend to impoverish instead of purifying the blood. Also that in many cases they act as a DIRECT POISON, and cause serious trouble, defeating the object for which they are taken.

ALL THE LEADING SARSAPARILLAS were analyzed and found to contain this poisonous chemical in various quantities, EXCEPTING ALLEN'S, which was found entirely free from Iodide of Potassium or other chemicals, and to be purely vegetable, thereby verifying our claim that it is the "HONEST KIND."

This is an unprejudiced statement made by the most scientific body of men in New England as A WARNING TO THE PUBLIC against the use of dangerous and injurious medicines. ALLEN'S is the HONEST KIND, the safe kind, and the kind that CONQUERS DISEASE.

Physicians and druggists unite in its recommendation.

Indian Summer.

Fair Summer flying from chill Autumn's breath—
Turned and looked back with a longing, restful gaze,
And saw the frost spirits, in their work of death,
Despoil the fruits of all her golden days.
But blithe October's pencil moved among
The leaves and branches labyrinthic maze,
And touched the sumac with a crimson flame,
And swept the mountains with a purple haze.
Pleasant, in truth, it looked—and Summer smiled
And blew a kiss toward her one-time home—
Then, laughing as a happy little child,
She called her birds around her, and was gone.—The Ladies' Home Journal.

Notes and Comments.

—The largest single sale, says the Roxbury Gazette, of stamps ever made at the Boston office was consummated last Tuesday by a wholesale house in that city. The amount was 500,000.

—The Journal published at Fort Payne, Alabama, says: "The state of Maine has furnished two very brilliant men to the public service since the war, James G. Blaine and Thomas B. Reed.

—The Springfield Republican has been running the Ten Commandments in its daily issue as a paid advertisement, in fulfilment of a contract with a resident of that city who wants the present generation to see what the decalogue says.

—The corner-stone of the new church to be erected by the First Universalist Society of Roxbury, to take the place of that burned last January, was laid last week. The new structure will stand at the corner of Buena Vista and Fenno streets.

—The Lexington Hotel of Chicago, valued $1,000,000, has been sold at delinquent tax sale for $6410.75. The purchaser is William Mills, a clerk. The Lexington was built in 1892 and during the World's fair it had many notable people as guests.

—There is a woman letter carrier in Connecticut, a woman street-car driver in Georgia, a woman recruiting sergeant in England, a woman bar-keeper in New Jersey, and a woman who can cook in Quincy—but she's not to be found at intelligence offices.

—A Brocktonian who summers at one of the Cape towns tells some amusing stories about the borrowing propensities of his neighbors. The climax was capped when a family that had a child die sent over to see if they couldn't borrow his refrigerator to keep the body in until the funeral took place. He courteously but firmly declined.

—Miss Ella L. Knowles of Montana, the young lawyer who lately came within a few votes of being elected State attorney, has just received a fee of $10,000 for effecting a settlement in an important lawsuit involving large mining interests. The matter has been in litigation for two years. Her fee is the largest ever received by a woman attorney.

—Counterfeit ten-cent Canadian pieces are being circulated in Gloucester of the coinage of 1894. The bogus coin are new in appearance, but the designs on either side are not so raised as in the genuine coin and appear less distinct, while the milling on the edges is poorly executed. The surface can be raised with a knife by cutting the edges, being apparently made of silver foil, which does not adhere closely to the filling.

—A mail carrier between two towns in Pennsylvania has been arrested, charged with stealing fourteen chickens. The fowls were found in his yard, near the mail wagon. His only excuse for their possession was that they flew on his wagon as he passed a farmyard, and stayed there until he got home. That farmer should be advised to set a different brand of eggs next time. The sort he's been using are too accommodating.

—The largest diamond in the world, the Excelsior, was discovered on the 30th of June, 1893, in the mines of Jagersfontein, Cape Colony, by Edward Jorgansen, inspector. It is a stone of the first water, valued at about $5,000,000. It was carried to the Cape under the special convoy of a squadron of lancers, and shipped on a gunboat to London, where it was deposited in the bank of England. It weighs 971 carats and three-quarters, or 205 grammes and a half.

—The number of farms in the United States in 1890 was four million and a half, in round numbers. The average size of the farms in the United States was 137 acres. The valuation of land, buildings, implements, machinery and live stock was sixteen billion dollars. As the wealth of the whole country was estimated at sixty-five billion dollars, the single business of agriculture is one-quarter of the wealth of the whole country invested in all the other kinds of business.

"I would rather trust that medicine than any doctor I know of," says Mrs. Hattie Mason of Chilton, Carter Co., Mo., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy.

CITY COUNCIL.

The Council at its meeting Monday evening revived the hope of widening Coddington street and as anticipated it will be an expensive job. The street railway has not yet obtained its location on Franklin street and another hearing will be given. Norfolk Downs people will be pleased with one of the reports.

The only absent member was Councilman Waterhouse.

Communications.

A communication was received from the School Committee asking for an appropriation of $2,400 to complete the furnishings of the new High school. To Committee on Finance.

A communication was received from the Mayor asking for the transfer of $500 from the appropriations for miscellaneous city to the appropriation for miscellaneous fire department. Later in the evening Councilman Moxon offered an order for the same which was referred to the Committtee on Finance.

The Board of Managers of Public Burial Places asked for an appropriation of $800. To Committee on Finance.

Petitions.

Petitions were received from Henry L. Kincaide and Frank F. Crane for auctioneer's licenses; from Theodore Parker for common victualler's license and from A. Williams for a bowling alley license. To Committee on Licenses.

A petition for State aid from Ellen Milliken was referred to Committee on State Aid.

The West End club petitioned for a license for a sparing exhibition at St. Mary's hall, Nov. 9. To Committee on Licenses.

Councilman Bigelow presented a petition of residents of Franklin street, against granting permission to lay car tracks between Water street and Independence avenue, and asking for a public hearing. Laid on table.

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. petitioned to erect polls on South and Washington streets. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Lamb presented a petition from the Democratic City Committee asking the city to provide polling places in the several Wards for caucuses on Wednesday evening Oct. 10. Laid on the table and later in the evening an order was passed authorizing the Commissioner to provide suitable places.

Reports of Committees.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for a public hearing Monday evening Oct. 15 at 8 o'clock on the petition to accept as public ways, Billings street, Faxon street, Rawson road, Helena and Moscow streets and Glover avenue. Adopted.

The same committee reported a resolution widening Coddington street and assessing land damages as follows:

Henry H. Faxon	$141 80
Zenas S. Arnold	122 90
Lois K. Wales	139 50
Henry H. Faxon	157 00

J. W. Hersey	173 40
Henry H. Faxon	149 00
Estate of Charles K. Pratt	26 40
Total,	$11,568 15

This same resolution also called for an appropriation of $14,568.15. To Committee on Finance.

Councilman Robbins presented a majority report of the Committee on Legislative Matters, leave to withdraw, on the petition that the Legislature be petitioned to amend the charter so that all city work shall be done by day labor.

Councilman Sullivan presented a minority report that the Council be instructed to petition the Legislature, and that the amendment shall first be accepted by the citizens by a two-thirds vote.

Upon motion of Councilman Federhen both reports were laid on the table.

Polling Places.

The following polling places for the State election were adopted:

Ward 1,—Ward room, City Hall.

Ward 2,—Graham's building, Sumner street.

Ward 3,—Baxter's block, corner of Franklin and Water streets.

Ward 4, precinct 1,—St. Mary's hall, Willard street.

Ward 4, precinct 2,—New Hose house, Copeland street.

Ward 5,—Brasee's building.

Ward 6,—Duggan's block.

Councilman Moxon offered a resolution to the effect that the electric street lighting was being performed very unsatisfactory, and that the Mayor be requested to inform the Council at its next meeting if any action can be taken to better light the streets. Adopted.

The Council voted that when it adjourns it be until next Monday evening at the usual hour.

Councilman Johnson moved to take the petition of the street railway for a location to the Braintree line from the table. Voted.

The petition of Councilman Bigelow, remonstrating against the granting of the location was also taken from the table.

Councilman Bigelow thought something should be done with the petition, and that another hearing should be given.

Councilman Holden thought there was no need of furthur hearing.

Councilman Johnson thought the two hearings that had already been given, were enough.

The Chair ruled that the order was before the council and must be acted upon first.

Councilman Anderson moved to lay the order on the table. Voted.

Councilman Bigelow moved a public hearing be given the petitioners Monday evening, Oct. 8, at 8.30 o'clock. Voted.

The order laying out the extension of Grove street took its second reading and under suspension of the rules was passed to be ordained. Adjourned at 8 40.

Sandy's Answer.

"Sandy," said Mrs. Simpson to her eldest olive branch the other day when he returned from school, "I forbid ye to play or rid about wi' that Bobby Wilson ony mare. Mind that na, an if I ever hear o' you playin wi' him again I'll gi ye a guild lickin." "What way have I no' to play wi' Bobby, ma?" queried the youngster, with some surprise. "Becus he's a bad, wicked laddie," replied his mother. "Weel, ma," returned Sandy, after a moment's thought, "I dinna think I'm that awfu' guid mysel', that ye need to be sae feart."—Scottish-American.

☞ Castoria is truly a marvelous thing for children. Doctors prescribe it, medical journals recommend it and more than a million mothers are using it in place of Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, so-called soothing syrups and other narcotic and stupefying remedies. Castoria is the quickest thing to regulate the stomach and bowels and give healthy sleep the world has ever seen. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, quiets pain, cures diarrhœa and wind colic, allays feverishness, destroys worms and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mother's friend.

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."

Boston Stage.

Hollis Street Theatre.

On Monday evening, October 8, Marie Jansen, will begin her engagement at the Hollis Street theatre, which is limited this year to one week. Miss Jansen's tour as a star last year was successful beyond her highest expectations and proved in a gratifying manner what a favorite this bright and winsome little woman is in all the large cities of this country. She has a new play this year called "Miss Dynamite," which has been pronounced one of the most brilliant and humorous farces which has been written in this country. It is clean, refined and at the same time extremely funny. It is said to remind one of those delightful mirth-provoking pieces of Madison Morton, which were so enormously popular in the days of that gifted farce writer. Miss Jansen's work in her new play has been enthusiastically praised, and a repetition of her last year's triumph is confidently predicted.

Tremont Theatre.

For the coming week, beginning Monday, October 8, and for that week only Helen Dauvray, the comedienne, who made such a distinct hit last season as Dorcas, the Sporty Quakeress, in the Prodigal Daughter, will appear for the first time at the Tremont Theatre, in William Gill's new farcical comedy, That Sister of His. The new play is especially suited to the broad comedy talent and versatility of Miss Dauvray, and in the several cities where it has been produced this season, another and as distinct a hit is credited to her as that made by her in "One of Our Girls," which was the success and the sensation of several seasons. Miss Dauvray's role is of a dual nature, and affords her ample scope for clever characterization and for the introduction of several novel features. The supporting company is of exceptional merit.

Columbia Theatre.

"On the Mississippi" has amply fulfilled all the promises made by the management, and has enjoyed a goodly volume of business during the past week. It will begin its second and last week October 8, and indications point to a most prosperous continuance of its engagement. The play is very exciting and contains some of the most thrilling scenes ever placed on the stage, and they come so rapidly that the interest is sustained from start to finish. The exciting incidents at the Madri Gras carnival at New Orleans, the attempted lynching, the affray in the gambling house, the attack on the jail, the floating theatre on the Missisippi, the darkey roustabouts in their inimitable songs and dances, were all heartily welcomed and warmly applauded by the large audiences that have been present at every performance.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The first big production that Boston will see this year, and probably the biggest one it has seen in many years, will be made at the Bowdoin Square Theatre on Monday evening Oct. 8, when "The Cotton King" will receive its first American representation. This play is a great success in England and it has many features that should recommend it to an audience particularly an American audience. In the first place "The Cotton King," the hero played by Jack Mason, is a Yankee who has made a fortune in America, manufacturing cotton fabrics and who goes to England to introduce Yankee ideas. Boston has always been fond of melo-drama and if the "Cotton King" is as good as claimed, its success will surely equal the famous run of "Hands Across the Sea" "The Soudan" and other numerous Boston melo-dramas.

B. F. Keith's New Theatre.

The extraordinary volume of patronage with which Mr. Keith's beautiful new theatre has been favored for the past two months continues unabated, the audiences crowding the house to the very verge of suffocation at both the afternoon and evening performances. More than usual interest is manifested in the exquisite "Living Pictures," to which there have been several new additions. The magnificent groupings are received with enthusiasm.

The New Lyceum Theatre.

Another of manager Mohr's specially prepared bills will presented next week. Brooks and Denton, the accomplished instrumentalists, head the list. Phyllis Allen, the celebrated contralto, who stands foremost as a songstress, is another prominent feature. Something new will be seen in the art line. It is called "The New Pictures," and will be found to be a beautiful art presentation.

Literary Notes.

"The Capture of Niagara," one of the greatest of man's industrial achievements, and the enforcement of it to the manufacture of immense quantities of electrical power to be used hundreds of miles away, will be the subject of an illustrated descriptive article by E. Jay Edwards, in McClure's Magazine for October.

—Austria is greatly tickled over the Gorman tariff. A leading paper there says the McKinley tariff almost killed the mother-of-pearl industry, but now it will revive. Also that the reduction of duties on gloves and glassware is a matter of great joy.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

—Women who pant to distinguish themselves in manly pursuits should take pattern by the 100 women suffragists of Topeka, Kan., who have come out in trousers and short skirts.

Household Receipts.

GRAPE PRESERVE. Remove the seeds from a slit in the side with a small penknife. Put half a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit, cook half an hour and seal up.

POTATO PIE. Cold mutton, the more the better, thin slices of raw potatoes enough to fill up the baking dish, onions, salt and pepper to taste; cover with pastry and bake.

GINGERBREAD. Two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a scant cupful of molasses, one-half cupful each of shortening and cold water, one teaspoonful of ginger, one teaspoonful of mixed spices, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a little salt, and flour to make a proper batter.

PRESERVED APPLES. Pare, core and quarter twelve large apples, not tart apples, nor very sweet, make a syrup of one pound of sugar and one pint of water and boil, put in as much apple as will cook without breaking, cook until tender, after all are done, add to the liquid two cups of sugar and stew ten minutes slowly. Pour over the apples and cover closely.

FRIED OYSTERS. Get the largest oysters, free them carefully from bits of shell, rinse in cold water, only letting them stay in the water a moment. Lay them on a clean towel and dry. Beat up as many eggs as you will need for dipping in the oysters. Dip each oyster in the beaten egg, then in cracker crumbs, patting the crumbs close to the oyster; when all are covered with crumbs, fry quickly in boiling lard a light brown.

GRAPE CATSUP. Five pints of grapes; simmer until soft, then put through a colander; add to them two pints of brown sugar, one pint of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of allspice, two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon, two tablespoonfuls of cloves, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of mace, one teaspoonful of salt, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of red pepper.

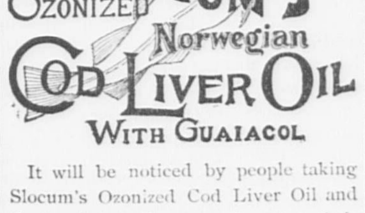
APPLE JELLY. Take any nice, sour, juicy apples; after taking cut blows and steams, wash or wipe clean and cut in quarters. If any are wormy, take out the cores. Cook in porcelain kettle, with plenty of water to cover, until soft, then pour into a jelly-bag and drain. To every pint of juice add 12 ounces of white sugar. Cook until the sirup drips from skimmer in two or three places. Flavoring extracts can be used with apple jelly if wished.

FRIED APPLES. Slice tart, ripe apples; make egg batter, very thin; sweeten and flavor with nutmeg; dip each slice in and fry in butter.

Washing Windows.

There is a right and wrong way to wash windows, and as this operation is usually dreaded, the following method will doubtless be appreciated, as it saves both time and labor: Choose a dull day, or at least a time when the sun is not shining on the window, for when the sun shines on the window it causes it to be dry streaked, no matter how much it is rubbed. Take a painter's brush and dust them inside and out, washing all the woodwork inside before touching the glass. The latter must be washed simply in warm water diluted with ammonia—do not use soap. Use a small cloth with a pointed stick to get the dust out of the corners; wipe dry with a soft piece of cotton cloth—do not use linen, as it makes the glass linty when dry. Polish with tissue paper or old newspaper. You will find this can be done in half the time taken where soap is used, and the result will be brighter windows.—Commercial Reporter.

—John Wanamaker is classed as among the most eminent and successful business men in this country. He is in many respects a philosopher as well as a religious thinker, and on many occasions, too, gives expression to gems of thought that find response in many minds. Not long since while addressing an audience he said it made little difference to what denomination a man belonged to. "Religion," he said, "was broader than creeds, and he was a Christian first, then a Presbyterian, and as long as a man lives up to one honest belief I have no fault to find."



It will be noticed by people taking Slocum's Ozonized Cod Liver Oil and Guaiacol that after a week or two their appetites will commence to improve. Why is this? Because the Guaiacol destroys the poisonous Bacteria which are present in the stomach and the blood of consumptives, and impairing their appetite and digestion. By destroying these Bacteria we give Nature an opportunity to re-establish the original healthy condition of the tissues.

A perfect remedy for consumption. Pleasant to take.

Temperance.

Law Enforcement.

There is today being waged against the curse of the nineteenth century, a warfare upon two great battlefields, that of moral suasion and that of legal suasion. The former is the greater of the two, for the latter while aiding and necessary to it, is but the outgrowth of and dependent upon it.

The campaign of moral suasion aims to so elevate, strengthen and purify mankind that the thirst and passion for strong drink will no longer be one of its weaknesses, but it will be supplanted by a prejudice resulting from an intelligent appreciation of our obligations to society, to our families, and to ourselves. I used the word prejudice advisedly, because I believe that prejudice may be the result of, as well as the absence of, education. Some one has said that civilization is a habit, and that barbarism is also a habit. It can as truly be said that temperance, as well as intemperance,—IS A HABIT.

This meeting is a musterfield of the army of moral suasion, where its soldiers assemble for the education resulting from exchange of ideas and observation of examples, in our van are enrolled the scholar, the christian, the philanthropist and the well wishes of his fellowmen. Upon our banners are inscribed the records of many conquests in the cause of humanity, the greatest of which was its first, that of the church, and as by Mohammed old, the conquered city was made its capital. Its next greatest conquest was its last, that of the public school, which has been made its ally and training school, by which, and through which, we expect to make our principles as thoroughly believed and understood, as it is now believed that the world is round. Legal suasion must not, however, be overlooked. It is the hand-to-hand grapple with the enemy in which every move is bitterly contested, and we are called upon to meet the best forces and ability of an enemy fighting aggressively for the supremacy, and desperately for existence. HER COMMON REPLY:
"I DON'T FEEL VERY WELL."

You Hear These Words Every Day Spoken By Women You Know.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

It's in their mind all the time.
It weighs upon them, it crushes them.

They are utterly miserable. Don't you know the reason? Don't you know that the cause of nearly all your trouble was discovered by a woman twenty years ago? Don't you know that from that day to this, thousands have been cured of the same life-killing tortures that now afflict you?

The words "Women's Complaints" represent misery untold, and have shortened thousands of beautiful lives.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound comes to you with physical salvation; nothing like it ever came into the lives of women. It relieves at once, and cures all the miseries that result from displacement and derangement of the womb.

Hear what this woman who once suffered and is now well says. Can proof be greater?

"All I have to say is, any woman who continues to suffer with any of those trying diseases peculiar to our sex is largely responsible for her own suffering, for if she will only apply to Mrs. Pinkham, relief will follow at once. This I know absolutely from my own personal experience. Her Vegetable Compound is a miracle. I have seen it cure womb troubles when all the wisest doctors failed.

Poetry.

Indian Summer.

The drying corn in golden heaps is piled,
Pumkins still weigh down the vine;
From yonder hill-top glows the red sumac,
Over all streams the sunshine.

The grapes in graceful purple clusters hang,
Soon to change to mellow wine;
The green of trees to red and yellow turned
Round their limbs gay creepers twine.

Fringing fields, bright golden rods nods greeting
To the fern, lace-like and fine;
While slowly down the lane, into the creek
Wade the large-eyed, patient kine.
The blue sky arches over all, in its Wide expanse there is no sign
Of coming Winter, cold, bleak, chill and drear—
The pure air is warm divine.

These beauties now so widely spread abroad
Will gradually decline:
This thought of certain, cruel death causes
Mortals vainly to repine.

If this is called the dying of the year,
This calm still glow of sunshine
I would that such a peaceful end as this Might be yours, dear friend, and mine!

MRS. ELLIS L. MUMMA.

Miscellany.

KITTY'S MISTAKE.

"Kitty—don't you ever mean to marry?"

The speaker was pretty Naomi Stearns. She was seated in Kitty Preston's pretty morning room—just the place for girlish confidence.

"There, now, Naomi! You needn't begin that sort of question just because you are engaged and I am not!" Kitty laughed as she spoke.

"But seriously, now, Kitty—"

"Seriously, Naomi, I have not as yet found one I care for!" As Kitty spoke her cheeks flushed, and she questioned herself if she were telling the truth.

"How about Phillip Merton?" asked Naomi.

"Nonsense! Phil hasn't stability of character. He would never cling to anything or any place. I'd be afraid to trust myself with Phil."

"You may be right," assented Naomi. "I have heard father say that Phil was 'a rolling stone;' but there's Harry Brooks; not much roll to him."

"No—Harry is lazy. No girl ought to marry Harry until he gives evidence of some energy of character."

"Well, then, there is Howard Graves."

"He thinks too much of his money and position, and, after all, he isn't any better than many a poorer man. That is, I don't want any of them. It's not that I think I am too good for them, but I don't want to marry." Kitty gave her hairbrush an impatient little toss.

"Well, don't wait too long, Kitty. You may make a mistake in that," said Naomi, with a warning shake of her brown, fluffy hair.

"Seems to me I had better wait forever than to make the mistake so many girls make," replied Kitty, soberly.

Naomi ran lightly down stairs and home, to glance shyly at the new ring sparkling upon her finger, while Kitty strolled out into the rose-scented garden.

She began to think of what she had said, when she was interrupted by Aunt Margaret. She was a dear old lady, whom Kitty had invited to make her home with her. Kitty's father, Dr. Preston, had died four years ago, and two years later her mother followed him. Kitty meant to take up the duties of life bravely, but she felt it so lonely! Then she thought of Aunt Margaret away up among the Vermont hills, who was lonely also. Why shouldn't they live together? So Kitty wrote for her to try for one winter. They grew to love each other so dearly they had not separated.

"Do you want to be alone, Kitty?"

"No, I only felt a little sober. Naomi has been talking to me about getting married. Think what dreadful times some of the girls have had since they married. I'd rather stay with you, auntie."

Aunt Margaret knew Kitty might have added "and be like you," for this quiet, gentle woman was a maiden lady. Something in Kitty's face had touched her heartstrings and she passed quietly into the house, leaving Kitty to her reflections, which oddly enough, were turned upon Ernest Seabrook just as that gentleman opened the gate and walked toward her. Mr. Seabrook was a tall dark man of irreproachable reputation and kindly impulses. He was forty-three years old, but Kitty always forgot his age. She liked him, in fact, much better than any of her young lovers.

She was startled as this thought thrust itself upon her. Was he her lover? She had driven with him, had walked and sailed with him; he had frequently been her escort on picnic occasions. Wherever the young lover could go he had been, but through it all Kitty had never thought of him as a lover. He seemed more her father or an elderly friend. Kitty felt there were other thoughts to be analyzed, but there was no time now; she must attend to her caller.

"Good morning, Katherine." He addressed her familiarly, because he had known her from her childhood, but he had never called her "Kitty" since he came home from a long absence abroad.

"Good morning, but why don't you call me 'Kitty? Other people do," she exclaimed. "You used to call me 'Kitty.'"

"I know; that was when you were a child. When I came home and found my Kitty had grown—"

"Into a cat!" interrupted Kitty, laughingly.

"Heaven forbid! Not into an ugly, scratching cat, but a demure young lady, I did not feel at liberty to call you 'Kitty.' 'Miss Preston' seemed too formal, so I decided upon 'Katherine.' Besides, I don't want to call you by the name everybody else calls you, and 'Kitty' seems really too babyish for one of your earnest nature."

"How do you know I am earnest? I am always joking when with you."

"True, but I know underneath it all is an earnest nature. But if we get to moralizing I may forget the exact words of my sister's message. It is a request that you should come over to tea with us, row afterward, then a little music, and so on, before home,

Kitty knew what these delightful afternoons meant. She was always happy at the Seabrooks'. It was Martin Seabrook who lived in this delightful place with a lovely wife. This happy couple made a home for Ernest and his son Ellis. Ellis was twenty-two and at present was traveling. Ernest had been a widower for fifteen years.

"Of course I will go," said Kitty.

"Then I will call for you at three," and he bowed himself away.

"Isn't it the usual time for Mr. Seabrook's vacation?" asked Aunt Margaret, when Kitty entered.

"Yes, but his brother is not well this summer, and so Mr. Ernest has given up his vacation to assist him about his business and contents himself with such outings as he can get occasionally."

"Very kind in him, I'm sure."

"Yes—Mr. Ernest is a kind man," and Kitty ran up stairs to array herself in some white fluffiness that made her look like an angel. Afterward she rode away.

The tea-drinking was like all others at that house—enjoyable. The river was as placid as a river could be. An old time boat song blended sweetly in their united voices, for Ernest insisted upon Mrs. Martin joining them. Was it merely Kitty's fancy? Ernest's hand seemed to take a stronger pressure than usual as they floated down the bright pathway cut by the moonbeams. Kitty did not mean to be prudish, but she suddenly drew her hand away and then discovered Mr. Seabrook scowling under his hat.

Kitty felt disturbed. The thoughts which she meant should lie quietly until she got ready to attend to them were forcing themselves upon her. She felt frightened at herself and innocently wondered why.

But at last the evening was over. The little boat was safely moored and Kitty found herself at her own door. There was still a bit of constraint on Kitty's part, but none on his. He touched her hand with the same old time good-night pressure and left her to dream over it all.

"If he does really care for me why doesn't he say so?" queried Kitty, walking with an impatient tap of her little boot heels across the hall floor,

She awoke in the morning feeling a little dissatisfied with herself, but was taken out of her thought for herself by a telegram which summoned Aunt Margaret to a distant city. After the bustle of her hurried departure had subsided, Kitty's thoughts returned. She scolded herself mentally. "This won't do," she thought. "I will go over to Longwood for a day and forget it.

The Osborns lived at Longwood. They were her friends and relatives of the Seabrooks. Kitty was gladly welcomed by all.

"You find us in quite a hurried preparation for a wedding, Kitty, but you'll help advise us, I know, your taste is so exquisite."

"How fine you will all be!" exclaimed Kitty, glancing at the piles of pretty silks and ribbons as she passed the dress-room.

"Whose is it?" she asked curiously.

Why, haven't you heard? It is my nephew. Strange you have not had your invitation! You see, it's all quite sudden. It is simply making up of an old-time lover's quarrel, and now that it is peace they are anxious to have the wedding as soon as possible, and I told Ernest I guessed it would be the better way." Kitty paled at the sound of the name.

"Why—what ails you, dear? Are you suddenly sick? Here, lie down here and try to sleep a bit!"

Kitty turned her face to the wall that she might not have to talk. She tried to school herself to composure, but Mrs. Osborne kept bits of information chipping about and Kitty listened listlessly, feeling as if she would never care for anything again. When Mrs. Osborne remarked, "How nice it will be to have them settled in Lakewood," Kitty repeated: "Lakewood."

"Yes, Ernest has bought the old Parsons estate and they are to live there."

Kitty knew the place very well. It was next to her own. How could she ever bear it, She wanted to go home now where she could think and learn how to bear this unexpected trouble. It lacked still an hour of train time.

"I must go. Indeed, dear Mrs. Osborne, I shall be better at home."

"Take care of yourself, now," was the parting admonitions as Kitty road away.

Kitty was thankful Aunt Margaret was away. "I wonder what she will think about his being my lover now?" thought Kitty, bitterly. "Seems she was mistaken this time. I must go away for a time, I cannot stay here through it all. I will send Nancy home for a visit to her mother and take Mary with me and go—where?" Anywhere—up among the mountains, where I can hide myself until I can command my foolish self."

Two days later found the house closed and Ernest Seabrook, calling there, found all doors and shutters closed, and everything wearing a look of desertion. He returned and questioned his sister.

"Gone!" she echoed in surprise. "Kitty never said a word about it. She generally tells me her plans."

"Perhaps she was suddenly called away."

"Yes, but even then she has sent me notes on several occasions, but I'll go over and call on Mrs. Sanderson. Perhaps she will know something abont it."

"I feel as if something is wrong," said Ernest.

"So do I, and I'll try to find out about it."

Mrs. Sanderson was Kitty's nearest neighbor, and Mrs. Martin Seabrook rode over at once, and in the course of her conversations casually inquired for the Prestons.

"They all went off suddenly. I haven't the least idea where they went," said Mrs. Sanderson. "Nancy went first, then Mary and Kitty. She went over to Longwood a couple of days before. Looked sick when she came home, at least she walked as if she were sick when she went into the house."

Mrs. Martin returned home perplexed.

"I feel positively worried, Ernest. Suppose you run over to Longwood tomorrow?"

Ernest looked at his watch.

"Time enough to go and get back tonight," he said, and rushed out for the station.

Arriving, he was eagerly questioned as to whether he had seen anything of Kitty Preston.

"She was here three days ago and was really sick when she went home."

"She has gone somewhere—house all shut up. We feel a little troubled about her. For some reason or other Martin's wife has the feeling that something is wrong. What did she talk about here?"

"Not much. I did the talking. She was surprised to hear of the wedding."

"Well, we hadn't mentioned it. Fact is, Ellis got rather sweet on Kitty, but she passed him over, so when he made up in that quarrel with Marie he felt foolish about it and wrote us not to mention the affair to her until it was over. We never thought to tell you not to mention it.

"It can't be Kitty cared for Ellis?" said Mrs. Osborne.

"Of course not, else why didn't she marry him when he asked her?" replied Ernest.

Ernest returned feeling troubled.

"We must think of some way to find her, Queenie."

"Queenie," was Mrs. Martin's pet name.

"Now, let me think," she said. "Mrs. Sanderson said Nancy went first. I shouldn't wonder if Nancy had gone to visit her mother in Globeville."

"Then, I shall follow Nancy to-morrow," said Ernest, decidedly, and he did.

He found Nancy without trouble, and was given Kitty's address—a little town up among the mountains. Next morning he started for the same place.

Arriving, after due inquiries at the little hotel, he learned that Kitty had been there, but had left the day before. She had left her address, however, and thither Ernest quickly followed.

Kitty had found her accommodations too limited and noisy, and had secured three apartments in an old rambling farm-house a couple of miles from the village. Here the sun peeped in from sunrise to sunset, but its shining brought no gladness to poor Kitty. She was losing color and strength. All the while she alternately pitied and blamed herself. Sometimes she allowed herself to blame Ernest.

On this particular morning she was sitting under an apple-tree, feeling unhappy, but having come to that point where she meant to make the best of it, and take up life bravely.

A shadow fell across her folded arms. She looked up to see Ernest Seabrook. Kitty sprung to her feet with a sudden and glad exclamation of welcome, which melted away all her determined reserve. Then, remembering, she directly froze again.

It waa such a sudden change of manner that Ernest wondered. Kitty was asking hurried questions about the wedding and tendered her congratulations effusively. Ernest wondered again.

"But I am not the happy man," he protested. Kitty looked astonished. "It is my son Ellis." Kitty remained speechless with astonishment.

"Did you think she meant me?" What, after all our sails and drives and—well—well! You must have thought me a precious scamp!" He took her hands in his own.

"Katherine, I have come up here to find you—to tell you how dear you are to this particular old man." A sudden thought and hope came to him, as he looked on her blushing face.

"Katherine, did you run away from me?"

"N—no—" stammered Kitty, "I ran away from your son!"

And the rest of the story was told under the apple-tree.—Chicago News.

Ladylike.

The Germans are justly proud of the richness of their language, their well-conjoined and artfully compounded words, and the beauty of their nouns formed of adjectives. They take a pecular delight in the long, many-syllabled single substantive in which is fused such wealth of meanings that they boastfully declare that it would require a long sentence of the English language to convey it properly. Yet it was with a wistful little sigh that a German lady confessed that her mother-tongue held no such beautiful and expressive compound as ladylike. "It means so much," said she, enviously, "and is so musical and suggestive."

It was a new point of view, and, like all criticism from without, busied the thoughts with the light thrown upon the old familiar word. Memories of early days were stirred and quickened, for almost the first instruction to a little girl in matters of conduct is conveyed in the admonition to be ladylike. It is a quality, too, which has not its accompanying defect. One can scarcely be too ladylike, unless one happens belong to the stern sex, which occasionally produces a "Miss Nancy."

Lady has been strangely abused, and is tattered and torn by rough usage and misapplication; but ladylike is still sweet and delicate, and no true woman can object to wear the epithet as a title of honor. Indeed, it is only the truly womanly woman who is entitled to wear it, who possesses the exquisite refinement, the dainty modes of thought and gentle speech, which are embodied in the word.—Harper's Bazar.

Domestic Life in Paris.

Life in Paris means what it does in all large cities—the good and the bad. The casual tourist sees, as a rule, only one side. As a race, the French are a merry-making people; their very natures seek and crave enjoyment. But their amusements are, therefore, not necessarily of an order below the ken of respectability. It has been my pleasure to see something of French domestic life, and to hear more of it from sources away from prejudice. The affection which exists between the French father and his daughter is beautiful and almost spiritual. Home and family means as much to him as it does to the resident of any other city under the sun.

The French mother is not only a cook par excellence, but a perfect type of housekeeper. By nature she is quick, and she accomplishes much more with less exertion than does her English sister. The education of her children is as a gospel to her. Her religious faith is strong, and she instills it into her children at the domestic board and at eventide. The parents live out of doors, but it is rare, indeed, that you see children in the streets of Paris after reasonable hours. They are taught to find their chief amusement in the home; and everything is done by the French father and mother to see that the home is attractive to their children. One of the most beautiful sights in the world is to see a well regulated French family, where you will find the atmosphere redolent with domesticity.—Boston Home Journal.

—According to statistics, women today are two inches taller, on an average, than they were twenty or thirty years ago.

Morning Scarecrows.

We have all seen these scarescrows; some live in distant towns, others in our neighborhood, but none of them, of course, in our homes. They vary in habits. Some get up early; others late. The reasons for their peculiar dress in the morning are sometimes given that there is lack of time to appear otherwise; that an early breakfast is to be prepared; that children are to be dressed. What excuse can there be for grown women coming from their rooms in the morning in this way? The hair uncombed hanging down the back in a loose braid, or no braid at all; without collar or pin, and with a dress long ago mortgaged to the ragman! Shoes, with many missing buttons, unbuttoned and flapping, an accompaniment to the steps of their careless owners! The faces are gray and the hands are uncared for, with dirty nails.

How can women be so reckless of what is a part of their best capital in making home pleasant for their husbands and children? It is worth while to dress to help to win the husband, and why is it not worth while to dress to keep him?

When a woman chooses to array herself thus she astonishes the natives, while strangers are at a loss to know whether she is mistress or maid.

No woman can respect herself when she appears at such a disadvantage. She is cross because of slack habits but is the last to acknowledge it and to reform. They are not themselves who are forced to meet visitors when they are looking their worst. What might have been a very pleasant call from a lady is always remembered by her friend with a blush because of the discomfort of a disorderly toilet.

Such carelessness reflects on the whole household. The husband who was once so careful to appear in spotless attire has anything now but spotless clothes. The wife no longer mentions, much less notices when he goes to his business that the collar of his coat needs cleaning, or his boots need brushing. The boys are brought up to see these habits of their father, and help to make work for an orderly woman, or they are so lacking in observation that they choose "scarescows" for wives and thus the elements become hereditary from both sides of the family.

A woman who has no regard for her appearance for the first half of the day grows careless concerning the condition of her home and all that pertains to it. It soon becomes easy to sit down to read in a room in dire disorder. A chance caller is offered an apology, or none at all, according as the housekeeper has decided whether she has a right to keep her home just as she chooses, or be guided by neighborhood opinion or custom. Such dressing is demoralizing to the person, the family and home. Do any of your neighbors appear as scarecrows in the forenoon? or anybody in your town?—Good Housekeeping.

Value of Eggs for Food.

Eggs are a meal in themselves. Every element necessary to the support of man is contained within the limits of an egg-shell, in the best proportions and in the most palatable form. Plain boiled, they are wholesome. The masters of French cookery, however, affirm that it is easy to dress them in more than 500 different ways, each method not only economical, but salutary in the highest degree. No honest appetite ever yet rejected an egg in some guise. It is nutriment in the most portable form in the most concentrated shape. Whole nations of mankind rarely touch any other animal food. Kings eat them plain as readily as do the humble tradesmen.

Far more than fish—for it is watery diet—eggs are the scholar's fare. They contain phosphorus, which is brain food and sulphur, which performs a variety of functions in the economy. And they are the best of nutriment for children, for, in a compact form, they contain everything that is necessary for the growth of the youthful frame.

Eggs are, however, not only food—they are medicine also. The white is the most efficacious of remedies for burns, and the oil extractable from the yolk is regarded by the Russians as an almost miraculous salve for cuts, bruises and scratches. A raw egg, if swallowed in time, will effectually detach a fish bone fastened in the throat, and the white of two eggs will render the deadly corrosive sublimate as harmless as a dose of calomel. They strengthen the consumptive, invigorate the feeble, and render the most susceptible all but proof against jaundice in its more malignant phase. They can also be drunk in the shape of that "eggflip" which sustains the oratorical efforts of modern statesmen.

The merits of eggs do not even end here. In France, alone, the wine clarifiers use more than 80,000,000 a year, and the Alastians consume full 38,000,000 in calico printing and for dressing the leather used in making the finest of French kid gloves. Finally, not to mention various other employments for eggs in the arts, they may, of course, almost without trouble on the farmer's part, be converted into fowls, which, in any shape, are profitable to the seller and welcome to the buyer. Even egg-shells are valuable, for allopath and homeopath alike agree in regarding them as the purest of carbonate of lime.—London Standard.

Old Clothes.

It is a mystery to many people how scourers of old clothes can make them almost as good as new. Take for instance a shiny old coat, vest, or pair of pants of broadcloth, cassimere or diagonal. The scourer makes a strong, warm soap-suds and plunges the garment into it, souses it up and down, rubs the dirty places, if necessary puts it through a second suds, then rinses it through several waters and hangs it to dry on the line. When nearly dry he takes it in, rolls it up for an hour or two, and then presses it. An old cotton cloth is laid on the outside of the coat and the iron passed over that until all the wrinkles are out; but the iron is removed before the steam ceases to rise from the goods, else they will be shiny. Wrinkles that are obstinate are removed by laying at wet cloth over them and passing the iron over that. If any shiny places are seen they are treated as the wrinkles are; the iron is lifted while the full cloud of steam rises and brings the nap up with it. Cloth should always have a suds made specially for it, as if washed in that which has been used for white cotton or woolen clothes, lint will be left in the water and cling to the cloth. In this manner we have known the same coat and pantaloons to be renewed time and again, and have all the look and feel of new garments. Good broadcloth and its fellow cloths will bear many washings and look better every time because of them.—Christian Advocate.

Our Streets.

QUINCY, October 4, 1894.

Editor of the Patriot:

DEAR SIR—I notice in article written by "A Taxpayer" in your issue of September 29th, and while the writer dislikes to criticise any public officer whom he thinks is endeavoring to do his duty to the best of his ability, he certainly cannot agree with the article written in regard to the excuse which "Taxpayer" gives for Mr. Eaton not properly repairing the streets. Mr. Eaton has just as large an appropriation, or approximately as large an appropriation, for streets as any commissioner of public works since Quincy became a city. Admit that Quincy before it became a city practically did not have any streets built on permanent basis, that is, on a Telford or Macadam construction, there is certainly no excuse for Mr. Eaton squandering the city's money in scattering over the surface of Hancock street, a street which the city of Quincy has constructed on a telford system and spent on the same some $100,000, the loose gravel which was necessary to remove from the High school lot in order to establish a certain grade on that lot.

Certainly, no man with any idea of the construction laid down by the authorities on road building would think for a moment that loose gravel, consisting of gravel and round stones, even if it were of the very best material, could ever form a road which would wear on top of a Telford road, which is of course constructed on a solid rock foundation. The idea of a commissioner of public works in the nineteenth century who holds a position equal to the one which the city of Quincy offers, dumping on top of a Telford road (which consists as writer has stated above, of a solid rock foundation) old bricks, round stones, tin cans, mortar, etc., and expecting that it would form a surface that would stand the wear and tear which Hancock street, with its heavy teaming, etc., is obliged to stand.

In the article written by "Taxpayer," in which he consults the superintendent of streets in Medford, where he states that he had to build and repair all the roads with crushed stone is common sense. The city of Quincy, while writer was chairman of the Committee on Streets by the recommendation of the Committee on Streets put in a modern stone crushing plant with facilities for storing an exceptionally large quantity of crushed stone, with bins constructed for the different sizes of stone as they were crushed, with the expectation that we would have a commissioner of public works who had common sense enough to run the stone crusher during the winter season when labor could be obtained as cheaply as at any time. Also making a contract with the party who owned the land on which this stone crusher was located for the right to quarry from the quarries on the same land all the stone for crushing which the city of Quincy might require.

The city is paying for these privileges now, but unfortunately under the present administration are not using them. There is no reason with a steam roller with all the modern improvements, containing the picks when applied necessary to pick up a road of Hancock street construction, and a modern stone crushing plant, why we should not have the same recoated under a plan which would give us permanent use, and not oblige some future commissioner of public works to go to work at any extra expense to the citizens and taxpayers of Quincy to cart off, certainly within a year's time, the rubbish which has been dumped for full one mile and a half on Hancock street by the present commissioner.

Writer dislikes to rush into public print, but it certainly is an outrage to the taxpayers of Quincy that any such waste of money should occur as has been shown by the incompetent and foolish manner that Hancock street has been treated with. It would have been a great deal better if the commissioner of public works had let such portion of Hancock street that he did not have funds enough this year to repair in proper manner go, and repair as far as he could in a substantial manner so that it would last five or ten years. There is no reason why Hancock street, if properly recoated and then, as it is now, kept watered, would not last ten years as Washington street, which was recoated by Mr. Ewell two years ago at an expense of only $10,000 for its entire length will prove to any reasonable man's mind who takes the pains to drive over it today.

The only deterioration in Washington street which has occurred happened under the present administration where they were again foolish enough to apply a thin coating of gravel where the surface of the road had become worn so that the rocks which formed the bed of the road happened to show through. At a very slight expense more if the steam roller had been applied with the picks, and the road picked up, and a thin coating of crushed stone put on it and then wet down and rolled down, instead of the road showing the bad effects of the poor judgment shown this year it would have been in keeping with the balance of the street.

It is unfortunate for Quincy that a system cannot be kept up, or that we cannot have in office a commissioner who has the ability to repair our roads as far as he goes with what money he has to the best advantage of the taxpayers who furnish it to him; and writer states in closing that he takes decided objection to the statement made by "A Taxpayer" where he states that Mr. Eaton does the best he can with the amount given. In other words, writer's opinion, humble as it may be, is that the money is worse than thrown away. It would have been better to have not repaired the road at all than to have put on the material which has been put on, and which will cost three or four times the amount to remove as soon as we have a competent commissioner of public works to remove it.

Oysters as Food.

Chemists say that a quart of oysters contains about the same quantity of actual nutritive substance as a quart of milk or a pound of very lean beef, or a pound and a half of fresh codfish or two-thirds of a pound of bread. But the uses of the nutrients vary; for instance, the lean meat and codfish are most flesh formers, consisting largely of protein, while the bread, with its starch, has but little of these, and serves the body as fuel and supplies it with heat and muscular energy. Oysters come nearer to milk than almost any other common food material, both in amount and proportions of nutrients. Their values for supplying the body with material to build up its parts, repair its wastes, and furnish it with heat and energy are pretty nearly the same.—Good Housekeeping.

SATURDAY, OCT. 13, 1894.

Dedicated.

The new Methodist Episcopal church of Atlantic for which the members of that denomination have labored so hard, is completed and was formally dedicated to the purpose for which it was built, on Thursday, with imposing ceremonies.

The exercises commenced at 2.30 in the afternoon, and at that hour a large number of the members of the church and friends gathered within its walls.

The only interior decoration for the occasion were autumn leaves, which were draped about the arches over the pulpit and choir platforms.

The exercises in the afternoon were very interesting, especially the historical review by Mr. John Ramsdell, who sketched the church history of Atlantic step by step from about 1834 up to the present time, showing what the Methodist Episcopal church in particular had done. Another pleasing part of the exercises was the beautiful solo sung by Miss Mabel Burr.

The order of the afternoon exercises was as follows:

Organ prelude.
Invocation, Rev. Edward W. Virgin
Hymn 415, Rev. Frederick N. Upham
Scripture reading, Rev. Charles F. Rice, Ph. D.
Prayer, Rev. George A. Phinney
Solo, Miss Mabel Burr
Historical review, Mr. John Ramsdell
Hymn 650, Rev. J. H. Yeoman
Sermon, Rev. William Nast Brodbeck, D. D.
Hymn 667, Rev. Charles W. Blackett
Benediction, Rev. Herbert D. Deetz

At the conclusion of the afternoon exercises a lunch was served those visitors who desired to remain to the evening service.

At 7 o'clock the people again assembled in the church, when there was a "Love feast" led by Rev. William Full.

At 7.30 the dedicatory service were held with this programme:

Invocation, Rev. Joseph H. Mansfield, D. D.
Anthem, "Sweet the Moments."
Scripture Reading, Rev. Charles Parkhurst, D. D.
Prayer, Rev. David H. Ela, D. D.
Hymn 868, Rev. Charles W. Wilder
Sermon, Rev. John W. Hamilton, D. D.
Anthem, "Except the Lord build the House."
Dedication, Presiding Elder Mansfield and Rev. George S. Chadbourne, D. D.
Doxology.
Benediction, Rev. John W. Hamilton, D. D.
Organ Postlude.

The new church is situated at the junction of Squantum street, Newbury avenue and Hunt street, and is a very pretty structure. The corner stone was laid April 10th, and since that time work has gone rapidly forward to completion and the grounds in front are neatly graded.

Hose House Dedicated.

The members of Hose Co. No. 4 painted the Point district red Wednesday evening, the occasion being the celebration of the completion of its new house for which the firemen and citizens of Ward Two have waited so long.

It is seldom that Quincy Point has a celebration, but when it does, it has a good one. Thus it was Wednesday evening. The day was anything but promising, but as evening approached the sky cleared and the evening was beautiful, and therefore those who were not fortunate enough to be invited to the gathering on the inside of the building could enjoy it from the outside.

In honor of the event the company had decorated the grounds in front of the building with Chinese lanterns, while the building itself was illuminated from top to bottom with electric lights.

The exercises commenced at 7.30 by a concert by the Sons of Veteran drum corp. While this was in progress, the guests, who included many of the city officials and assistant engineers and firemen from other parts of the city, were inspecting the building.

Shortly after 8 o'clock a banquet was served in the main apparatus room, after which Engineer Mahoney called order and in a few words of welcome introduced ex-engineer Herbert M. Federhen as toastmaster.

Mr. Federhen had a good word for everybody and his toasts were delivered in his characteristic manner.

All of the speakers congratulated the company on its new quarters and those members of the council who were introduced, promised to do all in their power to provide the company with a permanent man and horse, which all admitted were needed

The speakers were Mayor Hodges; Commissioner W. N. Eaton; City Treasurer Burgin; ex-Mayor H. O. Fairbanks; Chief Engineer F. D. Thayer of Weymouth; Chief Engineer Williams; John T. Cavanagh of the Water Board; Councilmen Moxon, Rooney, Johnson, McKeon and Bigelow; Principal Assessor Federhen, ex-Engineer Pray; T. B. Pollard, principal of the Washington school; Fred F. Green; ex-Councilmen T. H. Newcomb and William F. Powers; Hiram Phillips and Harvey French.

It was 10.30 when the exercises came to an end and special cars which were in waiting conveyed the guests home.

Important Sale.

The beautiful estate and mansion house of Charles Francis Adams situated on President's hill, has been sold, through Herbert T. Whitman, to a syndicate of Quincy gentlemen represented by Henry M. Faxon, Clarence Burgin and Luther S. Anderson.

The estate purchased is assessed as follows:—17½ acres of land, $40,000; house, $16,000; stable, $2,800; barn and sheds, $500; total, $59,300.

The price paid by the syndicate was about $60,000, which is but little more than the assessed value.

This estate is one of the most beautifully situated in the city as the view here is unsurpassed. Directly in front a magnificent view is had of Massachusetts bay and Nanasket, while to the north the gilded dome of the State House and the city of Boston are plainly seen.

The syndicate are to develop the property and plans for that purpose are now being made. No lot will contain less than 15,000 feet of land and restrictions will be placed upon all lots sold to insure a class of buildings fitting to the location.

New Timetable.

A change of timetable will be made on the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., on Sunday, but all the changes of Quincy trains are minor ones.

There is but one less week day train but the one dropped will be missed as it was the most convenient theatre train, the 6.52 P. M inward. There are several changes of a few minutes which should be heeded.

Trains to Boston now run week days on this time will hereafter be later:—6.10, 9.05, 10.02, 10.38 A. M., 4.45, 4.55 and 7.11 P. M.

And these earlier:—7.26 A. M., 8.1s, 9.13 and 10.15 P. M.

Masonic Visitation.

The bridal couple took the 5 o'clock train for a short trip, after which they go to Hartford, where a beautiful home await them. Miss Sage has been prominent in social circles in this vicinity, and has hosts of friends whose best wishes follow her in her new life.

Young Men's Christian Asso.

Many new faces are to be seen in the gymnasium classes, but all are getting down to business. Dr. Johnson will begin at once to take measurements. Next Monday evening at 7.45 he will speak to gymnasium members and others on the "blood, circulation, heart, arteries, veins and lungs."

The annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held Monday afternoon, October 15th, at 3 o'clock. Following it there will be a reception to members and other ladies who are interested in the great home missionary work for young men.

Next week the evening educational classes will get down to business. Nearly all have secured instruments and material and everything is ready to go to work. A number of fine drawings and models have been secured by the Association.

Seldom does one have opportunity to hear more thrilling addresses than those given Sunday in our city by Mr. L. D. Wishard, of New York. The average person even though he be interested in religous affairs, is not apt to be enthusiastic over missionary addresses, but those of Sunday consisted of an entirely different plan of the work than is usually presented.

DOWNS AND PARK.

The Squantum Yacht club will wind up its season Monday evening, Oct. 15, by a supper and smoke talk at the club house.

John Sutherland of Norfolk Downs is very sick.

Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Sanford, of Freeman street at the Downs, have gone to Maine.

Some one has a grudge against the cats and dogs at Norfolk Downs and are poisoning them.

J. E. Cartwright has bought Lloyd's house on Beach street and has moved his family in.

Mrs. A. Billings Robinson of Norfolk Downs attended the annual reunion of the Billings family at the United States hotel, Boston, on Thursday.

About fifty gentlemen, residents of Wollaston Park, Norfolk Downs and vicinity met in A. O. U. W. hall at Norfolk Downs on Monday evening and formed an Improvement Association, the object being to take concerted action for the improvement and beautifying of that section of Quincy in which they reside. Also for the purpose of obtaining such improvements from the city as the acceptance of streets, street lights, fire protection, proper school accommodations, etc., to which the large amount of taxes derived from this section justly entitles them.

The meeting quickly got down to business and the organization was perfected. Constitution and by-laws were adopted, S. E. Blanchard of Beach street was elected president, F. J. Pierce of Hancock street vice president, and H. S. Barker of Hancock street treasurer and secretary. Monthly meetings will be held the first Monday of each month, and the annual meeting the first Monday in January of each year.

There was considerable business vim manifested which protends energetic action on the part of the several committees appointed. The Wollaston Park and Norfolk Downs Improvement Association will undoubtedly be heard from frequently in the future, and its influence felt in city matters in general as well as in the particular section in which the members reside.

The following resolve was adopted at the meeting:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that some immediate action be taken by the city of Quincy towards the erection of a schoolhouse for the accommodation of the children of Wollaston Park and Norfolk Downs.

MILTON.

Milton society people are already active in preparations for the social season. Mrs. John P. Reynolds started the ball a-rolling by giving a recherche "afternoon tea" in the dainty club house of the Milton Club on Friday Oct. 5. About two hundred guests—all ladies—availed themselves of the opportunity. The hostess was handsomely attired in a Worth gown. This exclusive club, although for gentlemen, is composed of many members with charming wives, so that, "ladies' days" are frequent during the season. There will be a set of dinner dances and other festivities given. The club is purely social. Colonel Harry S. Russell is the president; Mr. George Bruce Upton, vice-president; Mr. James C. Barr, treasurer; Mr. Frederick Stanwood, secretary. Colonel Russell is famous for his fine stock farm in Milton and as owner of the stallion "Smuggler."—Post.

Daley & Briley is the name of the new provision firm on Adams street.

Adams street is receiving the attention of the road department.

The Milton brass band are arranging to celebrate its first anniversary the 24th of this month.

John Graham and Henry McKay have opened a real estate office at East Milton.

Two bicycle races, one of which will be for boys, will be held at East Milton, Saturday, Oct. 20. The course is from East Milton to the Town House and return, a distance of about four miles. There will be three prizes in each race,—for the first: a pair of patent leather shoes, sweater and box of cigars. The prizes for the second race are: a pair of patent leather dancing pumps, sweater and a pair of slippers.

—The University Press of Cambridge, established in 1836, has assigned. It employed from 300 to 350 hands and its pay roll was $3,000 weekly.

Q. H. S. Alumni.

A PRELIMINARY meeting of the graduates of the Quincy High School will be held FRIDAY EVENING, Oct. 26, 1894, at 7.45, to effect a temporary organization of an Alumni Association, and possibly determine a date for a reunion, at which time a permanent organization may be made.

The meeting will probably be held at the new High School Building, but will depend on light and will be announced next week. A general invitation is extended to all graduates of the school to be present. Let it be a large gathering.

Dyspepsia Cured.

MRS. CHAS. VILLIERS, of SOUTH BRAINTREE, MASS., suffered with acute Dyspepsia, constant Sick Headache and Vomiting. Nothing brought her relief. She finally tried DANA'S; it CURED her. Her words are, "I felt a great deal better before I finished one bottle. DANA'S CURED me, for I can now eat anything without distress; no more vomiting; no more Sick Headache."

Great Faith in Dana's.

MRS. MARY E. FREEMAN, of SOUTH FOXBORO, MASS., had great faith in DANA'S, and it was justified. She suffered greatly from Sores and Ulcers, from Impure Blood. DANA'S CURED her.

Tells his Friends to "Try DANA'S."

MR. WM. F. HUTCHINSON, of WOLLASTON, MASS., says that DANA'S is just what is claimed for it, and he has no hesitation in advising the afflicted to "Try DANA'S."

See that you get DANA'S.

Shawmut Spring.

THE Shawmut Spring is located at the base of a high hill near the Metropolitan Park reservation, on land owned by the undersigned.

This water has been in constant use by workmen from all the quarries in the vicinity, as well as residents of immediate surroundings, for fifty years at least.

Workmen and other persons have come from miles away to get water from this spring, while other springs and wells are very much nearer to them, thus showing their appreciation of this water.

The water is very cold in summer, and never freezes in winter.

The location being at the base of the hill, with nothing but trees and rocks above it, no wash from cultivated fields or other polluted ground can enter it.

The unsatisfactory waters we are compelled to drink, and the earnest solicitations of friends, induce me to offer this water to the public at a normal price, trusting that its merits will sustain the reputation with patrons that it now has with those who have long known it.

This water will be furnished to all patrons in such quantities as may be desired.

Water will be delivered at Six Cents per gallon for less than five gallons. Jugs or cases of five gallons at Five Cents per gallon.

Yours truly, F. J. FULLER.
West Quincy, July, 1894.

Having made use of Shawmut Spring water in my family, I take great pleasure in recommending it to others as superior in taste and purity to any other spring water I know of.

Full Moon, Oct. 14, 1.41 P. M.

NOT ONLY did the Metropolitan Park Commission in its taking for the Blue Hills reservation seize about 2,500 acres of taxable property, but the Quincy Quarry company propose to show that about 108 acres taken from them was very valuable. The final award should have considerable weight also in apportioning the assessment among cities and towns to pay cost of the taking. If the city of Quincy is to lose a large amount of taxable property annually, thereby increasing its tax rate, it should not in addition be compelled to pay a large assessment for many years. The taxpayers will therefore watch with interest the proceedings at the hearing opened Wednesday in Quincy to determine the value of the land of the Quincy Quarry company taken.

Manuel—Lillicrap.

Thursday Oct. 4. Mr. Thomas Manuel of Milwaukee and Miss Melvina Lillicrap of this place were made one by the Rev. Walter Russell Breed. After the wedding was over their friends were invited to the residence of the bride, where refreshments were served and all enjoyed the occasion very much. Mr. Manuel, a well-to-do young man, came on about a week ago to claim his bride and they have departed for Milwaukee today.

During the World's Fair Mr. Manuel had charge of operating the largest stationary engine in the world and he formerly travelled for the P. Ellis Co., electrical engineers, but now he and his wife will settle down in their western home, with good will of all who know them.

Children and Voters.

The interesting race between school children and voters continues. First one is ahead then the other, and the report of Superintendent Lull shows more public school pupils than the number of voters ever reached.

Last January there were 3673 names on the voting lists, and the total number of school children was 3418. Now the order is reversed and the September report below shows 3697 pupils, and the preliminary list of voters just published contains 3432 names.

The voters highest total was 3673 last December, and the present total of school children, 3697, is their best, and leads the voters just 24. The voters will probably out-number the school children again in December, but upon the opening of the Spring term of the schools the voters will again be relegated to the rear.

Valuable Land Taken.

A hearing was opened Wednesday in the Council chamber, before auditors, to determine the value of land of the Quincy Quarry company taken by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners.

The auditors are: Moses Williams, Morris Gray and M. Capen.

Judge E. C. Bumpus and C. F. Adams, 2d, appeared for the Quincy Quarry company, and the commission was represented by Col. Hopkins, Felix Rackermann and James H. Colt.

World's Food Fair.

Friday, Oct. 26th, is the Wollaston day at the World's food fair. At 10 30 A. M., Mrs. Lincoln, a Wollastonian, will give a demonstration on bread, to which reserved seats will be furnished, free of expense to any person from Quincy, promising to attend. The banquet table in the reception room, will be spread for a Butterfly tea, and the reception committee will hold themselves in readiness to explain anything of interest connected with the "Home degartment." Let us strive to make this day a glorious success, not only in honor of our townswoman, Mrs. Mary J. Lincoln, but also in appreciation of this great work, planned by a former resident of this village, the hostess of the "Home department," Mrs. Ellen A. Richardson. The committee consists of Mrs. C. R. Sherman, chairman; Mrs. G. A. Litchfield, Mrs. Arthur Sibley, Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, Mrs. David Jewell.

Conference at Wollaston.

The sixty-seventh annual meeting of the Suffolk South Conference will be held at the First Congregational church on Wednesday, Oct. 17. The afternoon session will be held from 2.30 to 5.30 and the evening session from 7 to 9.

The topic for the conference will be "Spiritual Marasmus, its Cause and Cure." The opening address will be by the Rev. Charles L. Morgan of the Jamaica Plain Congregational church.

At the evening session the Rev. Charles H. Beale of the Immanuel church, Roxbury will preach the sermon, taking for his subject "The Duality of Descent."

About 300 delegates are expected to be present. The local committee of arrangements,—Mr. N. G. Nickerson, Mr. George H. Murray, Mrs. Edward S. Tenney and Mrs. J. G. Witham—have charge of the providing of the collation for the gathering.

Saturday's Game.

A large crowd greeted the ball team of '93 and '94, at North Weymouth Saturday afternoon, and although the game was a good one it was not as interesting as it might have been owing to the cold weather. The game resulted in a victory for the '93 team, which made 12 runs and held the '94s down to 4 runs. The features of the game were the pitching of Dolan for the '93 and the home run of Faircloth for the '94.

MEXICO. The interesting course of lectures on Mexico, given by George W. Penniman, closed on Thursday evening. They have not been as largely attended as such fine lectures deserve; still many of our citizens have been highly entertained, and feel deeply indebted to Mr. Penniman for the excellent course he has given in this city.

Delegates Elected.

Democratic caucuses were held Wednesday evening in the several wards of the city and are reported below:

Ward One.

Seven of the faithful were present at the Ward One caucus in the Democratic headquarters, but only 19 chairs were provided, so a large number was not expected.

F. F. Green was chairman and J. T. Cavanagh secretary.

A committee of three retired and the other four ratified their choice of delegates, as follows:

County,—Frederick W. Tirrell, James E. Dunn, Paul R. Blackmur and John Swithin.

Senatorial,—Fred F. Green, Walter B. Wilson, Frank Garbarino and W. G. A. Pattee.

Representative,—W. G. A. Pattee, James E. Dunn, John T. Cavanagh, Joseph T. Welsh, Fred F. Green, Walter B. Wilson and Philip Cook.

John Swithin moved that it is the sense of this caucus that the delegates support J. Q. A. Field for county commissioner, and it was so voted.

Adjourned at 8 o'clock.

Ward Two.

At the Quincy Point caucus M. T. Sullivan was chairman and John Walsh, secretary. The following delegates were nominated without oppositions:

County,—James Collins, John Harkins and Jeremiah Meaney.

Senatorial,—Willie H. Sampson, Jr., Michael T. Sullivan and William Harkins.

Representative,—Michael Donahoe, Patrick O'Neil, John A. Griffin, John Connors and Cornelius Ring.

Ward Three.

South Quincy Democrats held their caucus in Cahill's hall. Timothy F. Ford called it to order and George D. Cahill read the call.

Upon motion, William H. Warner was elected chairman and George D. Cahill secretary.

A committee of five consisting of Andrew Howley, James Cavanagh, Timothy F. Ford, William Sullivan and John Nagle was appointed to bring in a list of delegates.

The committee were instructed to report no name who had served as delegate to any of the previous conventions.

While the committee were out John McCarthy, the silver tongued orator of Ward Three, enlightened his hearers on topics of the day and administered some wholesome advice.

The committee reported the following names which were adopted:

County,—Edward T. White, Robert J. Lewis, J. Kenniley and John Curtis.

Senatorial,—Peter O'Neil, James Morrisey, A. B. Smith and Rich J. Larkin.

Representative,—Andrew Howley, John Nagle, Andrew Costa, James E. Cavanagh, John O'Donovan, A. C. Smith and Daniel Dasey.

Ward Four.

West Quincy Democrats elected these delegates:

County,—Peter T. Fallon, John B. Early, Cornelius Crowley, James Rooney and William T. Shea.

Senatorial,—William D. Burns, T. J. Lamb, Thomas Hogan, John Reinhalter and John W. Burke.

Representative,—T. J. Foley, Peter J. Dohahue, James T. White, Patrick Cray, Thomas Shortle, W. Callahan, Patrick Manix, Jeremiah Henchion and John H. Rooney.

Delegate at-large from the city to all conventions, William F. Powers.

Ward Five.

The Wollaston Democratic caucus was held in the Brasee building on Wednesday evening. But five of the faithful put in an appearance. Charles T. Baker was chosen chairman and Benjamin Sargent, secretary. These delegates were elected:

County,—F. J. Lavery and George W. Brown.

Senatorial,—Watson H. Brasee and Wm. B. Orcutt.

Representative,—Charles T. Baker, Geo. W. Brown and Benj. Sargent.

The delegates were empowered to fill vacancies.

Ward Six.

Thomas A Whalan was chairman of the Democratic caucus held at Atlantic Wednesday night, and Edmund Pope secretary.

These delegates were elected, those for the Representative convention being said to favor John A. Duggan.

County,—Edmund Pope, Elijah J. Hall and Daniel C. Lyons.

Senatorial,—H. N. Holbrook, C. J. Duggan and William H. Owen.

Representative,—Edmund Pope, Dennis O'Neil, John A. Duggan, William H. Owen and Edward J. McKeon.

McNary Nominated.

It was a large convention which was held in South Boston, Oct. 5, by the Democrats to nominate a candidate for Congress for the Tenth district. It was entitled to 184 delegates and 177 were in attendance.

John H. Griffin of Ward 13 was chairman, and Timothy F. Ford of Quincy and Patrick F. Gormley of Ward 22, secretaries.

Walter B. Wilson was one of the committee on credentials, and Quincy was represented by 22 delegates.

The nomination of Mr. McNary was made unanimous.

The following district committee was appointed:—Ward 13, Edward J. Leary; Ward 14, Thomas W. Flood; Ward 15, Fred S. Gore; Ward 19, John F. Curley; Ward 20, James J. McCarthy; Ward 22, Samuel J. Tolman; Ward 24, Thomas J. Dwyer; Quincy, William G. A. Pattee; Milton, John Pierce.

Mr. McNary was then escorted to the hall by Messrs. McNamara of Ward 13, John J. Donovan of Ward 24, and Mr. Cavanagh of Quincy, and spoke at length.

The convention adjourned at 11 30. How did the Quincy delegates get home?

The Wollaston Shoot.

The high wind interferred seriously with the shooting of the members of the Wollaston Trap club on Saturday afternoon. The highest score was 15, and that was not made until the third string and was tied been D. B. Lincoln and C. L. Prescott. The score:

☞ The match race between Alix, 2:03-3-4, and Directum, 2:05-1 4, at Mystic park, Saturday, Oct. 20th, promises to be the greatest event in the history of harness racing. Queen Alix is in superb condition and can step three miles better than 2:05 while Dectrum is in condition to go a race for his life and has fully as much speed as the little queen.

☞ The weather this week has been a forcible reminder of winter. It has also been a reminder that it is time housekeepers were looking about to see what is needed in the furniture line for their homes and to such we would say that C. W. Guy and W. G. Shaw of the Quincy Coliseum carry everything needed to make home comfortable. lpo 1t

The City Council.

The Quincy & Boston Street Railway Company took a hand unexpectedly in the proceedings of the City Council, springing a petition for the withdrawal of their petition just before the hour for an advertised public hearing. The Council did not untangle the knot before adjournment as the proceedings show.

The absentees were Councilmen Robbins and Snow. The attendance of citizens was large.

To Fill Vacancy.

The Board of Examiners for Norfolk County declared a vacancy to exist in board of County Commissioners caused by death of J. Q. A. Lathrop, and ordered the vacancy filled at the coming State election. To Committee on Elections.

Petitions.

Several petitions for licenses to sell naptha, for flying horses, and for night lunch wagon were received and referred.

One of George F. Cunningham for pool table license was granted.

There was also one petition for State aid. Referred.

James H. Donaher asked for transfer of license for sparring exhibition from Music hall to Hancock hall. Referred.

The Republican Ward and City Committee petitioned for polling places for election of delegates to special county convention. Referred to Committee on Elections, who later in evening reported order authorizing Commissioner of Public Works to provide the same.

Withdrawal Asked.

Councilman Johnson presented the petition of the Quincy & Boston street railway company for a withdrawal of its petition for a location on Franklin street and Independence avenue. The prayer set forth that the petition had been entered Nov. 15, 1893, and that the company now deems it unnecessary. Laid on table.

Reports

The Committee on Licenses reported an order granting several licenses. Adopted.

The same committee reported an order granting license for sparing exhibition in St. Mary's hall. Adopted.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting New England Telephone Company a location on South and Washington streets. Ordered to second reading.

The Committee on Finance reported an order appropriating $2500 for furnishing the new High schoolhouse. To second reading.

The same committee reported ought to pass on order authorizing transfer of $500 from Miscellaneous City to Miscellaneous Fire Appropriation. Passed unanimously.

The same committee reported an order appropriating $43.21 to rebate portion of tax of Milne & Chalmers. Ordered to second reading.

Willard Street Location.

At eight o'clock a duly advertised public hearing was given on the petition of the Quincy & Boston street railway for a location on the east side of Willard street from the West Quincy depot to the Milton line.

Marshall P. Wright of the O. T. Rogers Granite company opposed location on the side of the street, as it would greatly discommode them in their business. They abutted on the street for about 600 feet and used the whole front in carting out heavy loads. Would probably necessitate change of grade of our land. Would not object to location in centre of street.

Hearing closed and order recommitted.

Reservation Hearing.

Upon motion of Councilman Anderson the use of the Council chamber was granted to the commissioners to apportion assessments for cost of reservations taken by State, who will give a hearing Oct. 10.

Suit Against Fallon & Sons.

Upon motion of Councilman Holden the Mayor was requested to begin suit against Fallon & Sons relative to encroachments on Quarry street.

A recess was taken from 8.12 to 8 30.

Franklin Street Hearing.

At 8 30 a hearing was given the remonstrants to a location of street railway tracks on Franklin street. Councilman Holbrook objected to proceeding in view of the withdrawal of the petition, but was ruled out of order.

Councilman Bigelow introduced Miss Mabel Adams, who appeared for the remonstrants. She first distributed small plans showing number of estates on each side, and each of the owners who objected to the location. Franklin street was very narrow; it was but 27 feet from curb to curb at one point. Abutters were afraid of carriage accidents, and accidents to children, one little child having already been killed on a portion of Franklin street. The location was of no possible benefit to abutters, most of whom owned their estates, and took a pride in trees on street which must be cut down. It will benefit only out of town people and a corporation. The former are not particular as to route; the latter will soon be gobbled up by the West End. Fourteen out of twenty abutters objected. If location were granted against the wishes of the abutters it was little wonder the best people moved out of city.

O. H. Leaman would like to see street railway on Independence avenue, but thought President's avenue preferable to Franklin street as a location.

The hearing then closed.

Councilman Bigelow moved to take the prayer of the street railway company for withdrawal from the table.

Councilmen Moxon, Holden and Holbrook thought no action necessary on petition.

Motion lost.

An effort was made to secure a vote on the order granting the location, but instead of moving to take it from the table there was a squabble as to whether it was or was not before the Council, and the Council adjourned.

Boston Stage.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The announcement that Daniel Frohman's New York Lyceum Theatre stock company will appear at the Hollis October 15 is of interest to all theatre-goers. But few of them have not heard of this standard New York organization, and many have seen them either in their home theatre in New York or in some one of the half a dozen theatres they visit during their annual autumn tour. The information that the company is still to a large extent unchanged is also one of interest. The novelty that will be presented at the Hollis on this occasion is a delightful comedy romance entitled "The Manzons," one of the most pronounced of New York successes last season. All the original New York cast and every stick of the original scenery is carried en tour by the company for this visit.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The voice of the Boston press has been heard and it is unanimous and strong in its approval of Sutton Vane's great melodrama "The Cotton King," presented for the first time in this country last Monday night at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. The play is on for a run and it will be long and prosperous. No handsomer produced play has ever been seen in Boston, thousands having been expended on the intricate and beautiful settings and recollection does not call up a cast superior to the one with which Manager William A. Brady has equipped his play. "The Cotton King" is a melo-drama, of intense human interest, but not of the ranting, rip-tearing order.

Columbia Theatre.

The Columbia Theatre will present for the week of October 15, Mr. Harry Lacy in the new play, "The Man from the West." Mr. Lacy will be remembered as a sterling actor, and who was for many years the hero of the "Still Alarm" and its exciting scenes. His new play, "The Man from the West," is a finely woven, well-worked plot with a story of absorbing interest. It belies its title inasmuch as there is nothing of the Western border drama about it, but is in reality a strong, interesting and exciting play. Mr. Lacy's wide experience in stagecraft has enabled him to construct plays with a bold and not uncertain touch, and if the reports regarding the piece may be believed, Mr. Lacy has a success in it that will not be second even to the famous "Still Alarm." Each character in the play is of a nature that requires an especially clever actor to properly delineate it, and to this end the supporting company is particularly strong, the roles fitting each as if written for him.

Tremont Theatre.

Rice's Surprise Party, in the favorite extravaganza, "1492," will come to the Tremont theatre, Monday next, and its run is limited to a month. Mr. Rice had hoped to devote a longer time to Boston, but has hitherto found it impossible to get away from New York, where the 450th local performance was celebrated the current week. The many changes that have been made in "1492" since it was last seen here will cause it to take on quite a new aspect. The favorite performers who were identified with its first production will be found in their old places. Theresa Vaughn will appear as the Infanta and the ragged street waif, with a new budget of familiar ditties paraphrased into German. Edward Favor will be the royal treasurer, and Richard Harlow the Queen of Spain.

Austen's Reproduction of World's Fair.

The big Casino building, 541 Tremont street, Boston, was opened Saturday night, October 6th, for the first public display of "Austen's Secnograph," or the reproduction of the World's Fair. As the visitor enters he finds himself at the foot of a grand staircase, leading up to an immense observation platform, and from there the spectacle meets his gaze; a grand view of the World's Fair buildings and grounds, with the city of Chicago and its suburbs in the background. The scale was planned as if the point of view was 600 feet up in the air, and directly over the lake, in front of the Court of Honor. The large Fair buildings in the foreground, are carried out with every possible attention to detail, while the background is pictured, and one cannot tell where the model ceases and the painting began. In front of the Fair buildings is the lake of real water, and at the extreme right this merges without break, into a sketch of the same body of water. Painted ships are on the one and real ones on the other, which made the deception all the more interesting. As first shown, the whole scene was lighted as if the time were midday, and the shadows of small clouds darken the landscape in many places. Soon the sunlight gave away to dusk, the cloud shadows all disappeared in the general obscurity, and the distant horizon began to glow with all the gaudy hues of a brilliant sunset. The buildings one by one were brightly illuminated, and by that time they were the only brightness in the whole picture, for complete darkness had set in, and the scene was reflected in the moving waters of the lake, The whole made a very affective and interesting display, one which will be sure to be appreciated for its novelty and ingenuity.

In Hands of Mayor.

Blue Hill avenue was ordered widened by the street commissioners of Boston on Thursday afternoon, from Grove Hall to the Neponset river at Mattapan. The new lines make the street 120 feet in width, and the commissioners estimate the total cost for land damages at $76,875.

Political Field.

The Democrats of Weymouth have nominated Minot Tirrell as a candidate for Representative in the Quincy-Weymouth district. Quincy Democrats will nominate two this year.

Hyde Park Democrats have nominated James D. Grant for the Legislature.

The Republican county convention next Wednesday at 11 A. M. in Boston.

Saturday evening at the headquarters of the Columbus band, the second meeting of the Italian Independent club was held, most all the Italian voters of Quincy being present. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

President,—Peter Josephine.

Secretary,—Angelo Bianchi.

Committee on resolutions,—Nicholas Garbarino chairman; Frederick Trenta, Govanni Grimaldi, Amadeo Cappelline.

The organization numbers 125 members.

Considerable interest is manifested in the Republican caucuses of Saturday evening, because efforts are being made to secure the delegates for two different Quincy candidates for county commissioner, while some Quincy gentlemen are known to be working for outside candidates. It is unfortunate that Quincy cannot hold a general caucus and send a solid delegation to the convention for either W. W. Ewell or J. Q. A. Field.

The convention is entitled to 124 delegates and 63 or less will be necessary for a choice. Quincy with 19 would give any candidate a good start and it would need only 44 more votes to ensure his nomination.

The People's Party of Quincy have filed with the Secretary of State, nomination papers for the full State ticket, helping to make up the necessary quota.

At the Democratic State convention Monday, no Quincy men appeared on the committees. Two former citizens, Sigourney Butler and Josiah Quincy, served at large, the former as chairman of committee to report remainder of State ticket, and the latter as chairman of committee on resolutions and also on committee to report 20 members at large for State committee.

Hon. Henry O. Fairbanks represented the tenth district on committee on credentials at the Republican State convention, and was elected one of the permanent vice presidents. John Shaw of Quincy was one of the committee on ballots. Hon. John Conners of Boston represented the tenth district on permanent organization, and Hon. Albert E. Pillsbury of Boston on the committee on resolutions.

Frederick W. Peabody will run for Congress in this district on nomination papers. Mr. Peabody moved from New York less than two years ago.

Republican Convention.

The Republicans held their State convention in Boston on Saturday last, and renominated the present officers, as follows:

Governor,—F. T. Greenhalge of Lowell.

Lieut. Governor,—Roger Wolcott of Boston.

Secretary of State,—William Olin of Boston.

Auditor,—John W. Kimball of Fitchburg.

Treasurer and Receiver General,—Henry M. Phillips of Springfield.

Attorney General,—Hosea Knowlton of New Bedford.

Democratic Convention.

The Democrats held their State convention in Boston on Monday last and nominated the following gentlemen for State officers:

Governor,—Hon. John E Russell of Leicester.

Lieutenant Governor,—Charles E. Stratton of Boston.

Secretary of the Commonwealth,—Chas. A. DeCourcey of Lawrence.

Treasurer and Receiver General,—James S. Grinnell of Greenfield.

Auditor,—Alfred C. Whitney of Boston.

Attorney General, Henry F. Hurlburt of Lynn.

The Literary Society.

The regular session of the Quincy Literary Society was opened in a very promising manner on Friday evening of last week in Doble's hall South Quincy. There was a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen, the room being comfortably filled.

The central feature of the occassion was the inaugural address of the president, Dr. R. McLennan, who chose for his theme: "The Aims and Objects of Literary Societies."

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it.

—OF—
Dr. H. A. Tucker's
No. 59 Diaphoretic Compound.
A Positive Preventive And Sure Cure For Colics, Cramps, Diarrhœa, Malaria, Sudden Colds, Rheumatism, &c.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, after 20 years' personal use, writes as follows:
TO THE PEOPLE:

I know by personal observation that DOCTOR H. A. TUCKER'S medicine, popularly known as "No. 59," is potent and safe. It ought to be on the shelf in every nursery, and in the satchel on every journey. Going from home I always carry some of it with me, and have administered it to many who in car and steamer have been taken sick. Better smash your brandy flask and the various styles of "Bitters," which are Rum put up under enticing nomenclature, and take with you a bottle of DOCTOR TUCKER'S 59 as a pocket pistol with which to shoot down physical disorders.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE.

This remedy is widely used, purely vegetable perfectly safe, and contains no opiates nor injurious ingredients. It is are recommended and indorsed by eminent physicians and public men.

Sold by druggists everywhere.

Verdict for $6,000.

John Graham secured a verdict of $6,000 at Dedham Monday in his suit against C. L. Badger and others of West Quincy.

The plaintiff sought to recover $25,000 damages for personal injuries received May 19, 1893, while in the employ of the defendants as a teamster at their stone yard in West Quincy, through the giving away of a derrick rope, allowing an iron block to fall, striking him on the back and causing, as a result, a paralysis of his lower limbs. He claimed the defendants were negligent in the premises.

The firm is said to be insured.

Mortgagee's Sale.

I, FELIX SMITH of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, the assignee and holder of a certain mortgage deed given by Thomas Flaherty, Bartholomew Flaherty and James Flaherty, all of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to Joseph W. Robertson of said Quincy, dated July 16th, A. D 1884, and recorded with Norfolk deeds, libro 588, folio 479 by reason of a breach of the conditions of said mortgage, and by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage deed, will sell at public auction upon the premises, on WEDNESDAY, November 7th, 1894, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:

A certain lot of land containing about seven thousand, seven hundred and twelve [7,712] square feet, situated in said Quincy, and being lot numbered thirty-four [34] on a "Plan of land on Willard street, West Quincy, belonging to Joseph W. Robertson," made by Whitman & Breck, surveyors, and bounded as appears by said plan, nearly northerly on a private way that runs westerly from Willard street, bounded thereon one hundred and thirty-two and eighty-three one-hundredths [132.83] feet; easterly on Willard street, ninety-two and twenty-eight [92.28] one-hundredths feet; southerly on other land of said Robertson, being lot numbered thirty-five [35] on said plan, one hundred and four and eighty-one one-hundredths [184.81] feet; westerly on the land of the same, being lot numbered twenty-three [23] on said plan, forty-three and thirty-three one-hundredths [43.33] feet.

Also all the buildings on said land and the steam engine and all its fixtures and appurtenances and all the machinery connected therewith.

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

What makes consumption? This question is less interesting to sufferers than one other: What

CURES CONSUMPTION?

Sometimes there is no cure at all, but that is not the case as often as folks suppose. Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol, allays inflammation, stops that weakening cough, and promotes the formation of solid, healthy flesh on emaciated bodies. And it is pleasant to take. It contains healing properties of great value, scientifically combined. That answers the second question.

Disinfectants.

A mixture of one pound of charcoal, powdered, to four pounds of plaster of paris sprinkled under porches or in damp corners will prove an excellent disinfectant. Chloride of lime is also good to be used for the same purpose.

Disagreeable odors arising from decaying vegetable matter can be destroyed at once by pouring over it two pailsful of water, to one of which has been added one pint of the liquor of chloride of zinc, and to the other one pound of chloride of lime. It is always a good plan to give the cellar one coat of whitewash at spring cleaning time, and then give it a good coat at midsummer. If copperas is added to this last coat it will do much to keep the cellar free from vermin. If the cellar has a damp smell, and cannot be thoroughly ventilated, a few trays of charcoal set around on the floor, shelves and ledges will make the air pure and sweet. If a large bucketful of charcoal is placed in a damp cellar where milk and other food is kept there will be no danger of its becoming tainted.—Boston Budget.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria is the Children's Panacea —the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach." CARLOS MARTYN, D. D., New York City.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Eructation, Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion, Without injurious medication.

"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results." EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., 125th Street and 7th Ave., New York City.

A Country Rich With Corn.

You come to a country rich with corn,
October!
The young birds pipe in the fields new shorn,
October!
Stooks of russet on every hand
Like pointed tents of the red men stand,
October!

The flail is heard on the farmer's floor,
October!
Straw and chaff are thick at the door,
October!
The dusty sacks go over the hill,
And merrily, merrily whirls the mill,
October!

Your voice is a thrush's, a fawn's your tread,
October!
A garland of wild flowers is round your head,
October!
Your cheek how bonny, your breath how sweet,
And the lamps of the forest light your feet,
October!

Shake your crisp locks to the life-giving sun,
October!
Drink of your presses, that laugh as they run,
October!
For the Ice King lurks in the fields of snow,
To rifle your kingdom and lay you low,
October!

Notes and Comments.

—Abington and Rockland citizens feel happy this year to think their tax rates are $3 lower than for several years past. The rate, however, is $18.60 this year.

—In the People's Temple in Boston they burst into applause when the preacher says anything that especially pleases them. The world seems to be moving.

—The fall flight of fowl has begun early this year. Wood ducks are quite plentiful, and sea fowl are going down the Plymouth shore and to the ponds in fair sized flocks.

—Apaism is the new word coined by the Springfield Republican to meet the requirements of a name for the new development in politics. It has the merit of brevity at any rate.

—A manufacturer in another place recalls the time—only 20 years ago, by the way—when one of Brockton's best known and wealthiest shoe manufacturers was working for him for $1 25 a day.

—The city reservoir in Brockton is now at the lowest point ever reached since it was flowed in 1881, being last week 51 inches below high water mark, and falling at the rate of nearly an inch per day.

—Members of the Universalist society of Plymouth and others have determined upon presenting the society with memorial windows in furtherance of the church improvements, and they are now being made in Boston.

—The Food Fair at Mechanic's building, Boston, is what none of our citizens should miss seeing sometime this month; and it is as good, or perhaps better now, than it will be the latter part of October. The exhibits are complete and the display is both entertaining and instructive.

—The Massachusetts Highway Commission, after a year devoted largely to preliminary work, is getting down to actual business, and at its last meeting formally voted to assume charge of building nine roads, at a cost of nearly $60,000. The fortunate towns are Cottage City, Duxbury, Marshfield, North Adams, Hingham, Walpole, Wrentham, Middleboro and Plymouth.

—It is not to be wondered at that the papers of New York are making a big kick over the sentence imposed by Judge Coxe upon one Moore who was indicted for numerous frauds. In fact 1070 pension applications full of forgery and prejury were traced to his door. And yet he was sentenced to only a year and a half of imprisonment and a fine of $200. The same judge three weeks before sent a man to prison for a year and a day for passing a counterfeit dollar.

PALE, THIN AND EMACIATED PEOPLE.

The country is full of them. They do not know what it is to feel well like other folks. Medicines of all kinds have been tried without good results. Cod Liver Oil and the preparations of Malt have all failed. What is the reason? These emaciated people cannot digest starchy foods. The fat of the body is produced with bread, potatoes, and other starchy food. If they will eat food that is artificially digested, they will grow fat, strong, plump and robust. They will commence gaining flesh at once. This Flesh Forming Food is called Paskola. You can buy it at any drug store. Send your name to The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York, and get their interesting pamphlet.

ALLENS COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA THE HONEST KIND

Receives the Highest Praise from the Best Physicians.

DR. H. F. MERRILL, the wonderful specialist of Augusta, Maine, after giving it a thorough trial in his practice, writes the following convincing letter of praise:

GENTLEMEN:—

I have of late been using some of your medicine in my practice with the most pleasing and satisfactory results. I find that it acts like a charm upon the whole nervous system, and in scrofula and all cutaneous diseases. Its curative properties are fully equal to the claims made for it, and I do not know of one instance where it has not fulfilled all its claims. In cases of General Debility and Nervous Prostration it has proved itself invaluable. It also gives quick relief in Dyspepsia and Canker of the stomach, and is a remarkable fine restorative remedy. It is a great pleasure to be able to recommend such a remedy, as the results following its use are so wonderfully satisfactory. One great thing in its favor is its freedom from superfluous alcohol, and all injurious ingredients.

DR. H. F. MERRILL.

PROF. W. H. MORSE, M. D., F. B. S. Sc. of Westfield, N. J., author of "New Therapeutical Agents", the standard text book of the newer materia medica, Consulting Chemist and Therapeutist, one of the most widely known men among the medical profession gives it his highest endorsement, as testified by the following voluntary statement:

"Allen's Sarsaparilla commends itself to me therapeutically, chemically and clinically. Its therapeutical power, physiological activity, and chemical purity, are all noteworthy; and the reason is to be found in the fact that it is true to its name, or honest, as the word goes. That is, it is vegetable alterative, and tonic. Perhaps the highest praise that may be given it is that its action represents that of mercury, less the faults of that drug; for, has not Pereira said, "A perfect mercury would be a perfect alterative."

W. H. MORSE, M. D., F. B. S. Sc., Westfield, N. J.

Although Allen's Sarsaparilla is such a valuable remedy it is not at all expensive, being the largest bottle on the market for $1.00. Trial bottles 50 cts.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS.

—Russia is an enormously rich country. Its income exceeds its expenditures every year.

—Every tinplate plant with a single exception in Pittsburgh has closed, and 3,000 workmen are idle.

—Ten thousand bottles of a rheumatism cure are to be given away from the New Bedford Standard office.

—Middlesex County, Mass., reports the largest onion crop for many years, and probably no portion of the United States produces more onions than Middlesex County.

—The letter-sheet envelopes will soon be withdrawn from sale at the postoffices. If you want one to preserve as a souvenir you had better purchase it right away.

—The probable cause of the numerous suicides in New York city has been discovered. In one block on 65th street there are 226 pianos, nearly all of them in daily use.

—The plain clothes policemen in New York make it very dry on Sundays. Just how long that state of affairs will be kept up, however, is the interesting query of the time.

—Our government fell $6,000,000 short of paying its bills for September. The gold reserve still remains at less than $60,000,000. But the sun of prosperity is shining; so who cares?

—Forty-five pounds of corn are said to be worth only a cent and a half in Russia today, and many farmers are sending their cattle into the fields, as the cost of harvesting would exceed the price of the corn.

—The two-minute mark for horses, which has been gradually growing nearer, was reached at Chillicothe, Ohio, one day recently, when the pacer, Flying Jib, with the assistance of a running mate, covered a mile in 1.59 1 2.

—The next Christian Endeavor convention will be held in Boston, instead of in San Francisco, as had about been decided upon. The change is made owing to the failure of the transcontinental railroad lines to agree upon a satisfactory rate, although they have had the matter under consideration for nearly two years.

—Yes, a town is judged by its local paper. If it contains bristling announcements from the business men of the place, the reader sees at once that they are alive. It is live business men who make a live town, and a live town makes a live paper. A live newspaper was never yet seen coming out of a graveyard.—Norwood Review.

—Three canneries at Milford, Del., are packing 80,000 cans of tomatoes per day, and three at Frederica are packing 75,000 per day, while many smaller canneries all over the state and the peninsula are busy with tomatoes. Meanwhile a farmer in Kent county, Md., received recently for 100 baskets of tomatoes shipped to Baltimore $4.43. The baskets alone cost him four cents each.

The World's Food Fair

Now being held in Mechanic's Building, Boston, is an assured success. While the original idea called for a fair representation from all American Manufacturers of Food products:—the managers of World's Food Fair have been simply overwhelmed with applications for space by would-be exhibitors from all parts of the world.

Judging from the private view given the Press, we feel confident that there will be no features of the Fair more creditable and interesting than the Boston Exhibits.

Mellin's Food for example have given their ever-beautiful and popular painting by Perrault, "The Awakening," an exquisite setting in golden green draperies, perfectly lighted; and as this painting has never before been publicly exhibited in Boston, all who did not see it at World's Fair or California Mid-winter Exposition should try to see it here in World's Food Fair, as it is one of the most famous modern paintings of childhood.

Not satisfied with this contribution to the art features of the Fair, The Doliber-Goodale Co., the proprietors of Mellin's Food, have placed on exhibition for the first time in Boston, that wonderful marble statue of a sleeping child, by Jules Weyns, the most famous of Belgian sculptors, which they bought from the Belgian Art Exhibit, at World's Fair, and sent out to California to form a part of their Mellin's Food exhibit at the Midwinter Exposition.

There was no moment day or night during the entire term of the World's Fair when the Art Building was open that it was not surrounded by groups of people from all countries who were of one mind and one voice in speaking of its lifelikeness and reality. It was the one "living, breathing, natural" baby, sculptured in marble shown at the World's Fair.

Two thousand people registered in the Mellin's Food Exhibit during the first three days of the Fair and received exquisite colored souvenir that the Doliber-Goodale Co. are giving to all who register.

A Jubilee Celebration.

Fifty years is a long time—much more than the average lifetime, Men, therefore, naturally note such periods. Just now Messrs. Perry Davis & Son of Providence, R. I., the proprietors of Pain-Killer, are celebrating the jubilee of that good old household remedy, and have doubled the capacity of their bottles, without increasing the price. This will of course make Pain-Killer more popular than ever. For fifty years it has been the family medicine chest in countless homes in every country on the globe. Once given a trial, it stays in any home, where, when anything happens, the bottle is reached for.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Anecdotes.

"Oh dear!" sighed a little girl of this city, "I'm so tired of lessons. I know what I'll do when I grow up."

"What?"

"I'll be a teacher."

"But teachers have to study, too."

"I know that. But it's so much easier to learn the questions than it is to learn the answers."—Washington Star.

Servant (in an intelligence office)—"How many in family?"

Husband—"Three."

Servant—"What do you pay?"

Husband—"Five dollars."

Servant—"Where do you live?"

Husband—"Oh, don't bother about that; we'll move anywhere you wish."—Life.

Mr. Rox—"But, my young friend, you cannot support my daughter on your salary of twenty-five dollars a week. In spite of all the excuses I can make, she costs me from $2,000 to $3,000 a year."

The Young Man—"Oh, but she loves me, don't you know?"—Indianapolis Journal

Fond mother (of delicate dude)—"I think it is time Clarence selected a profession. What would you advise?"

"Old Gent (reflectively)—"He might do nicely as a typewriter girl."—New York Weekly.

Law Enforcement.

The law is theoretically, but not actually a therometer of public sentiment. The people command only what they believe, but through a desire to be practical, they believe many things that from one cause or another, they do not command. Laws do not necessarily keep pace with public sentiment; they are never permanently ahead of it, but are often much behind it. They are records of not simply what the people believe should be had, but are records of what they believe should be had that can be had. Public sentiment is public pride, and non-enforcable mandates do not represent it and are not of it. I believe that public sentiment often prefers that a wrong should exist without its prohibition, than in spite of it.

Again, public sentiment is not infallible, hence the ins and outs of politics. Politics enter into law making and law enforcing. Politics are organized and concerted work leading or misleading public sentiment. As members of human society, it is selfish and patriotic duty to take advantage of the existing conditions for the achievement of desirable results. The capacity, therefore, of voters to unite or combine for the advancement of a common cause should be availed of. I have no patience with those who would reform politics from the outside. Politics are the purposes of the men in it, and if you are a good man you can in no way so purify politics as by the inspiration of your vigorous example inside.

The greatest difficulty in the advancement of the cause of temperance on the field of legal suasion is that our people do not have enough politics; not enough concerted and organized action. Discipline and organization begets courage and confidence in politics as well as in war. The officer can accomplish nothing unless he can depend upon the support of his soldiers, but many a temperance leader has looked back as he climbed the enemy's breastworks to find his followers have deserted him and left him to perish alone.

Citizenship is not simply a right, but a duty; not a privilege, but an obligation; not that you may take a hand in the affairs of government when it suits you, but you must do so in exchange for the benefits you receive; you must be actively, honestly, intelligently and eternally interested. Political affairs originate in the caucus, or primaries, and it is, therefore, there that your first and perhaps greatest duty begins. Commence, therefore, with the caucus, and use your influence aggressively for the selection of those who most closely are the representatives of your ideas and principles. If you are not prepared to stay through the war, don't go in at all, for the deserter discredits the cause he would serve. See to it that your representatives are not misrepresentatives. They are too often, though superior politics, selected to defeat the will of their constituents. The politician always seeks the stronger side, and when you show an aggressive political organization, he will seek your aid and lend you his co-operation.—GEO. J. BURNS.

Household Receipts.

STEWED MACARONI. Roll a tablespoonful of butter in a teaspoonful of flour, and when the macaroni is tender add it and a little milk, and keep on adding milk till the sauce is like thick cream; about a cupful is enough. Season with salt and white pepper.

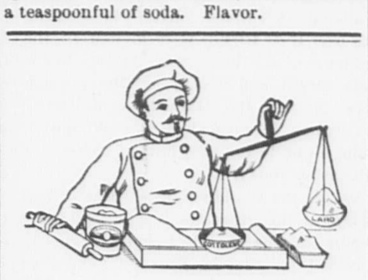
POTATO SOUP. Three pints of rich milk, one pint of mashed potato, two tablespoonsful of butter, pepper and salt to taste. Boil the milk, add the potato and boil again, stirring frequently that the potato may become thoroughly dissolved, and season just before serving. Serve very hot.

CHILLI SAUCE. One peck of ripe tomatoes, peeled, one-half teacup of salt, three red peppers and twelve small onions chopped fine, one tablespoonful each of ground allspice, cloves and cinnamon. Mix altogether and boil two hours. Rub through a sieve, then add one pint of vinegar, a half teacup of brown sugar, and let it come to a boil. Bottle and seal while hot.

TOMATOES BAKED WITH CREAM SAUCE. Rinse ripe tomatoes and cut them into halves, place them in a baking pan, dust lightly with salt and pepper. Put a small piece of butter on each half. Place in a moderate oven and bake slowly until tender, about one hour. When done, lift carefully and slide on a heated dish. Take the skins from two or three of the softest pieces and mix the potatoes with the butter in the pan; add one pint of milk or cream. While this is slowly heating, mix smoothly two even tablespoonsful of of flour with a little cold milk; add it quickly. Stir continuously until it comes to a boiling point. Do not boil or it will curdle. Take from the fire, season with salt and pepper. Pour this over the tomatoes.

BARBERRY JAM. To one pound of barberries, eighteen ounces of sugar; dissolve the sugar with a very little water, and when it is boiling add the pound of fruit. Cook until the fruit stops making a snapping sound and the juice will jell when tried in a spoon. It is better to make a pound at a time and seal in bowls.

CORN STARCH CAKE. Whites of three eggs, half a cupful of corn starch, half a cupful of milk, one cupful of pulverized sugar, half a cupful of butter, half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of soda. Flavor.



People Who Weigh and Compare

Know and get the best. Cottolene, the new vegetable shortening, has won a wide and wonderful popularity. At its introduction it was submitted to expert chemists, prominent physicians and famous cooks. All of these pronounced a natural, healthful and acceptable food-product, better than lard for every cooking purpose.

The success of Cottolene is now a matter of history. Will you share in the better food and better health for which it stands, by using it in your home?

Avoid imitations—countless—worthless. Stick to COTTOLENE. Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

THE SENSIBLE VIEW.

WOMAN'S SENSITIVE ORGANISM

Does Not Permit Her to Do What Men Do, and She Ought Not To Try.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

You might as well know that you have a wonderfully sensitive and peculiar organism. You ought to know that from the moment the girl is changed into a woman, the matter of first physical importance to her is the regularity with which nature purifies her system. That all through life this is of the very first importance to her, and that neglect in this direction means misery in every direction.

Stop and reason out what happens when nature is balked in its efforts. The blood takes up the poisonous particles, carries them to the lungs, and decay follows. It carries them to the heart, and before long the organ is weakened, and your courage and strength vanish. It carries them to the brain, and before long the wildest fancies run riot, you think you have every known disease.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one remedy whose power over this killing disease is acknowledged throughout the world.

It destroys poisonous germs, cleanses the system, strengthens the womb, and makes a strong, hopeful, happy woman out of a physical wreck.

Mrs. J. A. Rice, of Florence, Ky., whose portrait we are permitted to publish, is only one of many thousands who owe their health to the Vegetable Compound, and are doing all they can to help other women to believe that the same health and happiness will come to them with the use of Mrs. Pinkham's medicines. She says:

Mrs. JULIA A. RICE

"I suffered eight years from woman's early troubles. I could find no permanent relief until, one year ago, I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Relief then came with it almost immediately, and at this time I am a well woman.

"I absolutely know, not only by my own experience, but by others also, that it is a harmless and sure remedy for irregularities, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness of the stomach, sick headache, and female complaints generally.

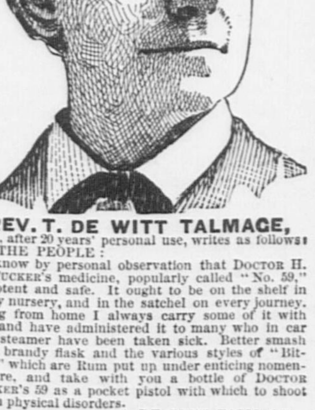
Valuable Remedies.



REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE,
Who, after 20 years' personal use, writes as follows TO THE PEOPLE:
I know by personal observation that DOCTOR H. A. TUCKER's medicine, popularly called "No. 59," is potent and safe. It ought to be on the shelf in every nursery, and in the satchel on every journey. Going from home I always carry some of it with me, and have administered it to many who in car and steamer have been taken sick. Better smash your brandy flask and the various styles of "Bitters," which are Rum put up under enticing nomenclature, and take with you a bottle of DOCTOR TUCKER's 59 as a pocket pistol with which to shoot down physical disorders.

Among the Barley Sheaves.

Thro' the meadow, thro' the meadow,
Emerald green from aftermath,
Slipping thro' the sun and shadow,
Like a serpent, wound the path;
Through the breezy, scented meadow,
Through the mint and clover leaves,
Tripped she on thro' sun and shadow
To where he bound the barley sheaves.

And the basket which she carried
Was for handsome, hungry Ben,
Who smiled glad welcome as she tarried
To see him deftly bind the grain;
While his honest heart a-flutter—
Like a song-bird 'mong the leaves—
Prompted thoughts so sweet to utter,
All among the barley sheaves.

And when the napkin's snowy whiteness
She quickly spread with "by your lief,"
And placed th' roll's unrivaled lightness
Upon the latest banded sheaf –
He noted all her blushing sweetness,
Like a rose 'mong its leaves—
They talked an hour—who'd note its fleetness
Out among the barley sheaves?

He saw dark braids in sunlight golden,
Watched her glances, soft and shy,
And thought he read a story olden
In the violet of her eyes;
Then remembered, "he who never Nothing ventures, naught achieves."
Could she love him? Would she ever
Bind with him life's golden sheaves?

Soft perfumes from mint and clover,
Sweet the songs of listening birds;
Soft the tones of earnest lover,
Sweet the import of his words;
Delicious day of summer glory,
Just the day when one believes;
Then marvel not, the old sweet story
Was told among the barley sheaves.

Miscellany.

UNDER SUSPICION.

"I am very sorry Fred. I had got to like the girl very much, and she has been very faithful to her duties and a good saleswoman and all that, but I cannot permit this pilfering to go on. It will lead to something worse before long. I think the best way to save her feelings will be just to tell her at the end of the week that we don't require her services any longer, and in that way get rid of her without any direct accusation. You know we took her solely on her own recommendation, without asking for any references—in fact, I'll do her the justice to admit that she frankly told us she could not furnish any, being a stranger in the place.

"But this stealing has been going on for a month now, and as far as we can learn or find out she is the first one here in the morning and is here alone long enough to give her an opportunity to help herself. Another thing I have noticed; and that is that she has had several little trinkets lately which seem to me decidedly more extravagant than a girl of her means could afford to indulge in, unless she has come by them through such means as I begin to fear she is guilty of."

Fred bit his lip and was silent.

It would not have helped the case at all for him to have told his father just then that he knew the source from whence she had derived those little gifts, which he had contrived to convey to her in such a way that she would not be able to detect the giver and so return them, and which had afforded him such delight to see her wear, little dreaming at the time that they would only serve as an additional means of strengthening suspicion against her.

He had only been waiting a favorable opportunity to speak to her of his feelings and assure himself of her sentiments, before telling his father of the hopes he had been cherishing, but before that opportunity arrived this unexpected trouble and threatened disgrace had cast a shadow over the fair name of the girl he secretly loved.

"I'll stake my life, father, that she hasn't a trinket about her but what is honestly come by," he exclaimed, after a moment's embarrassed silence, "and that she is a thoroughly honest and trustworthy girl, Don't discharge her this week, father. Give her—give me one week more, and let me see if I cannot discover the thief. I promise that if it is indeed she, I will not try to shield her. But let me have that much time to try to discover the real culprit."

"I don't see how you are going to do it." replied Mr. Adams, looking around the apartment. "There is no way that I can see but of getting here ahead of the thief, whoever it is—and, of course, the money will not be taken with you looking on, and there is no way for you to conceal yourself in the room here. You know I have been accustomed to leave money in that drawer, for the convenience of giving change if it should be needed before I get down in the morning and nobody knows but you that I am in the habit of counting it over every night before leaving, and that for the last month it has not balanced with the cashier's account, but constantly showed a deficiency. It must be taken in the morning before we get here, and Miss Allen is, as she has said herself, the first one here—indeed, she has a key of her own, so that she can get in as early as she pleases."

Fred's eyes had been roving around the room while his father was speaking. There was, as he said, no possible chance or his concealing himself anywhere in the room without making the fact of that concealment evident and thus defeating his purpose, but as he glanced over at the desk, which stood at the opposite side of the room near the window and in one drawer of which was kept the money for such miscellaneous expenses as postage, telegrams, and other incidental expenditure, and from which sums that could not be accounted for had been missing for a month past, his face lighted. The window faced another window of a large building, the side of which was separated only by a narrow court and which was for the time vacant, and a suggestion occurred to him which he seized upon at once.

"I'll admit it does look black against her, father," he said. "But I believe I can find a way in a week's time either to vindicate her or prove that your suspicions are just, though I believe it will vindicate her. Just let me have one more week, and if I don't discover the culprit by that time, I will make no further plea."

"All right, my boy," said Mr. Adams, smiling and perhaps not altogether without an intuition as to the cause of his son's earnestness. I can stand the loss of a few pounds more, I guess. Find the culprit, and you can name your own reward."

"I don't desire any reward," replied Fred.

But his troubled face told another story, and one that his father was not slow to detect.

Not only Margery Allen, but the three other girls in the employ of Mr. Adam's photographic establishment missed the frank, bright smile and pleasant word with which his son had been wont to greet them, and into Margery's pretty eyes crept a look of hurt surprise, mingled with a deeper feeling that went to Fred's very heart. But he maintained his demeanor, unshaken, meanwhile studying each face and act of the girls with a scrutiny he had never bestowed upon them before, and by night he had pretty well settled in his own mind as to the culprit, but to make that suspicion a certainty, was the task that remained.

If any of the girls in passing near the window where the desk stood had chanced to glance at the building opposite, they might have noticed that it had been provided with a shade, with the exception of one pane of glass, where the shade had been cut away. But they either did not notice it, or did not think it of sufficient consequence to mention if they did, and the day's work went on as usual, except that Margery remarked to herself, with a little faster beating of the heart, that it was the first day since her finding the employment that had been to her such a boon that Fred's eyes had failed to meet hers with an encouraging or friendly smile, in which of late she had imagined she could detect a warmer sentiment.

The next morning the girls were at their work as usual when Mr Adams and his son entered the establishment. Both gentlemen looked serious, but on Fred's face was also clearly manifest a look of triumphant satisfaction.

"Young ladies," said Mr. Adams, addressing his employes, "I have rather an unpleasant subject to introduce this morning, but it is not of my choosing, and I would prefer to give you an opportunity to acknowledge your act than to charge you with it. Which of you is first here in the morning?"

"I believe I am, sir," answered Margery, to which the others assented.

"Well, I am sorry to report that for some time past I have been missing small sums of money from the drawer where I keep the change for incidental expenses, and to which you have all access as the occasion requires," continued Mr. Adams. "Now, I will put it to you formally, Miss Allen do you know anything in regard to the missing money?"

"I do not, sir," she replied, lifting her eyes to his face with a look of perfect innocence and truthfulness, while Fred in his delight and joy could scarce restrain himself from hugging her on the spot.

"Miss Wilson, do you?—or you, Miss Douglass?—or you, Miss Ferris?"

A most emphatic denial was the unanimous response.

"Well," said Mr. Adams, "it seems that we must resort to some other means to ascertain the culprit. What have you to say, Fred?"

"Merely to ask the young ladies if any of them recognize any one they know in this," responded Fred, drawing out a small plate and laying it before them. There was an excellent photograph of the interior of the room, and bending over an open drawer of the desk in the act of taking some silver from it, was the unmistakable profile, face and figure of Lottie Wilson.

With a startled cry she drew back, covering her burning face with her hands.

"If you will tell me the whole story, I will let you off with no greater punishment than being discharged from my service," said Mr. Adams, sternly. "Otherwise I shall call an officer and hand you over to him forthwith."

Overcome with terror at this threat, Lottie sobbingly confessed that she had been the thief, having coaxed the housekeeper to let her in on the plea that she wanted to go to work early, and then slipping out again and not returning until after Margery arrived, so that if the theft was discovered, suspicion would fall on her. Mr. Adams heard her to the end, then, quietly requesting her to get her hat and cloak, attended her to the door and bowed her out. Then returning to Margery, who was standing a little apart from the rest, he said in a tone of more than wonted kindness:—

"There is a little story connected with this discovery which there is not a fitting opportunity to tell here, but if you will allow my son to escort you to my house this evening to dinner, I will be happy to make you acquainted with my wife, and you can hear the sequel of this affair."

Margery bowed, to happy to speak after one eloquent look from Fred's eyes, and went back to her duties with a heart bounding high. At the appointed hour Fred accompained her to his home, where after being introduced to his mother, who took the orphan girl to her heart and embrace at once, they told her the story.

"The moment I looked at that window of the building opposite," Fred said in conclusion, "it occurred to me that I might make use of it as a point not only of observation, but from which I could obtain a view of the place and the culprit. By investigating and experimenting I found that I could photograph the room accurately, and I had a shade put up, leaving only one pane of glass exposed, in front of which I could place my machine and do the work without being seen in return. I was there this morning by daylight, arranged my apparatus, and about half an hour before your coming, the door opened and Lottie Wilson came in. I waited until she was in the very act of taking the money, as you see, and then secured my snap shot that vindicated you, my darling, and has made me the happiest man alive—and all by the aid of that blessed pane of glass."

He had not intended to make his avowal of love in such a fashion, but his joy and affection burst from him simultaneously, and the next moment he had her in his rapturous embrace, from which she made no effort to disengage herself.

"Good-by, my dear daughter," Mrs. Adams whispered, as she bade her good-by before resigning her to Fred's care to escort her home. "You shall be my daughter in a very few weeks if I have anything to say about it."

And that she not only had considerable to say about it, but said it, was evidenced by the most modest but delightful little wedding that took place not long after, at which Fred and Margery were the principal parties interested, and if their faces were any indication, the very happiest people that could be found anywhere. —Tit Bit.

New York Fashions.

OUT DOOR GARMENTS.

In out door garments, there is choice between capes running from thirty to thirty-eight inches in length, or jackets showing very long skirts, which though full, are different in cut from those of last season, because laid in two box plaits at the back, rather than in all around, umbrella like flutings. Like the latter however, they are tight fitting and a minority open in front over a very long vest. The handsomer capes are wondrously ornamented by combinations of jet, fur or lace and often the three are united, the material most used, being velvet plush.

FUR CAPES

Of course are very desirable and in view of demand, new kinds of fur are introduced, which bring prices more within the means of the average buyer. These are electric seal or moire astrachan, the former so called because while resembling seal, the hairs stand out, astrachan having a prestige this year that is without precedent. A nice cape thirty inches long, of electric seal can be bought for $25, astrachan coming about ten dollars higher, price for both, increasing of course with the size of the garment. Persian lamb, mink or seal take higher rank and in best quality, are very expensive, but the first mentioned kinds of fur are seen at leading stores and reckoned genteel. A few silk capes lined with ermine or squirrel lock are noticeable. Ulsters are in mixed cloth and provided with detachable capes. The

BRIGHT COLORS

Used in millinery, give an unusually gay appearance, especially the very bright pink or green shades, the former being gradations of cerise, a reddish pink and the latter called emerald. With these come the bluet tints of course, brilliant yellow and bright red and all being combined freely with black, the striking results may be imagined readily. Weaves of narrow satin or chenille and felt, are reckoned extremely stylish, composing not a few of the dressiest hats and this probably because so easily manipulated in curves and folds to suit different faces.

NEW FLANNELS

Are in small patterns of sprays and flowers or in hair line stripes set close together, there being of course, a proportion in solid colors. Delightfully soft, they are an ideal wear for ladies in doors or for children and by using Ivory Soap and luke warm water, the finest qualities may be washed without the slightest risk of fading. This also holds good regarding embroideries and rich laces. In silks, the patterns are close and small, vivid colorings being most in demand, as for example, where an emerald surface is varied by cerise sprays or dots on a bluet ground work, by brilliant yellow etc. Bengaline showing very large reps running across, is immensely popular and a favorite idea is to veil the corsage with chiffon or mousseline, or substitute independent waists of light material.

SKIRTS

Are by far most frequently, without trimming and thus the binding becomes of universal importance. Therefore the finest costumes for both indoor and street wear are protected by S. H. and M. first quality bias velveteen skirt bindings and the newest improvement in this leading make, is the Duxbak rainproof, which is absolutely water proof. The best dressmakers say that by its use, the hitherto customary wetting of shoe tops and ankles is in great measure obviated. Its durability is unquestioned, because made of best double warp goods in perfectly fast colors. Very long coats or short open basques with circular volant attached are most stylish for the street.

The Living Pictures.

That the living pictures have become a popular species of amusement, and that they afford gratification and delight to thousands upon thousands of spectators, is beyond all doubt, says a writer in The Boston Sunday Herald. Yet they are nothing new; they have been known for all time—not certainly in their present shape, but assuredly so long as art has been recognized in the world. All stage exhibitions may be regarded in the light of living pictures, for are not all productions of the stage living pictures and careful reproductions of actual scenes of the past or present?

It may be that the living pictures, as we understand them, had their beginning in what was known as the "Grecian statues," which were living reproductions of the famous statues of antiquity, and it will perhaps be remembered that the last exhibition we had of that nature, here in Boston, was given by a certain Mr. William Muldoon, an ex-policeman, ex-prize-fighter, ex-wrestler, and so on, of New York.

The first person who represented the Grecian statue here in Boston, and, indeed, in the country, was John Fletcher, who appeared first at the Tremont Theatre, on the night of Monday, Nov. 28, 1831. Fletcher was born in the Bloody Tower—one of those numerous buildings which go to make up the pile known as the Tower of London—on the 28th of May, 1809. In 1831, the year he came to this country, he gained celebrity as the statues at the Adelphi Theatre, in London. After appearing at all the principal theatres of the country with great success for several seasons.

Voice Culture.

Probably no similar institution in the country is better equipped for imparting a correct knowledge of singing than is the Copley Square School, located in the Pierce building, Boston. Special care is exercised in placing the tones of the beginner, and few teachers equal Mrs. Katharine F. Barnard in this particular and the finish in voice culture, under the skillful methods of the instructor in opera and oratorio is unsurpassed by any musical college in the country.

One of the first entertainments given to pupils and their friends will be a concert by the Instructor and the advanced pupils, it being a part of the plan of the school to put its pupils before the public as often as possible. These entertainments are always overcrowded, and only those who apply early in the season will be able to secure an invitation.

Our Bricks and Tin Cans.

QUINCY, Oct. 14, 1894.

Editor of the Patriot:

DEAR SIR.—Begging of you to spare me a little space in your estimable sheet I will with that favor granted reply to a lengthy article in your issue of October 12, and styled "Our Streets."

I notice, very particularly, that the writer most frankly intimates and declares that he dislikes to criticise, etc. This being the case is, I suppose, why all his criticisms are not in a very polite and gentlemanly manner.

Mr. Eaton is accused by this gentleman of squandering the city's money. Is this not rather broad, rather far-fetched? Would our worthy Mayor, one who is noted for his probity, as well as his most excellent business intellect, appoint one for this most important office, who is, as our neighbor says, a squanderer? Or, may it be possible that our neighbor may be prejudiced and perhaps has made accusations for which he is already penitent?

I presume that our kind and impartial neighbor has noticed all the deficiencies on that portion of Hancock street, which he criticises so severely, from the saddle of a promising polo steed. I feel sure that were this same steed to speak he would be most profuse in his thanks to Mr. Eaton for recoating and filling in the perilous ruts and holes which were so very numerous and prominent before Mr. Eaton was so considerate as to do so very much, with so very little, at his command.

Our neighbor insists and declares that it should have been recoated and repaired with crushed stone and as his proficient predecessor would have done. Surely we all are aware that Mr. Eaton knew that crushed stone would be the most substantial and in the end the most economical, but very unfortunately for Mr. Eaton our councilmen have not seen fit to appropriate sufficient funds for the recoating of Hancock street with crushed stone. But even so our councilmen are not to blame. Mr. Eaton, he is the party who must bear all the abuse.

We are all aware that we have a modern stone crushing plant. But is Mr. Eaton empowered to crush at his will and repair as he deemed expedient, or is he a servant of the city to do and to spend funds as he is so directed by certain orders and appropriations passed by Council?

Our neighbor states, and with much emphasis, that "our efficient Commissioner, in this, the nineteenth century, has piled on old bricks, tin cans and other refuse." I venture to say that these old bricks and tin cans must certainly have been seen in his dreams, (either day dreams or at night,) for I was a careful observer during all of these repairs and at no time did I see a single tin can piled on. And, again I may frankly state, and with authority, that at all times during the repairs, both Mr. Eaton and his foreman, Mr. Lowe, were most careful in their selection of the material about the High school grounds. The portion that was unfit to put on to a street was not put on. What was put on has proved a comfort and blessing to the many travelers who do not ride in their saddle.

Our ex-Commissioner did a very nice piece of work on Washington street as far as his funds would allow him, but do not for a moment think that Mr. Eaton could not have done as well with a thousand dollars' appropriation. If you wish recoating with crushed stone I would suggest, asking our Council to appropriate and give Mr. Eaton a chance. He has already built several fine pieces of Talford road in places where he has had funds to do as he would wish.

Our neighbor would do well to retract his words when he says Mr. Eaton has not the ability. Although probably not efficient in the art of polo from the saddle there is not an iota of doubt but that he is thoroughly competent for the position he now holds. Instead of abuse and criticism, if he would kindly use his efforts to encourage what is being done by our worthy Mayor and his estimable public commissioner he would then have the approval instead of the censure of many of our good and loyal citizens.

In closing I would say that I am one who does not believe in any injustice and I feel that your correspondent's very severe and abusive criticism was a great injustice to one whom I consider a careful and considerate public servant.

NON-POLITICIAN.

Hard-Wood Floors.

The hard-wood floor is comparatively a new feature of the house, and it is not altogether strange that housekeepers do not always know just how to take care of them. Many of them treat them as they do carpets, sweeping them with a broom-corn broom, which is intended well enough to take the dust out of the meshes of a carpet, but not to polish a hard-wood surface.

The same woman who treats her hard-wood floor in this way would refuse to sweep off her piano with a broom-corn broom for fear of scratching it. She would probably take a soft, cotton flannel duster and wipe off the dust, and this is exactly what she should do with her floor. The most convenient way of doing it is to make a soft cotton-flannel bag for the broom. The dust is easily removed from a polished floor in this way.

Such a covered broom is also useful in sweeping down the walls, though a feather duster accomplishes this work more successfully. There ought to be a number of these broom covers ready, so that when they become soiled they may be washed. Painted piazzas may also be much more successfully swept with a covered broom of this sort than in any other way. Even when it needs a scrubbing brush, if it is well swept with a covered broom it will look almost as well as if it had been scrubbed with a brush, and certainly better than if it had been cleaned with a mop.—Tribune.

The Law of Finding.

The law of finding, was declared many years ago, and it is well to note the case and decision: A visitor to a store found a wallet containing a sum of money. He handed the wallet with its content to the merchant, to be returned to the owner. After three years the owner having failed to appear, the finder demanded the wallet and the money from the merchant. The latter refused to deliver them, on the ground that they were found on his premises. The finder then sued the shopkeeper. It was decided that, against all the world but the owner, the title of the finder is perfect. The receiver of an article found is only a trustee, first of the owner, then of the finder if the owner does not appear. The receiver has no right to keep an article against the finder any more than the finder has to keep it against the owner.—Clinton Courant.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCT. 20, 1894.

Annexation of Squantum.

The special committee of the Quincy City Council composed by Councilmen Holden, Holbrook and Shackley, and Aldermen Folsom and Bryant and Councilmen Whelton, Reidy, Wise and Andrews, composing the Boston committee, together with City Clerk Hillard of Boston, visited Squantum, Wednesday afternoon, to look over the territory, it being the first time many of the committee has seen it.

The visitors were met at the Atlantic depot with a barge, by Mr. N. V. Titus, one of the gentlemen most interested in the annexation, and the trip commenced.

The wind freshened just after the start and when the causeway was reached it was blowing a gale and a fair exhibition was had of how it seemed in winter.

The first stop was made at the little bridge, beneath which runs the creek which is not only a natural boundary line, but the one selected in the annexation plan.

From here the party drove to Squantum Head. Mr. Titus, who has Squantum's history on his tongue's end, explaining and pointing out the points of interest.

From Squantum Head a drive was taken to Moon Island, where they arrived at the same time as the Boston Society of Civil Engineers. The latter coming by boat. As the tide was right, all had an opportunity to witness the discharge of the sewage into the water.

Squantum proper was then visited, and after climbing to the several commanding points, the party were invited to the residence of Mr. Titus, where they were welcomed by Mrs. Titus and comfortable fires which were very welcome after the long cold ride.

A lunch was served by Mr. and Mrs. Titus, and it was very tempting. The tongues of the law makers, which had become frozen, were thawed out, and conversation became general, but did not touch the annexation problem until after the cigars had been lighted.

The subject was discussed informally and while all were very much pleased with the territory, the gentlemen do not all agree on the annexation part.

Councilmen Wise and Andrews of Boston, we learn, are in favor of annexation; also Councilman Holbrook of Quincy.

Quincy High School.

The first regular meeting of the High School Debating society for 1894-95, was held Wednesday, October 17, in the large study room of the new building. Miss McGovern, '95, presided.

The election of officers was held and the following nominations were made:

For President,—Miss Bassett, '95; Miss Dinnie, '95; and Miss Pope, '95.

Vice President,—Mr. Mudgett, '96; and Mr. Barry, '95.

Secretary,—Miss Bemis, '95; Miss Sullivan, '95.

Treasurer,—Miss Coyle, '96; Miss Garrity, 96; and Mr. Warshaw, '96.

The results of the election were as follows:

Miss Bassett, president.

Mr. Barry, vice president.

Miss Bemis, secretary and treasurer.

Miss McGovern appointed as a board of decision: Miss Pope, Miss White, Miss M. Sampson, Miss Emery and Miss Gavin.

As critic, Miss Vogler.

As executive committee,—Miss Flood, '95; Miss Grace Lord, '95; Miss Bates, 95.

The entertainment was as follows:

Recitation, — Miss Ramsey, '96; an excellent selection from Tennyson; acceptably given.

Recitation, —"Potatoes," Miss Mary Pitts, '96; a lesson in practical charity; well rendered.

Recitation,—"The Painter of Seville," Miss Mellett,'96; an excellent story of a young painter,—his struggles and his final triumph; well memorized.

Recitation, —"Man Was Made To Mourn," Miss Rothwell,'96; an excellent selection.

The debate followed:—Resolved, that falsehood is never justifiable.

The speakers in the affirmative were: Miss Bassett, Miss Bates, Miss Bemis, Miss Bryant, Miss Cashman and Miss Dinnie.

In the negative: Miss Flood, Miss Greaney, Miss Haley, Miss Keating, Miss Leary, Miss Lowe and Miss McGovern.

For want of time the debate was continued.

Lincoln—Estes.

A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel B. Estes on Saville avenue. The house was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves, plants and flowers, and a goodly number of relatives and friends were present.

The happy couple were Miss Clara Barstow Estes of Quincy and Mr. Bela Francis Lincoln of Hingham. The young lady is popular in a large circle and has for three years made an efficient and obliging clerk at the Quincy Savings bank. Mr. Lincoln is station agent and postmaster at West Hingham.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Walter R. Breed of Christ church, Quincy, at 7.30. The bride was accompanied by Miss Clara E. Thompson of Quincy as maid of honor. The ushers were: Mr. Arthur McNeil of Hingham, Mr. Evart W. Adams, Mr. Harry L. Whiton and Mr. William H. Whitney of Quincy. A reception was given from 8 to 10.

The bride was gowned in a white India silk, court train, and her veil was fastened with lilies of the valley. Her bouquet was of bride roses.

The maid of honor wore a gown of blue silk crepe, and carried pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln will make a brief wedding tour, and upon their return will take up their residence at West Hingham, where they will be at home Tuesdays after November 1.

The Street Railway.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Quincy & Boston street railway was held in company's building in Quincy, Wednesday afternoon, and the following directors elected: John R. Graham, Winthrop Coffin, Arthur Burnham, Josiah Quincy, John A. Duggan, Thomas H. McDonnell, John F. Merrill, Roger H. Wilde and Dr. William A. Drake.

The report of the secretary and treasurer showed the past year to have been a good one financially for the road, as the total receipts were $67,961.69 and the expenditures $56,167 53, making the net earnings $11,794.16.

The number of passengers carried during the year was 1,099,468, an increase of 17,780 over the preceding year. This number of passengers would have been increased considerable more except for the dull season at Houghs Neck and the falling off on the West Quincy line.

During the year three miles of new track have been laid and two new cars added to the rolling stock, which will be further increased by two new 18-foot cars of the latest equipment which were shipped this week from the works of J. W. Jones & Son at West Troy, N. Y.

The marriage of Mrs. Jennie W. Rice and Mr. Leavitt W. Bates, at the Methodist church, Weymouth, Wednesday evening, was the society event of the week. A reception followed at No. 48 Middle street, the residence of the bride's parents.

Congressman McEttrick is a candidate for reelection and has issued his platform.

ATLANTIC.

A harvest supper will be held next week in the Atlantic Methodist church.

Harry Read has been on a squirrel hunt the past week in the vicinity of Marshfield.

Dr. Maria E. Drew of Atlantic is taking a post-graduate course at the Tufts Medical college.

Mr. Gurney has adopted a new method of lighting by kerosene in his store and the effect is very fine.

The private social of the members of Memorial church, Tuesday evening, is said to have been a great success.

When the Compass whist club begins to play there will be at least four regular whist clubs in Atlantic.

Mr. Charles R. Safford is out on a two weeks' vacation, and has gone to his old home in the western part of the state.

The 8.27 train in the morning from Atlantic is much appreciated and the wonder is that it has not been put on before.

Some big fish stories are told in Ward 6, but it is a fact that some splendid lots of smelts have been caught near the shore the past week.

Not a thing has been done by the city toward putting Walker street in a passable condition, and the citizens look upon such neglect with a great deal of disgust.

The "No Name" whist club met with Miss Ruth Bassett last Tuesday evening and passed a very pleasant evening. This club is composed wholly of young ladies and gentlemen and a merry season is anticipated.

A union meeting will be held at Memorial church, next Sunday evening at 7 30. The choir of the Methodist church will sing. The speakers are Supt. Coon and a party of men from the Union Rescue Mission, Boston. Everybody invited.

A young ladies' whist club has been formed in Atlantic to be called the "Brownie club." The first meeting was held with Miss Alice Coe on Billings street, last Monday night, and others will follow once a fortnight through the winter.

Will Contest.

Michael S. Kelliher, before his death some three years ago, was a paper hanger. At his death he left property of the value of $75,000. He also left a will, but this was broken because of his incompetency. After the disallowance of the will Mrs. Catherine Sullivan of Quincy, since deceased, filed a petition for the partition of his estate among herself and his seven brothers and sisters.

Mr. John D. Kelliher of Deerfield, a brother of the deceased, opposed Mrs. Sullivan's petition on the ground that she was not a legitimate sister of the deceased, as she professed to be. Monday there was a hearing in the Suffolk Probate Court, before Judge McKim, on the petition of Mrs. Sullivan, which was pressed by her children, who live in Quincy. The Court decided that she was a legitimate sister of the deceased, thereby establishing the right of her children to one-eighth part of the deceased's property. The prayer of her petition, however, is to go into effect only when the inventory of the estate is filed, and an appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court by the heirs of Mary Keefe, a sister of the intestate, and by John D. Kelliher.

The brothers and sisters of the deceased who will take an interest in the whole property are John D. Kelliher of Deerfield, Cornelius Kelliher and Dennis Kelliher of Turner's Falls, Daniel Kelliher of Chicago, Honora Sweeney of Leyden, Ellen Kelliher of Leyden, the heirs of Mary Keefe of Greenfield and the heirs of Catherine Sullivan.

J. L. Wilder is the candidate of the Prohibitionists of this district for senator.

WOLLASTON.

The entertainment consisted of some excellent singing by a quartette, Mr. Ferguson, Mr. Osborne, Mr. Hersey and Mr. Jones of Quincy; a vocal solo by Miss Briggs; a piano duet by Miss Olney and Miss Lord; and Miss Hyde of Weymouth read very acceptably two selections. Cake and Russian tea were served during the evening. The tea was poured by Mrs. Barbour and the ushers were Mr. P. L Davidson and Mr. Arthur Sibley.

Annie Johnson, aged 65 years, who claims to live in Wollaston was, fined one cent in the municipal criminal court in Boston Thursday for shoplifting in the store of Houghton & Dutton. Her excellent reputation and age stood her in good stead.

Mr. William Keyes of Wollaston is reported more comfortable, with slight indications of improvement.

"Flowers, or God in Vegetable Nature." Program will consist of singing and recitations and addresses by Mrs. John H. Litchfield, Jr., and by the pastor.

Tuesday night the Unity club of Wollaston held its second meeting of this season. The subject was "The Madonna," and the programme included a piano duet, a vocal duet and two vocal solos. The music was appropriate to the general subject. Papers were presented on "Madonna Worship," the mother element in the Divinity we worship, "The Madonna in the Roman Catholic Church," celebrated pictures of the Madonna, and "Legends of the Madonna."

If nothing goes amiss Wollaston will again have a strong trio of Republican Councilmen in the City Council next year. The members who represented that progressive ward so acceptably the past year have signified a desire to retire. Councilmen Robbins, Litchfield and Snow find that their business cares are increasing and demand their undivided time. Wollaston has been always fortunate in being represented by able men in the city government. Three prominent men have been approached and requested to allow their names to be used at the municipal caucus. They are, Mr. Charles M. Bryant, Mr. N. G. Nickerson and Mr. Walter S. Pinkham, They have for years taken an active part in the party councils as advisers and leaders and are familiar with the needs of the ward and city.

The Unity Club met in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Tuesday evening and listened to papers on "Madonnas." The evening was in charge of Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop.

One of the most successful sociables which ever took place under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society of the Wollaston Unitarian church was the one which was given on Thursday evening in the church vestry. The principal feature of the sociable was the tempting oyster supper, which was served from half-past six to half-past seven. There were raw oysters, and escalloped oysters, and oysters served in a stew; and then there were pies, and cake, and ice cream. After the supper there was a button sewing contest for the gentlemen and a tack driving one for the ladies. Mr. William E. Rowe won the gentlemen's prize and Mrs. Walter M. Hatch the ladies'.

The committee having the sociable in charge consisted of Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mrs. Sylvester Brown, Mrs. Edmund F. Taylor, Mrs. E. G. Thayer, Mrs. C. W. Brennan, Mrs. G. B. Rice and Mrs. Arthur Sibley.

Good Scores.

Two of our well known marksmen braved last Saturday's storm and had a shoot on the grounds of the Wollaston Trap club. Mr. Prescott made a remarkably good score, breaking 22 out of a possibly 25 blue rocks, 21 being straight. Mr. Sanborn also did good work, taking into consideration the severity of the storm

SOUTH QUINCY.

Miss Mary F. Lynch of Waltham is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. William D. Burns of Common street.

The Edgerley Tableaux troupe of the Boston College of Oratory gave an entertainment Thursday morning at St. Mary's hall.

A lecture will be given next Monday evening, at 7.30, in the vestry of the West Quincy M. E. church, by Rev. James Yeames; subject, "The Slums of London."

The case of John McTiernan vs. John Fallon, all of Quincy, to recover $1,000 for trespass on land, on trial at Dedham resulted in the verdict of $400 for the plaintiff.

Prof. and Mrs. Bush are in Belleview, Florida.

Word has been received of the death of Mr. John Lillicrap, formerly of South Quincy, at Joliett, Wis.

The regular business before the Quincy Literary Society at its meeting in Doble's hall, on Friday evening, was the reading and consideration of "the magazine." The president, Dr. R. McLennan presided, and there was a good attendance of members and friends.

Unlike ordinary magazines the supply of articles never exceeds the demand for space. No manuscripts are returned to aspiring authors with the curt devise "declined with thanks." Impartial treatment is accorded to all.

The editor, Mr. A. M. Craig, announced the receipt of four papers.

The next meeting, which will be held in the same place on Friday evening, will be devoted to readings, original and otherwise. The readers will be Messrs. William S. Murray, Alexander Cowe, John Russell and Francis Morrison.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Grace Green Bigelow, daughter of Councilmen and Mrs. John P. Bigelow, and Mr. Otis Almond Edgarton, Saturday evening, Oct. 27, at 8 o'clock.

Charles Carlson, the 12 year-old son of Louis Carlson of Albertina street, shook the dust of Quincy from his shoes Friday, Oct. 12, and all efforts to find, or locate him have thus far failed. The boy had a good home but for some time had become possessed with the idea to travel in the cities of the old country, but his parents did not pay any particular attention to it.

Friday afternoon while his mother was sick he did up two pair of pants, some collars and handkerchiefs and departed. He was seen later in the afternoon going towards the woods in Braintree but he disappeared, since which time nothing has been seen or heard of him.

When last seen he had on a pair of black hose, lace shoes, gray and black fine striped pants, dark short coat, and a soft black hat. It is thought that the boy would try and hip on some foreign going in vessel.

Presbyterian Church, South Quincy.

Morning service at 10 30 conducted by Rev. L. H. Angier, D. D, of Boston. Evening service at 7. Y. P. S. C. E. Tuesday evening. Congregational prayer meeting Thursday evening. Come and welcome.

MILTON.

A public hearing was given at the Town Hall, Milton, Tuesday evening, Oct. 16, at 7 30 o'clock, on the petition of the Milton & Boston street railway for a location.

A whist party was held at the residence of Mr. Eaton, on Eaton street, Wednesday, Oct. 10. There were four tables. The first ladies' prize, a triplicate mirror, was taken by Miss Vina Brackett; second ladies' prize, silver pen tray, was won by Miss Lucy Eaton; first gentlemen's prize a seal leather cuff and collar box, was captured by Albert A. Brackett, second gentlemen's prize, a cigar tray, went to Joseph Vogel, Jr.—News.

The DAILY LEDGER is now on sale by D. E. Wadsworth & Co.

Rev. H. C Vrooman will exchange pulpits Sunday with Rev. E. W. Virgin of West Quincy.

"Confession," a three-act farce comedy, is to be given by local talent in Associates' hall next Thursday evening.

T. L. Pearce has opened his new store in the Ellsworth building and it looks very attractive.

Mr. Edward Eaton has raised quite a large crop of fine peanuts this year.

The Milton band will celebrate its first anniversary next Wednesday evening by entertaining their friends. The programme will consist of a concert, supper and dance.

The new Milton directory is being delivered this week and it is a very handy book for reference, as it is very complete. A map of Milton accompanies the book. This is the first directory Milton has had for about 8 years.

There are to be some good bicycle races at East Milton, Saturday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. The men's race has nine entries and there are five in the boys' race.

Congregational Conference.

The sixty-seventh annual meeting of the Suffolk South Conference was held at the Wollaston Congregational church on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The edifice was crowded at both sessions.

Over 300 delegates were present from the First church, Dedham; Norwood Congregational; Second church of Dorchester; Union church of Boston; Philips church of South Boston; Canton Congregational; Village church of Dorchester; Eliot church of Roxbury; South Evangelical of West Roxbury; Jamacia Plain Congregational; Immanuel of Roxbury; Trinitarian of Neponset; First church of Hyde Park; Pilgrim church of Dorchester; Highland church of Roxbury; Walnut avenue church of Roxbury; Olivet church of Boston; First church of Wollaston; Boylston church of Jamacia Plain; Clarendon church of Hyde Park; Arlington Congregational church; East Walpole Congregational church Memorial church of Atlantic; Harvard church of Dorchester; Central church of Dorchester and the Roslindale Congregational church. The oldest society represented was the First church of Dedham, organized in 1638, and the youngest, the Rosindale Congregational, organized in 1890.

The moderator of the conference was the Rev. Joseph B. Seabury of the First church of Dedham, and the scribe was the Rev. William Hervey Allbright of the Pilgrim church of Dorchester.

The afternoon session, which was from 2 30 to 5.30 o'clock, was devoted chiefly to the discussion of the topic for the conference, "Spiritual Marasmus, its Cause and Cure." The opening address was by the Rev. Charles L. Morjan of the Jamaica Plain Congregational church. After the address the pastors and laymen discussed the topic at length.

At the adjournment of the afternoon session the visiting delegates were invited to a collation in the church vestry, which had been prepared by the local committee of arrangements, Mr. N. G. Nickerson, Mr. George H. Murray, Mrs. Edward S. Tenney, and Mrs. J. G. Witham.

At the opening of the evening session the unfinished business was taken up.

These delegates were elected to the next National Triennial Council: Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, D. D., Mr. Eldridge Torrey, and Rev. Arthur Little, D. D; Alternates, Hon. Jonathan A. Lane, Mr. Chas. W. Hill and Rev. Perley B. Davis.

The Rev. Edward A. Robinson, pastor of the Wollaston Congregational society, was elected secretary of the Sunday School work for the conference.

DOWNS AND PARK.

The institution of a lodge of the Sons of Temperance at Norfolk Downs last Tuesday evening was postponed until a future date.

A dancing school has opened at A. O. U. W. hall.

John Sutherland is to occupy the new house off Rawson road.

Mr. Hayes has commenced work on a $5,000 house on Pierce street.

Elmer Litchfield of Norfolk Downs is to move to Winthrop next week.

Water pipes are being laid in Everett, Marshall, Calumet and Apthorp streets.

Wood, Harmon & Co., are concreting more of their sidewalks at Norfolk Downs.

Norfolk lodge, A. O. U. W., hold a musical and literary entertainment the first of November.

At a meeting of the Wollaston Park and Norfolk Downs Improvement society, held Saturday evening, sub-committees were appointed on streets, lights, schools, etc.

The Squantum Yacht club wound up its season Monday evening by a large gathering of the members at the club house at Norfolk Downs, and although everything on the outside was cold and disagreeable, all was warmth within and winter was not even thought of.

The club's beacon light on the outside of the building burned brightly and guided those without to a safe and pleasant harbor, and it goes without saying that none came that way who were not made more than welcome.

The club members believe in tenderly caring for the wants of the inner man first, and therefore the first thing in order was a banquet, to which all did justice. This pleasing occupation over a requisition was made upon things smokable and soon the air was full of smoke from T. D.'s, Blackstones, cigarettes, corn cobs, etc.

Then it was that the talk commenced, in which nearly all took part. The talk was all about yachts and yachting, the several good and poor qualities of the flyers being discussed informally at length. Plans for the ensuing year were also discussed and the outlook for next year's races is most promising.

QUINCY POINT.

A new timetable will go into effect on the East Weymouth line of the street railway Monday.

John Shaw of this city was a special guest of the Heliotrope club of Marblehead on Thursday of last week.

Miss E. M. Freeman has gone to Brooklyn, N. Y, for a brief trip.

The members of Hose Co. 4, Saturday evening presented Mr. Frank Pray with a handsome cane. District Engineer Mahoney made the presentation speech to which Mr. Pray responded. A supper followed.

The Ladies Social Union of the Washington street Congregational church held a harvest festival in the vestry Thursday evening, Oct. 11, which was very successful. Mrs. Lapham, Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Hayden had charge of the supper; Mrs. Barry, Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Hayden of the entertainment, which consisted of piano solos by Mr. Gilbert, readings by Miss Nellie Ring, solos snd duets by Miss Porter and Miss Clapp of the First Universalist church of Weymouth, and a quartette from Christ church.

Mrs. Rollin H. Newcomb and M. E Wight arranged the vegetables and had charge of them. Among those who contributed vegetables and to whom the ladies feel very grateful were:—Mr. Whipple, Mr. Ford, Elijah Brown, T. H. Newcomb, John Federhen, Mrs. Murdack, John Wight, Albert Hayden, S. F. Newcomb, S. D. Bosworth, T. J. H. Thayer, Kendall's farm, Mrs. William Chubbuck, Mrs. Robert Cummi, Charles Sherburn, James F. Spencer, John Paine, Edgar Hayden, Mr. Denning of the J. Q. Adams farm, Mr. Maney, Nathan Crane.

Eightieth Birthday.

Mr. John A. Nightingale of Easton, Pennsylvania, celebrated his eightieth birthday on Tuesday last. He has two brothers, James and Jeremiah Nightingale, residing on Granite street, in this city. We gather the following particulars from Easton papers:

Many old Eastonians called at the home of his daughter, Mrs. S. S. Lesher, wife of the late Mayor Lesher, corner Spring Garden and Second streets, and paid their respects, None of those who went to congratulate Mr. Nightingale received a more cordial welcome or kindlier greeting than ex-Chief Burgess Lawrence Titus, who is nearly ninety-one years of age. The two have been life-long friends and were companions in their younger days.

Late in the afternoon a family dinner, in commemoration of the birthday, was indulged in, at which his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, gathered and presented their sire with various tokens of love and esteem.

Among others present was Rev. J. G. B. Heath of New York city, formerly pastor of the Universalist church of Easton, of which Mr. Nightingale was a leading member. Mr. Heath read the following poem of his own composition, dedicated to Mr. Nightingale:

Now in this golden autumn time
Dear friend, we come to say
We give you greeting from our hearts
On this, your natal day.

On you kind Providence has smiled
Thro' all these four-score years
And into your "sweet home" have come
Many more joys than tears.

And now your loving children, dear,
With faithful friends rejoice
On this bright day to be your guests,
And hear your welcome voice.

Now in the evening of your days—
The sun low in the West,
Beneath the pensive twilight gleams,
You wait in hope, and rest.

How deep the pleasure you must feel
That we all gladly share:
That truth has been your guiding star,
And shows your record fair.

From youth to age thro' checkered years,
'Twas your high joy to trust,
The gracious Father of us all
Whose ways are wise and just.

Your long and active life well spent
A sweeter fragrance yields,
Than all the roses, rich and red,
That bloom in summer fields.

When fell disease and weakness come,
And sorrows fall like rain,
We'll be resigned—night soon will pass
And morning dawn again.

Whate'er betides we'll trust in Him
Who doeth all things well,
And makes the discords of our life
Ring like a silver bell.

That kindly light that beams with love
Amid the encircling gloom—
Will lead you to your journey's end
Through death to Heaven's fair noon.

And should we not all meet again
Who form this happy band;
May our dear Lord bring us redeemed,
Into "that better land."

Senatorial Convention.

The Democratic convention for the First Norfolk Senatorial District was held in the Adams building, Quincy, Wednesday afternoon. It was called for three o'clock but was half an hour later in coming to order.

John V. Scollard of Braintree was chairman, and Frank I. Childs of Hyde Park, secretary.

A committee of five on credentials reported the convention entitled to 68 and that 60 were present.

A committee of eight, one from each city and town, was appointed to report a list of candidates for senator. The committee agreed upon Walter P. Beck of Milton and he was unanimously nominated.

All had been smooth up to this point, when it was voted to proceed to an informal ballot for a member of the State Central committee, and a committee on ballot was appointed. John W. Hart of Weymouth was unanimously elected.

The District committee was authorized to fill vacancies, and John V. Scollard was re-elected chairman.

At 4 20 the convention adjourned.

"KNOCKABOUT"

School and Play Suit for Lads,

SIZES 4 TO 16 YEARS,

$5.00.

The name "Knockabout" is original with us, being our own idea and copyright, and the cloth used in the manufacture of the suits, which is made expressly for us, is subjected to the most rigorous examination and test for purity of fibre, strength of weave and careful blending of its non-soiling and non-fading colors, before we allow a yard of it to be cut.

The suit is substantially trimmed with tough and durable linings threads, etc., and the seams are double-stiched and stayed with tape, rendering them impossible to rip.

The trousers are fitted with our patent "Cavalry" or double knee, and extra pieces and buttons accompany each suit.

Our "Knockabout" suit is gotten up to resist hard and unremitting usage, and parents will find it a most satisfactory investment.

MISLEADING.

Having read an advertisement in your paper headed "To whom It May Concern," and signed by some of the employees of another clothing company, I desire to criticise several statements made therein, which are apt to be misleading.

These parties would try to impress upon the public that their house is the only one where clothing is made under sanitary conditions, by well paid, skilled labor, and under the directions of the firm.

I take decided issue with them in this matter. I have superintended one of the several workshops of A. Shuman & Co. for the past twelve years, and can back up any statement I make.

The firm of A. Shuman & Co., the largest retail clothing house in New England for fine goods, in order to make room for their extensive business, and not being able, like concerns who only do a small business, to put all their workshops under the same roof as their selling departments, fitted up a number of shops for their employees outside their great establishment, which is taxed to the untmost to take care of the retail and wholesale business, as well as the cutting and trimming, and other departments which make up this enormous plant.

I can safely say that these shops are as clean, well lighted and as well adapted for the manufacture of fine clothing as any in the State. My shop (which was formerly on the premises of A. Shuman & Co., until crowded out by the demand of the firm for more room), is situated at No. 18 Summer street, and I invite its inspection by anybody who is interested.

What is the importance, then, whether the shops are "on the premises" or across the street, as mine is situated ?

The shop is hired and owned by A. Shuman & Co., fitted up with the best machinery by them, and I stand ready to prove that the people working there are as well treated, and as well, and in some instances better, paid than in the workshops of any other concern in this city.

I also stand ready to prove that A. Shuman & Co., have always been at the front in opposing the sweating system, and have done more than any other house in the country to crush out this evil, and I am sure that the State inspectors will verify my statement, if anyone desires to know the truth.

Under such circumstances I cannot stand idly by and have these people give the public wrong impressions without expressing my indignation, and objecting to the exclusive rights they claim; and my associates and employees consider it absurd that the employees of another clothing concern should arrogate to themselves that they are better paid, or that their surroundings are better than ours, because they work on the top loft of their building.

I positively assert, and defy contradiction, that A. Shuman & Co., make as fine goods as are made in America, under as good conditions as any other shops, and pay their employees the highest wages that are paid to skilled labor in the clothing trade, and the help in the shop I am managing, as well as everywhere else in the employ of A. Shuman & Co., will bear me out in my assertion.

I have the honor to remain,

Your obedient servant,

P. J. RILEY,

18 Summer St., Boston.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it.

Assessors' Figures.

The Assessors table of aggregates for 1894, is presented below in comparison with 1893, and affords an interesting study.

One notices first that there is a gain of but 39 resident taxpayers, against a gain of 87 in non-residents.

The number of persons assessed is 9,019, a gain of 832, but almost wholly in "polls only," as these increased 706.

The number of poll taxpayers is 5,920, and as 4,448 pay a "poll only," but 1,472 poll taxpayers have taxable property. Some of these have only a bicycle.

As every voter must be a poll taxpayer, there would be 1,472 voters out of 3,700 who own property, were it not that several of these poll taxpayers are not voters. Not over 1,300 voters, a little over one-third, are property taxpayers, and interested therefore in the tax rate.

The value of assessed personal property shows a big loss,—over $300,000,—while the value of real estate has increased $482,500.

The gain in number of houses was 150, and one would expect that the average value of these would be over $2,000, but here the figures show that the increase in value of buildings excluding land for the year, was but $269,090, or less than $1,800 each for the new buildings.

The value of the land exclusive of buildings was jumped up very nearly as much, —$213,410,—although the number of taxable acres was decreased 2,320 by the taking for the Blue Hills reservation, playgrounds, new High school lot, etc.

It has already been noted that there was a gain of nearly $200,000 in the valuation of the city in the year, and comparisons of the levy and tax rates have been given.

A comparison of houses, horses and cows for several years is given below. It shows that the number of houses will double in fifteen years. The gain for the year was 150, which was less than in any of the preceding three years, and just the same as in 1889-90, The total gain for five years was 870, about half the total of 1880.

The number of horses which have been on the gain since 1890 took a big drop, while the number of cows continue to decrease.

Young Men's Christian Association.

President Wason will address the men's meeting Sunday, at 3.30.

The first reception of the season will be held Thursday evening, October 25. An interesting programme will be presented and refreshments provided. All members of the association and auxiliary are invited. No special invitations will be issued.

Never in the history of the association has there been so much interest manifested in any department as now in the industrial educational classes.

Fatal Accident.

Mr. Willard H. Hunt, a well known citizen of Weymouth, met with a fatal accident Friday forenoon. He was driving one of Thayer's teams and in turning into the driveway leading to Ashford Baker's the wheel of his team struck a tree, throwing Mr. Hunt out. He struck violently on his head and lived only long enough to say, "Carry me home." He leaves a widow and two sons.

The City Council.

The hearing to the Norfolk Downs people and the order to grant a license for a sparring exhibition were the breezy matters before the City Council Monday evening. Councilmen Robbins and Rooney were the only absentees.

Sparring License.

The Committee on Licenses reported that the order for a transfer of the license for a sparring exhibition, ought to pass.

Upon roll call it was lost by vote of 14 to 5, not the necessary two-thirds of the Council.

YEAS — Adams, Anderson, Babcock, Bigelow, Clark, Federhen, Holbrook, Johnson, Lamb, Lennon, McKeon, O'Brien, Snow and Sullivan—14.

NAYS—Baker, Holden, Moxon, Shackley and Waterhouse—5.

Communications.

A communication was received from the Mayor in relation to the resolution passed by the Council on street lighting, stating that he had investigated the subject. The company claimed the arc lights were fully up to the 1200 candle power called for in the contract and produced evidence to that effect. The incandescent lights in his opinion were failures and did nor think it wise to use them although he thought the company were trying to keep them in good order. He was not prepared to give an opinion at this time as to the policy of changing from electric lighting to the use of gas or oil and did not see that any action could be taken by the Council at present to bring about a more efficient lighting of streets. The executive department was keeping the company up to its contract as well as possible. Placed on file.

A communication was also received from the Mayor, suggesting that the Council take some action on the disposal of the Hose houses in Wards Two and Four. To Committee on Public Buildings.

The Mayor also called attention to the Council that the Auditor had reported that the appropriation for interest was exhausted and recommending an appropriation of $2400. To Committee on Finance.

A communication was received from the Auditor, stating that the appropriation for interest and Public Burial places was exhausted. To Committee on Finance.

An application for State Aid was received from Mary A. Whicher. To Committee on State Aid.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Assessors asking for the transfer of $125 from salary of assessor for Ward Two, to the following: $100 for books and $25 for clerical series. The Committee on Finance.

A communication was received from the Auditor asking if he should approve bills amounting to $6,593 55 for extras on the new High school. Laid on the table.

A communication was received from the Wollaston Park and Norfolk Downs Improvement association inclosing a resolved passed by said association that some immediate action be taken by the city toward the erection of a school house in that section. Laid on the table.

An application to sell gasolene was received from Robert R. Smith. To committee on licenses.

Councilman Lennon offered a petition of John Donovan and others, that the gutters on Walnut street from Hancock to Myrtle streets be paved and to provide suitable crossings to opposite side of Hancock street. To committee on streets.

A petition was received from F. H. Crane & Sons and others that, Liberty street between Water street and Town brook, Penn street from Liberty street to Quincy street, and Quincy street from Penn street to Liberty street be regraded. To committee on streets.

Norfolk Downs Hearing.

At 8 o'clock a hearing was given to the petitioners from Norfolk Downs for the acceptance of Billings, Faxon and Rawson roads, Holmes and Moscow streets and Glover avenue.

B. L. Bissell the agent of Wood, Harmon & Co., was the first speaker, and made an earnest plea for the acceptance of all the streets. He claimed the residents were entitled to this because of the taxes they paid. By reference to the assessors' books you will find that in 1889 the valuation of the territory comprising Wollaston Park was $64,500, and the amount of taxes derived therefrom $842.06. The valuation of the territory comprising Norfolk Downs in the same year of 1889 was $60,000, the amount of taxes derived therefrom being $720; a total of the valuation of the two $124,500, paying total taxes of $1562.06. This year's valuation of land at Wollaston Park and Norfolk Downs assessed to Wood, Harmon & Co. is $347,095, and the taxes on the same amount to $6108.52. The individual taxes on the same property to people who have purchased and built homes there will aggregate at least $500,000 more, The taxes derived from same are between $8,000 and $9,000, so that we have in 5 years increased according to the assessors' figures the value of the two properties from $124,500 in 1889, which paid total taxes of $1562, to a grand total of nearly $900,000, paying about $15,000 in taxes.

Other speakers in favor were John S. Blagdon, H. S. Barker, T. H. Kingston, Louis Rinn, H. E. Weymouth, President Brown of the Atlantic Land Company, S. E. Blanchard and Charles T. Marr. All were allowed the greatest freedom and the Council found that there were many other improvements besides streets which the district wanted, principally a school house.

Ex-Councilman Peter T. Fallon of West Quincy embraced the opportunity to deliver one of his amusing characteristic speeches. He was glad to see the Norfolk Downs people out in large numbers, and would like to see their streets accepted. But he knew residents for 50 years who did not live on accepted streets, and thought the Downs people were fortunate to have as good streets as they had. He was the heaviest teamster in the city and had carted many foundation stones there and had never got stuck. Many sections were clamoring for better streets. Under Republican administrations West Quincy had not expected much, but under the present Democratic administration it had expected considerable and got nothing. He had dropped $500 in taxes in the slot the other day and got nothing. Quarry street was the worst street in the State. He had broken 13 axles there this year.

The hearing closed at 8.30 and the order was recommended to the committee.

Other Reports.

The Committee on Water Supply reported an order for $400 for the rebuilding of a retaining wall on Willard street. Passed.

The same committee reported that orders 42 and 81 for specific extension of water mains ought not to pass. Accepted.

The Committee on Finance reported an order appropriating $800 additional for burial places. To second reading.

The applicants for licences were granted leave to withdraw. Also an applicant for State Aid.

New Orders.

Councilman Moxon reported an order appropriating $2400 as requested by Mayor for interest amount. To Committee on Finance.

Councilman Sullivan reported an order authoizring City Clerk to issue warrants for State election of Nov. 6, polls to remain open from 6 A. M. to 4 P. M. Adopted.

Councilman Johnson offered an order requesting the Commissioner of Public Works to repair Main street. Adopted.

The Second Round.

Councilmen Johnson moved to reconsider the rejection of the order granting transfer of sparring license, and spoke in favor.

The vote was reconsidered, and the order again came up for passage.

The license was rejected by vote of 12 to 7, not the necessary two thirds vote, viz :

YEAS—Adams, Babcock, Bigelow, Federhen, Holbrook, Johnson, Lamb, Lennon, McKeon, O'Brien, Snow and Sullivan—12.

NAYS—Anderson, Baker, Clark, Holden, Moxon, Shackley and Waterhouse—7.

Calendar.

These orders were passed.

Granting New England Telephone Co., a location on South and Washington streets.

Making appropriation of $2,500 for High school furnishings.

Making appropriation of $43 20 to rebate tax of Milne, Chalmers & Co.

Adjourned at 9 35 for one week.

Annual Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association Tuesday evening the following directors and officers were elected:

Directors for three years, B. F. Thomas, Cyrus F. Sherman, Reuben S. Elliott, George A. Sidelinger and Peter Dackers.

Everett S. Litchfield and Ernest D. Gourd were elected to fill vacancies caused by resignation of Fred E. Litchfield and Alex. Clark.

E. W. Branch was re-elected recording secretary and George W. Sidelinger treasurer.

Immediately following the annual meeting the Board of Directors met and re-elected T. Henry Wason president and Amos D. Alber vice-president.

The treasurer reported as follows:

Balance on hand Oct. 10, 1893,	$17 14
Received during the year,	$3,250 72
Expended during the year,	3,221 47
Balance,	$46 39
Indebtedness,	$1,385 20

Owing to the absence from the city of the chairman, the finance committee did not report the amount of the unpaid pledges, which will reduce the indebtedness.

The membership committee reported:— Total number of men, 270; total number of boys, 25.

Of these 130 have full privileges, 53 limited and 87 sustaining. The active membership is 109, associate 161.

The total attendance at the Sunday afternoon meetings was 2,376, an average of 46.

The total attendance at the boys' meeting was 1,132 for twenty five Sundays, an average of 45.

Three different Bible classes were carried on during parts of the year. The total attendance was 224. Total attendance at all religious meetings, including week of prayer for young men was 3,937. Eighteen young men expressed a determination to lead Christian lives. One has united with the church and others will follow.

The total attendance at six receptions and banquets was 1000, at free entertainments in room, 450; at paid entertainments, 400; total, 1850.

The average attendance at the congress was 18.

Eleven practical and educational talks were given, with a total attendance of 330.

At the close of the business, President Wason spoke of the work of the past year, mentioning the kindly spirit shown by all who have been asked to contribute, and a willingness to help when possible. He spoke particularly of Mr. Faxon's gift of $250, which was given on condition that a like sum be secured in memberships.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Association held its annual meeting Monday afternoon. The following officers and directors were elected for the ensuing year :

President,—Mrs. George A. Litchfield.
Vice President,—Mrs. T. B. Pollard.
Secretary,—Miss Carrie Hardwick.
Treasurer,—Mrs. Mary E. Sampson.

Directors,—Mrs. Rachel S. Hewitson, Mrs. E. W. Branch, Mrs. S. F. Newcomb, Mrs. H. E. C. Burns, Mrs. James F. Merrill, Mrs. O. C. Colton, Mrs. W. F. Cummings, Mrs. Ellen A. Sprague, Mrs. R. S. Elliott and Mrs. T. H. Wason.

After the business meeting Mrs. Wooster, of Winchester, gave a very interesting talk on auxiliary work and Miss Grace Isaac sang a solo very acceptably.

Following the annual meeting a reception was given to ladies in the rooms which were beautifully decorated. Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Theophilus King, assisted by the young ladies.

Mr Faxon to Have Custody.

Judge Barker in supreme court Friday, gave a decision for plaintiff in the habeas corpus case of Faxon vs. Carr. This was the case in which John L. Faxon seeks to obtain the custody of his daughter, Mary M. Faxon, who for several years has been living with her grandmother, Sarah J. F. Carr, of Quincy. The court gives the child to the father.

Mary is to attend a private school in Boston. The schoolmistress is to inform and communicate with Mrs. Carr and Mary's other relatives about the child, and the case is so left that an application may be made hereafter for a modification of this decree upon sufficient ground being shown.

The Swedish Fair.

The annual fair of the Swedish Lutheran church opened in Plumber's hall, Thursday evening with as large a crowd as the hall could hold and the prospects are that it will be a financial success. On the sides and end of the hall were a number of tables for the sale of useful and fancy articles, refreshments, etc , and the hall itself was very prettily trimmed.

The entertainment Thursday evening consisted of an address on harvest time by Rev. Mr. Johnson, a violin solo, with organ accompaniment, by Carl Kilstedt and Mrs. Anna Nelson, and music by the Swedish band.

The fair will be continued tonight and Saturday night.

Those in charge of the tables were:

Fancy table,—Mrs. C. F. Carlson, Miss Augusta Peterson, Miss Ida Pierson.

Wheel of fortune,—Robert Lofgren.

Refreshment table,—Miss Josephine Johnson.

Ice Cream table,—Miss Salma Rydén.

Coffee table,— Miss Bertha Nelson, Mrs. Andrew Peterson.

District Court, Quincy.

Thomas Moore, Jr., of Randolph was arraigned for maliciously discharging a fire arm at a car of the Brockton & Randolph street railway and held in $300 for his appearance Oct. 31.

Sunday afternoon a covered carriage drove alongside of the car and discharged a gun loaded with buck shot at the car. Liquor Officer Knights was on the front platform of the car and it was at first thought that an attempt had been made on his life, but investigation showed that such was not the case, but simply a freak of a drunken gunner.

Thomas J. Franklin was fined $8 for discharging a firearm at the public reservation.

Frank Cleary, Patrick Shea and Edward Spillane of Weymouth were fined $5 each for disturbing the peace.

John Harris of West Quincy was sent to the House of Correction for 40 days for drunkenness.

Thomas O'Donnell of Quincy was arraigned for drunkenness and was fined $5.

William Coucher of Braintree was arraigned for disturbing the peace and was discharged.

Ernico Salla of Quincy was fined $20 for assault on Joseph Bartley.

Frank Patsie, John Kavonio and Michael Spovrrio were fined $5 each for the larceny of produce valued at 70 cents from George C. Glover of Braintree.

Representative Convention.

The Democratic Representative convention for the fifth Norfolk district was held at the Democratic headquarters in the Adams building, Saturday night, 31 delegates being present.

William F. Powers was elected chairman of the convention and Walter B. Wilson secretary.

Herbert M. Federhen, Jr., was nominated by acclamation as one of the candidates.

William B. Orcutt and John A. Duggan were then placed in nomination as the second candidate.

A ballot was taken which resulted in William B. Orcutt receiving the nomination.

The Weymouth delegation then came in and the nominations of Quincy and Weymouth were ratified, viz: Herbert M. Federhen, Jr. and William B. Orcutt of Quincy and Minot Tirrell of Weymouth.

A Western Drama Presented

"Crawford's Claim," a drama in three acts with a prologue, was given at Hancock hall Wednesday and Thursday nights

The members of the company who presented the play performed their parts in a creditable manner and elicited continuous applause from the large audience present. The play itself abounded with humorous and pathetic situations, while a number of pistol and bowie knife encounters gave it a genuine Western flavor. Miss Sadie Smith who acted the part of "Nugget Nell," is deserving of special mention, and her faithful rendition of her part was noticeable throughout the play. Mr. Edward Donavan, as Sing Sing, was excellent, and his impersonation of the giddy Chinaman brought down the house. The other members without exception performed their parts in an excellent manner and are deserving of great praise. During the first act the inimitable "Billy" Kingstree appeared in cowboy costume and sang several songs which won for him unbounded applause.

Necktie Party.

A very successful apron and necktie party was held in Doble's hall Thursday evening under the auspices of Merry Mount lodge, I. O. G. T.

The first part of the evening was given up to an entertainment of a very pleasing nature in which Mr. Frank Gilbert was heard in a piano solo; Miss Porterfield in some of her pleasing readings; Miss Bowen in a contralto solo, that called forth a well deserved encore; Mr. Gragg in a banjo solo; Messrs. Souther and Metcalf in a mandolin and piano duet; Mr. Knight in two of his popular solos; and Messrs. White, Chute and Fuller in a mandolin and guitar trio.

After the entertainment the young men put on the neckties they had purchased and hunted up the young lady who wore the apron corresponding with it, whom they were supposed to invite to partake of refreshments. The remainder of the evening was given up to social enjoyment.

Republican caucuses were held throughout the city Saturday evening, for the choice of delegates to a special county convention.

Ely—French.

The Universalist church, Hyannis, was the scene of a brilliant wedding on Thursday last, the contracting parties being Miss Marion Rebecca French, daughter of Mr. J. H. French, Supt. of the Cape Cod Division, N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., and Mr. Lester Hallett Ely, son of Mr. E. B. Ely, president of the Coxe Brothers Coal Mining Corporation of New York. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George L. Wheeler of Bridgewater. The maid of honor was Miss Leona E. French sister of the bride, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Lamkin of Boston. The best man was Mr. G. J. Hearne of Wheeling, W. Va, and the ushers were Mr. Charles W. Gearhart, N. Y., Mr. Edward L. Eagleston and Mr. William J. Hallett of Hyannis.

The bride was richly attired in ivory satin, cut en traine and handsomely fashioned, and trimmed with costly lace. She wore a veil of tulle fastened with lilies of the valley, and carried a boquet of white bridal roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception to relatives and immediate friends was held at the home of the bride.

After the reception the bridal party took the afternoon train in a special car for Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Ely will reside at Bayonne City, N. J.

Among the well known people present were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Howard and Miss Howard of Wollaston.

Manchester—Dell.

No. 11 Filbert street, West Quincy, was the scene of a pretty wedding Tuesday evening, when Miss Lillie Zoe Dell was united in marriage to Mr. Harry E Manchester of Fall River, the ceremony being performed by Rev. E. W. Virgin, pastor of the West Quincy Methodist church.

Mr. Peter Laurandeau of West Quincy, was best man, and Miss Priscilla Bertrand of Rockport, was bridesmaid. Mr. Stanley Tibbetts of Brockton, and Mr. Eli Bertrand of West Quincy, officiated as ushers.

The bride was gowned in a pearl gray satin, and a tulle veil, the dress being trimmed with point lace. Brides roses and smilax were worn on the hair and she also wore the same flowers on the corsage.

The bridesmaid wore a yellow cashmere and had a corsage bouquet of brides roses and smilax.

A wedding supper was served after the ceremony which was followed by dancing.

After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Manchester will reside at No. 11 Filbert street, West Quincy.

Guests were present from Quincy, Fall River, Weymouth and Brockton.

The Quarry Land.

The hearing before the auditors, Messrs. Williams, Gray and Capen, to determine the value of the land of the Quincy Quarry Company taken by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners for the Blue Hills reservation, continues daily in Boston.

The commissioners before the present petition for damages was brought offered to pay the company $7000 for the land. Now the company has put on a number of witnesses who severally estimate the property's value at from $66,000 to $113,000. The assessed value is said to be about $6000, but the plaintiff claims the property is of great value for quarrying purposes.

Hon. E. C Bumpus appears for the plaintiff; Hon. W. S. B. Hopkins and Balch & Rackeman for the commonwealth.

The Butcher Boy of Braintree made a good record at the Peabody muster, Thursday but seven tubs did better and there were only six prizes. Her play was 191 feet 7 7 8 inches.

The Political Field.

The special convention of the Republicans of Norfolk county for the purpose of nominating a candidate to fill the vacant term of John Q. A. Lothrop of Cohasset was held in Boston, Wednesday.

On the first ballot Thomas W. Blanchard of Soughton was nominated, he receiving 73 votes to 18 for William Walter Ewell of Quincy.

Number of votes cast	121
Necessary for a choice	61
Thomas B. Blanchard of Stoughton	73
William W. Ewell of Quincy	18
Ernest J. Eaton of Needham	11
Francis A. Bicknell of Weymouth	10
J. T. Southworth of Holbrook	9

The Democratic County convention was held at Dedham Wednesday morning and nominated H. E. Ruggles for County Commissioner. The convention did not make a nomination to fill the vacancy caused by the death of J. Q. A. Lothrop.

At the Democratic Second Councillor convention also held at Dedham, Bushrod Morse was nominated.

G. H. Cunningham and L. W. Cain of Weymouth have been nominated by the Prohibitionists for Representatives from this district.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Another Spoke in the Hub.

Quite a transformation has taken place at the corner of Washington and Beach streets, known as Fenno's corner. Messrs. McManus & Co. the new proprietors have made radical changes in the appearance of the premises. The entrance formerly on Washington street, has been changed to the corner giving them an expensive glass frontings. This firm will carry a complete line of men's and boy's clothing, furnishings, hats and shoes and bids fair to be one of Boston's most popular business houses.

Rev. Ira D. Morrison was installed as pastor of the First and Third Universalist parishes of Weymouth on Thursday last, Oct. 18, at the church at the Landing.

The Kind That Cures

Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Female Complaints, Nervous Prostration, La Grippe, Blood, Nerve, Kidney, or Skin Troubles.

Dyspepsia Cured.

MRS. CHAS. VILLIERS, of SOUTH BRAINTREE, MASS., suffered with acute Dyspepsia, constant Sick Headache and Vomiting. Nothing brought her relief. She finally tried DANA'S; it CURED her. Her words are, "I felt a great deal better before I finished one bottle. DANA'S CURED me, for I can now eat anything without distress; no more vomiting; no more Sick Headache."

Great Faith in Dana's.

MRS. MARY E. FREEMAN, of SOUTH FOXBORO, MASS., had great faith in DANA'S, and it was justified. She suffered greatly from Sores and Ulcers, from Impure Blood. DANA'S CURED her.

Tells his Friends to "Try DANA'S."

MR. WM. F. HUTCHINSON, of WOLLASTON, MASS., says that DANA'S is just what is claimed for it, and he has no hesitation in advising the afflicted to "Try DANA'S."

See that you get DANA'S.

Q. H. S. Alumni.

A PRELIMINARY meeting of the graduates of the Quincy High School will be held FRIDAY EVENING, Oct. 26, 1894, at 7.45, to effect a temporary organization of an Alumni Association, and possibly determine a date for a reunion, at which time a permanent organization may be made.

The meeting will be held at the new High School Building. A general invitation is extended to all graduates of the school to be present. Let it be a large gathering.

ACKOWLEDGED BY THE HIGHEST AUTHORITY.

IN THEIR 24th REPORT (1293)

make the statement that Sarsaparillas containing Iodide of Potassium are unsafe to use, excepting under the supervision of an experienced physician, and that their continued use tend to impoverish instead of purifying the blood. Also that in many cases they act as a DIRECT POISON, and cause serious trouble, defeating the object for which they are taken.

ALL THE LEADING SARSAPARILLAS were analyzed and found to contain this poisonous chemical in various quantities, EXCEPTING ALLEN'S, which was found entirely free from Iodide of Potassium or other chemicals, and to be purely vegetable, thereby verifying our claim that it is the "HONEST KIND."

This is an unprejudiced statement made by the most scientific body of men in New England as A WARNING TO THE PUBLIC against the use of dangerous and injurious medicines, ALLEN'S is the HONEST KIND, the safe kind, and the kind that CONQUERS DISEASE.

Physicians and druggists unite in its recommendation.

The Poppies in the Corn.

When the mist in pearly columns
 Rises o'er the hilltops gray,
And the dews of early dawning
 In the grasses melt away,
Then the sun in softened splendor
 Sheds his first rays through the morn,
Lo, they kiss the sleepy faces
  Of the poppies in the corn.

O'er the scene there falls a silence,
 All the twittering song-birds still;
As the lark his far flight taking
 Circles toward the distant hill,
Up and upward, flies triumphant,
 Earth bred warbler, heaven-born,
Till a song steals down from cloudland
  O'er the poppies in the corn.

Slowly comes the hush of noontide,
 Not a leaf sways on the trees,
Not a dewdrop on the grasses,
 Not a whisper of a breeze,
Glows the sun in scorching fury,
 One wee butterfly forlorn,
Panting, falls in dying struggles
  On the poppies in the corn.

Soft a breeze comes rustling over,
 Sighing through the cedars tall,
Stirs the grapes in hanging clusters
 On the mold'ring vine-clad wall,
Sinks the sun in amber glory,
 Dies the day as night is born,
One wee star peeps through the twilight
  At the poppies in the corn.

Maud E. Kendrick.

Notes and Comments.

—John Copeland of West Bridgewater raised one thousand beans from one single plant this season.

The paper stockings now being manufactured in Germany are said to be a great preventive of colds.

—There are but thirty-eight taxpayers in Norwell who pay a tax of $50 or over. Only three go above $200.

—The Hingham Cemetery Corporation is laying about 750 feet of iron pipe for the use of water in the care of the grounds.

—The fourth annual dinner of the Massachusetts Republican club will take place at Music hall, Boston, Wednesday evening, Oct. 24.

—The authorities of Newton have placed waste barrels near all the barber shops in town, as the board of health has established a rule that shavings, sawdust, etc., shall not be swept into the street.

—Miss Alice Thompson of Weymouth saw a runaway horse fall on Grant street, and at once seated herself on the animal's head, remaining until help arrived and the occupants of the carriage were rescued from danger. There's a subject worthy of a master sculptor!

—Rockland is meeting with good luck. A tannery business is to be located there at once, and Rice & Hutchins, the well-known shoe manufacturers, are talking of starting a branch there. Another lot has been purchased, upon which it is said a shoe factory will be built.

—It has been recently ascertained that "cockles," or whelks, are first-class bait for trawls, for the reason that dogfish will not touch them, while cod, haddock and halibut take them eagerly. Whelks are very plentiful on the flats in Plymouth harbor, and bring 40 cents a bucket; and many men and boys are busy daily gathering the shell fish.

—"Quick, mamma, I's 'most gone," was the imploring cry that the mother of a Rockland two-year-old heard, and hurrying to his rescue she found her little boy suspended in the furnace pipe, hanging by his arms, which were extended above the floor. The little fellow got "'most gone" by first removing the grated iron cover of the pipe, and so becoming registered 19 years earlier than is usual.

—George M. Stockman of Philadelphia has just received from congress a medal of honor for gallantry in leading the forlorn hope upon Vicksburg, May 22, 1863. "He was then," says the Philadelphia Record, "a young lieutenant, and with 350 other daring soldiers volunteered to lead the way. Besides encountering a destructive fire from sharpshooters, the enemy loaded shells with short-time fuses and rolled them down the works with terrible effect. Of the few who survived the assault the lieutenant was one, and he was seriously wounded. The remains of the others were exposed within the Confederate lines for several days until they were buried under the protection of a flag of truce."

Please accept my thanks for the lovely Orange Spoon. I like IVORINE exceedingly, and think the Toilet Soap that comes in each package is alone worth the price of the whole package. Mrs. A. J. HARDY, Providence, R. I.

Address the J. B. WILLIAMS CO., Glastonbury, Ct. PREMIUM DEPARTMENT.

Queen Victoria has taken 447 prizes at English cattle shows for products of her stock farm.

—The next Washington monument will be reared on the site of the house in which the Father of His Country was born at Wakefield, Westmoreland County, Va.

Gen. William Booth, of the Salvation Army, who has arrived in America, is about sixty-six years of age, and is as active and vigorous as many men of thirty.

—The tropical and sub-tropical plants were taken up last week from the Boston public gardens.

—No state election result will command greater or more general interest than that in Colorado where women are to vote on an equality with men for the first time.

—L. S. Phipps of Clarmont, Mass., raised 500 bushels of potatoes this year, and has sold 400 bushels at 60 cents a bushel.

—Mr. Abner Bridges of West Brookfield, Mass., has picked from a single tree 20 barrels of first quality apples and six bushels of small ones.

—If "The Greater New York" materializes to the extent hoped for by the advocates of consolidation by annexation, the city will have very nearly three million inhabitants, and an area of rather more than 317 square miles.

—The shipment of California fruit to England this season has been highly successful. On a recent trip from New York the steamship Paris carried 6,716 packages of excellent California fruit, consisting of 5,518 boxes of pears, 508 boxes of plums, 688 boxes of peaches, and two crates of grapes, the largest consignment of California fruit ever intrusted to one ship. The fruit arrived in admirable condition.

Boston Stage.

Boston Theatre.

"In Old Kentucky" is the name of the latest play which bears the proud distinction of having made a great New York hit, having run nearly the entire season at the big Academy of Music, New York, to very large audiences. It is described as being a very elaborate production, and will be seen at the Boston Theatre beginning Monday night, Oct. 22, with all the original scenery. The story is described as intensely dramatic from the beginning to the end, never flagging in its energy of movement nor lacking in interest. Its chief claim to consideration is probably its novelty, however, and the skilful introduction of original bits of southern life.

Boston Museum.

Prince Pro Tem continues to be popular at the Museum. Almost every night the capacity of the house has been taxed and the bright opera has been received with even greater marks of favor than ever before. It is a piece that seems to prove more attractive on repetition. A new feature has been introduced. It is termed "The Fogain Blackbirds in a Midnight Gambol." This is an entirely new and original specialty, unlike anything that has ever been presented on the Boston stage and created a sensation. There are eight dancers in the specialty, several of whom have been in the famous "pickaninnies." While the opera has unquestionably caught the popular fancy, the management is determined to keep the production up-to-date, and hence the new feature is added.

Columbia Theatre.

One of the events of the season will be the presentation of "Sowing the Wind" at the Columbia, Monday, October 22, by Charles Froham's company, headed by J. H. Gilmour and Mary Hampton. It comes to us with the prestige of two hundred nights at the Empire Theatre, New York; one hundred nights in Chicago, and several weeks in San Francisco. It is nearing the six hundredth night in London. Apart from its beauty as a play, the powerful dramatic situations that it offers and the charming pictorial treatment which is given to it, there is just now much public interest in the "sex against sex" question which the dramatist had made his theme. Mr. Grundy's clean and vigorous handling of this theme has made it possible for all fashionable people to listen to the discussion.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The Cotton King" now running at the Bowdoin Square theatre is strikingly unlike many English melodramas, which are of such artificial calibre, and so filled with glaring improbabilities and impossibilities, that their success in America is out of the question. They have been tried and they have failed. This has been the case time and again. When Manager Brady was abroad last spring he witnessed a production of "The Cotton King," the great London success then holding the boards at the Adelphi Theatre, the home of melodrama. His judgment dictated that here was a good thing for his countrymen, and he secured the American rights. It is presented in super shape at the Bowdoin Square theatre and it is attracting audiences limited only by the capacity of the house. Matinees are given on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The engagement of Daniel Frohman's Lyceum Theatre company here, which will continue throughout the coming week at the Hollis Street Theatre, is of interest to all theatre-goers. But few of them have not heard of this standard New York organization, and many have seen them either in their home theatre in New York or in some one of the half dozen cities only which they visit in their annual early autumn tours. The novelty which it has offered Boston at this time is "The Amazons," which was the most pronounced success of the New York season, and which during its long run at the Lyceum Theatre, there, received the most unqualified commendation of both press and public as a model play and production. All the original New York cast and every particle of the original scenery is carried on tour by the company for this visit.

Anecdotes.

Mudge—"I was looking over my topcoat today, and I find that the moths have nearly ruined it."

Yabsley—"Why don't you sue them for damages?"

Mudge—"Sue the moths for damages? You talk like a child."

Yabsley—"I didn't mean the moths; I meant the pawnbrokers."—Indianapolis Journal.

"Charlie," said Maude, "papa doesn't like you, because he says you're extravagant in your dress."

"Well, just tell your father I haven't paid a tailor's bill in two years," retorted Chappie.—Truth.

Employer—"You have asked for an increase of salary, but I have been thinking of taking you into the firm. In that case would you want the increase of salary, too?"

Clerk—"Oh, no; under such circumstances I should be rigidly opposed to any increase in our running expenses."—Truth.

Mrs. Mullins (reading the newspaper)—"A Philadelphia man rejoices in the name of Medyevny Garezynskiego."

Mr. Mullins—"I don't believe it."

"You don't believe that is his right name?"

"No; I don't believe he rejoices in it."—Life.

Paskola

TRADE MARK.

A Flesh Forming Food

Artificially Digested.

To pale, thin and emaciated people: This food will make you fat, robust and strong. People who take it gain five and even ten pounds in a month. It stops the wasting in consumptive cases and causes them to become fleshy. Paskola is a far better than Cod Liver Oil, in this respect, without its repulsive taste. You can buy it at any drug store. Send your name to The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York, and get their interest-pamphlet.

Household Receipts.

OYSTER PIE. Line a buttered baking dish with pastry and place in it a layer of fine, large oysters. Rub two tablespoonsful of butter smooth with as much flour, and place small bits of it here and there on the oysters. Sprinkle with pepper and salt. Follow this with another layer of oysters, dotted with butter and seasoned as before. Continue this process until the dish is full. Pour in enough oyster liquor to fill the dish within an inch of the top, and cover all with a rich pastry. Bake until a delicate brown, rub over with a little butter or white of egg and serve hot.

FRIED BEETS. Boil a few beets until tender, then cut them in small, long pieces. Put them in a stew pan with a wineglass of wine or a teaspoonful of vinegar, the juice of one lemon, a pinch of sugar, a very little grated nutmeg, salt and pepper and two tablespoonfuls of soup stock or fresh butter. Put the sauce pan on the back of the range and let it simmer half an hour, stirring occasionally. Boiling the beats in soup is an improvement.

CREAM SALAD DRESSING. Mix half a tablespoonful each of salt and mustard with a tablespoonful of sugar. Add one egg slightly beaten, two and one-half tablepoonfuls of melted butter and three-quarters of a cupful of cream. Add slowly, to prevent separation, quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Cook over hot water until it thickens, strain and bottle. This is a delicious dressing and will be appreciated by those who cannot use an oil dressing.

SWEET POTATO CAKES. Boil until soft, then mash the potato and mix with a little butter and milk, enough to render it an easy matter to work up into cakes, stir in two eggs (unbeaten.) Now with well-floured hands form into cakes to be baked, or fried. Potatoes too small for other uses can be disposed of in this manner, and Irish potatoes or bread-crumbs softened in cold water may be mixed with the sweet potato when there is not enough of the latter; when these additions are made, use also a little salt and more butter.

BAKED COD FISH. Scald the fish; shred it very fine. Boil some potatoes; while hot put in a large lump of butter; mash them thoroughly, mix potatoes and fish together, and beat to a cream with a wooden spoon. Put the mixture into a pudding dish, butter the top and bake until nicely browned. Use one-third more potatoes than fish.

FEEDING THE BABY.

Much is written at the present day about the care and feeding of infants by people whose only capability for dealing with the subject is a fertile brain, and whose only aim is to appear in print; every mother knows how unsatisfactory and fallacious such advice is when she attempts to follow it. How to feed the baby is the greatest problem met with in the happy state of motherhood, and upon its solution depends the health, the happiness and the life of the child. If the mother is able to nurse her child, the question of feeding is practically settled; if she is not, she should be guided by those who have had successful experience in feeding babies and not allow herself to experiment with different foods. There are scores of artificial foods offered for sale, but the best is none too good for the baby. Eminent authorities who have thoroughly investigated the subject of infant feeding, and scientists who have analyzed infant foods, unite in pronouncing Mellin's Food to be the only perfect substitute for mother's milk. It is palatable, nourishing and strengthening; the weakest stomach will retain and digest it, and the puniest child will thrive upon it beyond the mother's fondest expectations.

For convalescents, consumptives, dyspeptics and the aged, Mellin's Food is also of incalculable value. It is a food, not a medicine, and the system receives the nourishment it demands for its daily needs. For those severely ill Mellin's Food will sustain the failing strength and promote a speedy recovery when convalescence has been established.

Law Enforcement.

Law is defined to be a rule of human conduct prescribed by the supreme power of the State, commanding what is right, and forbidding what is wrong. The expression of the vast machinery of government is simply law, its application and enforcement. Government itself is law, for the presence of law is government, and the absence of law is anarchy.

Man's only purpose in uniting and agreeing with his kind is for the protection and advantages which only a government of laws affords. That being the end and purpose of government, there can be no higher or more imperative duty than to apply and enforce the law. But the law itself is inanimate; it is only the means through which the machinery of the government works, and it must work, through the three great departments of the government, the legislative, the judicial and the executive. The first enacts, the second applies, and third executes. Each of these departments is either filled by a choice of a majority of the people, or that majority has not excercised their opportunity in the expression of their political ideas.

The laws are not, however, an expression of the political party, but are the unanimous voice of the people, for the majority is the will of all, and to the officials of the government there is given no option, but to enforce the mandates of the people, and failing to do so they are accountable to their masters, who you are.

Shawmut Spring.

THE Shawmut Spring is located at the base of a high hill near the Metropolitan Park reservation, on land owned by the undersigned.

This water has been in constant use by workmen from all the quarries in the vicinity, as well as residents of immediate surroundings, for fifty years at least.

Workmen and other persons have come from miles away to get water from this spring, while other springs and wells are very much nearer to them, thus showing their appreciation of this water.

The water is very cold in summer, and never freezes in winter.

The location being at the base of the hill, with nothing but trees and rocks above it, no wash from cultivated fields or other polluted ground can enter it.

The unsatisfactory waters we are compelled to drink, and the earnest solicitations of friends, induce me to offer this water to the public at a normal price, trusting that its merits will sustain the reputation with patrons that it now has with those who have long known it.

This water will be furnished to all patrons in such quantities as may be desired.

Water will be delivered at Six Cents per gallon for less than five gallons. Jugs or cases of five gallons at Five Cents per gallon.

Yours truly, F. J. FULLER.

West Quincy, July, 1894.

Having made use of Shawmut Spring water in my family, I take great pleasure in recommending it to others as superior in taste and purity to any other spring water I know of.

ONE WOMAN'S REWARD.

A GREAT SHOWER OF CONFIDENCE

Such as Never Descended upon Any Other American Woman.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

IT'S a glorious possession.

The most famous physician wins it from a comparatively small number.

One woman, and only one, has won it from tens of thousands during the past twenty years.

Loving confidences, heartfelt gratitude, loyal devotion, is showered upon her name because of salvation from a miserable existence, and the peace and joy of restored health through her wonderful skill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's name will go down the ages as the friend of all women.

Her Vegetable Compound has saved thousands from the terrors of female complaints.

Backache, despondency, fainting, spinal weakness, avoiding society, bearing down, are all symptoms of trouble in the womb.

The Vegetable Compound removes the cause of the trouble.

Read what Mrs. S. W. White, who lives at 816 Holly Street, West Philadelphia, Pa., calls a family blessing.

Thus she writes to Mrs. Pinkham:—

MRS. S. W. WHITE

"I have suffered for ten years with female complaints of the worst form, accompanied by severe spinal trouble, causing incessant backache, weakness of the stomach, and nervousness.

"I gave up all hope of ever being well again. Just then someone recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I followed your directions and treatment until I am now a perfectly well woman.

"I gave it to my two daughters, aged fourteen and sixteen years, and they are fine, healthy girls.

"It is surely a blessing to our family."

Music of the Pines.

BY RUTH BASSETT.

I sit within a grove of pines,
And listen idly unto
The music of the west wind's breath,
Asighing all the pine trees through.

A languor steals o'er heart and brain,
So soothingly in its calm embrace
That o'er my eyes the eye-lids fall,
And thoughts the present from me chase.

The future now looks strangely bright
By music brought before my eyes,
As slowly earth seems far away,
And angels flutter from the skies.

They seem to play a tender strain
Of Heaven, of peace, of good and love,
And all the while the golden cloud
Is drawing nearer from above.

My spirit soars away from care,
And for a space remains adrift
Upon a wave of scattered thoughts,
That ever surge and change and shift.

O tender music of the pines,
That bears my soul towards saintly things,
The song sung in your breathing sighs
Is like to that an angel sings.

Quincy, Mass.

Miscellany.

A TEST CASE.

The following story, I know, is not told as it ought to be told. I am a young woman writing about myself, I should begin thus: " The down train, Parliamentary, is starting from Reading. A girl who has been waiting on the platform trips along in search of a carriage. She is tall, slim, deeply veiled, yet admiring male passengers, looking back at her golden locks, get an impression of a blonde. Reader, that girl is myself—me, Rachel Brinton, M. D., spinster. I am travelling first-class.

The train, when I tried to enter it at Reading, was very full, and at last I did the best for myself that I could by getting into a first-class smoking carriage. Apparently it had but one occupant, and he, judging by an elaborate travelling bag, a pile of literature, a salmon rod in the rack, and other appliances of sport or comfort, was a wealthy and, probably, a young man. It was better to take my chance with the unknown than to wait for a couple of hours in Reading—a town famous chiefly for its biscuits. Besides, I had business on hand. So I settled myself down with an air of proprietorship, and, by way of discouraging familiarity, began to read the copy of "David Grieve" which I carried about for that purpose.

As I was drawing these and other inferences the guard came up and begging my pardon, assured me that the carriage was one destined for the consumers of tobacco. I replied that this was matter already within my knowledge. He next informed me that the carriage was "engaged," and that there was room for one in the compartment for ladies only. I made answer that I disliked a back seat, remote from the window, in a vehicle already occupied by three old maids, a nurse, a baby, a matron, a canary in a cage, a pug and a mongrel. The guard was still engaged in this controversy when the occupant of the one seat in the smoking carriage arrived. He was a young man of about twenty-eight, tall, dark, a gentleman, and in his hand he held a paper bag of buns and one of those little photographic cameras, at that time a favorite toy.

"I told the lady that the carriage was engaged, Sir Walter," said the guard, and when I heard the name of "Sir Walter I privately determined to stay where I was in spite of any effort to dislodge me.

The young man looked decidedly annoyed and murmured something to the guard, who had no time to answer, but sped to his post. Bells, whistles, flags, played their usual part, and the train slowly moved out, the stranger jumping in at the last moment.

I kept my eyes firmly fixed on "David Grieve." We passed one or two small stations, at which we stopped. He had been looking at me all the while in a respectful and even shy, but observant manner. We passed a third station. He looked at his watch; I looked at mine—it was 3.15. I felt that he was going to speak.

"Can you tell me the exact time?" he said. "I fear my watch is fast."

What could he want with the exact time?

"It is precisely seventeen minutes past three," I replied; "I set my watch by the station clock."

He thanked me, hesitated, and then left his seat at the opposite end of the carriage and sat down next me.

Then he hesitated again.

"I am extremely sorry, he said, "that I have unluckily been compelled to share your carriage."

I looked at him steadily, and his eyes fell, though he could see little of mine.

He blushed, smiled, and went on:—

"That is one of the things we wish we had expressed otherwise. I mean—I am sorry for your sake—"

I began to be uncomfortable, but merely looked inquiringly.

"I do implore you to believe that I am naturally the last person to want to—to make a lady the—partner in an unusual—adventure. It's horribly inconvenient," he said; "but I must first entreat you to credit my statement that, in spite of appearances, I am perfectly sane. It is only a kind of scientific experiment after all. But," he looked at his watch, "it is 3 45, I must begin. Would you mind just snapping the machine at me when I give the signal? I'll drop my handkerchief."

"With pleasure," I said, and waited for "developments of the situation."

He deliberately emptied his paper of buns, put the paper bag on his head, placed one whole bun in his mouth, took his handkerchief in his hand, and suspended himself by his feet from the rack for light luggage overhead. In this unconventional attitude he dropped the handkerchief, and I drew the trigger of the little photographic machine.

He instantly disengaged his feet from the rack, showing a good deal of agility. "I am more than ever obliged to you" he said. "You are quite certain that you are not frightened?"

"Not yet," I answered, and he began to undo his salmon rod from its cover and to fit in the joints. He then fixed on the reel and I ran the line through the rings. To do this and affix an angle minnow and cast to the end of the line, is no easy task in a railway carriage. Finally, he trolled out of the window of the rushing train as out of a boat, and by his request I again photographed him while thus engaged.

"There!" he said, when he had replaced the rod in its case; and, suddenly diving under the seat of the carriage, he sang "Charlie is My Darling" in a very sweet and effecting manner.

"There he went on, "that will do. I can never tell you how much I am obliged to you for not giving me into custody as a raving maniac.

We travelled together for only a quarter of an hour longer, and in that period he displayed no traces of what many would consider eccentricity. On getting out he bowed, and expressed a sincere wish that we might meet again in circumstances less unusual.

On reaching my destination at a place some dozen miles beyond that at which Sir Walter had alighted, I went in a cab to an obscure inn, where my luggage was awaiting me.

Here my own proceedings might, had there been an observer present, have seemed as eccentric as those of my late companion. I went to a bedroom, arranged a number of bottles and boxes taken from my dressing case on the table, changed my dress, provided myself with a kind of elegant jointed crutch from my trunk, and so arranged my appearance that she who had entered as an Englishwoman of light complexion emerged as a lady with dark hair, dark eyebrows, and a dusky skin, distinguished by a limp and an American accent. Rachel Brinton was now Mrs. Schuydam, the celebrated clairvoyant. Veiled and cloaked, Mrs. Schuydam paid her bill, and, taking another cab, drove to the nearest station on the line from London, about six miles from the town of X. Here I waited till the 5.45 train from town stopped at the little station, when a hand holding an umbrella out of the window of a carriage guided me to the compartment where my agent and hypnotist, Dr. Puygre, was waiting for me.

"Find out anything?" he said, as soon as the train started.

"A little," I said; enough for Schropff to work on."

Now Schropff was the name of my spirit of divination, who spoke through me when I was "in the trance state."

My present business was a test case. At the house of an old Mr. Lindsay, I, or rather Schropff, was to find out what an inquirer, unnamed had been doing at a particular hour on that very day. By private inquiries and inferences we had arrived at the conclusion that the inquirer unnamed was to be a certain Sir Walter Welbore, of the Barrow. I had run down, at very short notice, and in my own habit and aspect, to pry and spy about the Barrow. As the intelligent reader surmises, I had been lucky indeed, and had learned from the chance word of the railway guard quite as much of Sir Walter's performances as was necessary for my purpose.

Puygre was necessary to me, and he had more than once remarked that he "could give me away." But this liberality was less in his power than he supposed, for he knew me only as Mrs. Schuydam, and had no more idea that I was Rachel Brinton, than my mother had that Rachel Brinton, M. D., being destitute of patients, practiced divination as an American medium.

"Did you get into the mansion?" he asked. "I hear it is opened to the citizens on Tuesdays and Thursdays."

"I never went near the house," I said; "and now, here we are at X.," where, indeed, we stopped, and found Mr. Lindsay's carriage waiting to take us to his house, Ardley Court.

I had made Puygre bring evening dress—raiment against which his whole soul rose in Republican rebellion. We met in the drawing-room before dinner. There were about a dozen people present, and among them—Sir Walter! Our host himself led Mme. Schuydam, limping and gracefully using her crutch, into dinner.

I was introduced to nobody, and no names were mentioned; but I knew the professor and one or two others as old researchers. It was plain to me, from a dozen undesigned hints, that my railway companion was the person whose employment of his time was to be accounted for by Schropff. I knew that I was about to make a wonderful hit, that, success and advertisement were to be mine, and yet I did not feel elated. Sir Walter looked so thoroughly honorable; he had been so courteous; he was, in brief, so handsome, his manner so friendly, I had so enjoyed being myself, and being treated as myself while we travelled together, that Schropff and all his works and ways were hateful to me. "Why cannot I live with these people as one of themselves?" I asked, "and in the rank to which I was born?"

After dinner the men joined us soon. We were only three ladies—Old Mrs. Lindsay, the professor's sister (a hardened skeptic,) and myself.

Let me hurry on. Puygre, after talking a flood of nasal American nonsense about "currents," "influences," "percipients," and the rest, "hypnotized" me, and, after the usual "business," I went into "the trance condition," and began to talk gruffly and in a German accent. This was Schropff invoking thunder and lightning and asking what was required of him, which, of course, he ought to have known, if he knew anything."

"You are invited to say," read old Mr. Lindsay from a written paper prepared beforehand, and attested, "how the owner of this object" (here a New-Zealand ear ornament of jade was placed in my hand; I knew it by the feel) "was occupied between 3 45 and 4 45 to-day?"

"Something small and smooth; it is stone. it is pierced, it is green," grumbles Schropff. "Ach, it is foreign, an ornament; it is Maorisch, ja!"

That is Schropff's highly agreeable style of conversation. I suppress the German expletives, which he uses when annoyed.

Mrs. Lindsay—"Wonderful!"

The Professor—"Hush!"

All Schropff's remarks, be it noted, were taken down in shorthand for purposes of science.

Schropff—"I see something moving; it is large, it is oblong." (He pauses. Movements of expectation.) "It is a railway carriage!"

Mr. Lindsay—"Who, if any one, is in the railway carriage!"

Schropff—"I see a woman." (Titters from a young man of the class known as "Johnny.")

The Professor's Sister—"Hush!"

Schropff—"She is young, she is beautiful. What for do you laugh?" (Impressively.) She is nod the berson!"

The Johnny—"You bet!"

The Professor (in a whisper)—"Hush, sir"—(he mentions a name which I fail to catch.)

Schropff—"She is nod the berson. I see him coming in. He is angry. His luggage is here before. What is that in his hand? He has a bag in his hand. He takes out gakes out of the bag. He is going to eat the gakes? He puts the bag on his head. He hangs himself up by the heels. Oh, he will tumble down." (A wild explosion of laughter, clearly from the Johnny. They are all remonstrating with him. I hear him say: "But, my dear fellow, I was"—here he is suddenly silenced. I hear him being led to the romotest end of the long room; some one is whispering to him. I catch the word "must" and "honor bright," and chuckles, with more remonstrances.)

The Professor's Sister—"All this is very irregular."

Mr. Lindsay—"Go on, please, Dr. Schropff.

Schropff—"Then I see him take a bag out of the rack. It is a long, thin bag. He takes a stick out of the bag. There are several sticks. He joins them together. What for is this? He runs a piece of string along the stick. What does he do? I do not understand."

The Johnny—"Perhaps he's putting up a fishing rod." (he explodes, and is bottled)

The Professor—"Dr. Schropff while alive was not a sportsman, Perhaps the explanation just volunteered is correct."

Schropff—"He fastenes a leedle metal fisch to the string. Now he is fishing out of the window. He is a very foolish man. Now he gets under the seat of a railway carriage. Ach, I hear him sing; it is so as this:—

'Ach, Jarley is my darling!'

I see no more. I go away. Good night, the company."

Here Puygre went through the farce of awakening me from my trance.

Presently Mr. Lindsay came up, leading the young man whom I have permitted myself to speak of as the "Johnny."

"Dear Mrs. Schuydam," Mr. Lindsay remarks, "this is indeed a triumph! Skepticism is silenced at last. Dr. Schropff, you will be delighted to learn, correctly described the very unusual occupations which engaged Sir Walter Welbore today between 3.45 and 4 45 Permit me to present you to Sir Walter."

And he introduced me to the Johnny.

Somehow the rest of the evening went by. I withdrew as early as possible, pleading extreme fatigue. What had happened? Could two men have gone through the same insane performances? Were there two Sir Walters? Pugre, though puzzled, was radiant; but words cannot describe my own perplexed anxieties.

Next day Mrs. Schuydam breakfasted in her own room, and took leave of her host and hostess in the most unassuming manner. At the station Puygre was about to enter my carriage, when Sir Walter—my friend, I mean; not the genuine Sir Walter—spoke a few words to him on the platform, and Puygre, with a white face, told me that he would travel in a smoking carriage. My companion of the day before entered mine, got me a newspaper, procured another for himself, and read it till we were well on our way. This time we were travelling by a fast train. I asked a few of the questions which an intelligent American traveller might be expected to ask; he answered as well he might, and then producing a pocket handkerchief, he presented it to me, saying, "You dropped this yesterday when I got out."

Now, the handkerchief was marked, in a very legible hand, "Rachel Brinton." When one has a double personality, one cannot be too careful as to how one's double set of things is marked. I was reflecting on this, when he said:—

"Perhaps I am not mistaken in thinking that you would like some explanation of what occurred last night?"

"What did occur?" I asked. "I only saw that you all seemed satisfied with Dr. Schropff; but you know I am only a sleeping partner, and have no idea of what Dr. Schropff may have been revealing."

He looked steadily at me, and I felt that Mme. Schuydam was blushing through her dusky complexion. I could keep it up no longer.

"I am at your mercy," I said. "What are you going to do? Why did you not expose me last night?"

"It is not my business," he said, "to expose people. I wish you would let me be your friend. * * * I am not speaking to Mrs. Schuydam; I am speaking to the lady with whom I travelled yesterday.

"Nobody shall ever speak to Mrs. Schuydam again as long as I live," I said; and I threw that lady's crutch out of the window of the railway carriage; and I suppose I exhibited other signs of emotion, for he seemed deeply interested in the landscape on the other side.

"Do you really mean that?" he asked, after a long pause.

"Yes, whatever happens. Mrs. Schuydam is dead; my name is Rachel Brinton."

"Then, Miss Brinton, I am delighted to explain what occurred. I had often been at Mrs. Schuydam's seances; I was going to attend that of last night, and when you spoke at reading I recognized your voice. Your Pennsylvanian accent is not bad, but I never thought it was genuine. I detected you as I said, and when the guard called me 'Sir Walter' I saw your expression change, and I knew you took me for Walter Welbore, and had spotted him as your 'subject.' Now, I am called Sir Walter Bethune, and I was on my way to visit Welbore and go with him to the Lindsays. So I played those antics. Afterward, I arranged with Welbore that he should pretend that Dr. Schropff was correct in his revelations. To oblige me (for I once did him a good turn) he consented, but he laughed dreadfully during the performance and nearly spoiled the whole affair."

"And what had Sir Walter Welbore been doing?" I inquired with a natural curiosity.

"Counting his pairs of boots and reading Ruff's Guide to the Turf. Mrs. Schuydam might, I mean, Dr. Schropff might, almost have guessed."

"And why?" I asked, "did you let me off when you had such a chance of exposing Mrs. Schuydam?"

"Do not let us argue about motives," he said, "nor speak ill of the dead; Mrs. Schuydam is dead, you know."

And, indeed, he managed so well and arranged matters so cleverly at Westbourne Park station, that when Puygre got to Paddington no Mrs. Schuydam was to be discovered. Nay, not a trace of that lady has been found to this day. After Schropff most remarkable triumph, the woman who had that spirit of divination vanished utterly, to the extreme bewilderment of the Society for Psychical Research. Some incline to believe that she was disintegrated; others aver that she is to be looked for in Thibet; but no one recognizes her in Lady Bethune.—W. Laidlaw Peel, in Longman's Magazine.

The Queen's Railway Carriages.

The Queen's two railway saloons for continental journeys, which are the private property of her majesty, are kept in Brussels to be placed at the disposal of the Empress Frederick when she comes to England in September.

These carriages, which are connected by a passage, are fitted with electric bells, and lighted with oil lamps, as the Queen does not like the electric light for reading and writing.

The day saloon is furnished with sofas, arm-chairs and various kinds of footstools all covered in blue silk with fringes and tassels of yellow; the walls are hung with blue and pearl-gray silk brocaded with the rose, shamrock and thistle in yellow.

There is a writing table of walnut wood, two small tables, and one on which meals are served during the journey. The floor is covered with an Indian carpet of dark blue, and the curtains are blue and white.

There is a separate compartment in front for the Queen's Highland attendant, Francis Clark, successor to John Brown. The night saloon is a larger carriage divided into several compartments.

The dressing room is decorated in the Japanese style, and the floor is covered with bamboo. There is a white metal bath and toilet service. The large basins on the washstand, which is covered with dark red morocco, are of the same material,

The bedroom is decorated in gray and light brown, and contains two beds. The larger one is occupied by the Queen, the smaller by Princess Beatrice.

There is another compartment in which is stowed the luggage needed by the Queen during a journey, and the two maids who occupy it sleep on sofas.—Edmund Yates, in New York Tribune.

Figs as Food.

One of the Persian kings caused the celebrated Attic figs to be set before him whenever he dined, for one reason, to remind him that the land where they grew was not yet his and that, instead of receiving the fruit as a tribute, he was obliged to buy it from abroad; and, for another, that it was not only the emblem of health, but the most wholesome of fruit grown. The fig is now pretty well known to be, especially at certain seasons, almost the common food of the Italian people; and for months they may be said to live entirely upon them.

When eaten fresh, it is a medicine as well as food; and they who eat them freely need no potions and no aperients. Full of nutrition and all those properties that make it valuble as an article of diet, we are confinent that the fig will take a prominent position in the estimation of all who work for and believe in food reform. For myself, I would simply add that, again and again, without liquid of any kind, the luscious green fig, eaten with whole meal bread, has formed a dish at once simple but rich, and, like the Spaniard's salad, fit for a king.

The fig is not only very popular, but it is the most ancient fruit we cultivate. In many countries the failure of this crop also means starvation and famine. Travelers in Asia Minor and southern Europe provide themselves with figs and olives, as provisions for long journeys, and not only live, but grow fat on the diet. The fig has more medicinal properties and more nutriment than any other fruit with the exception of the olive.—Chicago Interior.

Children's Teeth.

The first teeth have a very considerable effect upon the second, and therefore when the little one begins to eat something besides milk, he should have cereals which are rich in the bone-making elements. Sugar and candies are bad for the baby's teeth, as well as for his digestion. A tiny tooth brush, soft and pliant, should be used by the small child, and the least decay should be warrant for calling on the dentist. To lose one of the first teeth prematurely is a pity. When the second or permanent teeth appear, care must be exercised that they are not crowded, and that they come in evenly. Let the dentist see the child at least twice a year, and oftener if there is need. In this way disfigurement and subsequent pain will be avoided.

Medicines which may blacken the teeth or injure the enamel should be taken through a glass tube. No care is too great if intelligently bestowed upon the teeth of little children. Toothache is a malady that no child need suffer from if the right amount of attention is bestowed on the growing teeth during the first eight years of life. Here, at least, the minimum of pain can be secured by watchfulness. Avoid dentrifices and pain-killing drops alike, and keep the teeth in order, thus preserving health and good looks.—Harper's Bazar.

Waxing Bed-Ticking.

A curious contrivance to prevent the fluff of down pillows penetrating the ticking comes from England. It consists in simply waxing the inside of the ticks before they are filled with the down. Most of the manufacturers of cheap down pillows fail not only to use a firm, good quality of ticking, but substitute a muslin which is altogether too soft and sheer for the purpose.

They do this for the specious reason that their pillows appear thus more delicate in structure, and are consequently more salable. It is possible to make up elder down in this light muslin, as it holds together by its nature, and does not shed off particles that float about in the air. If the inside of the muslin case be thorough rubbed with wax, it would stiffen it some extent, but it is said to remedy trouble caused by the protrusion of feathers. Simply turn the ticks side outward before filling them, piece of beeswax slightly and straight lines following each the tick. When the entire waxed, fill it and sew up the Music of the Pines.

BY RUTH BASSETT.

I sit within a grove of pines,
And listen idly unto
The music of the west wind's breath,
Asighing all the pine trees through.

A languor steals o'er heart and brain,
So soothingly in its calm embrace
That o'er my eyes the eye-lids fall,
And thoughts the present from me chase.

The future now looks strangely bright
By music brought before my eyes,
As slowly earth seems far away,
And angels flutter from the skies.

They seem to play a tender strain
Of Heaven, of peace, of good and love,
And all the while the golden cloud
Is drawing nearer from above.

My spirit soars away from care,
And for a space remains adrift
Upon a wave of scattered thoughts,
That ever surge and change and shift.

O tender music of the pines,
That bears my soul towards saintly things,
The song sung in your breathing sighs
Is like to that an angel sings.

Quincy, Mass.

Miscellany.

A TEST CASE.

The following story, I know, is not told as it ought to be told. I am a young woman writing about myself, I should begin thus: " The down train, Parliamentary, is starting from Reading, A girl who has been waiting on the platform trips along in search of a carriage. She is tall, slim, deeply veiled, yet admiring male passengers, looking back at her golden locks, get an impression of a blonde. Reader, that girl is myself—me, Rachel Brinton, M. D , spinster. I am travelling first-class.

The train, when I tried to enter it at Reading, was very full, and at last I did the best for myself that I could by getting into a first-class smoking carriage. Apparently it had but one occupant, and he, judging by an elaborate travelling bag, a pile of literature, a salmon rod in the rack, and other appliances of sport or comfort, was a wealthy and, probably, a young man. It was better to take my chance with the unknown than to wait for a couple of hours in Reading—a town famous chiefly for its biscuits. Besides, I had business on hand. So I settled myself down with an air of proprietorship, and, by way of discouraging familiarity, began to read the copy of " David Grieve" which I carried about for that purpose.

As I was drawing these and other inferences the guard came up and begging my pardon, assured me that the carriage was one destined for the consumers of tobacco. I replied that this was matter already within my knowledge. He next informed me that the carriage was "engaged," and that there was room for one in the compartment for ladies only. I made answer that I disliked a back seat, remote from the window, in a vehicle already occupied by three old maids, a nurse, a baby, a matron, a canary in a cage, a pug and a mongrel. The guard was still engaged in this controversy when the occupant of the one seat in the smoking carriage arrived. He was a young man of about twenty-eight, tall, dark, a gentleman, and in his hand he held a paper bag of buns and one of those little photographic cameras, at that time a favorite toy.

" I told the lady that the carriage was engaged, Sir Walter," said the guard, and when I heard the name of " Sir Walter I privately determined to stay where I was in spite of any effort to dislodge me.

The young man looked decidedly annoyed and murmured something to the guard, who had no time to answer, but sped to his post. Bells, whistles, flags, played their usual part, and the train slowly moved out, the stranger jumping in at the last moment.

I kept my eyes firmly fixed on " David Grieve." We passed one or two small stations, at which we stopped. He had been looking at me all the while in a respectful and even shy, but observant manner. We passed a third station. He looked at his watch; I looked at mine—it was 3.15. I felt that he was going to speak.

" Can you tell me the exact time ?" he said. " I fear my watch is fast."

What could he want with the exact time ?

" It is precisely seventeen minutes past three," I replied; " I set my watch by the station clock."

He thanked me, hesitated, and then left his seat at the opposite end of the carriage and sat down next me.

Then he hesitated again.

" I am extremely sorry, he said, " that I have unluckily been compelled to share your carriage."

I looked at him steadily, and his eyes fell, though he could see little of mine.

He blushed, smiled, and went on:—

" That is one of the things we wish we had expressed otherwise. I mean—I am sorry for your sake—"

I began to be uncomfortable, but merely looked inquiringly.

" I do implore you to believe that I am naturally the last person to want to—to make a lady the—partner in an unusual—adventure. It's horribly inconvenient," he said; " but I must first entreat you to credit my statement that, in spite of appearances, I am perfectly sane. It is only a kind of scientific experiment after all. But," he looked at his watch, " it is 3.45, I must begin. Would you mind just snapping the machine at me when I give the signal? I'll drop my handkerchief."

" With pleasure," I said, and waited for " developments of the situation."

He deliberately emptied his paper of buns, put the paper bag on his head, placed one whole bun in his mouth, took his handkerchief in his hand, and suspended himself by his feet from the rack for light luggage overhead. In this unconventional attitude he dropped the handkerchief, and I drew the trigger of the little photographic machine.

He instantly disengaged his feet from the rack, showing a good deal of agility. " I am more than ever obliged to you" he said. " You are quite certain that you are not frightened ?"

" Not yet," I answered, and he began to undo his salmon rod from its cover and to fit in the joints. He then fixed on the reel and I ran the line through the rings. To do this and affix an angle minnow and cast to the end of the line, is no easy task in a railway carriage. Finally, he trolled out of the window of the rushing train as out of a boat, and by his request I again photographed him while thus engaged.

" There!" he said, when he had replaced the rod in its case: and, suddenly diving under the seat of the carriage, he sang " Charlie is My Darling" in a very sweet and effecting manner.

" There he went on, " that will do. I can never tell you how much I am obliged to you for not giving me into custody as a raving maniac.

We travelled together for only a quarter of an hour longer, and in that period he displayed no traces of what many would consider eccentricity. On getting out he bowed, and expressed a sincere wish that we might meet again in circumstances less unusual.

On reaching my destination at a place some dozen miles beyond that at which Sir Walter had alighted, I went in a cab to an obscure inn, where my luggage was awaiting me.

Here my own proceedings might, had there been an observer present, have seemed as eccentric as those of my late companion. I went to a bedroom, arranged a number of bottles and boxes taken from my dressing case on the table, changed my dress, provided myself with a kind of elegant jointed crutch from my trunk, and so arranged my appearance that she who had entered as an Englishwoman of light complexion emerged as a lady with dark hair, dark eyebrows, and a dusky skin, distinguished by a limp and an American accent. Rachel Brinton was now Mrs. Schuydam, the celebrated clairvoyant. Veiled and cloaked, Mrs. Schuydam paid her bill, and, taking another cab, drove to the nearest station on the line from London, about six miles from the town of X. Here I waited till the 5.45 train from town stopped at the little station, when a hand holding an umbrella out of the window of a carriage guided me to the compartment where my agent and hypnotist, Dr. Puygre, was waiting for me.

" Find out anything ?" he said, as soon as the train started.

" A little," I said; enough for Schropff to work on."

Now Schropff was the name of my spirit of divination, who spoke through me when I was " in the trance state."

My present business was a test case. At the house of an old Mr. Lindsay, I, or rather Schropff, was to find out what an inquirer, unnamed had been doing at a particular hour on that very day. By private inquiries and inferences we had arrived at the conclusion that the inquirer unnamed was to be a certain Sir Walter Welbore, of the Barrow. I had run down, at very short notice, and in my own habit and aspect, to pry and spy about the Barrow. As the intelligent reader surmises, I had been lucky indeed, and had learned from the chance word of the railway guard quite as much of Sir Walter's performances as was necessary for my purpose.

Puygre was necessary to me, and he had more than once remarked that he " could give me away." But this liberality was less in his power than he supposed, for he knew me only as Mrs. Schuydam, and had no more idea that I was Rachel Brinton, than my mother had that Rachel Brinton, M. D., being destitute of patients, practiced divination as an American medium.

" Did you get into the mansion ?" he asked. " I hear it is opened to the citizens on Tuesdays and Thursdays."

" I never went near the house," I said; " and now, here we are at X.," where, indeed, we stopped, and found Mr. Lindsay's carriage waiting to take us to his house, Ardley Court.

I had made Puygre bring evening dress—raiment against which his whole soul rose in Republican rebellion. We met in the drawing-room before dinner. There were about a dozen people present, and among them—Sir Walter! Our host himself led Mme. Schuydam, limping and gracefully using her crutch, into dinner.

I was introduced to nobody, and no names were mentioned; but I knew the professor and one or two others as old researchers. It was plain to me, from a dozen undesigned hints, that my railway companion was the person whose employment of his time was to be accounted for by Schropff. I knew that I was about to make a wonderful hit, that, success and advertisement were to be mine, and yet I did not feel elated. Sir Walter looked so thoroughly honorable; he had been so courteous; he was, in brief, so handsome, his manner so friendly, I had so enjoyed being myself, and being treated as myself while we travelled together, that Schropff and all his works and ways were hateful to me. " Why cannot I live with these people as one of themselves ?" I asked, " and in the rank to which I was born ?"

After dinner the men joined us soon. We were only three ladies—Old Mrs. Lindsay, the professor's sister (a hardened skeptic,) and myself.

Let me hurry on. Puygre, after talking a flood of nasal American nonsense about " currents," " influences," " percipients," and the rest, " hypnotized " me, and, after the usual " business," I went into " the trance condition," and began to talk gruffly and in a German accent. This was Schropff invoking thunder and lightning and asking what was required of him, which, of course, he ought to have known, if he knew anything."

" You are invited to say," read old Mr. Lindsay from a written paper prepared beforehand, and attested, " how the owner of this object " (here a New-Zealand ear ornament of jade was placed in my hand; I knew it by the feel) " was occupied between 3 45 and 4 45 to-day ?"

"Something small and smooth; it is stone. it is pierced, it is green," grumbles Schropff. " Ach, it is foreign, an ornament; it is Maorisch, ja!"

That is Schropff's highly agreeable style of conversation. I suppress the German expletives, which he uses when annoyed.

Mrs. Lindsay—" Wonderful !"

The Professor—" Hush !"

All Schropff's remarks, be it noted, were taken down in shorthand for purposes of science.

Schropff—" I see something moving; it is large, it is oblong." (He pauses. Movements of expectation.) " It is a railway carriage !"

Mr. Lindsay—" Who, if any one, is in the railway carriage !"

Schropff—" I see a woman." (Titters from a young man of the class known as " Johnny.")

The Professor's Sister—" Hush !"

Schropff—" She is young, she is beautiful. What for do you laugh ?" (Impressively.) She is nod the berson !"

The Johnny—" You bet !"

The Professor (in a whisper)—" Hush, sir "—(he mentions a name which I fail to catch.)

Schropff—" She is nod the berson. I see him coming in. He is angry. His luggage is here before. What is that in his hand ? He has a bag in his hand. He takes out gakes out of the bag. He is going to eat the gakes ? He puts the bag on his head. He hangs himself up by the heels. Oh, he will tumble down." (A wild explosion of laughter, clearly from the Johnny. They are all remonstrating with him. I hear him say: " But, my dear fellow, I was "—here he is suddenly silenced. I hear him being led to the romotest end of the long room; some one is whispering to him. I catch the word " must " and " honor bright," and chuckles, with more remonstrances.)

The Professor's Sister—"All this is very irregular."

Mr. Lindsay—" Go on, please, Dr. Schropff.

Schropff—"Then I see him take a bag out of the rack. It is a long, thin bag. He takes a stick out of the bag. There are several sticks. He joins them together. What for is this ? He runs a piece of string along the stick. What does he do ? I do not understand."

The Johnny—" Perhaps he's putting up a fishing rod." (he explodes, and is bottled)

The Professor—" Dr. Schropff while alive was not a sportsman, Perhaps the explanation just volunteered is correct."

Schropff—" He fastenes a leedle metal fisch to the string. Now he is fishing out of the window. He is a very foolish man. Now he gets under the seat of a railway carriage. Ach, I hear him sing; it is so as this:—

' Ach, Jarley is my darling !'

I see no more. I go away. Good night, the company."

Here Puygre went through the farce of awakening me from my trance.

Presently Mr. Lindsay came up, leading the young man whom I have permitted myself to speak of as the " Johnny."

" Dear Mrs. Schuydam," Mr. Lindsay remarks, " this is indeed a triumph ! Skepticism is silenced at last. Dr. Schropff, you will be delighted to learn, correctly described the very unusual occupations which engaged Sir Walter Welbore today between 3.45 and 4 45 Permit me to present you to Sir Walter."

And he introduced me to the Johnny.

Somehow the rest of the evening went by. I withdrew as early as possible, pleading extreme fatigue. What had happened ? Could two men have gone through the same insane performances ? Were there two Sir Walters ? Pugre, though puzzled, was radiant; but words cannot describe my own perplexed anxieties.

Next day Mrs. Schuydam breakfasted in her own room, and took leave of her host and hostess in the most unassuming manner. At the station Puygre was about to enter my carriage, when Sir Walter—my friend, I mean; not the genuine Sir Walter—spoke a few words to him on the platform, and Puygre, with a white face, told me that he would travel in a smoking carriage. My companion of the day before entered mine, got me a newspaper, procured another for himself, and read it till we were well on our way. This time we were travelling by a fast train. I asked a few of the questions which an intelligent American traveller might be expected to ask; he answered as well he might, and then producing a pocket handkerchief, he presented it to me, saying, " You dropped this yesterday when I got out."

Now, the handkerchief was marked, in a very legible hand, " Rachel Brinton." When one has a double personality, one cannot be too careful as to how one's double set of things is marked. I was reflecting on this, when he said:—

" Perhaps I am not mistaken in thinking that you would like some explanation of what occurred last night ?"

" What did occur ?" I asked. " I only saw that you all seemed satisfied with Dr. Schropff; but you know I am only a sleeping partner, and have no idea of what Dr. Schropff may have been revealing."

He looked steadily at me, and I felt that Mme. Schuydam was blushing through her dusky complexion. I could keep it up no longer.

" I am at your mercy," I said. " What are you going to do ? Why did you not expose me last night ?"

" It is not my business," he said, " to expose people. I wish you would let me be your friend. * * * I am not speaking to Mrs. Schuydam; I am speaking to the lady with whom I travelled yesterday.

"Nobody shall ever speak to Mrs. Schuydam again as long as I live," I said; and I threw that lady's crutch out of the window of the railway carriage; and I suppose I exhibited other signs of emotion, for he seemed deeply interested in the landscape on the other side.

" Do you really mean that ?" he asked, after a long pause.

" Yes, whatever happens. Mrs. Schuydam is dead; my name is Rachel Brinton."

" Then, Miss Brinton, I am delighted to explain what occurred. I had often been at Mrs. Schuydam's seances; I was going to attend that of last night, and when you spoke at reading I recognized your voice. Your Pennsylvanian accent is not bad, but I never thought it was genuine. I detected you as I said, and when the guard called me 'Sir Walter' I saw your expression change, and I knew you took me for Walter Welbore, and had spotted him as your 'subject.' Now, I am called Sir Walter Bethune, and I was on my way to visit Welbore and go with him to the Lindsays. So I played those antics. Afterward, I arranged with Welbore that he should pretend that Dr. Schropff was correct in his revelations. To oblige me (for I once did him a good turn) he consented, but he laughed dreadfully during the performance and nearly spoiled the whole affair."

"And what had Sir Walter Welbore been doing ?" I inquired with a natural curiosity.

" Counting his pairs of boots and reading Ruff's Guide to the Turf. Mrs. Schuydam might, I mean, Dr. Schropff might, almost have guessed."

"And why ?" I asked, " did you let me off when you had such a chance of exposing Mrs. Schuydam ?"

" Do not let us argue about motives," he said, " nor speak ill of the dead; Mrs. Schuydam is dead, you know."

And, indeed, he managed so well and arranged matters so cleverly at Westbourne Park station, that when Puygre got to Paddington no Mrs. Schuydam was to be discovered. Nay, not a trace of that lady has been found to this day. After Schropff most remarkable triumph, the woman who had that spirit of divination vanished utterly, to the extreme bewilderment of the Society for Psychical Research. Some incline to believe that she was disintegrated; others aver that she is to be looked for in Thibet; but no one recognizes her in Lady Bethune.—W. Laidlaw Peel, in Longman's Magazine.

The Queen's Railway Carriages.

The Queen's two railway saloons for continental journeys, which are the private property of her majesty, are kept in Brussels to be placed at the disposal of the Empress Frederick when she comes to England in September.

These carriages, which are connected by a passage, are fitted with electric bells, and lighted with oil lamps, as the Queen does not like the electric light for reading and writing.

The day saloon is furnished with sofas, arm-chairs and various kinds of footstools all covered in blue silk with fringes and tassels of yellow; the walls are hung with blue and pearl-gray silk brocaded with the rose, shamrock and thistle in yellow.

There is a writing table of walnut wood, two small tables, and one on which meals are served during the journey. The floor is covered with an Indian carpet of dark blue, and the curtains are blue and white.

There is a separate compartment in front for the Queen's Highland attendant, Francis Clark, successor to John Brown. The night saloon is a larger carriage divided into several compartments.

The dressing room is decorated in the Japanese style, and the floor is covered with bamboo. There is a white metal bath and toilet service. The large basins on the washstand, which is covered with dark red morocco, are of the same material,

The bedroom is decorated in gray and light brown, and contains two beds. The larger one is occupied by the Queen, the smaller by Princess Beatrice.

There is another compartment in which is stowed the luggage needed by the Queen during a journey, and the two maids who occupy it sleep on sofas.—Edmund Yates, in New York Tribune.

Figs as Food.

One of the Persian kings caused the celebrated Attic figs to be set before him whenever he dined, for one reason, to remind him that the land where they grew was not yet his and that, instead of receiving the fruit as a tribute, he was obliged to buy it from abroad; and, for another, that it was not only the emblem of health, but the most wholesome of fruit grown. The fig is now pretty well known to be, especially at certain seasons, almost the common food of the Italian people; and for months they may be said to live entirely upon them.

When eaten fresh, it is a medicine as well as food; and they who eat them freely need no potions and no aperients. Full of nutrition and all those properties that make it valuble as an article of diet, we are confinent that the fig will take a prominent position in the estimation of all who work for and believe in food reform. For myself, I would simply add that, again and again, without liquid of any kind, the luscious green fig, eaten with whole meal bread, has formed a dish at once simple but rich, and, like the Spaniard's salad, fit for a king.

The fig is not only very popular, but it is the most ancient fruit we cultivate. In many countries the failure of this crop also means starvation and famine. Travelers in Asia Minor and southern Europe provide themselves with figs and olives, as provisions for long journeys, and not only live, but grow fat on the diet. The fig has more medicinal properties and more nutriment than any other fruit with the exception of the olive.—Chicago Interior.

Children's Teeth.

The first teeth have a very considerable effect upon the second, and therefore when the little one begins to eat something besides milk, he should have cereals which are rich in the bone-making elements. Sugar and candies are bad for the baby's teeth, as well as for his digestion. A tiny tooth brush, soft and pliant, should be used by the small child, and the least decay should be warrant for calling on the dentist. To lose one of the first teeth prematurely is a pity. When the second or permanent teeth appear, care must be exercised that they are not crowded, and that they come in evenly. Let the dentist see the child at least twice a year, and oftener if there is need. In this way disfigurement and subsequent pain will be avoided.

Medicines which may blacken the teeth or injure the enamel should be taken through a glass tube. No care is too great if intelligently bestowed upon the teeth of little children. Toothache is a malady that no child need suffer from if the right amount of attention is bestowed on the growing teeth during the first eight years of life. Here, at least, the minimum of pain can be secured by watchfulness. Avoid dentrifices and pain-killing drops alike, and keep the teeth in order, thus preserving health and good looks.—Harper's Bazar.

Waxing Bed-Ticking.

A curious contrivance to prevent the fluff of down pillows penetrating the ticking comes from England. It consists in simply waxing the inside of the ticks before they are filled with the down. Most of the manufacturers of cheap down pillows fail not only to use a firm, good quality of ticking, but substitute a muslin which is altogether too soft and sheer for the purpose.

They do this for the specious reason that their pillows appear thus more delicate in structure, and are consequently more salable. It is possible to make up elder down in this light muslin, as it holds together by its nature, and does not shed off particles that float about in the air. If the inside of the muslin case be thoroughly rubbed with wax, it would stiffen it to some extent, but it is said to remedy all trouble caused by the protrusion of the feathers. Simply turn the ticks wrong side outward before filling them, warm a piece of beeswax slightly and rub it in straight lines following each other over the tick. When the entire surface is waxed, fill it and sew up the tick.—Ex.

SATURDAY, OCT. 27, 1894.

Church Dedication.

The opening services of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church of Wollaston was held on Thursday evening. Notwithstanding the severe storm there was a large audience present.

The society started in a modest way, but its number increased so rapidly that the present edifice, which was formally consecrated to the worship of God on Tuesday evening, was projected and the corner stone was laid on June 12 of this year by the Rt. Rev. William Lawrence. D. D., bishop of the diocese of Massachusetts.

The site upon which the edifice stands, bounded by Hancock and Linden streets, was given for the purpose by the Taylor heirs.

The style of the new church is the old English. It was built by Mr. George E. Thomas from plans drawn by Mr. I. Howland Jones of Wollaston. It is in appearance simplicity personified. The entire absence of anything like showy features and florid architecture in the design is pleasing. The picturesqueness of the structure at once attracts attention. A sense of its beauty grows upon one on examination of the building from an architectural point of view with its shingles left to mellow with age, its quaint little spire surmounted by a wrought iron cross and its old fashioned leaded window panes.

But the interior is equally as pleasing with its high girdered roof, having the timbers left in the rough to give an antique appearance to the auditorium. The walls harmonize with a soft fawn tint.

The auditorium is 25 feet by 80 feet and has a seating capacity of 200. The pews were made by J. J. McNutt of Boston and are of cypress. At the easterly end of the church a wing, 12 feet by 27 feet, extends towards the south. This contains the sacristy and the stairs to the vestry.

The chancel rail and choir seats are of cypress and the altar, which was a present from the Church of the Advent of Boston, is of solid mahogany surmounted with a massive slab of marble.

The pipe organ was made by Hook & Hastings.

The building is lighted throughout by electricity and heated by furnaces.

The opening service was the regular Episcopal service. Bishop Lawrence was assisted by the Rev. Alden Bennett of Waltham, who acted as priest in place of the Rev. Walter R. Breed, rector of Christ's church of Quincy, who was unable to be present, and also by James B. Thomas of the Harvard Theological school, who acted as deacon. The music was directed by Mr. George W. Stover, and Miss Eloise P. Flood was the organist.

Bishop Lawrence's address was wholly informal, as he expressed it, it was simply a "talk." He extended the congratulations of the diocese to the society on the completion of its edifice and the holding of the first service. The end of the building, said he, is the beginning of the upbuilding of this church. He told briefly the early history of the Episcopal church and showed how it was the church of our ancestors, and why it was here. First, because we turn back to the religion and forms of our fathers; second, because of its simplicity of doctrine and creed; and lastly because of its historic associations and continuity.

In concluding the Bishop said that if this church is to live it must think of Christ first and the church last.

At the conclusion of the service Bishop Lawrence held an informal reception.

Granite News.

Swithin Bros., John and Thomas, are hustlers in their line and a look into their yards shows that they are rushing business. They have a number of monuments ready for shipment. They have forwarded this week a large monument to Danville, Conn., and another to Salem, the latter being the largest in the cemetery.

Alexander Marnock is getting out some fine work in foreign granite.

A western agent was in town Tuesday and placed a number of orders for medium-priced monuments.

Elcock & Sons have recently shipped three monuments to New York parties.

T. F. Mannix have recently completed a large monument of dark blue Quincy surmounted by a statue of the Sacred Heart, eight feet high.

William T. Spargo has recently completed two monuments for the battlefield of Antietam. One marks the advance position of the 8th Connecticut Volunteer Infantry on Sept. 17, 1864, and the other was for the 11th Connecticut.

Contractor Williams is erecting a new polishing shed 100 feet long, with a monitor roof, for John Nason at South Quincy, which will join his present shop and inclose the railroad derrick and yard.

Granite manufacturers whose works are near the main line of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. at South Quincy, have a great advantage over those firms that are situated further off, for many of those located near the railroad have a spurr track running into their yards. For instance take the yards of Swingle & Falconer they have a spur track and cars are run into their yards directly beneath the derrick, so that they can be loaded or unloaded with but little expense.

F. Wesley Fuller has made application for a patent for improvements in machines for grinding and polishing spherical bodies. He has made a grand success of it in polishing granite balls.

The dedication of the memorial stone, erected to the memory of the Revolutionary soldiers buried in old Fort cemetery, East Concord, N. H., will occur on Monday, Oct. 29, at 2 P. M. The stone of polished Quincy granite, furnished by the Granite railway company, of Quincy and Concord, and appropriately inscribed, weighs three tons, and is set in the cemetery wall, being probably the most elaborate and complete memorial of the kind in the State.—Globe.

The Hospital Aid.

Eighteen members braved the northeast storm, Thursday afternoon, to attend the monthly meeting of the Hospital Aid association, which proved a very interesting one. During the last month sixty-three needed articles have been made for the use of the hospital.

The association is grateful to Mr. Mitchell for upholstering a large chair for the hospital, free of expense, and to Mrs. A. B. Spear for making seventy-two large button-holes in dressing-gowns for the patients. Money is a great necessity in the maintenance of our hospital, but there are certain things which the hands must do, and all assistance in that direction is of equal importance, and quite as acceptable.

At the close of the meeting, Hon. W. B. Rice addressed the ladies, stating that the hospital sadly needed money to carry on its good work, and urged them to make even more strenuous efforts to raise money. When the hospital was new, people were filled with interest and every one helped it along, but the ardor has been allowed to cool, and money has not flowed in so freely.

The O. C. R. R., after the accident, agreed to support a free bed, which they did till it changed to the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., but that income has now been withdrawn. So an appeal is again made to the people to raise money for the hospital's support.

It is easy to criticise, and we can always find plans, but we must bear in mind many a poor sufferer has been healed and sent home with a grateful heart, and received the care and attention impossible even in the best regulated homes.

And so let us commend, and not condemn the good work and "lend a hand."

CITY BRIEFS.

New moon next Sunday.

Evening schools will open next Monday evening.

Read F. J. Fuller's new "ad" of Shawmut spring water.

Naturalization of aliens still goes on at the District court.

The sun rises after six o'clock and sets before five o'clock.

Don't do it! If you cannot send your name with a news item, don't forward the item. We must know the author.

Joseph N. Page has moved from Foster street to the house off Chestnut street, recently occupied by George T. Waldron.

The City Council has met every Monday evening thus far this month, and another meeting will be held next Monday evening

Mrs. J. E. Odom has just returned from a three weeks' sojourn among relatives and friends in her native town, Bucksport, Me.

Miss Brackett, clerk of the board of assessors, has taken a number of fine photographs of the Merry Mount yacht club under sail.

A new code of signals and lights for steam and sailing vessels has been adopted by the government, which will go into effect March 1, 1895.

"A Cleaner rather than a Greater Boston" was the subject of a sermon by Rev. Walter Calley at the Baptist Temple in Boston Sunday afternoon.

The name of Christopher A. Spear has been mentioned as a Republican candidate for mayor at the next municipal election. A very desirable candidate.

Miss Ethel Randall, daughter of Mr. Walter S. Randall of Bigelow street, entertained a few of her young lady friends Monday afternoon, her birthday.

Some very pretty windows have been placed in the new house of C. Theodore Hardwick on Chestnut street. They are something new and attract attention.

Mr. O'Brien, the obliging and popular clerk at Souther's periodical store, who has been sick for two weeks, has so far recovered that he is able to be at the store once more.

The naturalization of aliens at the District Court still goes on, but the larger part of those now going through the mill come from other places in the district than Quincy.

In grading about the new residence of Mr. C. Theodore Hardwick on Chestnut street, Tuesday, W. H. Bennett found an old American cent of 1802, which is a valuable coin.

The Quincy Cycle club is a thing of the past, the club room having been closed and the members scattered, several having joined the Wollaston club, which is in a flourishing condition.

The portraits of the directors of the new Quincy Quarry Railroad company are going the rounds. The Monumental News used them in the October issue with due credit to the DAILY LEDGER.

Milton's new "hurry up" wagon is in service, but as yet the public have not had an opportunity to use it. This is what Quincy needs, and the police of this city would have plenty of opportunities to use it.

Mr. Samuel Crane, who has been quite sick with typhoid fever, is able to be out once more; still he has not got the strength he had previous to his sickness. It is nine weeks since he has been to Boston to look after his business.

The Quincy Cooperative bank is continuing in its steadfast line of growth. At a recent meeting of the directors a semi-annual dividend of 3½ per cent. was declared. Shares in twelfth series are now on sale at the secretary's office.

The Quincy & Boston street railway is making ready for winter in earnest. The big electric snow plow is being repainted and new motors put in and several of the cars used on the long routes are also being equipped with new and powerful motors.

The third degree team of Mt. Wollaston lodge worked the degree Tuesday evening upon four candidates in the presence of a large attendance of brethren and visitors from John Hancock and other lodges. Music was furnished by brothers of Crescent lodge which added greatly to the degree.

The altar at the Universalist church was very handsomely decorated Sunday with plants, flowers and fruit. The rich beautiful flowers, very prettily tinted, mixed with bright green leaves and fruit, made an attractive picture. An able and appropriate sermon was delivered by Rev. A. E. White, the pastor.

Sunday about a dozen boys entered a church with the avowed purpose of breaking up the prayer meeting. With long suffering and forbearance the good usher employed conciliatory means only. This failing, exeunt. Have the parents and public school teachers done their utmost to teach those lads the principles of etiquette, public and private?

Merry Mount lodge, A. O. U. W., held a rousing meeting Tuesday evening, it being the last meeting of the lodge in its present quarters in Faxon hall. Hereafter meetings will be held in Wilson's hall. After the business of the meeting had been transacted the brothers partook of a collation. The next meeting will be held in Wilson's hall, Nov. 13, which will be in the nature of a housewarming.

Few trades are favored as is the granite industry and workers of Quincy. Each winter the city supports free evening schools, both for the common branches and for instruction in drawing with special reference to drafting for stone work, and this year the Young Men's Christian Association has opened industrial educational classes, which instruct in monumental drafting, clay modeling and free hand drawing and designing. The city evening school will be opened next Monday in the commodious new High school building.

Upon Tuesday evening, October 30, 1894, comes the annual dinner of the Adams Academy Alumni association, at the Parker house, Boston. A full attendance of all past members of the school, whether belonging to the association or not, is desired. Every graduate should be present, as the annual dinner affords the great and almost only opportunity for the graduates to meet together and renew old friendships. It is the desire of the committee to make the dinner a great success, and the only way to do so is to have the hearty co-operation of every past member of the school. Every man counts, and the absence of everyone tells.

Considerable rain is needed yet.

Rev. Mr. Breed is in New York city.

Miss Hubbard has the banner bargain.

M. W. Frolund has moved into his new house on Apthorp street.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement in another column of a fine stereopticon lecture in the Universalist church.

An amendment to the constitution will be voted upon at the State election, relative to commissioners of insolvency. The idea is to abolish the election by the people.

Parents of those pupils at the High school who are compelled to be absent on account of illness, will confer a great favor by promptly informing the head master of the illness of the pupil and the probable length of the absence.

"Quincy's Young Men," the new Y. M. C. A. monthly, is a newsy little sheet "devoted to the best interests of young men." The Quincy Association is a busy one working on many lines and Secretary Colton finds no difficulty in filling its pages with matters of local interest, and active members will prize every issue.

Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur attended on Wednesday the 74th birthday anniversary of her grandmother, Mrs. S. F. Bunker, at Hotel Oxford, Boston. She was accompanied by Mr. Blackmur and son Paul and four generations were represented. Mrs. Bunker is 74 years old and was the recipient of many beautiful presents and floral offerings.

The many friends of Dr. Padula will be glad to learn that he is now regularly established in Quincy, at his residence at the corner of School and Summer streets, where he will receive patients afternoon and evenings. Much as his departure will be regretted by his friends of Neponset, it will be compensated by the hearty welcome extended to him by the large number of friends he has hitherto made in Quincy.

One of the largest and handsomest displays of chrysanthemums seen this year is that at the conservatory of James Nicol on Coddington street. Mr. Nicol has given up the whole of one side of his hot house to these flowers and he has hundreds of them in bloom. All the rare varieties are shown and some of the blossoms are very large, measuring ten inches across. A visit to his hot houses will well repay one for the time spent.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Miss Isie Souden was tendered a surprise party at her residence 125 Water street, on Thursday evening, by a number of her many friends, during the evening they presented her with a handsome accordion. Games were held and dancing until a late hour. Rossi's Orchestra furnished the music.

The two new box cars of the Quincy & Boston street railway arrived at South Quincy Friday morning.

Ten of South Quincy's Scotchmen leave today for the old, country where they will spend the winter. Among the ten is Robert Johnson, the famous centre of the Boston Association football eleven.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. John W. Mitchell of South Quincy, last Sunday. "Jack" now wears a broad smile.

The body of Mr. John Lillicrap of this city, who died in Joliet, Ill., Oct. 17, of typhoid fever, arrived in Quincy Monday, and was interred in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

A very fine entertainment under the auspices of the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor, No. 1, was given at Hancock hall, on Thursday evening, by Prof. George W. Blish.

The South Quincy Base Ball club held a social dance at Hancock hall Friday Oct. 19. During the evening there was a prize waltz for two gold medals, which were won by Mr. Frank Smith and Miss Sarah McHugh. Hanson's orchestra furnished music, and the floor was in charge of Charles Purdey, assisted by John McIntosh, George Ingraham, Michael Deady, James E. Bienie, Charles Prowsa, John Pirrivna and George Guston.

The Purity Washed Currant Co. has moved from the Doble building on Water street to the building near the railroad track off Penn street.

A boy named McDougal was accidentally run over on School street, Tuesday, and received quite a bad cut on the head. It is a wonder that more children are not injured here at school time.

Mr. Patrick Fay was surprised Thursday evening at his home on Penn street. Mr. Greeno in behalf of his many friends presented him with a handsome easy chair. Supper was served and dancing and games followed.

Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor had a largely attended meeting Tuesday evening; over seventy ladies were present. After the business was finished, a few kindly gave a short dramatic play, entitled: "A love of a Bonnet," which was highly appreciated.

Six candidates from South Quincy were baptized at Neponset last week by Pastor Hunt of Calvary Baptist church.

Mr. William Clements, a member of the Calvary Baptist church and of the last class of the Newton Theological Institution has been called to the pastorate of the Baptist church at Wells Depot, Maine, and will be ordained in a few weeks.

Rev. William Steele, by request, will conduct services in Wilson's hall, Hancock street, on Sunday next at 10.30 A. M. Subject: "Christian Liberty." Evening service at 7 o'clock, Subject: "The Creation." Take Nos. 5 and 6 hymn books.

Miss Annie Hayes, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hayes, died at home on Mt. Pleasant, Oct. 19, after a lingering illness. Miss Hayes was a young lady posseseed of many noble qualities and virtues, and throughout her long illness and sufferings she evinced a resignation and meekness characteristic of a true Christian.

—Columbia bicycles will sell for $100 in 1895.

WOLLASTON.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be on Friday Nov. 2d, at 3 P. M. in the Baptist church.

The incandescent lights on Brook street, Wollaston, have been of such diminished candle power the past two months that some of the residents talk strongly of petitioning the city to replace them with gas lights. When this thoroughfare was first lighted with incandescent lights the lamps were of high candle power, but about two months ago these lamps were replaced with those of an inferior quality giving a light of about one-half the candle power of the old lamps, thus leaving Brook street and those streets which intersect it, in almost total darkness.

The Duck's Nest, Wollaston, narrowly escaped being burnt out on Saturday evening. A large central draft lamp which is suspended over one of the alleys was jarred from the hook which holds it to the ceiling by the dropping of a heavy weight on the floor above. The lamp came down with a crash, the burning oil spreading in all directions. The blaze was extinguished in a few minutes. The alleys were not damaged.

And now the Wollaston Unitarian church has been disfigured by some youthful vandals. Some boys cut characters on the heavy outside church door.

Ralph J. Saxe of Wollaston, representing the shoe firm of Marcy Bros. & Co., of Hartford, Conn., is at present on his regular tour of the south-western states, going by the way of Denver, Col.

At the Sunday mornings service at the Wollaston Congregational church the Rev. V. A. Cooper, superintendent of the New England Home for Little Wanderers, spoke in behalf of that worthy institution. A choir of little children from the home sang several selections. A collection was taken up in aid of the cause and netted $103.

The first harvest concert of the season at Wollaston was given by the Unitarian society on Sunday afternoon. The church was prettily decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. The subject was "Flowers, or God in Vegetable Nature." There was singing by the Sunday School and selections pertinent to the subject were spoken by Mr. Wallace Bennett, Miss Myra Brown, Mr. Percy A. Hull, Mr. Clifton F. Baker, Miss Eugenia M. Hatch, Mr. Nathaniel A. Thayer and Miss Ernestine M. Litchfield.

Mrs. John H. Litchfield, Jr., spoke very interestingly on the subject, illustrating her remarks with crayon drawings of flowers and leaves. The Rev. James E. Bagley closed the concert with a brief address.

The Whatsoever Ten, King's Daughters of Wollaston, will give an entertainment in the vestry of the Unitarian church on Tuesday evening.

A. G. Olney has caught in the act, the boys who have been breaking windows in one of his vacant houses, and he proposes to make an example of them.

The Wollaston Congregational society will give the first entertainment in its course on the evening of Nov. 1.

Mrs. Ralph J. Saxe of Wollaston will be at Medford for a few weeks.

Mrs. Haynes of Wollaston has moved into the house with her daughter, Mrs. Walter Coombs, on Hamilton street.

The monthly business meeting of the Epworth League of Wollaston will be held in the vestry of the Methodist Episcopal church on Thursday evening, Nov. 1.

The Ladies' Social Circle of the Methodist Episcopal church of Wollaston held its monthly business meeting on Monday evening. Arrangements were made for a harvest supper to be given on Thursday evening, Nov. 8.

The new bowling alleys at the Duck's Nest, Wollaston, will be ready for use on Thursday evening, Nov. 1. Steward Williams will have a formal opening on that evening.

Wollaston news will be found in nearly every column of the inside pages today.

The religious services for Sunday are grouped together in another column.

QUINCY POINT.

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Newcomb and Miss A. F. Newcomb were in the party of Sons of the American Revolution at Plymouth, Oct. 19. There was a banquet at the Samoset House.

The Washington Street Congregational society has arranged with Herbert Johnson to give one of his popular concerts in the church Nov. 15.

Mr. Joseph L. Whiton of Quincy Point entertained many friends Saturday evening on the occasion of his fiftieth birthday.

Postmaster Burke is alert for the interests of the people at Quincy Point whom he now serves by the free delivery. He announces that on Nov. 1, a stamp agency will be established at the store of Miss Freeman. This with the delivery will give the people good accommodations and the delivery will grow in favor.

Miss E. M. Freeman has returned from her trip to Brooklyn, N. Y.

Hose Co. No. 4 has not moved into its new quarters as yet, but expects to this week.

There was a sociable and entertainment at the Washington Street Congregational church Thursday evening.

The steam yacht Marie is one of the few boats that have not been hauled out of the water as yet. Capt. Taylor believes in sailing in his pretty yacht as long as possible.

Superintendent Lull is quick to grasp all new ideas which promise better results in our public schools and for two weeks a new system has been in operation at the Washington school, Quincy Pointt, of which Mr. T. B. Pollard is principal.

It is the fulfilment of the specialty notion, which prevails in most trades, particularly manufacturing. As now arranged Principal Pollard teaches all four of the grammar grades in geography, and two grades in history. Miss Marden teaches music and language in the four grades, Miss Sargent, nature study and drawing, and Miss Hatch, arithmetic, while each of the above instructors teaches reading and spelling in his or her own room.

The scholars do not move from room to room, but the teachers do, according to a time schedule.

It is claimed that teachers are more proficient in one branch than another and that they can do better work as specialists. This idea is in force in colleges and in high grade schools, but except in few places has not been tried in grammar grades of public schools.

So carefully was the change arranged in advance that there has been no friction at the Washington and the new idea is working very satisfactory, with promise of good results.

Mr. Dexter Bosworth was agreeably surprised at his residence on Howard street Wednesday evening, the occasion being his birthday.

The religious services for Sunday are grouped together in another column.

SPIRITUALISM IN THE BIBLE. A feature of the November Arena that will awaken the curiosity of all those who enjoy getting both sides of debatable questions is the treatment of "The Bible and Modern Spiritualism" at the hands of two eminent orthodox Christian scholars, who are both theologues and medical men. They are Henry A. Hartt, M. D., and J. M. Peebles, A. M., M. D., and both writing from the orthodox Christian standpoint, they take diametically opposite views. Dr. Hartt holds that the miracles and revelations and prophesies of the Bible had no relation to spiritualism in its modern interpretation, and Dr. Peebles holds that they most were distinctly to be included among spiritualistic phenomena. Doubters can therefore choose between two orthodox views.

DOWNS AND PARK

Gustaf Frolund is putting up a $4,500 house on Tyler street.

A. H. Maxwell has commenced work on the cellar of a new house on Hamden circle.

J. E. Sanford, of Rawson road, has returned home from a three weeks' trip to Maine.

Mrs. Sarah Beals of Blaine, Me., who has been visiting with Mrs. Louis A. Shay of Hamilton street, has returned home.

It seems rather funny, but the site the school committee selected for a new school building at Norfolk Downs, is the identical lot offered free of cost to the city two years ago but was not accepted. It is also the same lot one of the school board classed, without seeing it, as a swamp.

The Committee on Streets did not report Monday evening on the acceptance of the new streets at Norfolk Downs, as the grade in the plan of said streets and the grade of the streets did not agree. It is understood, however, that the committee intends to report favorably on the acceptance of Beach street and Rawson road and upon Billings road, the latter conditionally; the conditions being that the poles in the middle of the street be moved to the side, and that the grass along the railroad tracks be removed.

It is understood that Wood, Harmon & Co. will not comply with the conditions.

The street itself is very wide, being over 20 feet on each side of the railway track to the sidewalk. The poles are as good as could be had, and the sodding on the side of the tracks was done at considerable expense, and with the additions the new improvement association intend to make, the plat along the tracks will be very attractive another season.

The poles have been there nearly three years and up to the present time no accident has occurred. If the poles were removed to the side of the street it would necessitate the erection of another line of poles on the opposite side and the stringing of overhead wires across the street.

A better method of getting over the difficulty of the poles would be to inclose the tracks in a low, one rail, fence along either side.

The religious servises for Sunday are grouped together in another column.

Young Men's Christian Asso.

The storm interfered with the attendance at the member's reception Thursday evening, but all who were present were much pleased with the entertainment. Miss Snow of Hyde Park charmed all by her manner and delivery. Mr. Wilkinson of Lawrence rendered several solos acceptably. Refreshments were served by the auxiliary.

The following persons attended the State convention at Newburyport last week: Wm. Duff, J. C. Wyllie, Thomas Parsons, Ellis E. Jones, Dr. C. T. Sherman, W. P. Bailey, Ernest D. Gourd, A. L. Hayden, E. R. Johnson, Ed. McBain, Walter McKenzie and O. C. Colton. At the men's meeting Sunday afternoon the delegates will give their impressions of the convention.

A change has been made in the talks on physiology. Instead of speaking on Monday evenings, Dr. Johnson will give his talks on Wednesday evenings, beginning at 7 o'clock.

Next Thursday evening an opportunity will be given the young men of the city to hear an interesting and instructive lecture by Dr. C. A. Dorman of New Haven. Subject: "The Wages of Sin, or the Results of Impurity." No charge will be made for admission.

Adams Academy Games.

The annual fall games of the school will be held as usual on the morning of Founder's day, Tuesday, 30 October, at 10.30 o'clock. All friends of the school are invited to come to the grounds at the school and witness the events. A varied programme has been arranged. Among the events there are four entries for an eight mile bicycle race. Two elevens chosen from the school will play a game of foot ball. It is hoped that all interested in Adams Academy will attend these games without further invitation.

First Church Vespers.

A vesper service will be given Sunday next at the Unitarian church beginning at 4 o'clock. The service will consist mostly of singing by a quartette of men's voices; among the selections will be:

O Salutaris,	Gounod
Rejoice in the Lord,	West-Nevin
Abide with me,	Dow
Be thou Faithful, St. Paul,	Mendelssohn
Lead Kindly Light,	Dudley Buck
Now the Day is Over,	Barnby
Thou whose Presence,	Mozart

Granite City Club.

The gent's whist tournament which has been going on for the past six months at this club was terminated Oct. 17th. Below will be found the average per cent. of points won by those members who played 60 per cent. of the games: J. C. Morse, 57.0; Warren Rideout, 56.1; W. W. Mitchell, 55.1; Fred. L. Jones, 53 2; Dr. Hallowell, 52.6; E. W. H. Bass, 51.0; George W. Jones, 50.7; Henry F. Tilden, 50.0; John Curtis, 47.8; W. W. Ewell, 47.1; G. W. Prescott, 40.0.

The ladies' tournament closed Oct. 24th, and the result will be announced later. It is the desire of the committee that all members of this club will attend with ladies the opening of the next series, which commences Wednesday evening, Nov. 7th at 8 o'clock, and continues every two weeks.

—"Greater Boston" was the subject discussed at a smoke talk held by the members of the Medford club at Medford Monday evening. Several prominent speakers were present and all appeared to be opposed to the scheme—Transcript.

—Hingham dedicated two $20,000 schoo houses on Saturday. Formal exercises were held.

ATLANTIC.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church Atlantic, had their first supper of the season on Tuesday evening last, in the vestry of the new church. A fine New England supper was served by Mrs. David Hislop and Mrs. M. A. Wood. A short musical entertainment was given by the choir, and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by the many who were there.

It is reported that the residence of Mrs. Edward Burke on Newbury street was entered by prying open the door, last Friday afternoon, and a silver watch, pair of shoes and a quantity of bed clothing stolen.

The engineering department of Boston reports the pollution of the Neponset river at Granite avenue is evident to all, and the need of better sewerage facilities for the thickly settled districts about Milton, Lower Mills and Central avenue is unquestionable.

The beautiful new Methodist church at Atlantic was thronged with people Tuesday evening, the occasion being the harvest supper by the society, which was also the first social gathering held in the new edifice.

During the first part of the evening a harvest supper was served, which all pronounced as excellent. This was followed by a brief entertainment consisting of chorus singing, violin solos by Miss Olive Green, and piano solos by Miss Burr. A reader was to have been present, but unfortunately the committee were disappointed.

A McEttrick rally is announced for next week at Atlantic.

The public hearing on the extension of Walker street is advertised today.

The Atlantic Methodist church are arranging for a fair to be held next month.

A number of Atlantic young men have formed a club with Frank Allen as president, and hired rooms in the Hunt building.

The Fortnightly club of Atlantic has elected the following officers: President,—Charles F. Merrick; Vice President,—Miss Annie Kelly; Secretary and Treasurer,—Miss Josephine Kelly; Board of Managers,—Mrs. J. H. Yeoman, Mrs. John Carver and Miss Annie Hall.

The religious services for Sunday are grouped together in another column.

MILTON.

The petition of the Milton Street Railway Company for a location from the Quincy line to the terminus of the Dedham tracks at Mattapan has been refused by the selectmen. The reason being, the narrowness of the streets from the station at East Milton to Mattapan street.

The Quincy & Boston Street Railway Company has petitioned for a location on Granite avenue from the Quincy line to the East Milton station of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R R. This is looked upon with great favor by the residents of East Milton and the board of selectmen and will no doubt be granted at once. The fare will be five cents the same as from Quincy.

A large tract of land near the corner of Readsdale road and Randolph avenue is being surveyed and laid out into house lots.

The only kind of a store East Milton now needs to look like a city is a pawn shop.

The Milton band celebrated its first anniversary Wednesday evening by entertaining its friends at Ellsworth hall. During the first of the evening the band gave a concert which was followed by a supper and dance until 2 o'clock.

Henry Gummo has bought out Titus Wollaston express.

Robert Ladd, a youth slightly demented, committed suicide Monday morning by shooting himself in the head with a gun. He was about 24 years of age.

Mr. Quimby's brother has taken Mr. Baxter's place in his drug store.

A reception and conversation party was given, by the King's Daughters, to the people of East Milton at Ellsworth hall, last evening from 8 to 10 o'clock.

A new building is being erected near the East Milton depot.

Registration closes in Milton Saturday night at 10 o'clock.

A baptismal service will be held Sunday evening at 6 o'clock at the Blaney Memorial Baptist church, Lower Mills, at which time four persons will be baptised into the fellowship of the East Milton Baptist church.

The will of R. W. Sumner was allowed at Dedham on Wednesday; W. M. Priest was appointed executor. Administration was granted on estate of Mr. A. H. West of Milton.

Mr. Kent, proprietor of the Wollaston steam laundry, has recently moved into the house of Mr. A. A. Brackett on Brackett street.

The foundation is being built for a building east of the Rugby Block to be occupied by a Chinese laundry.

The ladies sewing circle met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. O. A. Andrews.

Mr. and Mrs. John Shields Jr., were presented with twin boys, Wednesday.

Mr. Harvey Varney and wife are spending the week in New York.

The Whist club met Wednesday evening with Miss Mabel Buck. Mr. Joseph Vogel, Jr., secured the gentleman's prize and Miss Buck the lady's prize. The next evening will be with Miss Graham.

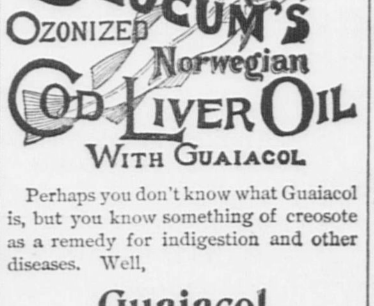
Miss Rose I. Byrne has started several dancing classes at Ellsworth hall.

Mr. Walter P. Beck of Adams street has been nominated by the Democrats for senator from this district.

The bicycle races last Saturday afternoon under the direction of Mr. Robert Sweeney were largely attended. The greatest interest was shown in the first race, owing to a dispute which arose at the last races. Skinner, Robertson, Gallagher and Staples crossed the tape in the order named, each securing a prize. In the boys' race Paul Eaton was first, with his brother Derby second. It is rumored that another series may take place before the season closes.

☞ The ladies are not interested half as much in the present political contest as they are in making the home look attractive, which at the present time can be done so cheaply with pretty house furniture, that is if they purchase it of C. W. Guy and W. G. Shaw at the Quincy Coliseum. lpo 1t

—Our Swedish people are to celebrate the birth of Gustavus Adolphus with a torch light parade and exercises in Boston Dec. 8. An appeal will also be made for the erection of a Gustavus Adolphus Home for aged infirm Swedes in Massachusetts.



Perhaps you don't know what Guaiacol is, but you know something of creosote as a remedy for indigestion and other diseases. Well, is a refined form of creosote, and is made from the resin of beech trees. It stimulates a languid appetite as the air of the woods does. As long as they can and will eat, consumptives can fight their disease. That is why Guaiacol is combined with ozone, a very active form of oxygen, in Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil.

Paul—Shaffer.

In Frankford, Pa., Oct. 17, by Rev. Mr. Kochler, Mr. John E. Paul of Boston, formerly of Quincy, to Miss Emma Shaffer of Frankford, Pa.

The wedding took place at the residence of the bride. Following the ceremony a splendid collation was served. The presents were numerous and beautiful. The young couple took a wedding tour to Boston, where they will reside.

Mr. Paul was for several years a compositor in the PATRIOT office, where he was much appreciated.

Public Hearing.

CITY OF QUINCY,
IN COUNCIL, Oct. 22, 1894.

WHEREAS, In the opinion of the City Council of the City of Quincy, public necessity and convenience require that the way therein called Walker street be laid out and extended to Newbury avenue through land of E. Larkin and land of Messrs. Clean, Churchill, Hinckleys, Crane and Hunt, all as shown on plan by H. T. Whitman, Surveyor, filed in the office of the City Clerk, it is therefore ORDERED: That due notice be given to the said Larkin, Clean, Churchill, Hinckleys, Crane and Hunt, and also to Joshua E. Drew, J. A. Kendall, Mrs. J. W. Hill, Cephas Drew, William E. Murphy, William Aulback, Seth Burrell, George E. Alden, William F. Cummings, John W. Atkins, George H. Sherman, Frank E. Badger, Charles D. Lincoln, Edward Willett, Charles R. Safford, and all other real estate owners on Clive and Walker streets, and all other parties interested, by an officer competent to serve civil process, who shall make return of his doings in this Order by serving them respectively with copies of this Preamble and Order, that it is the intention of the City Council to extend said Walker street as above recited, under the provisions of law authorizing the assessment of betterments, namely—Chapter 51 of the Public Statutes, and for that purpose to take portions of the land of said Larkin, Clean, Churchill, Hinckleys, Crane and Hunt, and that MONDAY, the 5th day of November, 1894, at 8 o'clock P. M., and the City Council Chamber at the City Hall, in said Quincy, are the time and place appointed for making said extension and laying out and for hearing any of said owners upon the question of damages occasioned thereby, and that a copy of this Order be printed in the Quincy DAILY LEDGER, the Quincy PATRIOT and the Quincy Advertiser, at least seven (7) days before the date of said hearing.

Adopted Oct. 22, 1894.

Shawmut Spring Water.

F. J. FULLER, Proprietor.

WEST QUINCY, - - MASS.

This is an excellent water of remarkable purity.

H. L. BOWKER, State Assayer, Boston, Mass.

The water question is engaging the attention of residents in thickly settled districts, and an intelligent investigation shows a large proportion of disease directly traceable to drinking water.

Experiments have shown that microbes that form in decayed vegetation, stagnant water and sewerage, which are the principal cause of fevers, will filter through seventy-five feet of jacked sand and how much farther through sand or earth is not known. Nearly three-fourths of the human system is water. How important then that we should drink only pure soft water which absorbs and eliminates lime and other earthly salts from the body. There is no other sensible preventive or cure for the system that is choked and clogged with calcarious salts than a systematic use of pure water.

This Shawmut Spring Water comes from a fissure in the face of a hill of Granite. Its use in cooking, drinking and bathing will, we think, show marked improvement in health. Different from hard water, in bathing it gives a soft, velvety appearance to the skin and should be used exclusively in washing young children.

It is free from all surface contaminations.

Pure water is the best medicinal water; there are no typhoid fever germs in it. It assists nature and restores to healthy action the digestive organs, and is conducive to the health of children and all persons of delicate constitution.

The very low price of this excellent water is within reach of all; just enough to defray the expense of delivery. All communications sent the proprietor will be promptly attended to.

The City Council.

The session of the City Council Monday evening was less than an hour in duration and what little business there was to transact was disposed of speedily.

The absent members were Councilmen Adams, Litchfield, Rooney and Waterhouse.

Petitions.

Petitions were received from Margaret Burke for State aid.

That Nelson street be laid out as a public way.

That the grade of the hill on West street near Centre street be cut down and put in condition for travel. All of which were referred.

Report of Committees.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Quincy & Boston street railway a location on Willard street to the Milton line, the location to be in the middle of the street, flat rail and paved between the tracks and eighteen inches on each side. Ordered to second reading.

The Committeee on Streets reported an order appropriating $3,500 for regrading parts of Liberty and Penn streets. To Committee on Finance.

The Committee on Streets reported an order appropriating $4,000 for regrading Adams street, from Whitwell street to Furnace brook. To Committee on Finance.

The Committee on Finance reported a slight amendment to order appropriating $2,400 for interest. Amendment adopted and order passed to be ordained under suspension of the rules.

The Committee on State Aid reported leave to withdraw on petition of George W. Tibbitts. Adopted.

The Committee on Finance reported an order transferring $100 from appropriations for salaries of city officers to Assessors' department for books, etc., and $25 from the same appropriations to the Assessors' department for clerical services. Passed to be ordained under suspension of the rules.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for a public hearing Nov. 5, on the laying out of Walker street.

The Committee on Finance reported an order appropriating $7,093 55 for the payment of bills on the new High school building.

Councilman Moxon did not object to the order, but to the precedent of doing work before an appropriation was made.

Councilman Holbrook thought the order was late in coming to the Council.

Order passed to second reading.

New Orders.

Councilman Moxon moved that when the Council adjourns it be until next Monday evening. Voted.

Councilman Holden moved that the communication of the Mayor in relation to street lights be taken from the file and referred to Committee on Street Lights. Voted.

Councilman Holden offered an amendment to Ordinance No. 17, section 32, by adding the words "half the fine imposed to go to the informant." To Committee on Ordinances.

Calendar.

The order appropriating $800 for public burial places was advanced a stage.

Adjourned at 8.15.

Quarry Company Land.

The commonwealth on Tuesday closed its evidence as to the value at which Hon. Moses Williams, Morris Gray and Samuel B. Capen, as auditors, ought to estimate the damages recoverable by the Quincy Quarry Company for the taking of 108 acres acres of land in West Quincy by the Metropolitan Park commissioners. The quarry company's experts variously estimated the value of the taking at from $66,000 to $116,000, which is far above the value set upon it by the state's experts. They severally estimate it at sums ranging from $3500 to about $10,000.

Surveying at Wollaston.

A detachment from the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey has been surveying at Wollaston this week. This work is being done in conjunction with the trigonometrical survey of Boston Harbor. Base lines have been run from the flag staff on Third Hill, which the survey has recently erected.

The hydrography of the bay and harbor in the charts now in use is from a resurvey made in the years 1861-64 by A. Boschhe, C. E., under the direction of the U. S. Harbor Commission, consisting of Brig. Gen. J. G. Totten, U. S. A., A. D. Bache, Supt. of the Coast Survey and Rear Admiral C. H. Davis, U. S. N. That of the approaches to the harbor was from the survey of Lieut. Comd. C. H. Davis, U. S. N., in 1846-48 and Lieut. Comd. H. S. Stellwagen, U. S. N. in 1854-55.

Good Will Reception.

A year ago the ninth of next month the first union sociable, or as its originator, the Rev. Edward A. Robinson, pastor of the Congregational society, termed it, "Good Will Reception," was held at Wollaston. The Wollaston Unitarian society seeing the good fruits of that gathering, threw open its doors Wednesday evening and held another "Good Will Reception," which was attended by between three and four hundred people, representing the Methodist, Baptist, Congregational and Episcopal societies. The affair was a brilliant success.

The reception was held in the auditorium of the church and light refreshments were served during the evening informally in the vestry. The auditorium was elaborately decorated with flowers and autumn foliage, as also was the vestry. The vestry was lighted with several piano lamps and rich Turkish rugs and Persian carpets cov- the floor.

During the reception an organ concert was given by Miss Minnie Parker Prescott, organist of the Congregational church, and Mr. Charles A. Pinkham organist of the Baptist church.

The guests were received by the reception committee and introduced to Rev. and Mrs. James E. Bagley, Rev. Charles W. Wilder of the Methodist church, Rev. Preston Gurney of the Baptist church and Rev. and Mrs. Edward A. Robinson of the Congregational church.

The reception committee consisted of Rev. and Mrs. James Bagley, Mr. and Sylvester Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Wellington, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Simmons, Dr. and Mrs. George B. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Hatch, Mr. Chandler W. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop, Mrs. Charles R. Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Crane, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Comins, Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Faunce, Mrs. S. E. Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Mitchell, Mrs. Kingman, Hon. and Mrs. Henry O. Fairbanks, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Totman, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. White, Miss Thayer, Miss Sherman, Mrs. Kingman, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Lull, Mrs. George W. Bennett, Miss Foster, Miss Taylor, Miss Helen Foster, Miss Jameson, Miss Kingman, Miss Howard, Miss Noyes, Miss Ela, Mr. W. E. Simmons, Jr., Mr. Walter M. Baker, Mr. Wm. E. Howard, Mr. Elmer T. Noyes, Mr. Herman H. Wieting, Mr. Ernest Judkins, Mr. Mace, Mr. Nelson Smith and Mr. Arthur Sibley.

After the reception and lunch, short addresses were made by Rev. James E. Bagley, Rev. Charles W. Wilder, Rev. Preston Gurney and Rev. Edward A. Robinson. Mrs. Jeannette Noyes Rice and Mrs. F. A. Page rendered in excellent taste, duetts and solos.

Much of the credit of the success of this great undertaking is due to the committee on decorations which was composed of Mrs. Charles F. Baker and Mrs. C. K. Crane; the committee on refreshments, Mrs. George W. Bennett, Mrs. Walter J. Wellington and Mrs. George Weston; and the committee on music, Mrs. F. A. Page, Mrs. H. W. Lull and Mr. Chandler W. Smith.

The Republican Banquet.

The annual dinner of the Republican Club of Massachusetts at Music Hall, Boston, on Wednesday evening, was a grand affair, full of interest and enthusiasm to the many thousand present.

Among the popular speakers were Senator Higgins of Delaware, Senator Hawley of Conn., Gov. Greenhalge and Lieut. Gov. Wolcott, of Mass., but none of them were listened to with more attention and pleasure than Hon. Harold M. Sewall of Maine, late Consul at Samoa.

Mr. Sewall is a young man of exceptional ability, and he showed to the vast audience the most disgraceful foreign policy of Mr. Cleveland's administration toward Samoa and Hawaii. Being an excellent orator, he portrayed the contemptible acts of the democratic administration in an able manner.

His description of the wretched betrayal of the Samoan King by Mr. Cleveland aroused the greatest indignation among the audience, and the statement that the King would today be ratting in a German dungeon but for Benjamin Harrison and James G. Blaine worked it up to the most remarkable enthusiasm.

Entertainment and Dance.

Notwithstanding the extreme inclemency of the weather, Thursday evening, a large number braved the storm to attend the entertainment given at Hancock hall, under the auspices of the Loyal Ladies' of Clan McGregor, and it is safe to say that none were sorry that they did attend, for the programme was of such a nature to please the most fastidious.

The entertainment was given by Prof. George W. Blish, and consisted of a piano solo by Miss Paula Muller; songs by Miss Florence G. Ayers; readings by little Miss Grace M. King, who completely captivated the audience; and selections by Prof. Blish.

The entertainment was followed by a dance until 3 o'clock in the morning, music being furnished by the Merry Mount Orchestra. Refreshments were served in the lower hall during the evening.

Death of John Parsons.

News was received Monday from Scranton, Pa., by A. C. Stewart that on Oct. 12, John Parson of that city fell from a new building upon which he was working and was killed almost immediately.

Deceased was a resident of this city during three years, and was well and favorably known, as his genial disposition won many friends, particularly in the choir of Christ's church, of which he was a member. He was also associated with the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Congregational church, and the Y. M. C. A. when it was first instituted. The news of his sudden death comes as a shock to his many friends who join in sympathy with his bereaved parents.

Close of Swedish Fair.

The three days' fair of the Swedish Lutheran society at Plumer's hall closed Saturday night, the attendance being unusually large.

The only entertainment furnished was music by the Swedish Lutheran band.

Many of the articles on the tables were sold at good prices, and those that were not sold were auctioned off during the latter part of the evening.

The fair has been a grand success but just how much will be cleared is not known at present, although it will not be far from $300.

Past Grand Surprised.

There was a little surprise party Wednesday evening at the meeting of Manet lodge, I. O. O. F., M. U., and the person most surprised was Thomas F. Ferguson, who was presented during the evening with a very handsome Past Grand's regalia, the presentation speech being made by William H. Sampson, Jr.

Tom is usually ready for any emergency but this was too much for even him and he could only murmur his thanks.

Mr. Ferguson was one of the charter members of Manet lodge, and to his efforts much of the success of the order is due.

Courts to Decide.

The trouble among the carriage drivers at the Quincy depot which has existed since last February, came to a head on Saturday, when James E. Dunn, Alfred W. Bisson and James H. Bisson were arraigned in the District Court upon complaint of Christopher T. Bailey, for loafing about the Quincy station of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad.

Last February the above railroad issued to Messrs. Penniman & Son a contract, giving them the sole right to solicit passengers at the Quincy station, and the defendants, who were proprietors of carriages and were also soliciting passengers, were notified that they must withdraw.

They did not do so, however, and have continued to solicit trade as before. Soon after issuing the contract the railroad placed Mr. Bailey on duty at the depot as an officer and he was duly appointed and confirmed as a railroad police by the city of Quincy. Mr. Bailey has, evidently, been accumulating evidence, and the cases this morning were the first move the railroad has made to place Messrs. Penniman in control.

The government was represented by City Solicitor Blackmur and the defendants by J. W. McAnarney, Esq.

Counsel for the defence admitted that Mr. Bailey had been appointed by the City of Quincy but when Mr. Bailey, who was the first witness, was asked by whom he was employed, Mr. McAnarney objected on the ground that this was a matter of record and that the government must prove by the records of the railroad that he was employed by them.

A lengthy argument followed and the court allowed the objection, and the case was continued until Saturday Oct. 27, that the government might produce the evidence and records required to establish by whom Mr. Bailey is employed.

The complaints against Messrs. Bisson and Dunn was brought under Section 196 of Chapter 112 of the Public Statutes which reads as follows:

"Whoever without right loiters or remains within a station-house of a railroad corporation or upon the platform or grounds adjacent to such station, after being requested to leave the same by a railroad police officer, shall forfeit not less than two nor more than twenty dollars."

These cases have caused considerable comment among the parties interested, and the outcome is awaited with interest.

The King's Daughters.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Union of King's Daughters was held at the Wollaston Congregational church on Saturday afternoon. The Rev. Edward A. Robinson, pastor of the Congregational society, presided. The church was tastefully decorated with flowers.

The meeting was opened by singing and was followed by the saying of the Lord's Prayer by the congregation led by Mr. Robinson, who conducted the devotional service which followed. Preceding the address of welcome to the assembled circles and tens by Mr. Robinson, Mrs. Frank A. Page rendered a vocal solo. Miss Lincoln also sang "There is a City Bright." The Rev. James E. Bagley, pastor of the Wollaston Unitarian church, spoke on the good works of the King's Daughters. The devotional service was concluded by a solo by Mrs. Page and the pronouncing of the benediction by Mr. Robinson.

At the conclusion of the devotional service the business to be transacted was taken up. Reports were read from the Gleaner's Ten, the Loyal Circle, the Whatsoever and the Sharer's Tens of Wollaston, and the Charitable, Unity, Hospital and Reaper Tens of Quincy.

The election of officers then took place and Miss Emma Saville of Quincy was elected president and Miss Florence G. Olney of Wollaston, secretary and treasurer, for the ensuing year.

A lunch was served in the vestry, after the business meeting, to the visiting members.

Police Stopped It, But—

A prize fight between two Nova Scotia granite workers, for $100 a side, was to have taken place Saturday night in the vicinity of midnight, but the presence of Chief of Police Hayden put a stop to it. Those who had purchased tickets were not told where the fight was to come off but were told to be at the Quincy Adams depot at 7 o'clock where they would be informed, and at that hour a large crowd congregated.

Shortly after they started for the sand pit near the Braintree line. Chief Hayden, who had been given the tip by one of his officers who had been given an opportunity to purchase a ticket, but did not, started in that direction also with Officer Nicol. As the sand pit was reached the lights of lanterns were seen and at the same time the officers also and in an instant the lights were extinguished and the crowd scattered in all directions.

This put a stop to the fight as far as Saturday night was concerned and the police will be alert to prevent its occurrence at any time.

Wollaston M. D. Married.

A dispatch from South Berwick, Me., to the Globe says: Miss Kathrine Oakes, youngest daughter of Abner Oakes, was married at 2.30 Thursday Oct. 18, to Dr. Charles S. Adams of Wollaston, Mass., in the Congregational church, which was tastefully decorated with evergreen boughs, autumn leaves and bittersweet. The bride wore white overshot silk, with satin ribbons, and a tulle veil. The bridesmaids, Miss Katherine Quint of Marion, Mass., and Miss Annie Williamson of Augusta, wore orange brocaded silk and lavender striped silk respectively. The groomsman was Dr. Darling of Brookline. The ushers were Dr. Charles W. Oakes of New York, Dr. Stevens of Boston, W. H. Roberts of Rollinsford and John F. Hodgdon of South Berwick. A lunch was served at the residence of the bride's parents, after which the couple left for their new home in Wollaston.

Rally at Atlantic.

A Democratic rally in the interest of Hon. William S. McNary was held Wednesday evening at Music hall, Atlantic, which was largely attended.

John A. Duggan presided and on the platform with him, including the speakers were: W. S. McNary, James F. Jennings, W. C. Cherrington, James E. Hayes, Boardman Hall, William J. Miller, D. J. Moynihan and others.

Mr. McNary was the principal speaker, and his remarks were practically the same as delivered at Quincy and West Quincy last Saturday.

McEttrick Rally.

Hancock hall was filled to the very doors Tuesday evening on the occasion of the McEttrick rally. At 8 o'clock not a seat was left and all the available standing room was occupied.

Simon Little presided, and on the platform besides the speakers were ex-Councilman Little and W. J. Sullivan.

Candidate McEttrick was the first speaker and he received an ovation. He scored McNary, saying that he used his office and money to down him. He (McNary) turned a Democratic board of Aldermen to a Repubican board. He built his political structure so that he alone should receive the nomination.

The speaker then gave his attention to Mr. Fitzgerald saying that it was impossible for anyone to get the nomination unless he was in the ring. He (McEttrick) was informed that under no consideration would he get the nomination and he therefore had no alternative but to run independent.

The speaker said his political life had been conducted on fair, square and honorable means. He then gave the records of Messrs. Atwood and McNary and also what he himself had done to benefit the laboring man. His friend the water commissioner may have voted for labor bills, but it was one thing to vote for them and another thing to fight for them, and he challenged McNary to produce one, without exception, labor bill for which he had spoken during his service in the Legislature.

A. A. Carlton, a well known labor leader and organizer followed, denoting his remarks entirely to that question and the betterment of the laboring classes.

Joseph J. Kelley the next speaker, referred to the labor record of the several candidates and said somebody got hit with a political brick two years ago and they have forgotten that brick is laying around now.

J. B. Moran was the last speaker and he opened his remarks by inviting Mr. John E. Fitzgerald, if he was present, to come upon the platform and face him. Mr. Fitzgerald was evidently not present as he did not appear. The speaker then produced a stenographic report of Mr. Fitzgerald's speech at Quincy last Saturday. He read extracts from this speech and told wherein the statements were false, and challenged Mr. Fitzgerald to prove his statements. Mr. Moran spoke nearly an hour and was frequently interrupted with applause.

Democratic Rally.

The Democratic campaign in Quincy was opened Saturday night by two rallies, one in Hancock hall and the other in St. Mary's hall, the speakers at both meetings being the same.

At Hancock hall, W. G. A. Pattee presided, and on the platform besides the speakers were: Mayor Hodges, Councilmen Adams and Baker, John T. Cavanagh of the Water Board, and Timothy F. Ford of the Board of Health.

At West Quincy William F. Powers, chairman of the Democratic City committee presided and on the platform with him were: Councilmen Lamb and O'Brien, William Shea, Thomas Foley, Thomas Hogan, Peter Donahoe and William Brown.

All the speakers paid their respects to the organization known as the A. P. A. and scored the independent Democratic and Republican nominees from the Tenth Congressional district.

The speakers at Hancock hall were C. A. Engstrom, H. T. Blumenthal, Hon. W. S. McNary, John F. Fitzgerald and William B. Orcutt.

Candidate McNary was introduced as a Democrat who always supported Democratic principles. The speaker touched upon the leading question of the day, the tariff, and the Wilson, bill, and argued that better times were coming and that another year would see plenty of work for all. He then referred to the Congressional fight in this district and told what he had done for the Democratic party, and how much he thought of the workingmen of Quincy.

Mr. Fitzgerald said the Republicans tell us that a Democratic administration had brought on this panic and filled the streets with marching armies of distressed people calling upon the government to save them, but the disaster was the result of the preceding four years of Republican rule. In this contest we are struggling for an honest tariff and honest currency, an honest ballot and a free and open conscience.

The other speakers also spoke of the tariff and said it was a great benefit to the workingmen to have free lumber, jute, salt, iron and wool. They also scored the A. P. A. and said that A. P. A. ism and Know-Nothingism could not exist in the Democratic party, a statement that brought forth applause.

On the Quarry Railroad.

On Thursday at the invitation of Supt. Anderson of the Quincy Quarry Co., the faculty of the Woodward Institute together with their friends, enjoyed a trip over the new Quarry railway.

A special train of two cars left Boston at 1.40 P. M., making stops at Wollaston, Quincy and Braintree, where the guests, numbering about thirty were taken aboard. The train then ran to West Quincy and thence upon the Quarry railway to Nelson's quarry, the end of the Lyons branch. The quarries of the Scandinavian Granite Co., and of the Prout Bros. Granite Co. were then visited. At this point fine views were obtained of the new Blue Hills reservation and of Boston harbor.

The train returned to the junction switch and ran to the lower spur at Clarke's, when the party climbed the hill to enjoy the view just above the Lyon's quarry, whose new turning plant was also visited. Again boarding the cars, the train was run back to the Knox or Bunker Hill spur, and from the hill above the old quarry a fine view was enjoyed of the Bunker Hill quarry and the surrounding country. Elcock's quarry was then visited, and a beautiful view was obtained of Quincy and the harbor.

At about 5.15 the return trip was made to West Quincy, and thence running through the Y at Braintree, the party reached Quincy about 5.45 P. M.

—Change of time on the Fall River line on Monday next, Oct. 29. Steamer will leave New York at 5.00 P. M. each day instead of 5.50; and special Pullman vestibuled trains will leave Boston at 6 P. M. week day, at 7 o'clock on Sundays. A fine orchestra is on each steamer throughout the year. The steamers Priscilla, Puritan, Plymouth and Pilgrim are the largest and handsomest steamboats ever constructed.

The Pulpit and the Press.

Miss Bassett took the chair at the meeting of the High School debating club on Wednesday. Miss Bemis, the secretary, read her report. The board of decision on the last debate then retired and Miss Vogler, the critic, gave her report. The entertainment followed:

Mr. Marnock, '96, was not ready and will consequently speak next time.

Recitation, "The Lost Chord," Miss Graney; an excellent selection.

Essay, "A ghost story," Miss Vogler, '95; full of thrilling adventures; a meritorious essay.

Mr. Winlock was not ready. He will speak next time.

Recitation, Miss Lowe, '95; a humorous selection.

Essay, Miss Mary Sampson, '95; a pleasing picture of "An Old Man and his Violin."

The board of decision reported in favor of the affirmative side of last week's debate, "Resolved that falsehood is never justifiable."

The debate followed: Resolved, That the Pulpit is more Influential than the Press.

The speakers in the affirmative were: Miss Pierce, '95; Miss Pope, '95; Miss Alice Sampson, '95; Miss Mary Sampson, '95; Miss Sullivan, '95; Miss Thomas, '95; Miss Vogler, '95.

In the negative: Miss White, '95; Miss Temple, '95; Mr. Barry, '95; Miss Allen, '96; Miss Beckworth, '96; Miss Briggs, '96.

When the debate was opened to the society, Miss Alice Sampson and Miss Catherine Pope spoke effectively. The debate was a brilliant and spirited one. The Board of Decision brought in a verdict for the negative.

The Hospital.

The following open letter is from Quincy's famous physician, Dr. John A. Gordon, and his appeal for the Quincy Hospital we know will not go unheeded:

Editors of the Quincy Patriot:

Just five years ago the first sod was turned for the foundation of the City Hospital of Quincy, and a little over four years ago the building was dedicated to the "care and treatment of persons who may need medical or surgical attendance during temporary sickness or injury." Since that time the hospital has obtained a wide spread reputation. A late volume of the Reference Handbook of the Medical Sciences published in New York says, "The City Hospital of Quincy is an excellent example of what has been done in providing a hospital that, in the three years of its existence has made a creditable record, and become a model of construction that others have followed." And the Boston Herald in its investigation of Massachusetts hospitals gives it the first place in economical management.

In these four years it has treated seven hundred and twenty-one patients, comprising almost all classes of cases, and including the most severe quarry and railroad accidents, as well as some of the most difficult surgical operations, with a success that will compare favorably with the best hospitals in the country.

We all remember the public enthusiasm that hailed its dedication and opening. We can recall with satisfaction the thankfulness of the community that we had such a hospital for the reception of the injured and dying sufferers of the terrible railroad accident that occurred in the first months of its existence, and we note with pleasure the expressions of gratitude of the many patients who have been helped and cared for in its wards.

This success demonstrates the need of its existence. In a city like Quincy, with its dangerous granite industry and its twenty thousand inhabitants, the hospital has become a necessity. On this point we are all agreed. It would be difficult to do without it. On another point we should be equally clear: The hospital is not especially for the benefit of its promoters and those who give their time and skill freely and without price for its welfare. It is for the whole community. It stands ready to receive the sick and suffering from the households of the rich and poor; and no one can tell how soon he may need its services. Consequently everyone should feel an interest in its success and be willing and ready to contribute towards its maintainance and support. That the community is ready and willing to maintain and support the hospital has abundant proof in the cheerful and substantial way in which every appeal for aid and means has hitherto been answered. Last year a deficit of almost four thousand dollars was made good by the people in one week.

This year the hospital again finds itself obliged to appeal to the citizens for assistance. The income from the endowment fund and all the other sources of income fail to yield sufficient for the constantly increasing expenses, and the hospital finds itself largely in debt, with more than two months of the year to provide for. At least five thousand dollars should be raised to pay the present deficit and carry on the work for the remaining months of the year.

The coming Sunday, October 28th, has been set apart as Hospital Sunday, and it is sincerely hoped that a large sum will be secured by contribution on that day in the several churches.

During the coming week a committee from the hospital will make a direct appeal to all the citizens of the city for contributions, and it is hopefully and confidently expected that the appeal will be met by a generous and substantial response.

J. A. GORDON.

Sudden Death.

The death of Charles H. Crooker, engineer on the steam yacht Marie which has been anchored in the waters of Quincy Point, late Wednesday afternoon, gave rise to grave rumors that foul play had been the cause of the man's death. When found he had a deep gash on the side of his head. It was afterward ascertained that the man had died from natural causes and that the cut had been received in falling. The circumstances of the case are as follows:

Wednesday afternoon about 3 30 o'clock, Harris Calkins, the deck hand, took a boat and went ashore on an errand, leaving Crooker in the engine room getting up steam. Calkins returned half an hour later and was surprised to see the engineer laying upon the floor dead.

Undertaker Hall was notified and the body was removed to his rooms where they were viewed by Medical Examiner Gilbert, who pronounced heart trouble as the cause of his death.

It has also been learned that he came from Bath, Me., last August and that his widow is at present in Lynn.

Magazine Night.

The regular meeting of the Quincy Literary society was held in Doble's hall on Friday evening the president Dr. R. McLellan in the chair.

The first gentleman called upon Mr. John C. Russell, took very appropriately for his theme, a speech of Daniel Webster upon the spoil system of government, a condemnation in his own unique way of the method in vogue of turning one rascal out and putting another one into office at every change of administration.

It is an acknowledgement of the important factor in educative affairs that the modern newspaper has become, when the second reading was chosen by Mr. Alex. Corne from an editorial in a recent issue of the Boston Herald upon the growing facilities for the study of sociology.

—Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Morse of Dedham observed their golden wedding Wednesday.

Dana's SARSAPARILLA

The Kind That Cures

Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Female Complaints, Nervous Prostration, La Grippe. Blood, Nerve, Kidney, or Skin Troubles.

Dyspepsia Cured.

MRS. CHAS. VILLIERS, of SOUTH BRAINTREE, MASS., suffered with acute Dyspepsia, constant Sick Headache and Vomiting. Nothing brought her relief. She finally tried DANA'S; it CURED her. Her words are, "I felt a great deal better before I finished one bottle. DANA'S CURED me, for I can now eat anything without distress; no more vomiting; no more Sick Headache."

Great Faith in Dana's.

MRS. MARY E. FREEMAN, of SOUTH FOXBORO, MASS., had great faith in DANA'S, and it was justified. She suffered greatly from Sores and Ulcers, from Impure Blood. DANA'S CURED her.

Tells his Friends to "Try DANA'S."

MR. WM. F. HUTCHINSON, of WOLLASTON, MASS., says that DANA'S is just what is claimed for it, and he has no hesitation in advising the afflicted to "Try DANA'S."

See that you get DANA'S.

Two High Scores.

The Wollaston Trap club had some high scores made at its grounds on Saturday afternoon by Prescott, who broke 23 out of a possible 25 on the first string, 15 being straight, and 24 on the second string. This ties Morse's high score of 24. Elcock came from West Quincy and did good work, breaking 19.

ALLENS COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA THE HONEST KIND

Receives the Highest Praise from the Best Physicians.

DR. H. F. MERRILL, the wonderful specialist of Augusta, Maine, after giving it a thorough trial in his practice, writes the following convincing letter of praise:

GENTLEMEN:—

I have of late been using some of your medicine in my practice with the most pleasing and satisfactory results. I find that it acts like a charm upon the whole nervous system, and in scrofula and all cutaneous diseases. Its curative properties are fully equal to the claims made for it, and I do not know of one instance where it has not fulfilled all its claims. In cases of General Debility and Nervous Prostration it has proved itself invaluable. It also gives quick relief in Dyspepsia and Canker of the stomach, and is a remarkable fine restorative remedy. It is a great pleasure to be able to recommend such a remedy, as the results following its use are so wonderfully satisfactory. One great thing in its favor is its freedom from superfluous alcohol, and all injurious ingredients.

DR. H. F. MERRILL.

PROF. W. H. MORSE, M. D., F. B. S. Sc. of Westfield, N. J., author of "New Therapeutical Agents", the standard text book of the newer materia medica, Consulting Chemist and Therapeutist, one of the most widely known men among the medical profession gives it his highest endorsement, as testified by the following voluntary statement:

"Allen's Sarsaparilla commends itself to me therapeutically, chemically and clinically. Its therapeutical power, physiological activity, and chemical purity, are all noteworthy; and the reason is to be found in the fact that it is true to its name, or honest, as the word goes. That is, it is vegetable alterative, and tonic. Perhaps the highest praise that may be given it is that its action represents that of mercury, less the faults of that drug; for, has not Pereira said, "A perfect mercury would be a perfect alterative."

W. H. MORSE, M. D., F. B. S. Sc.,
Westfield, N. J.

Although Allen's Sarsaparilla is such a valuable remedy it is not at all expensive, being the largest bottle on the market for $1.00. Trial bottles 50 cts.

Our Harvest Years.

When russet apples turn each bronzed cheek
To catch a final beauty from the sun;
When the first frost with pencil fine and true
The tinting of the leaves has just begun;
Then nature still can turn one fairer page,
It is the mellow year's sweet middle age.

When the bright world hangs out a tender haze
To veil her scarlet colors grown so bold;
When in full fruitage droops the ripened corn
And nature's green is turned to red and gold;
Then do we feel that in loved nature's shrine
Four seasons' wondrous blessings doth combine.

To all the riches of the summer, spring,
The hazel copse now adds its store of wealth;
The nests are empty, but the birdlings gay,
Now sing their own sweet songs of love, by stealth;
From gen'rous laden trees the brown nuts fall,
For earth her treasure now doth yield to all.

Thus, in our human lives, those years are best,
Those harvest years, with love and children blest.
We see our nestlings mate in their glad spring,
And know their love is not so grand a thing
As it will be when autumn's glory sheds
The rapture of all seasons on their heads.

Notes and Comments.

—The Brockton Enterprise says, Swithin Bros. of Quincy placed a fine monument to the memory of the late Robert Keith at the Marshall's corner cemetery on Tuesday.

—The Norfolk County Poultry Association will hold its first annual exhibition of poultry pigeons and pet stock at Music Hall, Franklin, Mass., on Dec. 12 and 13.

—It has been discovered that though the hay fever season is over, many people are still suffering from hay fever. This is worse than getting one's Easter bonnet in time for Thanksgiving day.

—It is said that trains on the Old Colony system are to be run on somewhat different order from that of recent years in that the right hand instead of the left hand track is to be used.—Brockton Enterprise.

—The Brockton city farm recently sold a Boston dealer 21 tons of hogs, which netted the city $3,097.78. A Whitman man who heard of it says that it only illustrates the old saying, "Brockton is hoggish in everything." Even on big fairs.

—At the annual convention of the Universalist churches of Massachusetts, the treasurer's report showed receipts from parishes during the year of $4,152 82 The amount of the permanent fund is $68,637.88. New churches have been built at Hyde Park, Amherst, Norwell, Beverly and at Haverhill.

—If your trunk must be in your room, it will be improved in appearance by a cover. This may be of dark blue duck, the exact shape, but a trifle larger than the box. Trim the bottom with two ruffles of dark blue silk. At the sides make pockets, if desired, of the shirred silk and have a thin cushion of the duck for the top.

—Three thousand six hundred school teachers are employed in Chicago and about four hundred new ones are needed each year. Half of these are selected from among experienced teachers of all parts of the country. The teachers in primary grades receive salaries ranging from five hundred to eight hundred dollars.

—Two hundred cases of shoes a day is a wonderful output for a factory, especially when cases of 24-pairs each are meant. That means 4800 pairs a day, and at that rate all of the male residents of Quincy could be shod in less than a week. Yet there is a shoe manufacturer in Brockton who says he is making that number each day.

—Attleboro, Mass., the jewelry town of the world, celebrated its 200th anniversary Oct. 19th and 20th, and did it with a champagne fizz and sparkle. The town was dressed like a bride for a wedding. Every building and residence was gay with bunting and Chinese lanterns. Two big and handsome arches spanned the streets that meet at the small square, and arches of gas and electric lights twinkled at other points.

—Mr. Thomas F. Temple of Neponset, who has been registrar of deeds for twenty-four years, has been renominated both by the Republicans and Democrats.

—The fact that last year $10,000,000 was spent in this country for new bicycles alone suffices to show that the outlook of the horse breeder is not so rosy as it might be.

—The National debt is $897,000,000, or about $13 for every man, woman and child in the United states. This is an unlucky number; it should be reduced.—Nashua Telegraph.

—The appropriation for school teachers' salaries in Somerville stands at the head of the list $125,000; the highway appropriation was $60,000; and that for street lighting was $44,000.

—Geo. W. Marsh of West Newton picked some large ripe strawberries, from the vines in his garden last Monday morning. They, being a second crop, show remarkable vitality of the plants, as well as an unusually favorable season.

—"Everybody is educated in Massachusetts," said the Kansas man who had just returned home after six months' travel in the East. "Yes, sir, everybody is educated there. And they even have schools of mackerel right off the coast."

—Fifty years ago, Oct. 6th in Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Harris were united in marriage by Rev. Elmer Hewitt. On Saturday, Oct. 6th, this couple celebrated their golden anniversary at their home in Brockton, and Rev. Mr. Hewitt, who is quite aged, was present.

—Socialist John Swinton wants to see Gen. Schofield, U. S. A., hanged for recommending an increase in the army. The socialists and the other ists and isms are great for declaring for free speech and freedom of action till things are said or done that don't suit them. Then they want to hang somebody right off.—Brockton Enterprize.

—The New York Times calculates that the average price of the ordinary horse of commerce—the business animal—has been reduced in that city from about $160 to $120, by reason of the substitution of the trolley for the horse car. In the same way, the price of the family horse, kept for pleasure, has been seriously impaired by the introduction of bicycles.

—According to the Rockland Standard, a carpenter who was shingling John Long's house in Quincy was driven from the roof by numerous bees. A slow and painful investigation brought to light, under the boards, two combs of honey weighing nearly 70 pounds each. For fifteen years the bees had made their presence felt about the proprietor of the premises, but his Long-suffering is now sweetly soothed.

—A successful New York publisher, one who seems to possess a special gift for making novels "go," irrespective of the times, was interviewed the other day, and, being asked to what he attributed his great success, replied: "Study, work and judicious advertising, but the greatest of these is advertising." To tell the story more completely and forcibly than this, in so few words, would, we think, be rather a difficult task.

The Boston Stage.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The Cotton King" has, without a question, scored one of the greatest successes that has been made in Boston for many years at the Bowdoin Square theatre, where no attraction has ever before successfully played over two weeks. "The Cotton King" has turned people away regularly. The "standing room only" sign has been out every night since the run began, and it promises to continue, as seats are being sold nearly a month ahead. While Sutton Vane has met all the requirements of melodrama he has broken new ground by a presentation of a character and of a scene that rises immensely above the level of this class of work.

Columbia Theatre.

Sydney Grundy's play, "Sowing the Wind," which began an engagement at the Columbia theatre Monday night, is a remarkable work. Though this is its first visit to Boston, its fame is not unknown to Bostonians, for it has been the subject of much discussion among sociologists. At present in England the play is the subject of a three-cornered fight between Dr. Boyd, vice-chancellor of Oxford University, Dr. Newn and Hall and the veteran Professor Blackie. It ran for two hundred nights at the Empire, New York, all summer in Chicago, and for quite a season in London. "Sowing the Wind" is said to be the best play Sydney Grundy has yet written. Its plot is simple and unhampered by extraneous incident. Its development is direct and logical and its treatment is original.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The wave of a magic wand has demolished the walls that surround fairyland, and ere they could be repaired and made impassable, the entire band of Brownies escaped and ran to do the bidding of their lord and master, Palmer Cox. Only two weeks have elapsed since this event occurred, and the Brownies are now travelling as fast as possible towards Boston, and at the Hollis Street theatre, which they will reach and where they will be safely domiciled on October 29, elaborate preparations were made for the introduction of these quaint people into this life which will be entirely new to them, and which will be so enjoyable to children of all ages to see their fairy favorites in real flesh and blood, and to hear them speak in real Brownie language. Each Brownie has been provided with an entirely new wardrobe.

Boston Theatre.

To judge by the columns upon columns of eulogistic criticism bestowed by the Boston newspapers upon "In Old Kentucky" which was given its first Boston production at the Boston theatre last Monday night the engagement will be the most successful ever played at that theatre so famous for long runs. The great playhouse was packed to the doors by one of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences ever assembled within its walls and the plaudits with which the play as a whole and its many powerful situations were received fairly shook the house. The play itself paints a most graphic picture of life in the Blue Grass regions of Kentucky, depicts Kentucky life, its scenes and incidents as they exist today, and clothes it all with a scenic magnificence startling and entrancing in its picturesqueness of detail.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it.

Mrs. Beacon Hill.—I am sorry, dear Mrs. Wagstaff, that I shall never see your Uncle Roscoe again. He is a great loss.

Mrs. Wagstaff (in evident surprise)—Why, what do you mean? Uncle was here yesterday.

Mrs. Beacon Hill (sighing)—Yes, yes; that is what I refer to. Caroline said that you had your Uncle Roscoe for dinner yesterday.—Harper's Weekly.

A little Detroit girl was bidding her boy playmate good-bye, and on this occasion her mother told her to kiss him. She offered him a roguish cheek, and when the salute was gravely given, began to rub it vigorously with her handkerchief.

"Why, Laura," said her mother, "You're not rubbing it off?"

"No, mamma," answered the little maiden, demurely, "I'm rubbing it in."—Detroit Free Press.

Household Receipts.

PUMPKIN SWEET PICKLES Peel pumpkin and cut in convenient strips for pickle. As pumpkin shrinks considerably in cooking, allowance must be made for this when cutting into strips. Steam until a fork will penetrate, then scald in the following syrup: To one quart of vinegar allow two pounds of sugar and one teacupful molasses, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one teaspoonful cloves, one teaspoonful ginger. Let pumpkin remain in this half an hour, or until it reaches the boiling point, then remove with perforated skimmer and place in jars. Boil syrup until reduced enough to cover the pickles; pour over while hot. Keep in a cool cellar.

PUMPKIN MARMALADE. Peel and stew pumpkin, then rub through a sieve. Add to pumpkin an equal quantity of apple pulp—sour apples are best—and to six teacupfuls of this mixture three teacupfuls of sugar, two lemons and one large orange cut very fine, also grated rind of same. Stew until rich and thick, stirring constantly, then put away in covered jelly glasses.

DOUGHNUTS. Two cupfuls of milk, two eggs, two cupfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter melted and cooled a little, one-half of a nutmeg, two heaping teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, one teaspoonful of soda, a little salt and enough flour to roll. Doughnuts should not be kneaded and should be turned often in frying.

ONION SOUP. Three pints of milk in which six good-sized onions have been boiled makes a delicate and delicious soup, seasoned to taste with butter, salt and pepper, and thickened, if desired, with a tablespoonful of corn-starch made smooth in cold milk.

SCALLOPED FISH Pick fine the remnants of fresh fish left from dinner, either baked, boiled or fried, removing all bones and skin. Butter a pudding dish and lay in the fish in layers, seasoning each layer with bits of butter, salt and pepper. Spread one-half of a cupful of cracker crumbs over the top, well buttered, pour enough milk over the whole to quite thoroughly moisten it, and bake 20 minutes in a quick oven.

COOKIES. One egg, two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of sweet milk or cold water, one-half cupful each of butter and lard, three teaspoonfuls of cream tartar and one and a half teaspoonfuls of soda sifted with flour to stiffen; spice to taste; sprinkle with sugar and bake quickly.

DRIED BEEF CREAMED. Chip the beef in small, thin slices, or, if bought already cut, pick it apart in small pieces, and carefully remove all fat and stringy pieces. Put a tablespoonful of butter into a small saucepan; when hot add the beef and frizzle for four or five minutes, stirring constantly. Then add a cup of milk, into which has been stirred a level tablespoonful of cornstarch; let it boil up until it thickens sufficiently and serve.

A cargo of 40,000 frozen carcasses of mutton have been received at London, shipped direct from Auckland, New Zealand. This shipment was equal to about 2,500,000 pounds of mutton, and report has it that the ocean pneumatic refrigerators are playing havoc with the prices of mutton, as it can be supplied from the above point much less than the London quotations.

As to the speed with which the migration flight of birds are accomplished, Canon Tristram, in the British association, quoted Herr Gatke as maintaining that godwits and plovers can fly at the rate of 240 miles an hour. Dr. Jerdon has stated that the spine-tailed swift, roosting in Ceylon, would reach the Himalayas, a thousand miles, before sunset. In their ordinary flight the swift was the only bird the author ever noticed to outstrip an express train on the Great Northern railway.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage's OPINION

—OF—

Dr. H. A. Tucker's No. 59 Diaphoretic Compound.

A Positive Preventive And Sure Cure For Colics, Cramps, Diarrhœa, Malaria, Sudden Colds, Rheumatism, &c.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, after 20 years' personal use, writes as follows:
TO THE PEOPLE:
I know by personal observation that DOCTOR H. A. TUCKER'S medicine, popularly known as "No. 59," is potent and safe. It ought to be on the shelf in every nursery, and in the satchel on every journey. Going from home I always carry some of it with me, and have administered it to many who in car and steamer have been taken sick. Better smash your brandy flask and the various styles of "Bitters," which are Rum put up under enticing nomenclature, and take with you a bottle of DOCTOR TUCKER'S 59 as a pocket pistol with which to shoot down physical disorders.

Law Enforcement.

The legislative department, through its representatives of the people, places upon the statute books their mandates in the form of laws. Here the duty of the legislative department begins and here it ends. It has no authority to apply the laws it enacts, and is powerless to enforce them.

The judicial department of the government, consisting of courts from the country trial justice hears grievances presented to it in legal form, and, acting under and in pursuance of the laws, which the legislative department has enacted, determines and decides whether the facts, as thus presented, are within the province of any existing law, and if so what reward, remuneration or penalty, is also provided by law to be applied. The judicial department of the government has no authority to enact laws and no authority to enforce them, but can only expound and apply them. It can only determine whether the particular facts presented to it are such as a law contemplates, and to decree the results. It must do all this utterly regardless whether it personally considers the law wise or unwise, just or unjust. In short, it is as much the servant of the law as the humblest citizen.

It is the duty of the executive department of the government to put into effect the decrees of the judical department, acting under the legislative department, and the executive is the servant of the judicial.

Let me illustrate: I say I handed you ten dollars, and now I want it back. I present my statement to a court, whose duty it is to determine not only its truth, but whether my delivering to you the money was under such circumstances as would create a debt or obligation which you should fulfil. The court may determine that you are a minor, and that it was a debt not for necessaries, and cannot, therefore, be enforced against you, that is, it may find that the facts are such as to come within the contemplation of the law which excuses a minor from repaying borrowed money. Or it may find that the money was advanced to you such a period ago as the legislature has enacted as having amounted to a payment, or it may find that the bill is one that you should pay, and if you do not comply, it issues to the executive department of the government an order for the sale of your property for an amount to satisfy my claim and costs.

TRY COTTOLENE

the new vegetable shortening. The healthfulness, flavor, and economy of this wonderful cooking product has won for it the widest popularity, which in turn has attracted the attention of business parasites who are "working off" imitations and counterfeits. Forewarned is forearmed. Be sure you get the only genuine vegetable shortening—COTTOLENE.

Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Vegetable Compound

Is a positive cure for all those painful

Ailments of Women.

It will entirely cure the worst forms of Female Complaints, all Ovarian troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Falling and Displacements, of the Womb, and consequent Spinal Weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the Change of Life. Every time it will cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of Leucorrhœa than any remedy the world has ever known. It is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels Tumors from the Uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. That causing pain, weight, and backache, is instantly relieved and permanently cured by its use. Under all circumstances it acts in harmony with the laws that govern the female system, and is as harmless as water. It removes

Irregularity,

Suppressed or Painful Menstruations, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Flooding, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility. Also

Dizziness, Faintness,

Extreme Lassitude, "don't care" and "want to be left alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy, or the "blues," and backache. These are sure indications of Female Weakness, some derangement of the Uterus, or Womb Troubles.

The whole story, however, is told in an illustrated book entitled "Guide to Health," by Mrs. Pinkham. It contains over 90 pages of most important information, which every woman, married or single, should know about herself. Send 2 two-cent stamps for it. For and Backache of either sex the Vegetable Compound is unequaled.

Kidney Complaints

Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills cure Constipation, Sick Headache, 25c.

All druggists sell the Vegetable Compound, or sent by mail, in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00. Correspondence freely answered.

SLOCUM'S
OZONIZED Norwegian
COD LIVER OIL
WITH GUAIACOL
It is as easy to explain a cold as to catch one. The skin, exposed to a sudden change in temperature, ceases to throw off waste matter, and double duty is imposed upon the lungs. Hence, inflammation of the bronchial tubes and frequently consumption. A medicine to cure consumption must help not only the lungs but the stomach, because good appetite and good digestion are required to fortify the system. Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol, is a great flesh-maker.

November.

Like some fair woman who hath lost youth's charm,
Yet holds within her heart all goodly gifts,
November comes—worn pale by storm's alarm,
Borne down by clouds, yet showing thro' their rifts
Some hint of heaven's blue and sunshine's glow
Ere falls to earth her mantle soft of snow.

What matters then tho' hill and vale are bare?
She clothes them in a dainty garb of white;
Hangs every shrub with icy jewels rare,
And fills the land with echoes of delight
From merry sleigh-bells, and the rythmic beat,
Upon the frozen road, of flying feet.

So comes Thanksgiving Day—as it should come—
With cheerfulness and joy, and ringing bells;
With dear ones gathered round the hearth of home,
While thro' the land a happy chorus swells
Which speaks a Nation's praise to God above,
In thankfulness for His protecting love!

Miscellany.

A LAGGARD IN LOVE.

"Yes, sir, my grandfather was a stirring man. When he set his head to it, I tell you, something had to be done."

Major Hartwell said it with an air of challange, albeit his surroundings were such as might tame the most warlike spirit. The big, square sitting-room was warm and bright, with a leaping log-fire, and four good tallow candles in tall, shiny, brass candlesticks. A thick rag carpet covered the floor; with a rug tufted in a pattern of impossible red roses, in front of the clean hearth. The fire-shine flung rose shades upon white, homespun curtains, with netted fringe at their edges, and played at hide-and-seek with the dark claw-foot table. Major Hartwell himself sat in the fireside's warmest corner, an elbow on either knee, his eyes intently fixed on the rosy apple in his fingers, from which a curling peel was swiftly lengthening under his skilful knife.

"Yes, sir! He knew his own mind—and made other people do the same. Why, when his first wife—my grandmother—died, he gave her a funeral that was the talk of the country—mahogany coffin, silver handles, a bishop to preach the sermon, and dinner for all the crowd. Then he waited a year, never looking at or speaking to a woman, out of the common. Then bright and early one morning, he put out cross country, to see a widow he'd heard of, but never seen. He knew, though, she had a good farm, and niggers, and money ahead. Up he rides—hellos; a lady opens the door. Says he:

"'Mrs. Johnson, I presume?'

"'The same, sir,' says she. 'What's your business?'

"'Madam,' says he, 'my name is John Langley, of Langley Grove, and I've come here to court you. Will you marry me?

"''Light, and come in, Mr. Langley,' says the widow. In three weeks they were married. Folks knew their own minds then—didn't hum and haw from New Year to Christmas."

"Well! I don't think it was so much to their credit. If I married in such haste I should surely expect to repent at leisure," Mrs. Hartwell said from the other chimney corner, a touch of asperity in her tone, and in her withered cheek a flush so faint and wavering as to seem but the reflection of the quick red leaping in the girl-face close at her elbow.

The room's other occupant smiled, not openly, but in the covert of his tawny mustache, the deeps of his sleepy-lidded blue eyes. A tallish young fellow, well-made, and well-looking, he sat at ease in front of the fire, his spurred heels stretched to rest upon the hearth's edge Evidently he was from the outer world, where harsh winds roared through the darkness, harsh clouds pelted the earth with pouring rain—such weather indeed that the bare coming through it, ought to have been accepted as a declaration of serious intentions.

That is, regarding a normal young man, Dabney Fane was exceptional. From boyhood he had never done the thing that was expected of him. So really it was not so wonderful that now for two years past he had spent at least a third of the time "dangling after" Betty Hartwell, when it was notorious that Miss Amelia Pattern, the heiress of the country-side, would "marry him at the drop of a hat, and drop it herself."

Now he half turned in his chair for a long look at Betty. "Thorough-bred, and fine as silk," was what Dabney Fane had said to himself upon first looking at her. Tonight he was more than ever inclined to echo the saying.

After a minute he turned to her father with, "How I wish, Major, that your grandfather's directness ran in the family. I proposed to Miss Betty five—no, I think it was ten minutes after we met—yet am still in a state of mortal uncertainty as to whether she will leave me or have me."

"It must be dreadful to live in fear of—the last," Betty said, with a laugh that was not quite so merry as she tried to make it. Her mother half frowned, saying,

"The fire is getting too low, Betty; call Tom to bring in a stick of wood."

"I let Tom go to his brother's festival. I'll bring the wood myself," Betty said, stepping into the hall outside, where lay a heap of round hickory logs, four to five inches through. Before she could lift one, Dabney Fane was beside her, had put her gently away, grasped a log in either hand, and was looking down into her eyes, saying,

"Betty, Betty——"

"Open the door, Betty—leave it open—then go and see about supper," came in Mrs. Hartwell's thinnest, most edged voice. Betty flung wide the sitting-room door, darted across the hall, and was about to vanish through a corresponding one that led to the dining-room, when faint but distinct through the rush of rain and wind, "Hello! hello! hello!" came from the inner gate.

"There—your great grandfather's ghost has come to shame you—or mayby its some mortal body on an errand like his. If it is, Betty, will you ask him to 'light and come in?" Fane asked rapidly, almost under his breath. Betty raised her eyes to his for a breath's space, but dropped them as she answered in his own key,

"I think I will."

"Why, somebody's helloing—travellers lost in the storm—or turned back by the creek—it must be swimming, from the way it booms," Major Hartwell said, hurrying toward the door as a second hail reached even his ears.

As Betty threw open the outer door, her father pushed past her, went down one of the porch steps, and sent a hospitable cry through the gusty darkness. Before it was answered he struck a ringing blow on the suspended ploughshare that served him as a gong to summon his hostler.

"They're dead beat, man and horse, must be, out in such weather," he said over his shoulder, betwixt vociferous invitations to the unknown. Mrs. Hartwell stood back of her daughter in the doorway, a candle upheld in either hand. The falling light made a bright square, within which Betty stood framed, a moving silhouette of vivid youth. Presently the gleam of a lantern swung around the house-corner—a faint red blur, that barely served to make visible the dash and hissing of the sheeted rain.

"Come on, sir—you're precious slow," Major Hartwell shouted to the lantern-bearer, himself splashing down across the wet gravel walk. Dabney Fane stepped in front of him, saying, "I'll go with Jack, Major; remember your rheumatism—nobody is quite worth your risking a winter of that."

"Much obleeged, young man—very much obleeged—but hospitality don't go well by proxy," the Major said, stumping off into the darkness. Fane made as if to follow him, but stopped at the porch's edge. Major Hartwell had turned, less than ten steps away; and came back out of the night, the storm, with a tall man, young, strong, black-haired, heavily bearded, who fixed upon Betty a long glance, so intense as to take no cognizance of any other presence. As he set foot on the uppermost step a savage flaw of wind blew out both candles, leaving all the space dark.

"Come in, sir—this way, never mind the wet," Major Hartwell said, pulling his dripping guest within doors.

Fane whispered in Betty's ear:

"Have your mind made up, young lady. This, I am sure, is a man after the grand paternal pattern. Tell me, Betty—in strict confidence—is it going to be yes or no."

"You are tiresome," Betty said; "worse even than papa. I simply hate a man who—"

"Doesn't know enough to go in when it rains. You should be merciful to the poor fellow, Betty. Remember he was coming to see you."

"Coming to see me! About as much as—you are—and nothing on earth brings you here, but your wish to spite—well—some people."

"Who are they, Betty dear?"

"You know without my telling."

"Upon my conscience I do not."

"You had better swear by something that has actual existence."

"Sarcasm, Betty dear, is unbecoming a young person, but let that pass, and tell me truly who it is that I am trying to spite."

"My mother—for one."

"I fear she does disapprove of me—that all her prayers are for my translation to another sphere. Now tell me—quick—who else?"

"I shall do no such thing—you know more of Miss Patten than I do—besides, mother is calling me—I must go—"

"Not till you tell me what you think of the fair Amelia!"

"Oh! I think you will marry her—one of these days."

"So does she. I's sorry you agree with her. I myself had quite other views."

The sitting-room door swung sharply open. Mrs. Hartwell came through it and led her daughter within. Walking slowly behind them, Dabney Fane saw the stranger rise from the fireside, bend his head in stately fashion, and lift Betty's hand till it brushed his lips; heard him say, with a liquid half-drawl that sounded oddly incongruous from such a mouth: "So this is my cousin Betty. I am more glad to see her than even the fire or the light, after such storm and darkness."

Betty looked at her father with eyes of wonder. He was coming toward them with his great-grandfather's liquor-case in his hands. The opening of it Betty knew to be always in the nature of an event. It was a square mahogany affair, on four upright legs, with spaces inside for a nest of of twelve big bottles. Each of them held a different liquor. The open top had six gold-sprigged wine-glasses, nestled each in its nook of faded velvet.

"To-night we're all Langleys—so your health must be drunk from Langley glasses in true Langley style. What shall it be—port, Madiera, peach-and-honey, Jamaica rum, apple-brandy, or whiskey older than Betty there?" Major Hartwell said, setting the case upon the rug. The glasses are a bit dusty—fetch a towel please, Betty, Mr. Fane, I make you acquainted with Mr. Langley Inge, of Alabama—his grandmother was a Langley, sister to mine, and he has come all this way to see his kin. I know you'll drink to him with a right good will. What'll you take, sir? The best in stock is not good enough for the occasion."

Simultaneously Fane and the stranger held out their hands. Betty put into each, one of the glasses, from which she wiped the dust of the five years since last they had been used. As the ripe golden liquors brimmed their clear round, the Mayor said joyously:

"Here's to the Langley blood—may it always run thicker than water, and never in the veins of less than a gentleman."

"My thanks," said Mr. Inge, with another deep bow. "Fill up again, please. I have come to Tennessee for—a wife. Drink all, that I may not go back without her."

Again the glasses clinked—the precious thimblefuls went down the throats of the good company; all that is, save Mr. Fane's, who choked and said, betwixt coughs, aside to Betty:

"A clear judgment on my hypocrisy. I deserve strangling for even pretending to wish him success."

The night was thereafter to Dabney Fane but a succession of very bad quarters of an hour. For two years he had hung about Betty, making love so openly as to proclaim himself in jest. She had seemed to him such a child, forever at her mother's elbow, more than obedient to the slightest word or look, it gave him a sense of bitter, burning amazement to find her thus full-flowered in womanhood—sought in marriage of another man. Mr. Inge's meaning was clear—his purpose admitted not the slightest doubt. Like Isaac of old, he sought a wife from his own people.

Clearly Inge—confound him—would have plain sailing. Betty herself heard him as one charmed. The very worst of it was Fane himself could not wonder at it. The fellow had seen much, and knew how to tell the story of it.

Up to Mr. Inge's coming he had not even known his own mind regarding Betty; nay, had let himself contemplate the not remote possibility of some day establishing his fortune with the Patten thousands. Now, many and golden as they were, they were as naught in the scale against Betty—Betty, who if he won her, must come to him almost empty-handed.

Win her he would—in spite of everything. Over and over he swore it to himself through the long night hours, with wind and thunder making the old house rock and roar, with the rain beating tattoo on the sloped guest-chamber wall above his bed. Opposite, Mr. Inge, of Alabama, slept the sleep of the weary even snored a little now and then.

In the calming of that resolution he fell asleep. He awoke to find the clock on the stroke of eight, with rain still pouring, low clouds hurrying over, on gusty wings of storm. He went down the stairway whistling softly, "My Love She's but a Lassie Yet."

As the sitting-room door shut behind him, he heard Mr. Inge saying: "Some men—most men indeed—would make a mystery about it, but it is not my way to beat about the bush. I am thirty years old, rather more than reasonably well-off, so six months ago I made up my mind to marry. Oddly enough, just as I came to that conclusion I met a man from your neighborhood, Colonel Barker. He told me about her, and at once I decided that she was the wife for me. Now will you tell me frankly what chance I have, in your judgment to go in and win?"

"H-m—I hardly know; maybe Betty or her mother—" Major Hartwell said, looking tentatively at his womenkind. Betty's cheeks were rose-red, her eyes dancing, as with some wild elation. She alone had caught sight of Fane, standing at attention, all his easy suavity gone, his face full of new purpose and meaning. "My advice, sir, is that you speak with your mind made up not to take no for an answer."

"And you?" Mr. Inge asked, as his eyes fell on Betty's face. She gave him a heavenly smile, and said, slowly:

"I—really. Cousin Langley—it is so funny, you asking all about such things. The only body who can say anything to the point is—Miss Amelia Patten herself."

"Quite right," Fane said, crossing the floor at three strides, to station himself back of Betty's chair. "But my advice, Mr. Inge, is, that before you propose you tell the young lady I am to marry your Cousin Betty."

Bending, he kissed Betty lightly on the cheek, and said, encircling her shoulders with his arms, "I thought I had lost you, Betty. Now I will never let you go."

Betty's breath came hard and fast. Tears gathered in her eyes, she tried to rise—to speak coldly—to push away those clinging arms. But love, for so long masked and chidden, now claimed a holiday. Trembling through and through, she hid her sweet eyes in her lover's breast, while her father said, a break in his cheery voice, "It's like your impudence, Dabney, confound you! to court and carry off my girl thus, under my very nose."—Scribner's Magazine.

A Pleasant Autumn Trip.

Take the steamer Yarmouth at Lewis wharf, Boston, at twelve o'clock, you will find a most excellent gentleman, Capt. Arthur N. McGray, who will see that Steward N. C. Hopkins assigns you to a cool, clean, well ventilated state room. You have only to ring an electric bell when you will be waited upon by a kind, motherly lady, who will give you every attention, see that all your wants are supplied; this lady is Mrs. Crowell, who lost her husband at sea. There are excellent meals served on board, in fact it is quite after the order of the Cunard Line and in liberal quantities. Capt. McGray finds time to look around among his passengers, saying a kind word to all.

At six o'clock A. M. you are at the wharf in Yarmouth, having come up a handsome harbor lined with trees on either side. The wharf is covered with the natives to see the steamer come in; each and all expecting to see a familiar face.

This party of press women who took this trip was met at the wharf by Mr. Parker, and he escorted them to a six-seated wagon with six horses, which carried them through the principal street to the Grand Hotel; a large modern brick structure, where every comfort can be had for a small amount of money. This house while in the centre of the town commands a fine ocean view. The manager of this house, is Chas. T. Wilson of Boston, who took his servants from the "Hub of the Universe."

Each lady was taken in a buggy and given a drive about this beautiful town, an ideal summer home, where it is never too hot or too cold. The Scotch hedge was everywhere; all the land was marked off by this hedge, both by the rich and the poor. My particular escort was Mr. Robert Caie, who is the rich man of the town, he having been very enterprising, building stores and beautifying the town by building a magnificient residence, finely terraced with flowers. Fine graperies abound on this town, Mr. Caie and Mr. Baker, (President of Steamboat Company,) owning the finest. They are now building water works and next summer there will be a good supply of water for all. There is a handsome cemetery in the place. The drives are wonderfully pleasant, no matter which route you go.

Any one who is in search of a pleasant trip at any time, I would recommend this as being one of the pleasantest and cheapest. Mr. Baker is very kind to all strangers visiting the town.

Truly yours, F. V.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croups as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

QUINCY, October 26, 1894.

To the Editor of the Patriot:

In reply to the article written under date of October 14th in your paper, signed by someone evidently who did not have the courage of his convictions, and for that reason had to use a "non de plume," would say that writer sees that he takes objection to the language used in my previous communication. Writer does not think that any stronger language was used in that communication than was called for under the condition of the things which he criticised.

He also notes that the unknown correspondent takes decided objection to the word "squander." Undoubtedly this is the case because he is not familiar with what the word squander means. The definition given to the word is "to waste without economy or judgment," and that is what writer intended to convey in his previous communication for in writer's opinion, if there ever was a case where money was wasted without economy or judgment it was on the method of attempting to repair Hancock street as pursued by the present administration.

Writer does not reply to the personal allusions in the article, for the simple reason that he thinks that anyone who cares to read an article of this kind certainly is not interested in regard to what particular method of enjoyment anybody who happens to write articles for the paper may take part in. If the person will be kind enough to send writer his name, and wishes to meet him and discuss the advantages and disadvantages of athletic games, writer will be pleased to discuss that in the proper place.

There is one thing, however, that writer is glad to note, and that is that the person writing the article agrees with writer and states that "we are all aware that Mr. Eaton knew that crushed stone would be the most substantial and in the end most economical." Now writer merely leaves it to the citizens of Quincy to decide whether they would like to have a man in office when he repairs a street to do so in a way that would be the most substantial in the end, or whether it is cheaper to pursue the patch up policy of the present administration, and thereby cause someone in the near future to expend a larger amount of money than it would originally cost to put the street in condition, and repair it in a way that would be the most economical in the end.

The person evidently is not aware of the wording of the Charter. Otherwise he would not be so silly as to state that "Mr. Eaton is not empowered to crush stone at his will and repair as he deems expedient." The Charter is very broad in the powers given to the Commissioner of Public Works, and the Council when the annual budget is passed gives the Commissioner of Public Works, and gave Mr. Eaton this year $14,000 and to Mr. Ewell last year $15,000 for the repair and maintainment of the streets as he deems expedient, and the only authority that the Council have to tell the Commissioner of Public Works where he shall spend the money is on specific appropriations, and judging from the way the orders of the Council of this class of appropriations have been carried out, the Commissioner of Public Works has done as he deemed expedient contrary to the Charter, by his not carrying out strictly the orders of the Council in these specific appropriations.

To specify what writer wishes to show is the hose house in Ward Two, the Council passed a specific appropriation to build that hose house under certain plans and specifications, and the Mayor had no right, nor had the Commissioner of Public Works any right to do other than the Council ordered. Notwithstanding the charter distinctly states so the present Mayor did not display an "excellent business intellect," nor very much "probity" where he allowed the Commissioner of Public Works to go ahead and expend the city's money wholly contrary to the Charter and to the orders of the Council.

Writer has no wish to abuse, but he certainly cannot see things go entirely wrong without making his protest. The article to which the writer is replying would seem to convey the idea that it was entirely the fault of the Council that Mr. Eaton has not taken the proper means of repairing the streets, nor taken the means which the writer of the article states would be the most substantial and economical in the end. He has a free scope to do as he sees fit with the $14,000, which was given him by the Council the first of the year, and has shown that, as we hardly think the Council if they had passed a specific appropriation for the widening and building of a bridge on Canal street, they would have included in that a sum of money to be expended, a memorial for the present Mayor and Commissioner of Public Works, and it is ridiculous to see the Commissioner erect a cut stone polished tablet to his and the Mayor's memory on a side street, and then undertake to repair a main thoroughfare with the worst kind of material that could be put on. There can nothing except the removal of the stuff that has been put on to Hancock street prevent that street in the spring when the frost comes out of the ground of being one mass of mud, round stone and ruts, a most ridiculous state of affairs on a street of that construction.

England in Two Days.

A Prescott, (Ont.) man claims to have invented a plan by which vessels will be enabled to cross the Atlantic from Canada to England in two days. He asks the governor for fifty thousand dollars to assist him in demonstrating its practicability. The model he submits shows a huge metal cylinder, one hundred and fifty-nine feet in diameter and one thousand feet long. Within this slung on an immense steel rod, hangs the ship broadside forward. The cylinder, against the face of which huge paddles are fastened, revolves on the rod, thus propelling itself at the immense speed of sixty miles an hour.

The cylinder is divided into watertight compartments and at each end of this rod is a projection for the lookout. It affords a promenade for passengers one thousand feet long, covered from wind and storm. Great resistance to the wind is offered by the revolving cylinder, but that is compensated for by there being no resistance to the water. Steering is done from the sides. It would be like a huge revolving barrel, with the ship hung inside and not coming in contact with the water. In calm weather it would go like a greyhound. The inventor submitted his idea to a nautical expert in England, who said that it violated no principle of navigation.

SATURDAY, NOV. 3, 1894.

No Annexation.

It is good news that the PATRIOT has to report today upon the annexation scheme. Neither Boston nor the suburbs want it. Boston has found that it is not area as much as commercial improvements that is wanted. The proposed dock system will do more for Boston than the extension of the city lines, which would be purely sentimental, without benefits.

In opening a hearing at Chelsea, our townsman, Hon. W. B. Rice, the chairman of the metropolitan commission, said:

"No general plan of annexation could be agreed upon as Boston was largely in favor of the present system and a majority of the cities and towns visited by the commission did not seem favorable to it, and the matter of creating a central government or metropolitan federation seemed the most feasible, and the commission would like to hear suggestions more particularly in regard to that."

At the Chelsea meeting a majority of those who spoke were opposed to either annexation or federation for Chelsea, preferring to the local independent self-government.

Mayor Carter said: "The city's experience with the metropolitan sewer commission was not such as would commend itself to the city of Chelsea. He would not vote for a limited commission to take charge of affairs. Concerted action on the question of the water supply would be a benefit. As to the members of the federation being appointed by the governor or chosen by the city or town governments or elected by the people, Mayor Carter thought perhaps a commission appointed from all over the State would be better than one appointed solely from one district, probably a better qualified set of men would be secured by being appointed at large."

Founder's Day Sports.

A more perfect day for out door sports, than Thursday, could not be asked for, and therefore those of the Adams Academy Athletic association who were to take part in the annual fall games in honor of Founder's day were in the best of spirits.

The games were to have been held Tuesday, but were postponed until Thursday because of the weather.

At 2 o'clock when the sports were announced to commence a large number, including many ladies, had gathered about the Academy waiting for the events; and among those interested were ex-Mayor Henry O. Fairbanks and Charles A. Howland of the board of managers, Councilman John O. Holden, Congressman Everett and others.

The judges were: Prof. W. R. Tyler, John O. Hall, Jr., B. F. Linfield, J. H. Slade, Jr., A. R. Wendell, R. H. Johnson, R. B. Porter, J. F. Harlow and A. H. Wise.

The first event was an 80 yards dash. There were three starters, and J. D. Kent was an easy winner, time 8 1-4 seconds.

Running hop, step and jump. In this event each contestant had three trials and although all did well H. W. Barker carried of the honors. Distance 34 feet.

Base ball throw. This event took place back of the buildings and some good throws were made, although they were not quite up to those of last year. In this event each contestant had three trials. C. A. Howland won throwing 280 feet.

220-yards dash. There were but three entries in this event which was won easily by A. B. Holden; time 32 1-2 seconds.

Bicycle race. This event had many admirers. There were but three starters. Barker, Whiton and Sargent. The course was from the front of the Academy to Houghs Neck and return, a distance of 8 miles. H. W. Barker took the lead at the start and held if throughout the race with Whiton second. The time was 26 minutes, 19 seconds, which considering the heavy roads was good.

The potato race had five entries and the way the boys hustled the potatoes into the baskets would have pleased any farmer. W. T. McConarty carried off the honors.

The three-legged race was over the 80-yards course and was won by C. A. Howland and G. E. Adams, who covered the distance in 11 seconds.

Barrel roll. This race consisted of rolling an empty flour barrel by hand across the field, and in this H. W. Barker proved himself superior to the others, covering the distance in 14 seconds.

The quarter-mile run for the challenge cup was an interesting event and J. D. Kent was the winner; time, 1 minute, 10 3-4 seconds.

Football kick. In this event each contestant had three kicks and H. W. Barker proved to be the best kicker, forcing the sphere 132 feet.

The obstacle race was doubtless the most amusing of all. At start the boys ran twice among the bushes, thence around the building, through a hoop, thence through a set of parallel bars, up a ladder and down a rope, a roll of a few feet on the ground, and a crawl on the hands and knees for the balance of the distance.

This race was given to J. Costa as he was the first to arrive who had fulfilled all requirements.

The next event was the tug-of-war, in three heats.

The first heat was between the second and third classes. The second class got the rope at the start, and although the boys of the third class did their best, when time was up, the second class had gained nine inches.

The second heat was between the first and fourth classes and the first class came off victorious with nine inches.

The final heat was between the first and second classes. These two classes were very evenly matched, first one side gaining an inch and then the other. When time was called the first class had a gain of two inches.

The games ended with a football match between two elevens chosen from the school, who lined up as follows:

H. W. Barker	full back	Adams
G. R. Kent	right half back	J. D. Kent
Manning	left half back	Sargent
Taylor	quarter back	H. F. Barker
Cavanagh	centre	Stoddard
Jones	right end	Duffield
Southworth	right tackle	Damon
Hayward	right guard	Holden
Sweeney	left end	Wason
Costa	left tackle	Eldridge
Nightingale	left guard	Whiton

Barker kicked off. Adams secured the ball and made a brilliant series of rushes and scored in two minutes after play began.

Again Barker kicked off and for some time the ball was kept near the centre of the field. Then Barker's side secured the ball through a fumble, and Barker made a gain of twenty yards, but Kent's men held well and the ball went to them on four downs. Kent kicked and Barker returned it. Adams made a short rush. Sargent advanced the ball five yards more. Then on four downs, with three minutes to play, the ball went to Barker, who tried to force the centre. Fifteen yards were lost through a fumble and Barker was forced to kick. Adams got the ball and failing to advance through the center, tried to kick, but fumbled the ball, and Sweeney dropped on it, on Kent's six-yard line. A mass play through the centre, and a rush around the right end put the ball over the line just as time was called. The score stood 4 to 4.

Prizes were offered to the winning team and there is a probability that the tie may be played off at some later day.

The Unitarians are to have an apron sale and entertainments in the chapel of the First Church on Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 14th and 15th. pl-1t

All wards were represented at the meeting and the same committee as served last year were appointed for this year, and next week will begin a house-to-house canvass for contributions for the Hospital.

At the meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society immediately following Dr. Holmes' death, a striking poem in his memory was read by William Everett. This poem appears in the November number of the New England Magazine, occupying two pages. It is a noble poem, by far the finest poetical tribute which has appeared since Dr. Holmes' death. Dr. Everett is a genuine poet, and this is a poem such as Dr. Holmes himself might have written for such an occasion.

Fire.

There is nothing that will draw a crowd quite as quickly as an alarm of fire from Box 26. Thus it was Monday evening at 8.18 when that box sounded, for in a few minutes City Square was thronged with people.

The fire did not amount to much, however, and a recall sounded.

Just before the alarm some of the street railway employes in their room noticed smoke coming through the sheathing of the top of their room and gave the alarm.

The railway fire service was brought into use by Chief Hunter who soon had a powerful stream going down the yard which served to keep the crowd back. Meanwhile entrance had been made into the bicycle rooms of W. L. Ripley, and a small stream of water forced under the floor which extinguished the blaze, which was probably caused by spontaneous combustion.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Members of the Quincy Charitable Society will hold their annual meeting Monday, November 5th, 1894, at 3 o'clock in afternoon, at 92 Washington street, with Mrs. Charles A. Spear, secretary.

WEST QUINCY.

The ladies' social union of the West Quincy Methodist church held a social Wednesday evening at the church which was not very largely attended. There was an impromptu entertainment after which refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

George Fader, a polisher employed in the shop of Miller & Luce at West Quincy, got caught in his machine on Wednesday and nothing but a slack belt saved his life. It was necessary to cut off his clothes to release him. Fortunately he escaped without a broken bone, but he was pretty well used up.

Seventy-four pupils entered the evening school in the Willard building Monday evening.

The Ladies' Social Union met in the vestry of the Methodist church Wednesday evening. Cake and ice cream were sold.

Mrs. Nettie Badger recited the "Shadow on the Blind," and "How to Cook a Husband," Chas. Barron gave a harmonica solo. Mrs. Wm. McCormick the president invited all who were present, the number was small, to come to the next meeting to be held in three weeks at the parsonage.

The next entertainment in the course in the M. E. church is "An evening with the Poets," next Thursday evening—all home talent.

Miss Susie and Mr. Clarence Byard entertained a few friends Tuesday evening at their residence on Crescent street.

Chief of Police Hayden accompanied by Officers Hanson, Ferguson, Bradley and Bisset made an unceremonious call Saturday night upon John Cassaina at 120 Willard street. John was somewhat surprised at the call as were also the half dozen more men seated about a table drinking beer and discussing the probable chances of election of McEttrick and McNary.

By an oversight John had neglected to provide himself with the required documents to enable him to serve liquid refreshments, so the officers confiscated his stock, consisting of 12 gallons of beer, 3 gallons of wine, 1 gallon of whiskey, tumblers, pitchers, etc., and transferred them from their resting place in John's abode to cell No. 1 at the police station.

The proposed extension of the Quincy & Boston street railway from its present terminus at West Quincy to East Milton cannot fail to be otherwise than a great benefit to the business interests of Quincy, for East Milton with its population of 1500 will be put in touch by half hourly cars with our city, and as five cents will take them from East Milton to Quincy Centre, much of the trade that now goes to Boston will come here. This being the case, it is for the interest of the city that the City Council in granting the location do not cover it with so many conditions and restrictions as to make it impossible for the road to build the line and make the trip for five cents.

The location asked was on the side of Willard street, but the location as reported by the Committee on Streets, of the City Council is the middle of the street and that the entire line shall be paved.

"I am running short of LEDGERS nearly every day," says Coram, the West Quincy newsdealer, and adds: "You had better send more daily."

SOUTH QUINCY.

The evening school at the Adams building has 64 pupils.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Penniman left Saturday for a trip to Rochester, New York, to visit their daughter, Mrs. James Pollock.

About forty of the friends of Miss Bertha Trepanier tendered her a surprise party at her home on Water street, Wednesday evening. Being Hallowe'en, the customary games were participated in. Singing, dancing and instrumental music were also enjoyed. During the evening Mr. Thomas Ford presented Miss Trepanier in behalf of her friends with a handsome gold bracelet, after which refreshments were served.

The Good Templars.

Thursday evening was red-letter night for Merry Mount lodge, I. O. G. T. It was installation of the officers elected last week, a list of whom were published in these columns. Lodge delegations were present from Amiette and Abbott lodges of Boston, and Corner Stone lodge of Hingham sent a barge full. "Standing room only" was displayed early and Doble's hall was tested to its full capacity.

Six new members were initiated. L. D. Joel T. Watson then installed the officers elect. The remainder of the evening was given to remarks by members of the visiting lodges, interspersed with music by Mr. Curtis, cornet, Mr. Bigelow, piano, and Mr. Stewart, violin; and singing by Mr. Barnes of Hingham. Refreshments were served by the social committee.

QUINCY POINT.

About forty-five of Miss Maggie Caldwell's friends responded to a quaint invitation to assist in the traditional Hallowe'en sports. Ice cream and cake were served during the evening. The guests departed at a late hour after a very pleasast evening. Quincy Point, South and West Quincy, Wollaston, Dorchester and East Boston were well represented. The "Easy Club" of Quincy Point attended in a body.

The stamp agency at Quincy Point will be opened November 1.

The two new cars of the street railway will probably be used on the Point line.

The Graham building on Sumner street is being made ready for John E. Drake who will open a shoe manufactory there.

A sub-marine diver has been at work this week putting in a stone foundation under the coal bins of J. F. Sheppard & Son.

The social to have been held last week by the Washington Street Congregational church, but postponed on account of the storm, will be held next week.

Gen. Casey, chief of the United States Army Engineers will ask Congress for $15,000 additional for Weymouth river improvements.

Hose 4 made unusually quick time in getting out Monday evening when Box 26 came in; although they had no horse the apparatus was on its way while the alarm was sounding.

The Johnson concert given in Quincy last winter will be repeated Nov. 20 at the Quincy Point church. It is said to have been the best the city has ever heard.

Fred A. Lapham celebrated his birthday anniversary Friday evening by entertaining a number of his friends at his residence on Washington court. The evening was one of enjoyment to those present.

Rev. Herbert M. Youtz, a graduate of Boston University, will fill the pulpit of the Washington Street Congregational church tomorrow. Mr. Youtz is a candidate for the existing vacancy, and it is hoped a large congregation will greet him at each service. Morning exercises at 11 o'clock and in the evening at 7.15.

NORFOLK DOWNS and "The Rail" are the only sections of our city which are much in need of school houses, and they are in a fair way of having their wishes gratified at an early date. Shall Quincy then vote to help Boston out by voting to be annexed? Oh, no; not if the voters are wise. Just read what the F. G. Pettigrove, the chairman of the Boston school board, says. Boston has 3500 children without school room:

> The needs of the schools have been presented to the city council again and again. There is not a single case where there is a lack of accommodation, that has not been repeatedly laid before the council. They say that under the present tax rate and under the present debt limit that it is impossible to furnish any more money. If that is true—and I have not the slightest doubt that it is—then we must consider Mr. Wetmore's proposition to ask the legislature to give the city authority to borrow $1,000,000 outside the debt limit. One million dollars is not enough to fully relieve the pressing needs of the present time, but it would go a great way.

WOLLASTON.

The Wollaston Cycle club gave an entertainment and lunch at its club house on Beale street, last evening.

Dr. George Richards has purchased a house and 4500 square feet of land on Lincoln avenue, Wollaston, of N. G. Nickerson for $5,000.

Miss Albee of Wollaston gave a delightful Hallowe'en party to a few of her friends at her residence on Prospect avenue, Wednesday evening.

The heavy easterly gale which prevailed on Thursday and Friday drove ashore on the Wollaston beach, Flood & Snow's large Cape cat Payomet.

Mr. E. Frank Badger, a well known resident of Wollaston, who has been seriously ill for some time, was taken to a private hospital in Boston, this week.

The Sunday services at St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston, will be held hereafter at 10.45 A M. instead of at 10.30, as announced in last week's paper.

There was a noticeable improvement in the incandescent lights at Wollaston on Tuesday evening.

There was considerable powder fired in Merry Mount park Sunday either for pleasure or practice, much to the annoyance of visitors.

Mr. A. G. Olney, real estate agent of Wollaston, reports the following transaction: The Nourse place on Arlington street, including 10,000 feet of land, has been sold to Herman Waterman. The Rich place on Winthrop avenue has been leased by Mr. Sheldon of St. John, N. B.

The third meeting of the Unity club of Wollaston was held at the vestry of the Unitarian church on Friday evening. The evening was in charge of Mr. Charles S. Commis and great inventions were discussed. A paper was read on "Milling Machinery" by Hon. Henry O. Fairbanks; "Shoe Machinery," Mr. F. A. Page; "Ether," Mrs. Charles S. Commis and "The electro-Magnet," Mr. Commis. The next meeting of the club will be held on Nov. 20th, and "Our Public Schools, their defects and the remedy" will be discussed. Mr. Sylvester Brown, master of the Martin school, Boston, will have charge.

The gunners shooting from boats and steam launches on Sunday annoyed the people of Wollaston and Atlantic. A strong effort will be made next year to have the old law re-enacted, prohibiting shooting from boats, in the mean time why does not our police enforce the law against shooting on the Lord's Day.

The largest and most complete bowling alley establishment south of Boston was opened to the public at the Duck's Nest, Wollaston, on Thursday.

A large crowd of bowling enthusiasts were present and participated in the opening. The first string on No. 1 alley was bowled by Mr. Daniel B. Lincoln and Mr. Edgar A. King; on No. 2 alley by Mr. H. B. Sanborn and Mr. C. V. Starrett. The first strike was made by Mr. Sanborn and the highest string by Mr. C. L. McClintock, who scored 180.

There was a meeting of the pastors of the different churches and the Ward Five Hospital Canvassing Committee on Tuesday evening to discuss by what means the money shall be collected this year, whether it shall be by collections at the churches or by a personal canvass. Wollaston contributed $815.03 last year. Wollaston's contribution will probably fall considerably short of that amount this year as there seems to be a feeling that Wards Three and Four (South and West Quincy) where 48 caused by accident came from last year, did not do their share in supporting the institution. Their combined contributions (South Quincy $800, and West Quincy $32.25) but slightly exceeded the Wollaston contribution. Wollaston is always ready to do its share in charitable work, in fact it does more than its share, but as a prominent citizen expressed it, he would like to see the two wards for which the hospital was built contribute their share towards its running expenses.

Employes of the water works began to lay pipes through Taylor street, Wollaston, Friday morning.

The ladies of the Methodist Episcopal church of Wollaston will give their annual harvest supper in the church on Thursday evening Nov. 8.

A unique sociable will be given at the Wollaston Congregational church on Thursday evening. The subject treated is "By the Seashore."

The Ladies' Social Circle of the Wollaston Methodist church held a sewing meeting on Wednesday evening at the house of Mrs. S. J. Higgins, Lincoln avenue. A goodly number of their gentlemen friends also met with them and enjoyed a pleasant social evening.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Mr. Charles R. Brown of Wollaston and Miss Clarrie Etta Thurlow of Bath, Me., at the latter place on Wednesday evening last. A reception will be held at Mr. Brown's residence on Beale street, Wollaston, on Thursday evening, Nov. 21, from 8 to 10 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will be at home after December 1.

The monthly business meeting of the Epworth League was held at the Methodist Episcopal church, Wollaston, on Thursday evening, at 7.45 o'clock. Reports of work done during the past month were given by the heads of the several departments through which the work of the league is carried on. At the close of the business session a half hour was spent in a pleasant social way by the members present.

Lecture on Hawaii.

The Wollaston Congregational Church was crowded with a representative audience on Thursday evening to hear the Rev. Frank H. Palmer's address on Hawaii, given under the auspices of the Ladies' Benevolent society.

Mr. Palmer was introduced by Mr. Charles G. Farwell, and was assisted by Mr. William I. Washburne of Wollaston.

Mr. Palmer, who is now a resident of East Bridgewater, was at one time at the Hawaiian islands. His lecture was intensely interesting as he told the story of the islands, aided by illustration, from the time of Capt. Cook's discovery in 1778 down to the recent political upheaval and the downfall of the dissolute monarchy.

Talk on Secret Sins.

Seats were at a premium in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Thursday evening. The announcement that C. A. Dorman, M. D., of New Haven, Conn., the most noted lecturer on personal purity in the country, would give his talk on "Secret Sins of Young Men," was enough to fill every chair and leave a number standing.

At the men's meeting Sunday afternoon the same subject will be followed and helpful suggestions offered.

The junior Bible class will begin Monday evening at 7 o'clock.

The Business Men's Gymnasium class which has been so popular for the past two years, will meet for the first time Monday at 5 o'clock. Dr. E. R. Johnson will take the measurements and conduct the class on Monday afternoon, and the General Secretary will have charge on Thursday at the same hour. This class is composed of business and professional men.

The Whitman Association has invited all of the committees in the district to participate in a committeemen's meet and banquet on Wednesday evening, Nov. 7. Prominent speakers from Boston and Haverhill will talk on pertinent subjects. As the new committees have just been appointed, each member should plan to attend.

Dr. Johnson will give his first talk Wednesday evening, preceding the class drill. Subject, "Muscles and Bones.

An interesting entertainment will be given Thursday evening Nov. 8, to members of the association and auxiliary and their friends. Mr. Graham, a promising young humorist, will be one of the principal attractions.

ATLANTIC.

The Epworth League of Atlantic held a reception to members and invited friends on Tuesday evening. In spite of the rain quite a goodly company were present to enjoy the entertainment under the auspices of Miss B. E. Vogler as chairman of the social department.

The instillation of officers of the Epworth league of Atlantic M. E. church was held Sunday evening. The Juniors marched up from the vestry and sat in reserved seats in the front of the church. Special music was rendered by Miss Mabel Burr and a bass soloist from Boston. The pastor preached a very good sermon, charging the league to "plan their work, than work their plan."

Misses Florence, Jennie and Mabel Wilson of Squantum street gave a Hallowe'en party Wednesday evening to a few of their friends. The evening was passed in pleasant manner with Hallowe'en games, etc.

Dr. Kendall's Boston Terrier Mora was awarded N. C. at the dog show now being held at the County Club, Brookline. Although confined entirely to terriers, this show has been very successful, over two hundred dogs competing for prizes.

Mr. Sanford Small, of the firm of Timberlake & Small, the well known grocer of Atlantic was united in marriage Wednesday evening to Miss Jennie Dunn, a well known teacher of music, at the residence of the bride at Neponset. A reception followed the ceremony after which Mr. and Mrs. Small left for a brief trip. They will reside on Squantum street, Atlantic.

James Lyons was run over by a stone team at Atlantic, Monday, and quite severely injured.

Mr. John Golding, ticket agent at the Atlantic depot, has been transferred at his own request, to the Bridgewater station where he will be ticket agent. W. S. Weaver of Bridgewater takes Mr. Golden's place at Atlantic.

J. Q. Litchfield the new principal of the Quincy school is meeting with great success.

Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Kendall were given a surprise party by their friends Tuesday evening on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of this marriage. Presents appropriate to the occasion were numerous. The doctor who is captain of the Boston Bicycle club, was presented by that organization with an easy chair and the Dr. and Mrs. Kendall were presented by Atlantic friends with a set of oak dining-room chairs.

The High School Club.

Miss Bassett, president, called the meeting to order on Wednesday, and Miss Bemis, the secretary, gave her report, which was adopted.

Under the head of unfinished business Miss Bill, '96 spoke on the subject of "The Pulpit and the Press." The election of officers followed and these nominations were made:

For President,—Miss Sullivan, '95; Mr. Chapman, '96.

For Vice President,—Miss Coyle, '96; Mr. Barry, '95.

For Secretary,—Miss Keating, Miss Melzard, Mr. Wilder.

For Treasurer,—Mr. Warshaw, Miss Alice Sampson, Miss Pierce.

The following officers were chosen:

President,—Mr. Chapman.

Vice President,—Miss Coyle.

Secretary,—Mr. Wilder.

Treasurer,—Mr. Warshaw.

The entertainment followed:

Mr. Winlock made up his declamation and spoke well.

Essay, "How to Study," Miss Alice Sampson; a very sensible essay.

Declamation, Mr. Marnock, '96. Mr. Marnock was ready this time and spoke effectively.

Music, Miss Beckwith, '96, accompanied by Miss Daisy Bemis. A very pleasing selection. It added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion. The project of a double quartette and an orchestra at the High School should be carried out.

Recitation, Miss Sullivan, '95; a story of manly heroism. Well rendered.

Essay, Miss Thomas, '95; a "ghost story" full of incidents.

Mr. Mudgett, who was to speak, was excused.

Essay "A Dream," Miss Pierce, '95; an interesting account of some "dream fishing; given very intelligently.

Recitation, Miss White, 95; an excellent selection.

The debate followed: Resolved,—That Solitude is more Favorable to Mental and Moral Improvement Than Society."

The speakers in affirmative were: Miss Butler, Miss Burns, Miss Cahill, Miss Coyle, Miss Dunham, Miss Edwards.

Negative: Miss Emery, Miss Garrity, Miss Gavin, Miss Graham, Miss Annie Healey, Miss C. E. Healey.

When the debate was opened to the school Miss Coyle, '96, and Miss Bates,' 95 spoke.

The debate was a very excellent one. Miss Greaney, as critic, gave a bright and valuable report. She wittily attributed the simultaneous rising of two speakers to their anxiety to debate. The board of decision decided in favor of the affirmative.

The board of decision consisted of Miss Bates, Miss Leary, Miss Bemis and Miss Sullivan.

The Class of '96 in view of their lack of experience are doing remarkably good work in debating.

Sent to Reform School.

Charles Carlson, the 12 year old son of Louis Carlson of South Quincy, has been a source of trouble to his parents for some time. The boy has a good home and his surroundings are such that he should be thankful he has so good parents. The boy, however, does not know how to appreciate his home and instead of behaving as he should he is continually playing truant and running away. During the past few weeks he has run away several times and has been absent several days before he was apprehended and returned home. Finding that kind words were of no avail his father had him arrested for being an unruly boy and this morning in the District court upon the advice of the state agent he was sent to the Reform school during minority.

Election Returns.

The Minot club of Neponset has made arrangements to receive the election returns by special wires from all parts of the United States. The square in front of the club house will be a rival of "Newspaper Row." Mr. Chas A. Ufford of Dorchester who has an enviable reputation as a stereopticon has been engaged for the evening. The returns will be reflected on a cloth in the square. This will be a treat to the citizens of Dorchester and Quincy who do not wish to go the city to get election news.

John McCarthy a Veteran.

Mr. John McCarthy, an old resident of this city, died Tuesday at his home on Newcomb street. He was born at Lisbon, Portugal, in 1812, his father being an officer in the English army. At the age of eighteen he entered the army, spending three years in the service. While still a young man he came to America, and for a number of years was a resident of Quincy. He served all through the civil war, being a member of the 39th Mass. Vol. He leaves a widow and two children.

The Ladies' Contest.

The following is the result of the ladies' whist tournament at the Granite City Club rooms; for six months ending Oct. 24. It is the average per cent. of those who played sixty per cent. of the games:

Miss A. L. Curtis, 56.8; Miss Lottie B. Spear, 54.8; Mrs. Fred L. Jones, 52.5; Mrs. E. W. W. Bass, 50.3; Mrs. George W. Jones, 49.9; Mrs. Dr. Gilbert, 46 4; Mrs. Joseph C. Morse, 44.6; Mrs. Frank Hall, 36.7.

MILTON.

William Buchan, who escaped from Milton officers some weeks ago, will probably be tried in Boston, as it was in that district that his crime of escaping from the custody of an officer was committed.

The reception of the King's Daughters at Ellsworth Hall last Friday evening was well attended. The affair was a success both socially and financially.

The Whist club met Wednesday evening with Miss Eleanor Graham. Albert Brackett and Miss Buck each obtained a prize. The next meeting is at Miss Webster's

The Republicans held a rally last evening at the Town hall, Milton. J. Merrill Brown presided and introduced Messrs. Henry Cabot Lodge and Roger Wolcott as the speakers of the evening. The hall was crowded and much enthusiasm was evinced.

Frank Parsons will lecture Saturday evening at Rugby hall on political economy.

The Republicans of Milton held a grand

There is an unusual number of houses in process of erection at the present time in Milton; in fact, more than ever before in the history of the town. J. A. Bowman has recently sold building lots on the Pleasant View tract to Ada W. Rich, Nellie E. Mayhew, James Woodlock, Clarence B. Stuart and Winifred C. Holbrook.—Transcript.

Mr. Kelsey has broken ground for another house on his small lot at the corner of Washington and Brackett streets.

A man named Carver of Braintree fell from his team Monday afternoon in the square. He was taken into the depot, where it was found that no bones were broken and afterwards taken to his home.

Mr. Poore who has boarded at the Granite House during the past summer has rented the house at the corner of Washington and Eaton streets of Mr. James Crawford.

Mr. T. L. Pearce has decided to close his old store, and has removed his business to his store in the new block.

DOWNS AND PARK.

Mr. Haynes of Boston has moved into his new house on Hamilton street.

F. W. Bugbee has moved back to Norfolk Downs from South Weymouth.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Beals of Norfolk Downs have returned from their vacation trip.

Mrs. Thomas Shay of Nova Scotia is the guest of his son Louis Shay of Hamilton street.

A party of young people headed by Ernest Shay go on a barge ride Wednesday evening, and a gay time is expected.

A large number were present Thursday evening at the musical and literary entertainment given by Norfolk lodge, A. O. U. W., at its hall near the Norfolk Downs depot.

The entertainment which was of an interesting character, consisting of an overture by Miss Florence Stiggins, Miss Emily Bjorkman and Mr. Harry Sprague on the piano, violin and euphonium; readings by Miss F. A. Flanders; violin solo, Miss Bjorkman; humorist selections, Thomas Whalen; vocal solo, Mrs. A. F. Pierce; euphonium solo, Harry Sprague; tenor solo, J. R. Muir; bass solo, George S. Walker; song, Frank Sanborn; and selections by the Columbian quartette composed of J. R. Muir, Frank Adams, Oscar Staples and George S. Walker.

The accompanists for the several numbers were Miss Florence Stiggins, Miss Emily Bjorkman, Miss Hattie Phelan, Mrs. J. F. McGrillis and Miss Martha Sanborn.

Each number was well rendered and was received with frequent applause.

At the conclusion of the entertainment dancing was in order, nearly everybody participating.

Refreshments were served during the evening by Caterer Thomas.

Shakespeare.

An excellent lecture was delivered Thursday evening in the Universalist church by Rev. A. E. White, A. M., of Cambridge. His stereopticon views were very fine, and the able and dramatic style in which the lecturer described them, met with the hearty appreciation of the audience.

Among the first were the scenes of Shakespeare in his youth; showing the old house at the time of his birth; the room in which he was born; the furniture; the house as it is since it was remodeled; the schoolhouse; the long row of benches and seats, where the noble boy first learned his lessons; a fine picture of him at twelve years, etc. Then there were given many beautiful dramatic views in Shakespeare's plays which were described with wonderful ability.

Sons of Veteran Dance.

The first social dance of the season of Francis L. Souther Camp, Sons of Veterans was held Wednesday evening at Hancock hall, and although the attendance was not as large as it would have been but for the stormy weather, those that did attend enjoyed a good time and did not regret that they had braved the weather.

Shawmut Spring Water.

F. J. FULLER, Proprietor.

WEST QUINCY, - - MASS.

This is an excellent water of remarkable purity.
H. L. BOWKER, State Assayer,
Boston, Mass.

The water question is engaging the attention of residents in thickly settled districts, and an intelligent investigation shows a large proportion of disease directly traceable to drinking water.

Experiments have shown that microbes that form in decayed vegetation, stagnant water and sewerage, which are the principal cause of fevers, will filter through seventy-five feet of jacked sand and how much farther through sand or earth is not known. Nearly three-fourths of the human system is water. How important then that we should drink only pure soft water which absorbs and eliminates lime and other earthly salts from the body. There is no other sensible preventive or cure for the system that is choked and clogged with calcarious salts than a systematic use of pure water.

This Shawmut Spring Water comes from a fissure in the face of a hill of Granite. Its use in cooking, drinking and bathing will, we think, show marked improvement in health. Different from hard water, in bathing it gives a soft, velvety appearance to the skin and should be used exclusively in washing young children.

It is free from all surface contaminations.

Pure water is the best medicinal water; there are no typhoid fever germs in it. It assists nature and restores to healthy action the digestive organs, and is conducive to the health of children and all persons of delicate constitution.

The very low price of this excellent water is within reach of all; just enough to defray the expense of delivery. All communications sent the proprietor will be promptly attended to.

First Quarter, Nov. 5, 10.16 A. M.

An October Wedding.

The residence of Councilman and Mrs. John P. Bigelow of 37 Franklin street was prettily decorated Saturday evening with plants and flowers from the greenhouses of Mrs. Packard, and the marriage of their daughter Miss Grace Green Bigelow to Mr. Otis Atwood Edgarton of Dorchester, was a joyous occasion to the many life-long neighbors and friends in attendance. Rev. E. C. Butler of the First church tied the knot at 7 P. M., and a reception followed from 8 to 10, supper being served by Caterer Wales.

The bride's gown was of white silk with valencia lace and white roses. Miss Edith B. Hammond of Dorchester was maid of honor, and her dress was of white silk and imperial lace, and her bouquet of red and white pinks.

Mr. John P. Bigelow, Jr., was best man, and the ushers Mr. Charles A. Hobart and Mr. Albert J. Williams of Quincy, Mr. Harry Ober and George Smythe of Boston. Mr. Charles S. Whitcomb of South Braintree presided at the piano.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgarton were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Bigelow, Mrs. James Edgarton, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. L. Smythe of Dorchester, Miss Sadie Restarick of Mattapan and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lee of Chelsea.

The young couple will be at home at 28 Beach street, Harrison Square, on the Wednesday evnings of November.

Adams Academy Alumni.

The annual dinner of the Adams Academy Alumni Association was held at the Parker House, Boston, Tuesday evening, October 30, 1894. A large number of graduates were present and much enthusiasm and interest toward the school was shown. Speeches were made by Mr. Thacher, Mr. Tyler, Dr. Everett, Mr. Lawton, Mr. Wendell, Mr. Lane, Mr. Warren, Mr. Frothingham and others. The officers of the preceding year were reelected:—

President,—Thomas Chandler Thacher, A. B.

Vice Presidents,—Walter Irving Badger, A. B., William Royall Tyler, A. B., Frederick Warren, A. B., Perry Lawton, A. M., John Otis Hall, Jr., A. B.

Secretary and Treasurer,—Arthur Rindge Wendell.

Among those present were: T. C. Thatcher, F. Warren, W. R. Tyler, Dr. William Everett, Perry Lawton, C. C. Lane, C. T. Howard, Dr. A. C. Coolidge, C. E. Loud, J. P. Loud, L. A. Frothingham, A. R. Wendell, W. H. Draper, G. B. Gavin, R. H. Johnson, E. St. J. Johnson, J. R. Fuller, J. O. Hall, Jr., A. L. Hale, A. W. Hall, W. T. Hartzell and J. W. Cooke.

High School Alumni.

The promoters of the new High School Alumni Association were very much encouraged by the large attendance of graduates at the preliminary meeting in the new High school building last evening. All told there were 56 in attendance including Superintendent Lull and Head Master Tupper. Mr. Frank F. Prescott, '77, called the meeting to order and was chosen chairman, and Howard W. Battison, '85, secretary.

Upon motion of Dr. Sheahan, '66, a commiteee of ten was appointed by the chair, to draft constitution and bylaws and report at a meeting in two weeks. The committee.

Dr. Joseph M. Sheahan, '66
Miss Kate A. Raycroft, '77
Miss Dorcas C. Higgins, '79
Miss Mabel E. Adams, '82
Miss Eliza S. Dinnie, '84
Mr. Percival A. Hall, '87
Mr. Clarence E. Fuller, '89
Mr. Charles E. Pierce, '90
Miss Alice M. M. Richards, '91
Miss Jane P. McGovern, '94

At 8.45 the meeting adjourned for two weeks, when it is hoped that there will be an attendance of over 100, as by-laws will be adopted and officers elected.

Young Men's Congress.

The third annual meeting of the Quincy Young Men's Congress was held Tuesday evening. The following officers were elected for 1894-5:

Speaker,—Everett S. Litchfield.
Vice Speaker,—E. W. Branch.
Clerk,—Wm. P. Bailey.
Assistant Clerk,—Henry R. Holden.
Sergeant at Arms,—J. E. Merritt.
Chaplain,—O. C. Colton.
Executive Committee,—Walter S. Pinkham, Henry R. Holden, Delcevare King.

The next meeting will be held Nov. 13, when the subject of the annexation of Squantum to Boston will be considered.

The City Council.

The alarm of fire at 8.15 Monday evening from Box 26, opposite City Hall, caused a sudden adjournment of the City Council amid confusion, although the fire was out before the members got out of the hall.

In the forty minutes, however, quite a little important business was transacted, as will be seen.

Two applications for licenses and one for State Aid were received.

The Committee on State Aid recommended $3 per month on petition of D. F. French and the report was accepted.

Liberty Street.

The Committee on Finance reported amendments to the order appropriating $3,500 to regrade Liberty, Penn and Quincy streets, which were adopted, and the order given a second reading.

A motion to suspend the rules was opposed by Councilman Moxon, who desired that surveyor's plans be first prepared, giving notice that it was his intention to offer an order.

The motion was withdrawn and Councilman Moxon subsequently offered an order, requesting the Commissioner of Public Works to cause plans to be made. Adopted.

Norfolk Downs Streets.

The Committee on Streets reported separate orders for laying out Rawson road and Beach streets, both of which were ordered to a second reading.

Copeland Street.

On the petition to widen and improve Copeland street, the Committee on Streets reported leave to withdraw. Accepted without discussion.

Miller Stile Road.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for a hearing Nov. 19, on the acceptance of Miller Stile road and the discontinuance of the stile through land of Dr. Everett. Adopted.

The Committee on Licences reported favorable on the application of Robert R. Smith.

Fountain Square.

Ought not to pass was the report of the Committee on Finance on the order for paving in Fountain square, because of the uncertainty as to title of the land, suggesting that it was desirable to proceed, an appropriation of $100 for examination of title should be made.

Councilman Federhen asked if this was not the duty of the City Solicitor.

Councilman Moxon replied that Solicitor Blackmur did not so regard it.

Councilman Holden moved to lay on the table, and attributed all this trouble to Councilman Anderson, accusing him of being the "dog in the manger."

Councilman Anderson maintained that there was a reasonable doubt as to the title, and thought there was no occasion for the remarks of Councilman Holden.

Councilman Johnson said the Council had the report of the Committee on Finance and the opinion of the City Solicitor, and thought it was not necessary to ask Councilman Holden to interpret the law.

Councilman Federhen and Solicitor Blackmur had a further tilt on the duties of a Solicitor.

The motion to lay on the table prevailed although only one or two voted either way.

The order appropriating $800 additional for burial places, was unanimously passed to be ordained.

Polling Places.

Councilman Robbins offered an order designating polling places for the municipal election, the only change being in Ward Six. Adopted,

Calendar.

The order granting a location to the Quincy & Boston street railway on Willard street, took its second reading.

The order appropriating $7,093 55 of which $4,669 was for payment of building the tower on the new High school; $1524 55 for alterations; $500 for plumbing; and $400 for gas and electric lighting fixtures, was under suspension of the rules passed to be ordained.

The Council at 8 15 adjourned for one week, the eve of the State election.

The Political Field.

That is a queer arrangement of the candidates on the specimen ballots and in the official list of candidates for the election of next Tuesday, and may result in disputes as to counting among the election officers.

Instead of dividing the candidates for county commissioners into two groups, one for the "full term" candidates and one for the candidates "to fill vacancy," all were grouped together, and voters were instructed to "Mark Two." It might be well in advance to have an interpretation of law as to how crosses against Morrell and Ruggles, both full term candidates, should be counted. The same complication would arise if one votes for Morrell and Green, Ruggles and Green, or Blanchard and Burke. Will such votes be thrown out or counted?

A Democratic rally was held at Hancock hall, Tuesday evening, and although the weather was rather wet a large crowd was present.

William F. Powers called the meeting to order and introduced as the presiding officer of the evening, John T. Cavanagh.

On the platform were Mayor Hodges, Councilmen Baker and O'Brien, Cornelius Moynihan, William T. Shea, John A. Duggan and Zenas S. Arnold.

The speakers were Salem D. Charles, John W. Corcoran and Herbert M. Federhen, Jr.

Hon. W. S. McNary who was announced to speak did not appear.

A rally in the interest of Michael J. McEttrick for congress was held Tuesday evening at Music hall, Atlantic.

There was a large crowd present and the meeting was presided over by Councilman Edward McKeon.

Addresses were made by Messrs. McEttrick, Moran McNeil, Coakley, Ross and Glynn.

A rally to endorse the candidacy of Michael J. McEttrick for Congress was held Saturday night at St. Mary's hall.

The speakers were Mr. McEttrick and John J. Moran, Lewis Doud, Frank Foster and A. A. Carleton. Candidate McEttrick paid his respects to Candidate McNary and the organization known as the A. P. A. He would like to discuss their respective labor records in the Legislature. McNary's record there was one an honest man would hate to think of. Let him meet the issue fairly and fearlessly, instead of making a record for me out of his own head which he in his heart knows to be absolutely false.

Mr. Moran severely criticised the labor record of Mr. McNary, and said he would like to meet Atwood and Fitzgerald.

Work has been commenced this week in the several polling places getting ready for the State election.

A McEttrick rally was announced for Friday evening.

McEttrick and McNary who are fighting for Congressional honors in this district, met in Gray's hall, South Boston, Wednesday night in joint debate.

The hall was packed full and the admirers of both gentlemen were out in force. Mr. McNary opened and closed the debate, and tore McEttrick's record to shreds, and attacked him on his relation to the Australian ballot system. He also claimed McEttrick had received money from Atwood and others two years ago.

Mr. McEttrick in reply denied all the charges and told how McNary had voted on some of the questions relating to labor. He also accused him of not attending to his business in the Water Department of Boston, as he should, but was using the city's time in political work.

In speaking of the debate the Advertiser characterizes it as a debate of savage personalities and almost open insults. It lasted until midnight.

School Committee.

The School Committe held an important meeting Tuesday evening and transacted considerable business.

The only absent members were Messrs. Rice and Corthell.

The Finance Committee reported the following unexpended balances:

Salaries,	$11,556.62
Fuel,	277.87
Janitors,	805.20
Transportation,	193 00
Miscellaneous,	2,086.59
Books and stationery,	12.92
Evening drawing school,	557.80
Evening common school,	867.40
Sewing,	100.25
Cooking,	100.00

The chairman reported that the $2,500 asked of the council for furnishings for the new High school had been passed.

Two New Buildings.

Mr. Burns of the sub-committee on petition for new school building at "the Rail," reported that owing to the long distance some of the children were obliged to travel it was advisable to erect a new building in that district and the committee would recommend the erection of a building on the corner of Willard and Robertson streets, on what is known as the Sargent lot.

Dr. Gordon, for the sub-committee on petition for a school building at Norfolk Downs, reported that such a building was needed and that it would relieve the Wollaston and Quincy school buildings and would recommend the erection of a building near the junction of Beach street, Rawson road and Willett street.

Both of these reports were accepted, and it was voted that the City Council be petitioned to erect a nine-room brick building at "The Rail" and that the Sargent lot on the corner of Willard and Robertson street be suggested.

That the City Council also be petitioned to erect a nine-room brick building in the Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Park district and that a location near the junction of Beach street, Ranson road and Willett street be suggested as the proper location.

A communication was read from Wood, Harmon & Co., offering to sell any lot selected, to the city for one-half the regular price.

Superintendent's Report.

The Superintendent asked permission for the Teachers' Mutual Improvement association to use the High school building for its meeting, which was granted.

Attention was called to the necessity of electing truant officers and the following were elected: Joseph W. Hayden, Joseph T. French, Charles Hall, Michael J. Canavan, James E. Maxim, Samuel B. Turner, John Holloran and Albert G. Olney.

Miss Lawrence of the Coddington school who is at home sick, was granted half pay for the balance of the term.

The regular Thanksgiving recess from Wednesday noon to the next Monday was voted.

The Superintendent reported that the work of Miss Follansbee of the High school was too much for one teacher and the sub-committee was instructed to provide assistance for her.

The Superintendent reported that the business course at the High school as now arranged was:

First year,—Bookkeeping, commercial arithmetic, English, language, English history and civil government.

Second year,—Advanced bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting and English.

An informal discussion followed on technical grammar, and at 9.20 the meet-adjourned.

A Wollaston Novelty.

The Whatsoever Ten, King's Daughters of Wollaston, gave a "Feast of Riddles" and an entertainment at the Unitarian church vestry on Tuesday evening.

At half past six o'clock a supper was served. It was called a feast of riddles because the menu was made of such dishes as woman's weapon, Boston pride, close quarters, mingled vanity and numerous others equally tempting.

After the supper the audience was entertained with a number of bright sketches taken from Life and Puck and set on the stage, and also with piano solos by Miss Packard and vocal solos by Mrs. Pendleton and Mr. Littlefield.

Among the sketches taken from Life and Puck were:

"A Self Feeder," which was impersonated by Miss Howard, Miss Marion Lewis and Mr. James H. Lewis.

"The Hero of the Hour," foot ball player, Mr. Horace Taylor, dude, Mr. William E. Howard.

"A Sudden Change of Program," Silas Haycox, Mr. Edmud S. Taylor; Mrs. Haycox, Miss Taylor; Martha, Mrs. Albert E. Rhodes.

"Begging the Question," Mrs. Brown-Jones, Miss Howard; Mr. Jones, Mr. W. E. Simmons, Jr.

"Arcadian Simplicity," Mrs. Greenmeadow, Miss Kingman; Mrs. Uphand-Upham, Mrs. Rhodes.

"A Sad Investigation," teacher, Miss Taylor; Willie Green, Mr. Kenneth Lewis; Jimmy Green, Mr. Carl Lewis.

Among the members of the Whatsoever Ten who assisted in carrying out this entertainment were Miss Taylor, Miss Noyes, Miss Helen Foster, Miss Howard, Miss Kingman, Miss Ross, Mrs. Pendleton, Miss Prescott, Mrs. Albert E. Rhodes, Miss Jones, Miss Robbins, Miss Ela, Mrs. Ralph J. Saxe, Miss Dunham and Miss Kolb.

Lovell's Grove to be Improved.

The summer resort property known as "Lovell's grove," has just been sold to James Donaldson of Boston, the well-known shoe man, the price paid being about $35,000.

The grove, which is one of the most beautiful in the neighborhood of Boston, is situated in North Weymouth, and contains 10 acres, with big oak shade trees. The land is high. An extensive outlook may be taken from its towers.

The property was owned by E. B. Wildes, and was sold direct to Mr. Donaldson. The grove was improved by George Dunbar, many years ago, at an expense of $50,000. Since Mr. Wildes became the owner of the property many improvements have been made.

Mr. Donaldson, when seen recently, stated that it was his intention to expend between $15,000 and $20,000 in fitting the grove up, beside putting in a new line of steamers next season.

—Rev. W. E. Schileman of Malden has been called by the First Baptist church of Weymouth.

—Hyde Park will teach typewriting and stenography in its evening schools.

The Pulpit and People.

THE PATRIOT announced on Saturday at least 69 religious services including Sunday Schools and young people's meetings, for Sunday, and the services were not complete nor were eight societies included. Quincy is a city of churches as well as a city of granite and of schools. It has 22 church edifices, besides 6 societies which meet in halls. So long as there is one church for every one thousand citizens the city is safe. Three churches have been dedicated in Quincy this year.

Through a misunderstanding Mr. James B. Thomas of the Harvard Divinity school, who was to have conducted the services at St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston, on Sunday, did not come out from Boston, so it was necessary to postpone the service.

The attendance at the harvest concert of the Congregational church, Sunday evening, was very large and the exercises were of a pleasing nature. The programme consisted of the cantata "Garland Sheaves," which combined music and recitations, which were given by members of the Sunday School. Miss Isaac was also heard in a pleasing solo.

The magnificent contribution of $103, given by the Wollaston Congregational society to the New England Home for Little Wanderers has been increased to $115.

The services at St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston, will be conducted by Mr. James B. Thomas of the Harvard Divinity school. Mr. Thomas acted as Deacon at the opening services of the church on last Thursday evening.

All of the services at the First church were largely attended Sunday. In the afternoon at 4 o'clock there was a vesper service, lasting a little over an hour. In the evening at 7 o'clock there was a meeting of the Guild at which the subject was "God works surely, if Slowly."

The Rev. F. W. Pratt of West Roxbury, preached at the Wollaston Unitarian church on Sunday, exchanging with the Rev. James E. Bagley of the Wollaston Unitarian church.

Work has begun grading about the enlarged chapel of the Quincy Congregational church.

The Rev. Edward A. Robinson of the Wollaston Congregational church, exchanged with the Rev. George Walcott Brooks of the Village church, Dorchester, on Sunday.

Hospital Sunday was observed at only one of the Wollaston churches on Sunday,—the Methodist. A collection of $15, was taken up.

Mrs. E. A. Gleason, the noted temperance speaker, addressed the various Wollaston Sunday Schools on temperance a on Sunday and in the evening spoke to large audience at the Baptist church.

James B. Thomas, a divinity student, conducted the services at Christ's church Sunday, morning and evening, and delighted his congregations.

In the Sheds and Quarries.

There are over 130 firms in Quincy engaged in some part of the granite business.

There have been lots of inquiries for estimates of work for spring delivery and the prospect is good for next year.

James N. White is at work upon a plain granite sarcophagus monument to be erected in Cedar Grove cemetery in memory of John L. Stevenson.

For removing pieces of steel, etc., from the eyes none excel the granite workers who are daily called upon to relieve some fellow workman.

Nearly all the machinery of the Lyons Granite Co. has been put in position and work in their yards and quarries is rushing.

John Reinhalter has opened a quarry on the Bailey estate near Pleasant street.

William Turner has several handsome polished cradles in his yard.

The Glencoe Granite Co. think business is on the improve and they have good hopes for the winter.

The greatest piece of monumental sculpture in the world is claimed to be the German National monument erected in commemoration of the restoration of the German empire and Franco-Russian war.

The roads or cart paths that lead to some of the quarries are anything but smooth, and the wonder is that the stone teams do not break down oftener than they do.

Notwithstanding that the granite business is reported as being quiet, the Monumental News reports a number of new firms that have gone into business with a large capital.

Thomas & Miller have just completed a handsome sarcophagus monument of medium Quincy granite which will be shipped to Kansas next week. Mr. Miller will go on to set the same.

The Adams Granite Co., is building an 18-foot addition to its blacksmith shop.

Swingle & Falconer have this week shipped three car loads of finished stock, to the west.

Residents of Warren have raised funds to erect a monument to the memory of the late Rev. W. A. Rankin, as a mark of the esteem and reverence in which he was held during his long pastorate in their city.—Jamestown, (N. Y.) Journal.

Mr. E. M. Wheelwright, the Boston city architect, has accepted an invitation from the Minnesota state authorities to be sole judge of the competitive designs for the proposed new State House at St. Paul.

☞ Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Black will receive a limited number of applicants for a private class in dancing to be formed in Quincy about the middle of November. Particulars etc., at 125 St. Botolph street, Boston. 3w

POLITICS.

The political situation in the 10th district is still in a very unsettled condition as regards the next congressman. That Mr. McEttrick is making a far better appearence than Mr. McNary on the stump, is universally conceded, but to offset this, the Democratic machine is putting forth every effort in behalf of the latter, and much quiet work is being done to insure as little disaffection with the regular nominee as possible. Mr. Atwood's friends are also busily at work in his interests and as a result, the "Independent" vote of last year against him will be much lessened. The best information obtainable to date indicates that the relative standing of candidates at the close of election day will be as follows: Atwood, 34 per cent.; McNary, 31 per cent.; McEttrick, 29 per cent, and all others, 6 per cent. Trades may yet be made which will change this predicted result, but the chances now are that it will not vary much from the above. Mr. Atwood will receive hundreds of votes from men who, while they prefer some man of larger caliber, recognize the necessity of electing as many Republicans as possible and desire to wipe out the present Democratic majority.

To one not entirely unversed in city politics, the October Monitor is most amusing in its attacks upon Mayor Hodges. When one realizes that the articles are inspired (if not actually written) by a clergyman, a lawyer and a real estate dealer who have lost their "pull" by the last change of administration, the animus of the contents is apparent. The moment they were obliged to relinquish their control, that moment they declared war upon Mayor Hodges, and from now till the city election is decided, may be counted upon to give him battle with the whole strength of the triumvirate. How much that strength is, is variously estimated at from twenty-five to fifty votes. Of this I have no personal knowledge, but receive it from those closer to the trio than I am. It may safely be asserted, however, that those men who expect to be appointed to public office and are not, are the most bitter in their resentment toward the man who fails to recognize their transcendent abilities when he has the power of appointment. Every fair minded citizen knows that the present mayor could not make the tax rate appreciably less than it is, on account of the legacy he received from previous administrations, and no thinking, honest voter will undertake to charge him with the faults of others. However, it will be better to wait for the state election to be settled before going very deeply into city affairs; there is however a deep laid scheme being worked which I will mention later.

I think Commissioner Eaton has made a mistake in not replying over his own signature to the communication of Mr. Charles M. Bryant, which appeared in the PATRIOT, and referred to the repairs (?) on Hancock street. It was outspoken and deserves to be either denied or the charges acknowledged to be true. Which is it to be Mr. Commissioner?

The contest for Representatives to the General Court is being lost sight of in view of greater contests, and yet there ought to be considerable interest manifested in the election of those who are to directly represent us and make the laws which most intimately concern the welfare of the state. Before any nominations were made, I stated that "only exceptional ability and merit should entitle a man to represent this district for a third term." Has Mr. Hammond shown that he possesses either of these qualities in the least degree? If not, he should not be chosen for the third time. Mr. Johnson was his superior in all those qualities which make an influential public man; but the ways of the caucus are a mystery and a delusion; fortunately the voters are the final judges.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

Nothing of a local nature deserves the attention of the city government more than the question of street lighting, and the LEDGER has done well in calling it to the attention of the people, but it should not stop with the incandescent system but include the arc lights which are far below the standard for which the city pays. I believe Quincy receives less for its money in the matter of light than from any other appropriation. Once in a while the arc lights will be brilliant and clear, but most of the time they are dull and lifeless. The people would like to see the Electric Light Company forced to a decent standard commensurate with the money it charges the city.

SIGNED EDITORIALS.

The course adopted by the editor of the LEDGER in signing an editorial, seems to one to be beneath his dignity. Surely every editorial should be from the pen of the editor, and because some individual sees fit to question its source, it ought not to be incumbent upon him to prove by his signature that he is capable of composing and writing his own editorials. The congratulations received were undoubtedly intended as compliments, but in reality were not. JUNE.

Wollaston Scores.

The members of the Wollaston Trap club seem to be losing their grip. The highest scores made on Saturday afternoon were 16 by Morse and D. B. Lincoln. This was on the first string. On the second string Lincoln was high man with 15 birds. Whitman made the best run, breaking 9 straight. Tucker made 6 on the first string and jumped to 13 on the second.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back.

Alfred G. Adlington aged 55 years and an inmate of the Weymouth poor farm, went to Boston last Saturday to draw $200 back pension money. Since that time nothing has been heard of him and foul play is hinted at.

His Success Assured.

Although Quincy has hoped to secure the nomination for the vacancy on the board of County Commissioners, caused by the death of Hon. John Q. A. Lathrop of Cohasset, and sent a portion of her delegates to the convention pledged to the support of ex-Commissioner of Public Works, W. Walter Ewell, it is perhaps hardly necessary to state that the situation which made possible the nomination of Mr. Thomas Blanchard of Stoughton, for the position, is gracefully accepted and that he will have the cordial and hearty support of not only every Quincy Republican, but that his popularity in this section will secure for him many Democratic votes next Tuesday. Mr. Blanchard is one of the best known Republicans in Norfolk county. His unassuming, conservative manner and well know business tact, makes him the strongest candidate that the party could have selected and the vote that his friends will roll up for him on election day will be a surprise to many.

Mr. Blanchard left school to enter the army in the early sixties and served in both the 10th and 36th regiments during the Rebellion. He is past commander of his Grand Army post and immensely popular among the Grand Army boys throughout this section. As a successful business man, and Water Commissioner of Stoughton he is well and favorably known in the business world.

He has been a member of the State Central Committee from this district and the second district and member of his town committee.

Walter P. Beck for Senator.

Mr. Walter P. Beck, the Democratic nominee for senator from this district, has always been a resident of Milton. He was educated in the Milton public schools, Milton academy and Chauncy Hall school, Boston. He has always been active and untiring in all matters appertaining to the interest of the town.

In 1888 Mr. Beck was nominated by the Democrats for representative from the fourth Norfolk district, (Milton and Canton) and although the district is strongly Republican, and his opponent was a strong candidate, he was elected; being the only Democrat elected from Norfolk county that year. His record in the House was satisfactory, not only to his constituents, but to the voters of the district irrespective of party.

He declined a nomination in 1889 on account of business which demanded his entire time. In 1891 he was elected on the school committee of Milton for three years and in 1894 re elected for three years more, and it was through his persistent exertions that the new East District school building was built this year.

Every voter of the first Norfolk senatorial district, irrespective of party, can vote for Mr. Beck with perfect confidence that the interests of the district will be carefully looked after.

Be sure to mark your ballot for WALTER P. BECK of Milton for senator.

MAYOR LAWRENCE of Medford has asked the City Council for an appropriation of $147,000 for a new High school building. Mayor Fairbanks of this city secured during his administration plans and an appropriation for one of the model high school buildings of the state, which complete and furnished will not cost $63,000. Medford has approximately the same population as Quincy.

Ex-representative Albert P. Worthen of Weymouth went gunning Wednesday evening and bagged a 20-pound coon.

—The annual chrysanthemum show in Boston is a sight which many would not miss. This year it will be held Nov. 6, 7, 8 and 9 in Horticultural hall. Doors open from 12 to 9.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croups as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, NOV. 3, 1894.

An Autumn Landscape.

No wind there is that either pipes or moans;
The fields are cold and still; the sky
Is covered with a blue-gray sheet
Of motionless cloud; and at my feet
The river, curling softly by,
Whispers and dimples round its quiet gray stones.

Along the chill green slope that dips and heaves,
The road runs rough and silent, lined
With plum trees. misty and blue-gray,
And poplars pallid as the day,
In masses spectral, undefined,
Pale, greenish stems half hid in dry gray leaves.

And on beside the river's sober edge
A long fresh field lies black. Beyond,
Low thickets gray and reddish stand,
Stroked white with birch; and near at hand,
Over a little steel-smooth pond,
Hang multitudes of thin and withering sedge.

Across a waste and solitary rise
A ploughman urges his dull team,
A stooped gray figure with prone brow
That plunges bending to the plough
With strong, uneven steps. The stream
Rings and re-echoes with his furious cries.

Sometimes the lowing of a cow, long-drawn,
Comes from far off; and crows in strings
Pass on the upper silences.
A flock of small gray goldfinches,
Flown down with silvery twitterings,
Rustle among the birch cones and are gone.

This day the season seems like one that heeds
With fixed ear and lifted hand
All moods that yet are known on earth,
All motions that have faintest birth,
If haply she may understand
The utmost inward sense of all her deeds.

Notes and Comments.

—The city of Medford is to build a new High school to cost about $150,000.

—Brockton's new City Hall is beyond question the "largest, costliest and most striking" building in Plymouth county.

—Squantum wants to be annexed to Boston. A large proportion of her clams, says the Mansfield News, were annexed long since.

—James F. Faley, the permanent receiver of the Iron Hall at the headquarters in Indianapolis will for awhile hold back $250,000 as against imperfected claims.

—During the past session Congressman E. A. Morse, who represents the twelfth district, received about 6,000 letters from his constituents and he answered nearly every one.

—The oldest pensioner in the country is said to be Andrew Franklin of Burlington, Kan., who was born in 1791, fought in the war of 1812, in two Indian wars and served as a teamster in the civil war.

—Attleboro has struck a novel idea for raising money. It has celebrated its 200th anniversary, and proposes to raise $400 to put at interest for its triennial celebration. The fund will then amount to some $20,000.

—"When Cornelius Vanderbilt opens his new house at Fifty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue, N. Y., with a ball, soon to be given to introduce his daughter to society, Seidl will sit down to a $15,000 piano, which has recently been put in place in one of the magnificent parlors.

—Any man who went to the post-office June 30, 1891, and invested $1 in 25 one-cent postal notes is going to make money out of his investment. A postal note will look so strange a dozen years from now that more than one rich collector will be willing to pay an unreasonable price for one.

—The city of Newton is taking the preliminary steps towards municipal lighting. The movement has gone so far that the voters at the coming city election will vote for a second time upon the question of having a public electric light and gas plant. If the verdict is favorable again, immediate steps will be taken to secure a plant.

—Edwin Hayward, an old and respected citizen of East Bridgewater, now in his 80th year, last week dug a well 30 feet deep. The distance walked to and from his work in that time was over 48 miles. Can any town in the State produce a man of his age who can perform that amount of work?

—There are several different aspects of the problem of how cold coldness can possibly get; but it is sufficient to know that physical research has demonstrated that 500 degrees below zero Fahrenheit is possible. At this point the hydrogen, which takes the place of mercury in all standard air thermometers, becomes frozen, and the atoms of gas exhibit no motion of any kind whatever. This is the lowest point at present capable of being registered.

—The sum of $2,000,000 is to be raised as the state tax for the present year by the 10th of December. Every city and town in the state must pay its part on or before that date. Boston's tax is the largest in the state, the amount being $731,500. The smallest of all is that of Gay Head, which is $20. Quincy tax $12,460. Other towns in this vicinity pay as follows: Braintree, $2,760,; Brockton, $16,180; Canton, $2,720; Dedham, $5,500; Hyde Park, $6,680; Milton, $13,120; Norwood, $2,360; Randolph, $2,180; Stoughton, $2,300; Weymouth, $6,060.

Anecdotes.

Schoolmaster (to class in political economy)—What is the hardest tax to raise?

Boy (whose mother is house cleaning)—Carpet tacks, sir.

Practical Aunt—Do you think you are qualified to become the wife of a poor man?

Sweet Girl—Oh, yes, it's all fixed. We are to live in a cottage, and I know how to make cottage pudding.

"Didn't the ladies who called leave cards?"

Bridget—"They wanted to, ma'am, but I told them you had plenty of your own, and better, too."

Editor—James, what is that moving in the waste basket—a mouse?

James (examining basket)—No, sir. It's one of them throbbing passionate poems, sir.

Editor—Put some water on it and throw it into the coal hod. We haven't enough insurance to run any risks.

Landlord—"Did you read the lease?"

Applicant—"Yes, sir, but I miss the description of the stable."

Landlord—"Stable? what for?"

Applicant—"For the jackass who would sign such a lease."

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief, It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take.

—State election next Tuesday. A milder campaign has not been known of late years. It was really fought during the months of the past year, or, at least, men's minds were made up during that period of depression.

—Ex-Mayor Keith of Brockton asserted in his address at the dedication of the new City Hall in that city that the abolishing of the liquor traffic in Brockton during the past seven years had saved to the people more than the cost of the $310,000 hall. The Enterprise of that city says the figures are understated rather than overstated, as the total sum would represent an income of only $10 a day to a dozen licensed places. However that may be, the sum total of the saving, if saving there be, can hardly be expressed in figures. Yet there are honest citizens who believe that liquor selling in Quincy would be a benefit to the city.

—Franklin C. Pratt, a resident of North Weymouth, who, for more than a year, has been an inmate of the insane asylum connected with the State farm at Bridgewater, is pronounced to be sane. His aunt has labored long for his release, and secured council, who induced the court some time ago to appoint a physician to make an examination into the man's condition. Dr. E. A. Chase of Brockton made the examination, and in his report he finds that Pratt is perfectly sane. A year ago last March Pratt committed larceny and was sent to the Taunton asylum for the insane.

—A constitutional amendment is proposed at the State election. The office of commissioner of insolvency is only an honorary one and is regarded as superfluous and the voters will be called upon to abolish the office.

—Two aged citizens of Bryantville, 82 and 85 respectively, gathered their apples, climbing to the highest branches.

—Before "Old Glory" was unfurled to the breezes the colonies had many and divers emblems and flags. The standard of Great Britain was used up to the time of the revolution, but each colony added to it some local distinguishing design. The colony of Massachusetts made use of the pine tree on her flags and coins, and this emblem eventually became famous. The armed ships of New York flew a white flag inscribed with a black beaver, which emblem is now on the arms of the state.

—State roads are fast becoming a reality in Massachusetts. The highway commission is now at work in sixteen detached sections of road scattered all over the State. On the state road at Shelburne and Buckland, quartzite, taken from the river near by, will be used, and L. W. Page, the geologist of the board, is now collecting specimens for testing around Lenox. Evidently the plan is to make use of various material, choosing the best of those near at hand. At Hingham gravel is being used from the excellent supply near that town. Great things are expected from the good roads movement, although the taxes will no doubt be a little heavier for a while.—Ploughman.

The Boston Stage.

Hollis Street Theatre.

It was thought at first that the general public might accept the idea that the Brownies was an entertainment designed especially for children, but it is gratifying to know that this view of the play was not at all popular, and its initial production in Boston at the Hollis last Monday settled this fact beyond contradiction. The Brownies as placed on the stage by Messrs. C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger is attractive modern entertainment, replete with up-to-date humor, utilizing the latest knowledge of stage mechanism to perform wonderful things, together with a background of artistic productions of the painter's brush for the hundred and more people that compose the company. The Brownies of course were the central figure of attraction and the quaint little people were most heartily admired, not only because of their cleverness, but for their marvellous fidelity to Mr. Cox's creation preserved in their make-up.

Tremont Theatre.

On Monday night, Nov. 5th, will begin the final week of Rice's Surprise Party, in Barnet & Pflueger's noted and fascinating extravaganza, "1492." No work of its kind has ever had a more thorough "all round" success than has attended the history of this production. It has been given again and again in this city, and now is fulfilling a run of great prosperity at the Tremont. In the first place the original production abounded in merit, and was worthy of more than ordinary prosperity. In the second place, the unexampled taste and skill of Manager E. E. Rice has constantly added to the attractions of the work, until it is a compact illustration of what an extravaganza should be—full of fun, brilliant specialty, gorgeous scenic effect, splendid costumes, and an array of feminine beauty hardly possible to surpass.

Columbia Theatre.

"Sowing the Wind," Sydney Grundy's play continues to draw audiences that are large and fashionable to the Columbia, and it will be continued at that house for some little time to come. The week beginning November 5, will be the third week of its stay, and indications point to the fact that it will be the largest from a business point of view that the play has yet enjoyed. It is seldom that a more interesting play has been placed upon the Boston stage, or one more admirably acted. The company is under the direction of Charles Frohman and his abilities were all bent to secure a cast that should be worthy of the play. Miss Mary Hampton, already a favorite in Boston, has won hosts of new friends and admirers through her admirable portrayal of Rosamund. Mr. J. H. Gilmour is as manly and artistic as could be desired.

Boston Theatre.

Never in the history of the Boston Theatre has that great historic playhouse experienced for the opening weeks of a play such an enormous and extraordinary patronage as characterizes "In Old Kentucky."

Even "The Old Homestead" which heretofore has done the largest and most prosperous business of any theatrical performance in Boston or elsewhere was not quite so successful in point of attendance at any period of its history as has been the case thus far with "In Old Kentucky." The play is one of the best constructed and best managed of any of its kind and is really very enjoyable. There is a negro quartet and a large colored contingent, big and little, whose songs and dances add a pleasing variety to the programme.

—When we read of two Mormon missionaries being tarred and feathered in New York state this month for proselyting, we are led to wonder how much this boasted American citizenship has really gained in enlightenment and toleration since the burning of "witches" at Salem.—Framingham Tribune.

Household Receipts.

PUMPKIN PIE. Press one quart of stewed pumpkin through a fine colander; add to it two quarts of milk, two cups of sugar, seven eggs beaten very light, and a teaspoonful each of butter, ginger and cinnamon. Stir thoroughly together and fill plates that have previously been lined with a rich pie-crust.

GINGERBREAD. Half a cupful of the best butter, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of cream, three cupfuls of the best flour, three teaspoonfuls each of finely-ground ginger, cloves and cinnamon.

STEWED OYSTERS. Put the liquor on the fire in a porcelain kettle and let it come to a boil. When it has boiled two or three minutes add as much rich milk as there is liquor and let that come to a boil. Then put in the oysters and when it boils up again they will be done. A little while before taking off the fire add salt and pepper to taste and a generous lump of butter rubbed up with a little flour and milk.

APPLE SHORT CAKE. Bake pie crust in layers, spread between well sweetened apple sauce, serve hot with cream beaten to a stiff froth.

STRAWBERRY ROLL. Cut thinly rolled pie crust into oblong pieces, cover with strawberry jam and roll up and bake.

CARAMEL CAKE. One cupful of sugar, one cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour, butter size of an egg, one teaspoonful of cream tartar, half teaspoonful of soda, half cake of chocolate, grated. Bake in layers.

APPLE PIE. One cup of grated or stewed apple, one cup of sugar, one yolk of egg, juice of half a lemon and a little of grated peel, or nutmeg or cinnamon for flavoring. Bake with under crust like custard pie, and when done spread over the top a meringue made of the white of the egg. Brown in the oven.

Good Mince Meat.

As the mornings grow frosty and the crops are harvested and stored away for the winter all minds turn to the national feast day. The thrifty housekeeper looks over her hoard of good things preparatory to making the tempting pies, cakes, etc., so much enjoyed on Thanksgiving day. The following receipt taken from Good Housekeeping is for a rich mince meat and our readers may like to try it for their Thanksgiving and Christmas pies:

Take four pounds of tongue or tender beef, three pounds of suet, eight pounds of chopped apples, three pounds of currants, washed, dried and picked; three pounds of seeded raisins, six pounds of white sugar (or brown if preferred), two pounds of citron cut into small, thin pieces; the grating, juice and pulp of two large oranges; the juice and grated rinds of four lemons; one ounce of cinnamon, a quarter of an ounce each of cloves, mace and allspice, the grating of four nutmegs, one quart of Madeira wine, one pint of brandy, a cupful each of strawberry or raspberry jam and quince preserve, one pound of sweet almonds blanched and pounded fine, very small teaspoonful of bitter almonds. Boil the meat in the smallest possible amount of water until very tender, adding the broth to the minced meat. Chop very fine. After removing every particle of membrane from the suet, dredge in a little flour to keep from sticking together in lumps, and chop very fine; mix it through the meat with salt enough to remove the fresh taste. To this add the apples, after which the sugar, fruit, spice and other ingredients. A little sweet cider or a little molasses and plenty of salt must be added. It should be made sweet enough to taste, and is not to be cooked. This is a very old recipe, and delicious. Cooked mince meat makes a very different kind of pie, and not what this is intended to be. Half of this makes a large quantity.

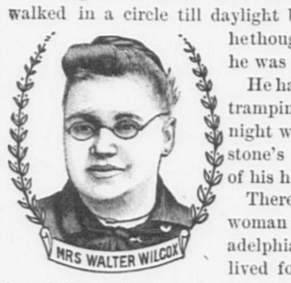
Experiments show that the right side of the human body, when magnetized, gives off a blueish light and the left side a yellowish red.

WHAT A MISTAKE!

Mrs. Wilcox Suffered Years Thinking There Was No Relief.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

One night in a terrible snowstorm a man walked in a circle till daylight because he thought that he was lost.



MRS WALTER WILCOX

He had been tramping all night within a stone's throw of his home.

There is a woman in Philadelphia who lived for years in a daily circle of suffering, because she thought there was no relief.

Her suffering was caused by female weakness in its worst forms. She had pain in her back and loins, great fatigue from walking, leucorrhœa, local inflammation, and a frequent desire to urinate.

All this time relief was close at hand, and she had only to accept it with the same faith that has saved thousands of others. Every druggist had it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her of all weakness and disease, and she is now a different woman. This woman is Mrs. Walter Wilcox, of 736 West Street, who advises all women who suffer so from female weaknesses to try it and be cured. It cures kidney trouble in either sex, expels tumors, removes backache, and invigorates the system.

Dr. H. A. Tucker's Valuable Remedies.

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE,

Who, after 20 years' personal use, writes as follows TO THE PEOPLE:

I know by personal observation that DOCTOR H. A. TUCKER'S medicine, popularly called "No. 59," is potent and safe. It ought to be on the shelf in every nursery, and in the satchel on every journey. Going from home I always carry some of it with me, and have administered it to many who in car and steamer have been taken sick. Better smash your brandy flask and the various styles of "Bitters," which are Rum put up under enticing nomenclature, and take with you a bottle of DOCTOR TUCKER'S 59 as a pocket pistol with which to shoot down physical disorders.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE.

No. 59 Diaphoretic Compound.

USE NO. 59 in all cases of Colic, Cramps, Spasmodic Affections, Cholera, Dysentry and Summer Complaints, Sudden Colds, Coughs, Fever and Ague, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Headache, Neuralgia, and Rheumatic Affections, Bruises, Sprains, Wounds of all kinds, Weak Heart, Poor Circulation, all Internal and External pains, Poison by Ivy and Dogwood, Stings of Bees and Bites of Poisonous Insects, etc.

Temperance Majority Possible.

You have 4,000,000 church members in the Protestant denominations of this Republic who vote. You have about 1,000,000 Catholic voters. There are 5,000,000 who ought to be ashamed of being the authors of legalized temptation; who ought never to consent to a State sanction of solicitation to vice. I believe that if the pulpit will speak out, and if the schools go on another generation teaching such doctrines as they now emphasize, the churches and the schools might govern the ballot of these 5,000,000 on the liquor traffic. They could do this, especially well, if the liquor traffic fires on Sumter and attacks the home, the Sabbath, and the public treasury more and more audaciously, as it seems likely to do.

Some would say, there are 5,000,000 outside the church that help to support divine services, and who send their children to Sabbath schools, who on the whole are friends of organized christianity. I say there are 3,000,000 that might be brought into line with the church members as friends of Protestant or Catholic christianity. There would be 8,000,000 who ought to vote right on this question. There are a majority of the voters in the land, and I am not counting the women at all, and among the women there is a far greater majority, who would vote right. There is more money behind the churches, if you will only use it, than there is behind the liquor traffic. Eight million of you who are voters are a great majority of the number of votes actually cast. Only about 11,000,000 ballots were cast in the last Presidential election. Eight million out of the eleven million! If you would stand together there is no party you could not bring to terms. If those who believe in the principles of christianity would vote as they pray, the liquor traffic might be made within one month an outlaw.

REV. JOSEPH COOK.

All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

There's hardly a housekeeper in the country but has heard of Cottolene the new vegetable shortening. It is a strictly natural product; composed only of clarified cotton seed oil, thickened for convenience in use, with refined beef suet—pure and sweet. So composed,

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap counterfeits with imitative names, spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

It's easy to avoid disappointment and insure satisfaction. Insist on having Cottolene.

Cottolene

The new vegetable shortening is the most popular food product of the day. Its use means good food, good health and a goodly saving in the end. Since the introduction of Cottolene, lard has no longer place in food or kitchen.

Cottolene

serves every purpose of lard, and serves it without grease, odor or indigestion. Those who have given Cottolene a fair trial never go back to lard. Be sure and get the genuine. Don't let any dealer palm off any of the many worthless imitations on you.

Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails by all grocers.

Shawmut Spring Water.
F. J. FULLER, Proprietor.
WEST QUINCY, - - MASS.
This is an excellent water of remarkable purity.
H. L. BOWKER, State Assayer, Boston, Mass.

The water question is engaging the attention of residents in thickly settled districts, and an intelligent investigation shows a large proportion of disease directly traceable to drinking water.

Experiments have shown that microbes that form in decayed vegetation, stagnant water and sewerage, which are the principal cause of fevers, will filter through seventy-five feet of jacked sand and how much farther through sand or earth is not known. Nearly three-fourths of the human system is water. How important then that we should drink only pure soft water which absorbs and eliminates lime and other earthly salts from the body. There is no other sensible preventive or cure for the system that is choked and clogged with calcarious salts than a systematic use of pure water.

This Shawmut Spring Water comes from a fissure in the face of a hill of Granite. Its use in cooking, drinking and bathing will, we think, show marked improvement in health. Different from hard water, in bathing it gives a soft, velvety appearance to the skin and should be used exclusively in washing young children.

It is free from all surface contaminations.

Pure water is the best medicinal water; there are no typhoid fever germs in it. It assists nature and restores to healthy action the digestive organs, and is conducive to the health of children and all persons of delicate constitution.

The very low price of this excellent water is within reach of all; just enough to defray the expense of delivery. All communications sent the proprietor will be promptly attended to.

Flocking of the Birds.

FRANK H. SMITH.

October frosts have chilled the air,
And turned the leaves to gold and red;
The birds are flocking here and there
And whirling swiftly overhead—
Dark-vestured swallows, lithe and strong,
And sparrows bold and finches gay,
And warblers making joyous song—
As new formed columns moved away.

From broken fences, from the ground,
From trees and ledges, everywhere,
We see them circle round and round
And form their armies in the air;
Dark swaying lines that rise and fall
And cast long shadows on the grass.
And sharp and clear we hear the call
Of leaders as the columns pass.

And silently among the trees
The thrushes flock and disappear;
We hear their notes upon the breeze,
And then—the singers are not here,
The autumn wanes, and kinglets go,
Sweet-voiced and knightly in their way;
And all the birds our summers know,
They flock and leave us day by day.

The autumn wanes and days are cold,
The northern winds are sharp and keen,
Dull brown assumes the place of gold,
And dark and gloomy skies are seen,
And honder hawk, who fainter grows,
Above the hills and grazing herds,
Is symbol of the season's close,
And last of the departing birds.

HONEY LOCUST HILL.

Mr. Basil Goodloe's house reared its gray, high-pitched roof among the trees across our upland pasture. The Goodloe land dwindled until there were only the house and yard and there was danger now of the few remaining acres going. Taxes and mortgages lay heavy and thick, and not all the Goodloe effort could remove them.

The two daughters, Charlotte and Helen, did what they were able; but what can youngish delicate women do in a countryside where negro cooks and washerwomen abound; where the few schools are taught by youths who have had a year's learning in higher schools? Blackwell, the son, was at Barclay Court House, a clerk in a shoe store. His small earnings went to make the burden a little less heavy at Honey Locust Hill, we all knew, but it would have taken a salary twenty times as great to have had any perceptible effect upon the heaped-up back debts.

Old Mr. Goodloe himself exercised the only craft he knew,—tree trimming. When at work in his favorite spot, the burial plat in front of his house, where lay his wife and ancestors, his mournful dignity and pride lifted him above smaller considerations. In this brief square of ground lay the links of the chain binding him to power and love. Let come what might, this spot was his for all eternity; the delight of mingling his dust with that beloved dust, to nourish plants and flowers and, thus transmuted, to exult in his native sun and light, was to him what the thought of the everlasting life of the spirit is to some men.

He looked upon the menace to his future ownership of the remainder of his land with the quietude he used in surveying a thickly twigged tree. These dangers had always hung over Honey Locust Hill. They were there when he was a young man; they had gathered no closer in middle age; and now that he was old he did not, in his heart, believe they could dispossess him. He used to talk to my father sometimes upon that very subject, when we were sitting around the fire in the cool evenings.

"Yes, I know there is that mortgage to Judge Grame. My father made it to his father years ago. In answer to a remark about interest, he said,—

"Interest! The Judge does not require interest from an old friend. I understood that especially.

But we all knew that young Blackwell paid it regularly twice a year in bills smelling of leather and hides from long hoarding among the malodorous produce.

Charlotte had on her tender mind the fortunes of another besides her father and brother. She had been engaged for years to her cousin, Motley Beall, a man of the fibre of Mr. Goodloe, but who had not the good fortune to be reared in a time of leisure, when he might have acquired the calm which enabled his uncle to endure serenely the buffets of fortune. He had earned the title of captain in the Confederate Army, and there his success had stopped. Now he was farming a scraggy bit of land and looking forward to the day when he and Charlotte could be married. His sweetheart was not given to brooding, and spoke freely over her sewing to my mother.

"Thank goodness, Motley has no interest to pay,—but then he has no money either! I hear people calling him shiftless and worthless. It isn't that; he is just like father. He can't help it; it is born in him, and he could not get it out of him if he worked himself to the bone.

The fall had come now, and our neatly pruned apple-trees hung red with fruit; but the chicken-grapes on the Goodloes' hill and the chincapins in their back field proved more delightful to us than the plumpest of home produce. One evening as we rushed in breathless from a robbing expedition in these places, we came upon Lewis, the Goodloes' old negro man, standing humbly in the sitting-room to deliver this message,—

"Miss Lot say, 'Habn't you hyah how ole mars' done tuk sick at noon today?'"

"Sick, Lewis?" repeated my mother. "What is the matter? Is he very sick?"

It was a stroke of paralysis that had laid the old man low; but it in no way disturbed his serenity, though he could not walk and at times lost the power of speech. His sole anxiety was for the proper care of the burial-ground; over instructions relating to this he labored with a shaking hand for half an hour at a time. There was little need for such solicitude; his children made the small enclosure bloom like a rose amid the briery wilderness of the surrounding lawn. Late autumn roses, dahlias, asters, and clumps of chrysanthemums brightened above the close-cropped clover. Blackwell passed the still mornings of Sunday in the place, pruning and clipping. Two heavy fears rested on his young heart,—the thought of what was hovering over that chamber, and a certain imminent order of the court might snatch away the resting-place from the stricken body yonder.

The Commonwealth was more hungry than we knew for the long-standing debts. It was not more than three weeks after Mr. Goodloe's stroke that Helen came into the room where we were all sitting around the fireplace,—for the October evenings were beginning to close in early and chill. She walked straight up to a chair at the fireside, unheeding the welcoming stir and the staring of the children, and rested her hands on its back, meanwhile gazing with close-drawn brows and intent eyes into the flames.

"Honey Locust Hill has been sold for taxes!" she said harshly.

"Helen!" came in shocked tones from my mother.

"Yes, it is sold!" repeated Helen.

"Does your poor father know it? Don't breathe it in his presence if you can help it. But then the graveyard is exempted!" my mother questioned, admonished, consoled, all in one breath.

"Father shall not know it. Nor shall that man set foot on the place to take possession, if I can keep him off,—and that will be as long as I have strength in my right arm. Then she turned and walked out of the door.

Accounts came to us of the purchaser of Honey Locust Hill. He was from the North, and was connected with a firm of manufactures of fire-arms. After that there was no doubt in our minds of his harshness and bloodthirstiness.

October was melting into November so softly that some trees wore their full foliage of clear gold; others were more thinly clad in scarlet. The sumac leaves and cones of fruit vied with each other in hue, but the cherry and quince bushes were withered and quaking and bare. I hardly know how the news came,—but one afternoon as we poured into the kitchen hungry from school, lame Ann, the cook, gave us our slice of bread and butter without her usual bitter questioning, gave them sadly and even humbly, and called us "Honey," biding us to go away and be quiet children, because old Mr. Goodloe was dead.

The next day we heard discussed between our decorously sad parents how, as Mr. Goodloe sat upright among his pillows writing careful directions as to his burial, another stroke came, painlessly cutting "the thin-spun life." We wondered at the dropping of the old man's name and personality for the term "corpse"; we wondered, with some impatience at the delay, when the funeral would take place.

The day it was to take place dawned, rainy and chill. To our exclamations of disappointment my mother replied by pronouncing the burial beatitude, "Blessed are the dead the rain falls on!"

We found this consolatory saying fairly buzzing about the Goodloes' parlor, when we were presently seated therein. For some time after our anchorage on the haircloth sofa, we were too awed to glance around. When at last newcomers ceased to enter, and even the faint rustling and whispering ended, the dining-room door was thrown wide, and out marched several negro women, holding aloft trays with sliced cake and tiny glasses of currant wine. Our Annie was among the number, and one or two others we knew; but they passed us with polite, stony, company faces, stopping only long enough for us to take our share of yellow cake and amber wine. This feast enabled us children to get creditably through the time till the procession was formed for the graveyard.

The clouds were still sailing among the tree-tops; leaves sank sullenly through the wet air and settled upon the shiny surface of the coffin, and upon the shoulders and crape-banded hats of the bearers. Away down the path at the very end of the lawn, the tall, dead poplar, draped but yesterday from root to tip with the glowing leaves of Virginia creeper and wild ivy, waved from its forlorn branches only a few ragged banners, the shorn glory lay at its feet and outside in the muddy trampled road.

What halt was this? Why did the parson at the head of the slowly moving line stop? All were eager to see, and having looked, saw merely a man standing at the open picket gate; in the background were three negroes leaning on their long-handled spades; beyond to the left a pile of raw red earth, clotted and heavy from the rain. The parson recovered himself and stepped forward, waving the man aside. Already the bearers had tramped in edgewise to make room for their heavy burden; the mourners were grouping themselves at the grave; and the words, "Man that is born of woman hath but a short time to live—" were beginning to make themselves heard, when a voice broke through the stillness,—

"The burial cannot take place!"

The words came from the lips of the stranger. All turned to look at him. Lot lifted her drooping head from her brother's shoulder to stare at him out of the fastnesses of her mourning veil; Blackwell straightened his slender body and repressed the swelling sob in his boyish throat; Helen dropped Beall's arm, turning her crape-clad face toward the speaker. He was a resolute-looking man, with a beard close-cut and dark, a trimness of aspect and alertness of manner unknown to the neighborhood. His words fell with a clipped sound.

"What is this, sir?" asked the parson, closing his book carefully over his large forefinger. "Do you not know that this is a private burying-ground, and has been used for many years by the Goodloes, the owners of this place?"

"I beg your pardon," replied the man, courteously enough,, "I am the owner of this place—Josiah Pepper—and it is for that reason that I forbid the burial."

A vivid movement of interest ran through the group, a sort of ardent shudder. The parson stepped a little forward, his gown sweeping over the edge of the heaped-up soil, his forehead wrinkling into two deep folds in his endeavor to look over his spectacles at the calm speaker. Another voice broke the silence. It was Beall's with a thread of firmness in its resolute sound,—

"But this ground is exempted; it ought to be by law."

"Exempted, yes, so that I can never remove its boundary. But no new burial shall take place."

Before any one could make further answer, Helen had swept back the heavy veil from her face and spoke,—

"What is the use of this disturbance? Luke, you and John stand back. Sir,"—she addressed the stranger,—"everything is prepared for my father's burial, and we will go on with it."

Under the stimulus of her voice all fell again into action; the clergyman was opening the prayer-book when Mr. Pepper raised his hand with a warning gesture.

"This ceremony is a solemn one to interrupt, and I assure you I do it only through necessity. The health of my family is threatened by this interment. Yonder is the well, into which, as you must see, the drainage of this slope pours."

We knew the well, of course—every farm had one more or less near its graveyard; but how that could be connected with health we did not clearly understand. The speaker was now standing at the head of the coffin, confronting the parson, and neither service nor mourning could go on. Some of the neighbors were expostulating or muttering their indignation, but to this the stranger paid little heed. He saw that the battle lay with the black-clad group and the parson.

Grief, weariness, and anger proved too much for Helen; she threw aside her calmness.

"You have no bowels of compassion! To think of health in the face of death! I say my father shall lie where he longed to lie, by the side of his people. Stand back, man!"

The contempt of her tone brought the blood flushing across his face; but his words were quiet.

"Madam, I say he shall not lie there. I say it in sorrow, but I say it firmly. It would be deadly for those who drink that water. I have seen too much illness from such a source,—illness that put in mourning a whole district. Surely that would be harder than the disappointment of your sentiment.",

He had hardly finished before she began ignoring his words: "Luke, John, Lewis, if no one else will, lower the coffin! He will sleep just as sweetly without the last words. Stand back, please, and let these faithful negroes pay the last honors to their old master."

The men came forward, slowly and unwillingly, casting many a glance at Blackwell's face for further commands; but his white countenance wore a mask of stupefaction and hopelessness. Helen herself seized the fourth cord and braced her slender body to withstand the strain. But the stranger laid his hand on the coffin.

"It is useless, madam, he cannot lie here." Then turning to Lot and Blackwell as more tractable, he added: "If you will allow me, I will send to the churchyard and have all arrangements made there."

Charlotte's spirit weakened, and, half sick, her sense of propriety smarting, she turned hesitatingly to the parson.

"Mr. Reed, what ought we to do?"

"It is a sad sight," the parson answered, "to witness this scandalous scene, and to have such a blasphemous struggle going on over your dear father's body. Let it come to an end. After all, the churchyard is the proper place to lay a Christian." He spoke decisively, pouring balm with his strong words into the girl's torn heart. But Helen had caught the advice, and, standing erect, her eyes wide open, her face white as death against the gloomy background of her veil, she cried:

"Will you do that, Lot and Blackwell? He will never rest there! He will come back, I know, I know he will! This is where he wanted to lie!",

The clouds had massed heavier and darker, and now began to pour down their contents in long, slanting lines, which struck loudly upon the polished surface of the coffin. Helen still stood looking wildly forward, with the cord in her hands. The parson whispered exhortations to her, and Beall stepped forward to her side.

"Helen," he said, "for Charlotte's sake, for your brother's sake, give up this struggle. Let him be placed in my burying-ground; he is my uncle. Come!"

He took the cord from her yielding hand, and supporting her with his arm led her across the lawn toward the house. She moved like one stricken into stone.

They buried him in the rough little domain of Beall. Though on those hills grass grows but scantily, and the owner will never be a prosperous man, where Basil Goodloe lies there is always a soft green carpet; and the plants blooming so profusely there are all offshoots of the neglected shrubs which still put forth a few flowers in the graveyard of Honey Locust Hill. But if the negroes are to be believed, he wanders restlessly about the desolate old place on stormy autumn days, gliding among the weeds and lifting the choked roses. I cannot vouch for the truth of this myself, because when I pass, in the late chill rains, or at dusk, I hurry by with loudly beating heart and with eyes fixed on the cheering lights of home.—Elizabeth Carroll Shipman in New England Magazine.

For the Patriot.

My First Glimpse of Florida.

We left New York, by Steamer "Tallahasser" in command of Capt. Fischer, on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and after a delightful sail, with calm sea, and perfect weather, we reached Savannah, early Tuesday morning. After getting our hand baggage together, and bidding the genial Captain, and a few of our fellow passengers good-bye we "piled" into a stage, which took us directly across the city, to the railroad station, where we had breakfast; and at 8.30 boarded the train for Jacksonville.

After a ride of one hundred miles through a perfectly flat, and rather poor country, with nothing within sight, but an occasional "nigger" shanty, surrounded by tall pine trees, which looked to us like huge feather dusters, stuck into the sand with trunks so tall, and slim and the branches all clustered together at the top, we finally reached Jacksonville. I say finally, for in the South the trains do not "make the time" of our Northern railroads and the journey to us, seemed a long and very slow one. We immediately boarded the St. John's River Steamer, "City of Jacksonville" feeling about as dirty and travel stained, as one possibly can feel. We interviewed the stewardess, a dear fat, old Richmond darkey, who gave us fresh towels, warm water, and a box of face powder, which latter we refused, much to the dear old creatures surprise, and which called forth the remark. "Bless my soul honeys, but you is from de Norf I'se just knows for it, for all Southern ladies use powder."

After our toilet was completed C—— gave us a good brushing, and we went out on deck, feeling much refreshed and rested; and fully prepared to thoroughly enjoy the scenery of that most beautiful river, Florida's pride, the St. Johns.

The steamer left Jacksonville promptly at 2 P. M. for "up river," and for the next three hours we literally feasted our eyes, upon the antics in nature, entirely new to them. Florida does not have any twilight, the sun when it sets, seems to drop immediately out of sight, and one goes from bright sunlight, into "darkest night," almost, though the "after-glows," are in the summer, most beautiful. The Steamer "City of Jacksonville" being provided with an electric search light, which was cast on shore at each landing, enabled us to see all that was going on, so we did not miss the daylight, and in fact, its absence was a sort of delight, since the electric light was such a novelty, and we found watching the shaky, lazy, noisy "nigger" unloading and reloading freight, a sight very interesting, and one never to be forgotten.

We reached Patooka about 7.30 P. M. where G. met us, and where S. stood on the wharf and called out a welcome, and the remainder of the sail, from P— to W. T. I shall never forget.

Between P— and W— we met several crafts, and on each the men were cooking supper over a fire, made of what is known in the South, as "light wood" which is, the heart of the pine, rich with turpentine, and which makes an intensely hot and very bright flame.

Upon reaching W— we found the town in file, the Clyde S. S. Co., having run one of their ocean steamers up the river, that day, for the first time, making W— the terminus, instead of Jacksonville. They had had a barbecue, and picnic, and when we reached the dock, the bluff was brightly lighted with "light wood" knot torches, and a dance was going on at the Town Hall.

We went directly from the steamer to the "Twin Oak" where we spent the night; G. having previously engaged rooms. We did not meet the host or hostess, till the next morning, they being at the "dance" but G. having lived here so long, took us to our rooms, and we had another perfectly at home. We sat up very late, talking about our trip, and of the many amazing incidents that occurred en route.

Cares of the Bulbs.

Cover your beds of bulbs with leaves or coarse manure to the depth of six or eight inches as soon as winter weather seems to be at hand. While all the kinds named in this article are hardy, therefore able to stand the winter without protection, they come through in so much better condition where some protection is given that it is richly worth while to be to the trouble of providing it.

Those who have never grown bulbs do not know what they lose by going without them. Coming so early in the season, they are more highly appreciated than later flowers; the care they require is slight, and the expense of obtaining them is small.

The best place to store such roots is in a room or cellar that is dry and cool, but frost proof. A damp place will be pretty sure to induce mould, and though this may not prevent the roots from coming through the winter in a living condition, it will so injure them that they will be pretty sure to give an inferior crop of flowers. I have found that dahlias do well when kept in any place that keeps potatoes well; in too dry a place the tubers become shriveled and hard. This should be avoided. While they will shrink considerably under almost all conditions, they ought to retain a certain appearance of plumpness which is indicative of keeping well.

Gladioluses I would wrap in paper and hang in some cool, dry closet where they will be sure not to freeze.

Tuberoses require a warm room. Wrap in paper before putting away. Tuberous begonias taken up from the beds can be kept with them.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—What the unthinking, working class needs to get rid of is the idea that the men who furnish the money and brains to give them employment are their enemies and oppressors. The whole animus of the Democratic policy is to punish the men of enterprise and capital. They call them "robbers," "plutocrats," "blood-suckers." There may be a few selfish, heartless men among them, but there are ways to checkmate them without tying the hands of all others. Capital and its profitable employment are the only means of giving employment to labor and creating any surplus to divide between the two. Striking down the one paralyzes the other. The man and mill that employ and support three hundred families in a village, are not a curse to that village, even if the owner gets comfortably off by it in the course of a lifetime.—Norwood Review.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, NOV. 10, 1894.

An Early Winter.

What proved to be the heaviest storm of the season started late Monday afternoon and continued with unabated fury through the night, changing to snow early in the morning. The wind blew heavy from the east-north-east in the evening but at about midnight began to back around to the north west.

At about ten o'clock the electric lights went out.

The water in the bay was unusually rough, the spray flying up over the houses at Rufe's Hummock, Wollaston.

The yachts off Wollaston tugged at their moorings but rode out the storm in safety.

The electric light wires at Wollaston suffered but little. Opposite the residence of Sylvester Brown the wires had sagged to within a few feet of the ground.

At the Wollaston depot the large trees which stand near Station Agent Burrell's house lost several branches, each three or four inches in diameter.

The Ctty Campaign.

The Republican Ward and City Committee held an enthusiastic business meeting Thursday evening at headquarters.

Chairman H. O. Fairbanks presided and congratulated the party on its success at the State election. He also spoke of the duties of the members at the coming City election that the Republican majority might be in keeping with that of the recent State election.

Evart W. Adams, secretary of the committee, resigned his office, as he goes to Denver, Col., this week, and Wilson Marsh was elected to that office.

Representative-elect Charles L. Hammond was called upon and he spoke briefly, thanking the voters for their support and promising to represent the district to the best of his ability and with credit to all.

A recess was then declared during which a lunch was served and the famous Pilgrim fog horn pealed forth its joy over the recent victory.

Brief remarks of a congratulatory nature were also made by Hon. John F. Merrill, Warren W. Adams, John R. Graham, Councilmen Clark and Bigelow, Thomas F. Burke and Wilson Marsh.

Sunday Night Fire.

The alarm of fire at 11.15 Sunday night from Box 37, was for a brisk fire in the house owned by the heirs of John Q. McDonnell on School street, and occupied by Emery L. Crane.

The family had retired and Mr. Crane was awakened by the crackling of the burning wood and aroused the family, and no time was lost in giving the alarm, although it was some distance to the nearest box.

The department was soon on the scene, and notwithstanding that the fire had gained considerable headway, they deserve considerable credit for the quick stop they made, and that without doing any more damage than they did to the contents of the house.

An examination of the building after the fire had been extinguished, showed that it evidently caught from a defect in the brick work of the open fire place in the library, and must have been smouldering for several hours, for the fire had worked its way up to the attic and between the floors so that it was a difficult fire to get at.

The loss is principally to the house although the carpets in some of the rooms were damaged somewhat.

The total loss on the building and contents will not exceed $500 which is fully covered by insurance.

The fire forcibly illustrates the need of a fire alarm box near the corner of School and Franklin streets, as much valuable property is located in that neighborhood and it is quite a distance to the nearest box.

For the Hospital.

The hospital canvassing committee of Wollaston (Ward 5) held a meeting on Friday Nov. 2, at the residence of its chairman, Mr. A. A. Lincoln. After considerable discussion it was thought that Wollaston could possibly raise $500. It was decided to ask for the money through the pastors of the different churches, apportioning the amounts to be contributed according to the salaries paid the pastors, as follows: Congregational, $155; Baptist, $155; Unitarian, $115; Methodist and Episcopal, $75; total, $500. It is optional with the pastors as to whether the money shall be collected by personal solicitation or by church collections.

The committee consists of Mr. A. A. Lincoln, chairman; Rev. Edward A. Robinson, pastor of the Congregational church; Rev. Preston Gurney, pastor of the Baptist church; Rev. James E. Bagley, pastor of the Unitarian church; Rev. Charles W. Wilder, pastor of the Methodist church; Mr. Charles T. Baker, Hon. Henry O. Fairbanks, Mr. G. A. Litchfield, Mr. W. G. Corthell, Mr. George F. Pinkham and Mr. H. T. Whitman.

The Foot Ball Game.

The Q. H. S. foot ball team met the Thayer Academy boys at Merry Mount park Saturday before a large audience. The Thayer averaged a good deal more in weight than our boys, and it looked like a victory for them.

The game started with the Q. H. S. kick off, and before the Q. H. S. knew what they were about the Thayer boys had made a touch down, and kicked a goal, score 6-0, in their favor.

But the Q. H. S. boys soon began to wake up, and never stopped until they had carried the ball within one yard of the Thayer boys' line, when a dispuse arose this was settled by the referee and umpire, who gave the decision in favor of the Q. H. S. But the captain of the Thayers was not satisfied with the decision, and refused to play, and the game was called in favor of the Q. H. S., 4-0.

The features were the improvements of the Q. H. S. backs in the interference, as they made long gains every time they rushed with the ball.

Grand Army Fair.

Paul Revere post, G. A. R., claims your attention next week. It will hold its annual six days' fair at Hancock hall and has provided entertainment for each evening. The City band will be in attendance each evening. The department officers and others will assist in the opening exercises of Monday evening. Wednesday night will be "Sons of Veteran's night," and Thursday evening, "Relief Corps night." Will all our readers help to make this fair the greatest financial success of the post?

Sanborn and Bailey.

The LEDGER recorded the news a few days ago that two prominent railroad officials, John C. Sanborn, the superintendent of the Plymouth division of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R, and Christopher T. Bailey, the railroad police officer who has recently been on duty at the Quincy depot, had been sentenced to the Plymouth jail for four months for their participation in the Abington riot. On Friday Constable Furnald left for Plymouth armed with habeas corpus to bring Sanborn and Bailey to Quincy, and they will be before the Quincy court Saturday morning in another case.

W. S. Weaver has moved into one of Bryant's houses in Old Colony street.

The sociable of the Atlantic Methodist church, to have been held Tuesday, was postponed until next week on account of the death of Mr. Coombs.

Rev. Mr. Yeoman has been quite seriously ill the past week and at one time pneumonia was threatened. There is much sicknesss in Atlantic, caused mostly by violent colds.

The Sunday School of the Atlantic Methodist church has shown a marked increase since occupying their new and convenient vestry. Three new classes have been formed and in the four Sundays, since the dedication, thirty-two persons have joined the school. The school has purchased the piano which they use, and a committee is at work preparing a concert for procuring a new library.

Talk about turnips. Not only the amateur but all the professional farmers in Atlantic can go to Mr. E. C. Wales, of Billings street and get some good points on turnip cultivation. He is very proud of one he took from the ground this week and it certainly is a curiosity. It is a common white flat turnip and actually measures thirty inches in circumference. This is his first year and he easily takes the cake.

The Compass Whist club had their first meeting Tuesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Carver and the members seemed much pleased that these pleasant meetings have been resumed. The first prizes were taken by Mr. Charles R. Safford and Mrs. E. G. Hall, while Mr. E. G. Hall and Mrs. Alonzo Priest carried home the second prizes. At the election of officers the following were chosen for the season: President, Alonzo Priest; Vice President, Charles L. Coe; Treasurer, Mrs. Alonzo Priest, Secretary, Mrs. Alfred Jelenick.

A very pleasant party gathered at the home of John P. Fitzpatrick, 12 Botolph street, Atlantic, Thursday evening, and surprised him with a beautiful writing desk. The presentation was made by Mr. Mahoney and was responded to in a very fitting manner. Among those present were: Miss Nellie Edwards, Miss Lizzie Pickering, Miss Katie Hayes, Miss Nellie Colbert, Mr. Frank and Joseph Lawler, and many others.

Mr. Merrick, late principal of the Quincy school, now principal of the Willard, was presented with a memento of the many happy days passed at the Quincy school, by his former teachers and pupils, on Saturday evening.

The surprise to Mr. Merrick was complete and although he has been called to new duties and responsibilities, the Quincy school will always have a warm place in his heart.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Mr. and Mrs. McLellan were surprised at their home, Mt. Pleasant, Saturday evening, by a number of their friends. The hours were spent in a most enjoyable manner with singing and dancing. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. McLellan were presented with a beautiful lounge, the gift being a complete surprise. After the presentation the party set down to a splendid supper.

Master James S. Dunstan, Jr., of Jackson lane was surprised Tuesday evening by young friends. Miss Craig, in behalf of the invaders, presented a gold ring. A good time was enjoyed.

The clerk of the Ward Three election officers visited City Hall, Wednesday afternoon, and corrected the return in the vote for treasurer and representatives. The error was made in copying the figures.

An informal vote was taken by a number of the Ward Three Republicans at their headquarters Tuesday evening to see whom they favored as candidate for Mayor, and the result was Mr. Thompson, by a large majority.

QUINCY POINT.

An enjoyable sociable largely attended was held Wednesday evening at the Quincy Point church.

There will be an entirely new programme at the Johnson concert at the Quincy Point church.

Owing to a break in the engine at the power station of the street railway Thursday afternoon the cars were delayed half an hour.

The electric lights in the new hose house in Ward Two burnt brilliantly all Tuesday night, and now someone wants to know if it was in honor of the defeat.

High School Debate.

President Chapman, '96, took the chair Wednesday, at the meeting of the High School Debating society. Secretary Meder, '96, made an excellent report.

Under unfinished business, Miss Costello spoke on the comparative merits of solitude and society. Miss Feeley also spoke on the same subject.

The entertainment included the following numbers:

Recitation, Miss Garrity, '96; a fine selection.

Essay, Miss Coyle, '96; a very interesting account of "An Old Apple-Tree."

Vocal solo, Miss Flood, '95, accompanied by Miss Bemis, '95; a beautiful song charmingly rendered. It was received with applause.

Recitation, Emma Healey, '96; a spiritual selection about "the brave days of old." Given very effectively.

Recitation, Miss Vogler, '95; a patriotic dialect poem, given in Miss Vogler's very excellent manner.

Recitation, Miss Emery, '96; "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," charmingly rendered.

The debate followed:

Resolved,—"That Man is Descended from Some Animal by a Process of Evolution."

The speakers in the affirmative were: Miss Hay, 96; Miss Meade, '96; Miss Nellie Lord, '96; Miss Melzard, '96; Miss Mudgett, '96.

Negative,—Mr. Anderson, '96; Mr. Chapman, '96; Mr. Coe, '96; Mr. Fairbanks, '96; Mr. Kerrigan, '96; Mr. Nelson, '96; Mr. Northcott, '96.

When the debate was opened to the society, Miss Mudget, Mr. Northcott, Mr. Chapman, Miss Temple, Miss Melzard, Mr. Coe, Miss Vogler, Miss Catherine Pope, Miss Alice Sampson, Miss C. E. Healey, and Miss Greaney took part.

Miss Mary Pitts, critic, gave a very interesting report.

The debate was one of the most spirited ever held at the High school. Never before at any debate have so many pupils taken part, when the question was brought before the society.

The board of decision brought in a verdict for the affirmative. A vote of the society showed a strong feeling in favor of the negative.

Wedded at Newport.

The marriage of Mr. Charles Hatch of Quincy to Miss Sarah T. Walker of Vineyard Haven, at Newport on Oct. 31, at St. Michael's Episcopal church, will be a surprise to many of his friends in Quincy. Neither the bride or groom were attended, Mr. George W. Walker of New York, a brother of the bride giving her away in the presence of the intimate friends. The wedding tour commenced by the entire party driving to Warren, where a wedding breakfast was served. From here Mr. and Mrs. Hatch started by train for a southern tour.

WOLLASTON.

The draining of Green's pond, Wollaston, and the surrounding swamp land into the Neponset river is successful, the pond having already been lowered three feet.

About fifty years ago, when the Old Colony & Newport railroad was being constructed more trouble was experienced by the contractors in building the road-bed over this swamp than in any other section of the road. For weeks men, horses, tip-carts, and an immense steam shovel worked incessantly endeavoring to construct a solid foundation over this quick sand. One day a horse and tip cart got mired in it and soon disappeared beneath the mud. For years this section of the road-bed kept settling.

Nothing more was thought of the swamp and Green's pond until in the early 70's when Smith & Smith, the contractors working for the original Wollaston Land Co., undertook to drain and fill it in. Their train cars were run to the pond and thousands of cubic yards of gravel and large numbers of trees were dumped into the pond's insatiable maw, but all to no purpose. It is said that over $5000 was expended in that attempt to drain it.

The land about it, some five acres, passed into the hands of the Eastern Township Bank of Sherbrook, Canada, for something like $16,000. The bank held it for several years and finally disposed of it to A. L. Baker of Wollaston for $1000.

Wood, Harmon & Co., having purchased a large tract of land south of the foundry desired to drain the pond and swamp, and agreed, it is understood, to pay for the work providing the city would appropriate $150 for the purpose, which it did.

The Ladies' Social circle gave their annual harvest supper at the Methodist Episcopal church on Thursday evening. A very pleasant musical and literary entertainment was given consisting of solos by Misses Bjorkman and Stiggins; recitations by Misses Fannie Saunders and Abbie Baker, and a piano and violin trio by Miss Stiggins, Miss Bjorkman and Mr. Ransom.

"The Pilgrim Union" of the Epworth Leagues of Dorchester and Quincy, will meet at the Dorchester Methodist Episcopal church Thursday evening, Nov. 15. A large delegation from the Wollaston League expect to attend.

Wollaston people are very much exercised over a man who went about the street on Thursday, indecently. The police should take decisive steps to wipe out this nuisance, even if it takes every man on the force.

Mr. Edward J. Cummings of Wollaston has returned from a business trip through the southwestern states.

At the morning service of the Wollaston Congregational church, on Sunday, $26 was contributed to the City Hospital.

Mrs. Wellington of Wollaston has gone to spend a few days with her daughter at Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass.

The Foreign Missionary Auxiliary of the Wollaston Congregational society met with Mrs. A. A. Lincoln, at her residence on Grand View avenue, Monday afternoon.

The Ladies' Reading Circle, connected with the Wollaston Congregational church, met with Mrs. Edward A. Robinson on Tuesday afternoon.

Sociable.

A very unique and successful sociable was given in the vestry of the Wollaston Congregational church, on Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Benevolent society.

It was nautical in its character. Festooned around the walls were great purse seines, cork floats, burgees and ensigns. Two skiffs, several pairs of oars, and quantities of seaweed strewn about made the vestry look like an old time Cape Cod fish house.

The menu, although it did not contain the sailor's reputation bill of fare of "salt horse," hard tack, lob scouse, plum duff and black Jack, savored strongly of the sea with its tempting chowder, fish balls, salmon salad, pilot bread, potato chips and sea moss farina. The butter was served in pates in tiny scallop shells and the crackers in boats made from Japanese napkins.

The committee who so successfully carried out the original ideas consisted of Mrs. Edward A. Robinson, Mrs. Edward S. Tenney, Mrs. John F. Neill, Mrs. H. T. Whitman, Mrs. W. M. Wight, Miss Nash and Mrs. John A. Barbour.

The entertainment consisted of a chorus by Miss Lincoln's class of young ladies, who sang, "On the Blue Wave;" then Mr. Herbert B. Bailey, who is an old yachtsman, interested the audience while he deftly tied with a rope bowlines, a bowline on a bight, a running bowline, half hitches, fishermen's bends, and numerous other knots; Miss Bartlett then read with pleasing effect "The Tale of Capt. Weaver's sly fortune;" and Mr. Charles P. Tanner sang a baritone solo, "Out on the Deep" in excellent taste, although suffering from a severe cold.

Quincy Cycle Club.

The club is now installed in its new room in the Court room building, and is not a thing of the past, and have no intention of disbanding, many unauthorized reports to the contrary, but are in better condition than for some time. The regular monthly meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 12, at 8 o'clock.

☞ Now that the excitement of State election is over, housekeepers will find time to inspect the large and beautiful line of house furnishings carried by C. W. Guy and W. G. Shaw at the Quincy Coliseum, which owing to the hard times are selling very low. lpo 1t

☞ Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Black will receive a limited number of applicants for a private class in dancing to be formed in Quincy about the middle of November. Particulars etc., at 125 St. Botolph street, Boston. 3w

William Davenport has moved into the Johnson estate on Crescent street.

Rev. Charles Fuller of Calais, Me., is visiting his parents at West Quincy.

Eleven young ladies are attending the evening school at the Willard, taking the higher branches.

Dr. J. H. Ash had a narrow escape from asphyxiation Wednesday night. When he retired he left his stove apparently all right, but was awakened in the night, to find himself almost overcome by gas. He tried to walk but was unable to do so, but after some exertion succeeded in getting to a window.

Bryant Afternoon.

The eighth grade of the Willard school gave a Bryant afternoon, last week Friday, which was very much enjoyed by the parents and friends of the pupils. Bryant being one of the poets to be studied during this year by the class, the anniversary of his birth served as the occasion for the following programme:

Recitation, Death of the Flowers, Ruth Smith.

Reading, The Antiquity of Freedom, George Berry.

Song, Who will to the Greenwood? Elizabeth Sullivan, Alice O'Neil, Willie Burke, Louise Mahoney, Lotta Crowell, Benedict Fitzgerald.

The residents of the Downs and Park are talking strongly of running S. E. Blanchard for the City Council. Mr. Blanchard is a thorough business man and will make an excellent member.

Miss Adams vs. Mr. Cowe.

The usual meeting of the Quincy Literary society was held in Doble's building on Friday evening, Nov. 2, president Dr. R. McLennan presiding. Perhaps at no ordinary meeting in the history of the society were there a greater number of ladies and gentlemen present. This was attributable, partly to the growing interest in the subject under discussion and partly to the personality of the participants in debate.

The affirmative side of the query: Should women have the suffrage? was opened by Miss Mabel Adams. She based her plea upon the fundamental principle of our government, that all men are created free and equal, and endowed with certain inalienable rights. She urged the importance of unprejudiced consideration, and the necessity of freeing the mind from biased surroundings and customs. The best standard authorities define man as a human being; so that the wise words of the founders of this country apply to all people irrespective of sex.

She dealt in detail with a few of the objections usually made against woman's suffrage, contending that most of the arguments were more worthy of the middle age, when might was right, than of these modern days, when brains rather than strength governs the world. The same disabilities that are generally applied against women, are equally applicable to a considerable proportion of the male population. About the only worthy argument that the opposers of equal suffrage have, is that women don't want to vote, and even that argument won't be left long. Besides it is a historical fact that the class which any reform of the past was intended to benefit has always been represented as opposed to the reform in question.

The suffrage should be extended to women because under the constitution it is her right, and equal justice demands it. Because there are wrongs which exist against woman as a class and which men have hitherto failed to legislate upon, and because in the west it is an accomplished, successful fact, which the east must eventually adopt.

Mr. Alexander Cowe, who opened on the negative side, drew his conclusion from the natural economy of the universe. In the human organism each part has a different function to perform. With a laborious effort the foot may do the work of the hand, but it is clearly a violation of nature's intention. Division and sub-division of labor runs through every particle of nature.

Woman's suffrage is not so much a case of right, as it is a question of fitness. Her sphere is not guaged by the laws and devices of men but by nature's own immutable design. From time immemorial the government of nations has been done by men, while household affairs have been discharged by women. Whatever time she devotes to work for which she is not adapted, just in proportion will her own domain be neglected.

There is no economy where the loss over weighs the gain. Woman can no more espouse the duties of a voter and legislator and discharge in a sufficient manner the duties she is by nature fitted and designed for, than can the man who represents a district in Congress attend at the same time to a school of babies.

A nation may barter its womanhood for her vote and all that is implied therein, but that nation will as surely wither and waste, as the green tree that is robbed of moisture.

Pilgrim Union.

The young people of the Wollaston, West Quincy and Atlantic Methodist churches will attend the quarterly meeting of the Pilgrim Union next Thursday evening, at the Dorchester M. E. church. Supper will be furnished at half-past six to all members of the union. Rev. F. N. Upham will be the toast-master, and responses will be made be the different presidents of the chapters forming the union.

In the evening there will be the annual election of officers, a reception to the Stanton Avenue league, and an address by Rev. C. L. Goodell of Boston. The music will be furnished by a male quartette from Boston University.

Divorce Granted.

The first divorce case taken up by the Norfolk Superior court was that on Wednesday of Mary C. Thistleton of Quincy vs. Frederick Thistleton of parts unknown, but thought to be in New York city. They were married in Quincy Feb. 23, 1884, and lived together less than a year, the husband "utterly deserting" his wife Nov. 30, 1884. Mary was granted a decree nisi for desertion, and given the right to resume her maiden name of Mary C. Kidder.

MILTON.

A good congregation greeted pastor Hunt Sunday morning. The subject of the sermon was "Progress in the Christian Life." The hand of fellowship was extended to three new members recently baptized, among them the pastor's daughter Marion. Miss Nellie V. Turner led the Young People's meeting and Mr. Geo. E. Thomas of Wollaston the General Prayer meeting.

Cards are out for the marriage of Mr John P. S. Churchill of Milton and Miss Henrietta Adele Fay, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 21, at St. Paul's church, Boston.

FOR the purpose of correcting the Annual Register of voters, and of receiving evidence of qualifications from persons claiming a right to vote at the coming City Election, the Board of Registrars of voters will be in session at the Ward Room, City Hall building on the evenings of SATURDAY, Nov. 10, and TUESDAY, Nov. 13, from 7 to 9 o'clock; also on WEDNESDAY, Nov. 14, from 12 M. to 10 o'clock P. M.

Every applicant for registration must appear in person before the Board, and must present either a Certificate from the Assessors, or a Tax bill, or Notice from the Collector of Taxes, showing that he has been assessed a Poll tax as a resident of the City on the First day of May last; if a Naturalized citizen he must also produce for inspection his papers of naturalization. Payment of a poll tax is not a pre-requisite to voting. Persons who have lived in the State one year and in the city six months previous to December 4, if qualified in other respects, can be registered.

No name can be added to the list of voters unless registered previous to WEDNESDAY, Nov. 14th, at 10 o'clock P. M., when registration will close.

Examine the Voting Lists posted herewith and see that your name is in its proper place. NO CHANGE can be made after WEDNESDAY, Nov. 14, at 10 o'clock P. M.

The CENTURY IN 1895.

Taking advantage of the general revival of interest in the Great Emperor, THE CENTURY will print during 1895

A NEW LIFE OF

NAPOLEON,

Magnificently Illustrated.

THE CENTURY is famous for its great historical series, and never in its history has a greater one been projected than this new "Life of Napoleon," written by Prof. William M. Sloane of Princeton, who has spent many years in preparation for his work. Thus far no biography of the "man of destiny" has appeared in either English or French that is free from rancor and attentive to the laws of historical criticism. THE CENTURY has secured it—the great, all-round, complete and interesting history of the life of one of the most marvelous of men. No matter how much you already know of Napoleon, you will want to read this:—here is the concentration of all the lives and memoirs. The illustrations will be magnificent—the wealth of THE CENTURY'S art department will be lavished upon them. Two members of the staff have just returned from Paris, where they have been securing all that is best of Napoleonic material. New portraits will be printed, great historical paintings reproduced, and Castaigne and other modern artists have drawn anew some of the great scenes of Napoleon's life for this history

In addition to this there will be

A NEW NOVEL BY

MARION CRAWFORD.

The title is "CASA BRACCIO," and it is a romance of Italy, full of human passion and exciting episode.

A NEW NOVEL BY

will be published during the year. It is called "AN ERRANT WOOING," and is a tale of wandering (and love) among new scenes of travel in Northern Africa and Southern Spain.

Other Features

will be several familiar papers on "WASHINGTON IN LINCOLN'S TIME," by Noah Brooks, who was on terms of unusual intimacy with the War President; "THE CATHEDRALS OF FRANCE," by Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, with illustrations by Joseph Pennell. Many more serials will be announced later.

RUDYARD KIPLING

contributes his FIRST AMERICAN STORY to the December number of THE CENTURY.

THE PRICE of THE CENTURY is $4.00 a year. "No home is complete without it. Begin subscriptions with November number. Whatever other magazines you may take, you must have THE CENTURY. All agents and dealers take subscriptions, or remittance may be made directly to James F. Roche Dead.

Past Commander-in-Chief James F. Roche of the regular Army and Navy Union died in Boston Tuesday night, after a brief illness.

Capt. Roche was born in Winona, Minn., in March, 1859, but moved with his parents to Massachusetts, and settled in Chelsea. At an early age he entered the law office of Gen. W. W. Blackmar of Boston, but after a short time left the study of law for that of pharmacy, entering the drug business and continuing in the same till a few years ago, when the state of his health compelled him to give it up. He then entered the custom house in Boston, in Surveyor Coveney's department.

Capt. Roche enlisted in the 5th infantry, M. V. M., being a member of company H, Charlestown City Guard, Capt. J. Henry Brown. During his service with this regiment he received an appointment as apothecary in the United States navy, and was ordered to the Enterprise. On this vessel, under the command of Commander A. S. Barker, he completed the cruise around the world, which gave the Enterprise such fame.

The Enterprise sounded the different oceans, sailing from Norfolk, Va., and returning to New York, after visiting Africa, Madagascar, East Indies, China, Japan, Corea, Java, Australia, New Zealand, Patagonia, Uruguay and the West Indies.

By command of Rear Admirable Davis, Apothecary Roche was for a time acting medical officer on the Palos of his squadron.

Capt. Roche at the time of his election by the Army and Navy Union, was the youngest commander-in-chief of any order in the country.

He was more or less interested in politics and was a Democratic candidate for the board of aldermen in Boston in 1892, running against Mr. Alpheus Sanford in the 8th district, but was not elected.

Capt. Roche was a member of the Mass. Catholic Order of Foresters, of the Knights of St. Rose, of the Catholic Association of Boston College, of the Fusileer Veteran Association, was president of the Zingari Cricket club. He was highly skilled in music and somewhat known as an author, his principal work being a pamphlet on the battle of Foochow of which he was an eye witness.

He was well known, and his death will be deeply felt in the military world.

The funeral services at the Cathedral were held on Friday morning at 9 o'clock. Comrades of the Regular Army and Navy Union attended in uniform. The burial was at West Quincy.

He Will Decline Now.

If Josiah Quincy will say the word, says the Herald, the Democratic municipal convention of Boston will nominate him for mayor. That, at least, is the opinion of substantially all the members of the city committee who discuss the question at their headquarters. Whether he will be acceptable to the McEttrick people is a matter that must be decided later.

It was said before the state convention that Mr. Quincy would tell his friends as soon as that event was over whether he will consent to permit the use of his name as a mayoralty candidate. He will probably decide the matter within a few days.

Almost an Accident

All of the outward trains were from twenty to thirty minutes late on Tuesday afternoon and evening.

The 5 33 outward from Boston narrowly escaped having a serious accident. Just before the train reached Norfolk Downs one of the heavy iron trusses under a passenger car broke and dragged along over the ties until the station was reached. The train was held for ten minutes while the broken truss was being removed.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

The Election.

No one counted on a plurality of 618 for Governor Greenhalge in Quincy, Tuesday, but this is the result we have to record.

As goes Quincy, so goes the State, and the Republicans have elected twelve of the thirteen Congressmen, and have control of the Council, the Senate and the House by large majorities.

The Republicans also elect all their county officers.

Everybody said it was a Democratic day but the returns show conclusively that it was a Republican and the people's day. From the top to the bottom of the ticket it was a complete landslide. Everybody thought Quincy would go Republican, but the plurality was more than the most sanguine expected, as out of the whole city Precinct 1, Ward Four, was the only place to go Democratic.

The people put their stamp of disapproval on such campaigns as that carried on by Messrs. McEttrick and McNary in this city, for, without exception it was disgraceful from beginning to end. Not a rally held by either of these gentlemen was on the issues of the campaign, but was simply a matter of personalities, and as such it reaped its just reward.

Early in the evening the admirers of McEttrick and McNary were out in force, but as the evening wore on it was noticed that they gradually drew out of sight and at 11 o'clock not one was in sight.

Just before midnight an ex-Councilman from Ward Two entertained in a loud voice a number of citizens on the relative merits of the two Democratic candidates for Congressman.

The last return to arrive was Ward Three which arrived at 1 o'clock and then it was found that the officers had made a mistake in the vote for Treasurer and Representatives, and the vote for these offices had to be recounted.

City Clerk Keith had large bulletins put up in his office and as fast as the returns came in they were posted on these boards for the benefit of those present. It was a good idea.

State and City Pluralities.

A most interesting summary, is that below giving the plurality for Governor in each of the twenty-two years, both for Massachusetts and for Quincy:

Year.		State.		City.
1873	Republican	12,823	Republican	149
1874	Democratic	7,032	Democratic	97
1875	Republican	5,306	"	227
1876	"	30,815	"	60
1877	"	18,070	"	188
1878	"	25,290	Republican	179
1879	"	13,602	"	209
1880	"	53,516	"	101
1881	"	42,023	"	206
1882	Democratic	13,949	Democratic	126
1883	Republican	9,864	Republican	14
1884	"	47,516	"	112
1885	"	21,897	"	155
1886	"	9 453	Democratic	72
1887	"	17,606	"	85
1888	"	28,069	"	24
1889	"	6,775	"	236
1890	Democratic	9,053	"	200
1891	"	6,467	"	183
1892	"	2,434	"	170
1893	Republican	35,697	Republican	116
1894	"	64,000	"	618

In this State previous to Tuesday, the highest plurality, 53,516, was obtained in 1880 by the Republican candidate, John D. Long. Two years later, the Democrats secured their largest plurality, electing General Butler governor by 13,949. In 17 of the 22 years the Republicans have triumphed.

In Quincy previous to this year the pluralities have never exceeded 236 and was given that year (1889) to the minority, William E. Russell, the Democratic candidate. The next highest plurality, 227, was also given to a Democrat, William Gaston, who was also defeated. The Republicans, however, have twice given pluralities of over 200 for their candidate, Gov. Long, in 1879 and 1881.

Quincy has been with the State in its plurality in 15 of the 22 years. Each year that Democrats have been successful in the State (1873, 1882, 1890, 1891 and 1892) Quincy has been with them. In ten of the seventeen years the Republicans have been victorious Quincy was with them. The years in which Quincy did not agree with the majority were: 1875, 1876, 1877, 1886, 1887, 1888 and 1889.

The revised official vote appears in another column.

At Wollaston.

The Ward Five vote was not declared until 10.08 P. M. This was because the ward officers had to wait an hour for the electric lights before they could begin to count the ballots.

The heaviest vote that was thrown in this ward was the one thrown Tuesday,—439.

The vote for Greenhalge (328) surprised the most sanguine Republican, and Russell's (84) was an eye opener for the Democrats. One of the leading Democrats had placed Russell's at 115.

The vote for Wolcott (307) showed that the A. P. A.'s had got in some work.

Nobody had any idea that Atwood (268) would run 60 votes behind the head of the ticket. It showed the intense feeling against him in the ward. Peabody's large vote (51) was a surprise to everybody, it having been claimed before election that his Atwood circular has killed him.

The Successful Ticket.

Every one who voted the straight Republican ticket in this city will be pleased to learn that all his candidates were elected. The list:

Governor.
Frederic T. Greenhalge of Lowell Republican

Vote for Senator.

Senator-elect Darling has a plurality of 1164, very nearly double that given Senator Merrill. All the towns, except two, gave him pluralities, and Randolph and Canton gave Beck but 23 and 1 respectively. It was a handsome vote which Hyde Park gave her candidate, and Quincy and Weymouth did nobly:

Representative Vote.

Representatives Hammond, Flint and Wentworth, the three Republicans, are all reelected by unusually large majorities. The Quincy man heads the list in the total vote, and has over a thousand more votes than Mr. Federhen. Here is the vote of city and town and the total; also the total vote of 1893:

WEYMOUTH.

Officers Bailey and Pratt raided the premises of Henry F. Lowell, Sunday, and seized one gallon of rum and a quantity of whiskey.

Kelly Dead.

"Mike" Kelly, the noted ball player, died about 10 o'clock Thursday evening of pneumonia. He was to appear at the Palace Theatre, Monday night, but was taken ill and went to the Emergency Hospital where he grew rapidly worse until he died. He was 37 years of age.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croups as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon affected a permanent cure. 25 aed 50 cent bottles.

Election Stickers.

Now for City Election.

Several of the Ward Two election officers are nursing colds.

The Globe Tuesday afternoon said that Russell would probably have a plurality in Quincy.

If Ward One election officers are dandies at counting votes, what can be said of those in Ward Three?

Chairman Fairbanks was a busy man Tuesday and early in the day visited all of the polling places.

It was nearly 2 30 o'clock Wednesday morning before the newspaper men shut the door of City Hall behind them.

The Republican caucuses will be held next week Thursday evening.

Even one of the West Quincy precincts went Republican.

But 4 Democrats in the next Massachusetts Senate and all from Suffolk county. Even a majority of the Suffolk senators are Republican.

Representative Hammond's vote was larger than last year. He should be a chairman of committee this year.

Hill was defeated in New York by over 140,000.

Greenhalge plurality in the cities was 26,747 against 7,041 last year; only Boston, Chicopee and Holyoke went Democratic.

Congressman Wilson was defeated, and also Owens who knocked out Breckinridge in Kentucky.

Less than 100 Democrats in the next Congress and over 250 Republicans.

Knox, Barrett, Atwood and Simpkins are the new Congressmen from Massachusetts.

McNary is disgusted with the machine.

Half of the Governor's Council will be new men, Francis H. Raymond of Somerville, John H. Sullivan of Boston, B. F. Southwick of Peabody and John M. Harlan of Woburn.

Of the first 31 towns in the twelfth district to report, 30 gave Congressman Morse a plurality. Carver was the exception.

West Virginia solidly Republican.

Surprise Party.

A surprise party was given to Miss Bessie Reith Nov. 2, by a number of her many friends at her residence on Hancock street. Games of all kinds were played and all had a most enjoyable time. During the evening a very sumptuous supper was served. While the guests were sharpening their appetites for the spread Miss Reith was presented with an elegant moonstone ring. The orchestra in attendance discoursed classical music all the evening to the great delight of everybody. Mr. Metcalf's grand selections on the piano were certainly an excellent treat.

—George W. Penniman was elected Representative to the Legislature from Brockton, winning by 230 majority in a district that went Democratic by 255 majority last year.

—The five officials of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., implicated in the Abington riot over the laying of street railway tracks at a grade crossing, a year or more ago, have been sentenced to imprisonment.

The City Council.

An adjourned meeting of the City Council was held Thursday evening, but the business for which the regular meeting was adjourned was not transacted, as but fifteen members were present, ten Republicans and five Democrats. The absent members were Councilmen Federhen, Lamb, Litchfield, McKeon, Rooney, Snow, Sullivan and Waterhouse—five Democrats and three Republicans.

Polling Places.

Upon request of the two parties the following places were designated for holding the caucuses:

Republican,—Ward One, Republican headquarters; Ward Two, Graham's building; Ward Three, Doble's hall; Ward Four, Forester's hall; Ward Five, Brazee's building; Ward Six, Music hall.

The place designated for the Democratic caucuses were the same as above with the exception of Wards One and Three, where the caucuses will be held in the Ward room City Hall, and the Baxter's building.

Two Transfers.

A communication was received from the trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library for the transfer of $75 from appropriation for heating apparatus to that for books. Laid on the table and later in the evening under suspension of the rules an order covering the same was passed to be ordained.

A communication was received from the School Committee asking for the transfer of $1,300 from appropriation for miscellaneous expenses to that of books. To Committee on Finance.

New Schoolhouses.

A communication was also received from the School Committee inclosing the votes passed by that board in relation to new school buildings at Norfolk Downs and the Rail. To Committee on Public Buildings.

Petition for Light.

A petition was received for an arc light on Washington street in front of the Thomas Crane Public Library. To Committee on Lights.

State Aid.

The Committee on State Aid reported orders granting Mary A. Whicher, $5 per week; David Williams, $4 per week, and Margaret Burke, leave to withdraw. Adopted.

Coddington Street.

Committee an Finance reported amendment to order for widening Coddington street, in regard to denominations, interest and date of payment of notes. Amendment adopted and the order took its second reading.

Councilman Holden gave notice that when the above order came up again, he would move to amend by changing the time of removal of buildings from 90 days to April 15, 1895.

Councilman Robbins moved when the Council adjourned it be until Thursday evening, Nov. 15. Voted.

Adjourned 8.15.

POLITICS.

The result of the election for Congressman, so far as the winner and the vote for all but the other two leading candidates was concerned, was substantially in accord with my anti-election prediction. The surprise to all was the phenominal vote for Mr. McEttrick, attributable without doubt, to the better appearance he made on the platform during the campaign, and which was mentioned in my last article.

The surprisingly large Republican majority in this city was very gratifying to the party, and will make the Democrats correspondingly downhearted. It will have considerable bearing upon the city election and give great confidence to the Republicans. The caucuses for the nomination of delegates to the Mayoralty convention will be held next week, and already the question is being freely asked, "who will be the candidates?" On the Republican side there are many aspirants for the position, and Mr. James Thompson is apparently the leading candidate. I understand, however, that he is not to have a walkover for the nomination, and that there will be at least three other candidates voted for in the convention. This will not be done merely as a compliment to the three others, but with the settled purpose of having a divided vote in the convention and then springing upon it another name for mayor as a compromise candidate. This plan will be carried out if any possible way can be discovered to placate the friends of Mr. Thompson, and prevent them from bolting the nomination at the polls.

If Mr. Thompson's friends desire his nomination, they will be wise to attend the caucuses in large numbers and secure the election of delegates whom they know are favorable to his selection. There are several elements busily at work with the sole object in view of reviving the old regime at City Hall, and the candidate whom they are satisfied will assist or rather guarantee its revival, will have their solid aid and support. A nomination for Mayor which will be made by delegates chosen at slimly attended caucuses, will not be cheerfully accepted by the Republican party. Let every citizen do his paramount political duty, that is to attend his ward caucus.

Mayor Hodges, at first thought, would seem to be the logical candidate of the Democracy. But will he be? I am informed that there will be a determined effort made to defeat him, and mainly for the reason that he did not appoint to office any of the representative men from that wing of his party which comprises its majority. I believe that the effort will be a failure, but only for the reason that there is no other available candidate except Commissioner Eaton, and he will not be a candidate against the man who appointed him to the most lucrative office in his gift. Mr. Eaton is not an ungrateful man and will not stand in the way of his present superior officer.

The Democrats well know that the result of the state election is no guide by which to estimate the coming city election, and while the outlook is somewhat discouraging it is by no means a case of assured defeat in advance.

Another query is, will the McEttrick-McNary factions carry their differences into the city election or will they profit by the lesson of last Tuesday and stand united for the nominee? If the former, there can be no hope of Democratic success; if the latter there is only a good fighting chance.

Apropos of the Representative contest, the Quincy candidates led their respective party's candidates; Mr. Hammond the Republican and Mr. Federhen, Jr., the Democratic.

JUNE.

Condemned by Catholics.

Editors of the Quincy Patriot:

We feel it our duty as representatives of the Catholics of this city to say that all improper exhibitions, whether given as promiscuous dancing or as sparring entertainments, are not favored by the real members of our church. On the contrary they are contrary to its spirit and teaching, and consequently such evil effects as follow them should not be attributed to Catholic influences. It is a pity that people who call themselves by a name that we hold sacred, should have power to do the harm they do. We therefore, in the interest of true morality, call upon all citizens, whether Catholics or otherwise, to unite in overcoming an evil which may be to the detriment of all, if permitted to thrive.

A CATHOLIC.

Mysterious Death.

The police of Boston are investigating the death of Mrs. Jennie Sullivan formerly of Quincy who was found dead in the Merchants' hotel in Boston, early Friday, Nov. 2, to ascertain if possible if it was a case of murder, suicide or accident.

The Pulpit and People.

At the South Quincy Baptist church Sunday, the pastor, Rev. Nathan Hunt, preached at 3 P. M. to a large congregation, from 2 Peter, 3:18. Seven persons received the right hand of fellowship at the close of the sermon. Six of these were baptised at Neponset, Oct. 18. The evening service was conducted by the pastor.

Services were conducted by Rev. W. Steele in Wilson's hall, Sunday. In the morning there was a good attendance and in the evening the hall was packed. It was heartily and unanimously agreed to permanently continue the service.

A few Sundays ago, perhaps three weeks a prominent Wollaston clergyman had the audiences of the various churches counted to ascertain about how many Wollaston people were in the habit of attending divine worship. The result was as follows: Congregational 183, Baptist 168, Unitarian 110, and Methodist 97, total 558. St. Chrysostom's was not at that time holding any service. This of course does not include all of the enrolled members of the churches or all of those who are in the habit of attending, but it does show the average attendance out of a population of some 2,500 people. It is estimated from these figures that there are at least 1200 regular church attendants at Wollaston.

A meeting of all members of the M. E. church, West Quincy, was called for Tuesday evening, to vote on the question of the admission of women as delegates to the general conference. This vote is being taken during the month of November by all Methodist churches in the United States.

"The meaning of the Cross of Christ" was the theme of Rev. Edward Norton sermon on Sunday, and his text was found in 1st Corinthians 1:17. A difficult anthem was well rendered by the choir, and there was also a good selection by a mixed quartette.

Rev. James E. Bagley, pastor of the Wollaston Unitarian church, preached an interesting discourse on "Thoughtfulness," before a large congregation at Sunday morning service.

After the sermon by the Rev. Charles W. Wilder, pastor of the Wollaston M. E church, on Sunday morning, holy communion was observed.

The singing at Christ's church Sunday evening was particularly good. Rev. Mr. Gray preached a good sermon, with "Prayer" as his theme.

Mrs. Helen Fitts entertained the Chapel Builders of the Congregational church on Wednesday afternoon.

There will be preaching at the Methodist Episcopal church, West Quincy, next Sunday, by Rev. W. W. Baldwin, the former pastor of this church, now pastor of Trinity church, Lynn.

The first Sunday service at the new St. Chrisostom's church, Wollaston, was held Sunday and was conducted by Mr. James B. Thomas of the Harvard Divinity school.

At the Sunday morning service of the Wollaston Baptist church, the pastor, the Rev. Preston Gurney, preached on "The turning of Job's Captivity."

Charles Barstow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wendall H. Hull of Wollaston, was christened at the Congregational church on Sunday by the Rev. Edward A. Robinson.

Mrs. Charles Carpenter, for several years a missionary in Japan, gave an interesting talk on the empire of the rising sun, at the Wollaston Baptist church on Sunday evening.

The Wollaston Congregational society has commenced to issue a weekly calender. It will be distributed at every Sunday morning's service.

Vespers at the First church next Sunday afternoon.

The subject at the weekly prayer meeting of the Congregational church on Friday evening was: "Is Faith a Divine Gift or a Human Acquirement?"

Holy Communion was observed at the Wollaston Congregational church on Sunday evening.

The topic of the Y. P. S C. E. of the Wollaston Congregational society at its meeting on Sunday evening was, "How to Keep the Lord's Day." Mark 2: 23 28.

A business meeting of the ladies social union of West Quincy, will be held on Wednesday evening at the house of Mrs. McCormick, corner of Willard and Cross streets.

"What is Your Life?" was the theme of Rev. E. C. Butler's sermon Sunday. There was a good-sized congregation.

The men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A Sunday was addressed by Secretary Colton, whose subject was "The Remedy of Sin." The brazen serpent raised by Moses in the wilderness was used as a type of the Son of Man on the cross. An interesting testimony meeting followed the talk.

The Guild of the Good Shepherd of the Wollaston Unitarian church held a largely attended meeting on Sunday evening in the church vestry.

The subject was "Little Things." Miss Isadore Lull and Miss Helen Sibley were the leaders. They handled the subject in a very interesting manner, holding the close attention of the large audience.

The third entertainment of the Epworth League of West Quincy course will be given in the church vestry Thursday evening Nov. 8. "An evening with the Po'ets'—Tennyson, Bryant, Longfellow, Holmes and Whittier.

Wollaston Shoot.

The Wollaston Trap club held its regular shoot on Saturday evening under unfavorable conditions, a high wind. Each man shot at 50 birds, with the exception of Elcock, who is suffering from rheumatism. Elcock and Prescott were high men, each breaking 19 birds. The score:

The Granite Railway company is at work on a $5,000 soldiers' monument for Newtown, N. Y. The pedestal is 25 feet high and is of Quincy granite. This will be surmounted by a statue, 8 feet high, of Barre granite, representing a soldier with arms at rest. On the sides of the lower die are four raised panels, representing Infantry, Artillery, Cavalry and Navy. On the cap is a line of inscription and on the die are the names of the volunteer.

Centre street is getting to be quite a granite cutting centre. There are a dozen or more sheds in this vicinity and although none of the firms are rushing business at present they have a few men at work and have hopes for something better in the near future.

F. Barnicoat has his sheds full of statues in the process of manufacture.

The Manet Granite Co. are getting out some fine work in Quincy granite. This firm has all the appliances and are able to handle any job no matter how large or small.

Granite men are beginning to watch the LEDGER every day for pointers on the granite industry.

Malnati Bros. have just completed a handsome sarcophagus monument of Westerly granite.

The Granite Railway Co. has just taken a large New York building contract which will take several gangs the larger part of the winter to complete.

That section in the vicinity of Quarry street needs transportation facilities almost as bad as that territory reached by the Quarry railroad. The quarries in this section are owned by old established firms, but the long distance they have to haul the rough granite to the railroad adds considerable to the cost of the material.

The Globe reports a large number of Granite cutters to have been discharged at Barre, Vt., Nov. 1.

It is surprising what a large amount of statuary is being constantly cut in Quincy. A few years ago nothing of this kind was attempted here, but now there are two or three firms that make a specialty of this kind of work, and many firms that do their statuary work in their own yards.

Although Quincy granite was not advertised, perhaps, as it should have been at the World's Fair, several firms have received orders in consequence of their exhibit there.

Many of the monumental cuts which the LEDGER will shortly publish, were either cut by Quincy firms or of Quincy granite, and much of the work was done by the Granite Railway Co.

Mayor Matthews of Boston notified the council at its meeting held last week that by the will of the late George B. Hyde the sum of $14,000 is left to the city for the purpose of erecting, in some suitable place, a statue of the eminent statesman and lawyer, the late Hon. Rufus Choate. Accompanying the communication was an order providing that the city treasurer be authorized, on behalf of the city, to accept the gift. The order was passed.

Badger Bros. have recently issued a booklet entitled, "Granite Chips," giving a description and history of Quincy granite, together with a sketch of the firm of Badger Bros., and the growth of their works up to the present time. The booklet is very interesting, and is illustrated with numerous photographs. Badger Bros. are a most interesting firm, and the booklet is a good advertisement for Quincy granite and push which other manufacturers might profitably imitate.

OPINION

—OF—

Dr. H. A. Tucker's No. 59 Diaphoretic Compound.

A Positive Preventive And Sure Cure For Colics, Cramps, Diarrhœa, Malaria, Sudden Colds, Rheumatism, &c.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, after 20 years' personal use, writes as follows:

TO THE PEOPLE:

I know by personal observation that DOCTOR H. A. TUCKER'S medicine, popularly known as "No. 59," is potent and safe. It ought to be on the shelf in every nursery, and in the satchel on every journey. Going from home I always carry some of it with me, and have administered it to many who in car and steamer have been taken sick. Better smash your brandy flask and the various styles of "Bitters," which are Rum put up under enticing nomenclature, and take with you a bottle of DOCTOR TUCKER'S 59 as a pocket pistol with which to shoot down physical disorders.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE.

This remedy is widely used, purely vegetable, perfectly safe, and contains no opiates nor injurious ingredients. It is are recommended and indorsed by eminent physicians and public men.

Sold by druggists everywhere.

SATURDAY, NOV. 10, 1894.

In the Chimney Corner.

What do you see in the fire, my darling;
Gold-haired lassie beside my knee ?
Is it a castle in Eldorado,
Is it a lover from o'er the sea ?
Leave the castle for others, lassie,
Let the lover come whence he may;
Love is love in the humblest cottage,
Never mind what the world will say.

What is there in the flames, my darling ?
Do you wonder what I can see?
The old white house and the little garden,
Oh, how it all comes back to me!
Oh, the sound of the mill-wheel turning!
Oh, the scent of the lilac-tree!
When I was a girl like you, my darling,
When your grandfather courted me.

You will grow old like me, my darling;
Time will whiten your golden hair;
You'll sit at eve in the chimney corner,
Dreaming and watching each empty chair.
You will not weep as you sit and ponder;
You will remember granny's smile;
For we know that the hearts that are gone,
my darling,
Are but lost for a little while.

FREDERICK E. WEATHERLY.

Notes and Comments.

—The center of the coal and iron industries is believed by some economists to be shifting from Great Britain to the United States.

—Last week ripe strawberries, roses and flowers were being picked in our gardens; this week snow, ice and frozen ground are about us, which shows the changableness of our climate.

—The Brockton Agricultural Society has made a net profit of upwards of $100,000 since it has been in existence, and yet never paid a dividend. The original shares must be worth a good deal of money.

—The same man owns the Chicago Herald, and a controlling interest in the Chicago Inter-Ocean. He teaches free trade in one paper to the Democrats and high protection in another paper to the Republicans, on one and the same day.

—The Chatham Courier says that a small boy surprised his teacher by asking how far a procession of the Presidents of the United States would reach if they were placed in a row. On expressing her ignorance, he calmly announced, "From Washington to Cleveland."

—The recently deceased Philadelphia woman who made provision in her will for being buried in her sealskin sacque was perhaps not so insane as has been thought. She doubtless prized the garment too much to permit any possibility of its enjoyment by a second wife.—Home Journal.

—W. H. Ames of North Easton, son of ex-Gov. Ames, is at the head of a company which has discovered and perfected a new method for propelling an electric car, without the aid of an overhead trolley. The new underground system is to be tried on a portion of the Brockton road this winter.

—Peter Cooper tells us that in 1793, President Washington signed a resolution of the American Senate, declaring that a holder of bank stock should not have a seat in Congress, and when John Quincy Adams was elected to Congress, he refused to qualify until he had disposed of his bank stock.

—A movement is on foot by a syndicate to purchase the old public library estate on Boylston street, Boston, tear down the old building and put up a 10-story structure to cost $1,000,000. The new edifice will be an office block and will be commenced as soon as they can "read their title clear."

—John P. Lovell of East Weymouth has in his possession many of the most valuable old records of men and events in connection with the history of Weymouth and East Braintree extant. Among them is one showing that this was a reading community more than a hundred years ago as shown by a written catalogue.

—In continued use of the eyes, in such work as sewing, typesetting, bookkeeping, reading and studying, the saving point is looking up from the work at short intervals and looking around the room. This may be practiced every ten or fifteen minutes. This relieving the muscular tension rests the eyes and makes the blood supply much better.

—The people of Bellington, W. Va., are proud of one of their citizens, whose only claim to greatness is his enormous beard and mustache. His name is James Brown. He is 6 feet, 1 inch, in height, but even his great stature does not hinder his chin beard from trailing on the floor when he stands erect. The mustache is even a greater curiosity than his beard, being exacly 7 feet and 4 inches "from tip to tip."

—Detroit, Mich., has within its limits what is believed to be the largest representative of the horse family now in existence. The animal is a Percheron-Norman, and was imported from France before he had attained his full growth. As he stands today he is strong 21 hands (84 inches) in height, and weighs 2500 pounds. He is owned by Richard Tregaskif, and is said to be able to make a mile in four minutes. The animal is 9 years old and has been in Detroit since 1891.

—A very large building has been erected the past summer and fall at Norwood, in the western part of this county, for the big Boston printing houses of J. S. Cushing & Co., and Berwick and Smith. Preparations are being made to dedicate the same about Dec. 1st. A ball and promenade concert, with a general inspection of the buildings, is the form of celebration contemplated. There is floor room for 5,000 to march or dance or dine and not crowd each other. The Governor and his staff are invited.

—"There are nearly 170,000 women in the State of Connecticut who might have voted at the town election recently. Only about 3,000 actually voted. That is, one woman out of every fifty-seven—less than 3 per cent. "Probably a good many of those who did vote went to the polls out of curiosity, and will never go again," says a Hartford paper. This is one of the strongest, if not the only, argument against woman suffrage which has been presented. —Boston Home Journal.

—When the railroad riot took place over a year ago at North Abington, several of the officers and citizens were injured. Through their attorneys the injured made claims for damages and the cases have been in obeyance since then. They have all been settled, in every case the claimant being satisfied with the sum awarded by the Consolidated road. There were about twenty cases. The officials of the company have been fair and just in the amounts allowed. It is estimated that over $20,000 was paid in settlement, as there were about sixteen men who received sums anywhere from $500 to $2,000.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief, It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take.

The City Council.

The regular meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening, the absent members at roll call being Councilmen Adams, Johnson, Litchfield and Robbins.

Communications.

A communication from the Mayor setting forth that the salary of the City Clerk was too small, considering the duties of the office, and recommending the ordinance be amended increasing the salary to $1200. Referred.

A communication was received from the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department setting forth the need of permanent men and horses for Hose 3 and 4. Referred.

G. B. Bryant of Old Colony street, Atlantic, sent a communication stating that his property was being damaged by surface water from Newbury avenue and Old Colony streets, and that unless remedied, claims for damages would be made. To Committee on Streets.

An application to collect junk was received.

Petitions were received for an arc light at the lower end of Appleton street, and also on Buckley street near the corner of Morton street. To Committee on Lights.

Councilman Lamb presented a petition to widen Copeland street between No. 155 and Furnace brook, and that $300 be appropriated. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Anderson arose to explain that in the remarks at the last meeting in relation to the First church that the councilman-at-large did not refer to him.

Reports of Committees.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported an order authorizing the Mayor to dispose of the old hose houses and land in Wards Two and Four by auction. Adopted.

The Committee on Finance reported an amendment to the order appropriating $4,000 for re-grading Adams street, which was adopted and the order took its second reading.

Voted when the Council adjourn it be until Thursday evening next.

The order granting a location on Willard street to the Quincy and Boston street railway was passed to be ordained.

Public Hearing.

A public hearing was then held on the acceptance of Walker and Clive streets.

Joshua Drew thought it was a necessity for the streets to go through.

Mr. Hinkley objected to the amount of damages awarded by the city, and he could not see any advantage of the street.

Mr. Murphy said he had bought land expecting the street to go through and would like to see it.

Mr. Churchill wanted to know what relation this hearing had to that of last year and what was to be gained by it.

Councilman Holden said it was to straighten the matter out and have it legal. The plans were the same as before but we had got to go all over the matter again as some of the abutters had not been notified before.

Mr. Churchill continuing, said, the street for the past six months was a disgrace. He was in favor of public improvement but the street as now laid out took much of his land. He would not consent to the alleged damages.

A lady thought Mrs. Clean should have a larger award.

Mr. Churchill was anxious to know if this hearing was from the beginning again, just as though the other order had not been passed.

City Solicitor Blackmur said this hearing was worthless unless you obliterate the entire part of the previous order and the question is whether the proposed extension is for the best interest of the city.

Mr. Churchill, claimed that as he understood it the council had no new plans. The right place for that street was to go through Mr. Hinkley's house and settle the damage afterward.

Another gentleman who said he resided on Clive street fovored the laying out of Walker street.

The hearing then closed.

Several orders for appropriations were in the calendar but as the attendance had dwindled down to eight members nothing could be done and at 8.30 the Council adjourned until Thursday evening.

The Cause of Creaking Shoes.

Many people object to machine-sewed shoes on account of the creaking they make when walked in. This creaking is never heard in a hand-sewed shoe. The hand-sewed shoes are from $1.50 to $2 higher in price than the machine-sewed shoes. The reason that machine-sewed shoes creak when walked in is that the soles are sewed to the uppers through and through with one thread, while in hand-sewed shoes what is called the "welt" is sewed by hand to the uppers and the outer sole is sewed to the welt. The hand-sewed shoes do not wear better than the machine-sewed, but they are more comfortable, and adjust themselves to the foot more readily.

Several inventions have been made to obviate the creaking difficulty, and one line of goods is made by machinery which it is claimed no one can detect as a machine made article. It has the same flexibility and softness, and does not creak, and is a half cheaper. The shoes are made in men's women's and children's sizes, and some retailers are adopting them altogether in place of the hand-sewed shoes for this year's trade. The inventor claims a royalty from the manufacturers for every pair of this make that are sold.—New York Telegram.

A Marvel of Beauty.

The fourth week of the exhibition of the Scenograph, or reproduction of the World's Fair, at the Casino building, 541 Tremont Street, has proved by far the most successful that the great example of what Artistic skill can produce has ever known.

The accurate models of the exposition buildings, the moving trains and steamboats, the lively fountains, the sunsets and sunrises and the very brilliant spectacle presented by illumination of the grounds and buildings of the White City, have been viewed with many expressions of pleasure.

The Exhibition is open from 10 A. M., to 10 P. M., week days, and from 2 to 10 P. M., Sundays. Admission 25 cents.

Anecdotes.

Doctor—"Does your cough seem rather tight ?"

Patient—"Great Scott! No, no, no; I've had nothing but hot lemonade for a week. How could a cough or anything else get tight on that ?"—Inter Ocean.

Tommy (inquiringly)—"Mamma, is this hair oil in this bottle ?"

Mamma—"Mercy, no! that's mucilage."

Tommy—(nonchalantly)—"I guess that is why I can't get my hat off."

Dolley—"Well, old fellow, I asked Miss Amy last night to marry me and she declined."

Goslin—"Did she deliberate as though hesitating to pain you ?"

Dolley—"No, she produced her negative by the instantaneous process."

Teacher—"Now, Harry, suppose there were seven buckets of coal to be brought in, you to bring in one and papa two, how many would be left ?"

Harry—"Six, unless you substract papa and add mamma."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Did you give the horse the powder ?"

"I tried to. I put the powder in the tin tube, forced open the horse's mouth, put the tube in between his teeth, and—

"Did you blow the powder down his throat ?"

"No; I was going to, but the horse blew it first."—Field and Farm.

For the Patriot.

New York Fashions.

NEW SKIRTS.

New skirts are plain in front, equally or almost so, on the sides and very full at the back, the flaire at the foot, being confined to the sides and back. Some are made entirely without crinoline, while in others, it is placed all the way up at the back or there may be quite a deep lining of it. In width also there is great liberty and some skirts remain comparatively narrow measuring only four yards at the bottom; others run fully eight yards and between these extremes, various gradations are noticeable. The widest skirts are laid in successive folds on the sides, that are kept in position by wires. As yet however, they are exceptional and it may be added that the most elegant costumes are finished by the Redfern bias corded velvet, which is the richest and most durable skirt binding ever made, being a high grade of S. H. and M. first quality.

VELVET

Is a notable revival in dress material and elegant gowns are made not only of the plain, but in numerous fancy weaves. Among these, both plaid and checked velvet are prominent, but equally fashionable styles show extremely small dots. Cloth and velvet are a favorite combination and the most usual method is to place one richly embroidered, as a vest in the other. Perforated cloth made over silk of contrasting color, takes a high position in new costumes.

FURS

Shown by C. C. Shayne, lead as usual and determine the great demand for both capes and jackets. Among capes, those of seal, Persian lamb or mink, come first, though chinchilla is a favorite revival, not only for the entire garment, but as finishings on other furs. Ermine remains an elegant selection for evening. Seal or Persian lamb are the choice for jackets, because with short hair, they may be made close fitting and the fashionable lengths are from thirty to thirty-four inches. Handsome capes are of silk or camel's hair lined with ermine or squirrel lock fur. Muffs do not display any special change and there is a large supply of fur collars and boas, both short and in long, fluffy fur. A bad fur is an extremely bad thing and the purchaser's only safety is to go direct to leading fur dealers who stake reputation on reliable goods and whose position could only have been attained by years of good faith.

ANSWERS AND NOTES.

"E. X." Corduroy is quite a stylish material and can be perforated like cloth and placed over colored silk. Bluet over cerise would be a brilliant combination, but not too much so for the present season which is one of rich contrasts.

"Elise." Evening dresses entirely draped by chiffon, are especially fashionable and it is quite the style to place chiffon over sprigged taffeta silk, the lustre and slightly veiled designs, showing very prettily. Chiffon waists with silk skirts are a rage and quite a benediction to slender girls.

Black dresses relieved by colored bands, are very popular and in this way, a made over material can be rendered additionally fresh. In such case, it is well to have some trimming around the lower edge, but the favorite mode is by a colored girdle and stock collar. Plain material is also rendered dressy, by large collarettes and perhaps cuffs.

LUCY CARTER.

The Boston Stage.

Castle Square Theatre.

It requires a force of about 400 men working night and day to get the Castle Square theatre ready to open its doors Monday night, Nov. 12. To look at what details of finishing are yet to be done one would declare it to be impossible, but the date is set and all arrangements are perfected whereby the Elks will open the new playhouse with their benefit for a week with "Capt. Paul," a romantic play by Edward E. Rose, as the program.

Boston Theatre.

Remarkable as was the success of "In Old Kentuckey" for the first fortnight of its run, last week's attendance fairly smashed all previous records, and the enthusiasm of the vast audiences nightly was really marvellous. Now that all Boston is talking of "In Old Kentucky," and thousands and tens of thousands of people, having seen the preformance once, have expressed an eager desire to go again, the management are annoyed to think that the booking of the great melodrama at the Boston Theatre was not for the entire season instead of ten weeks, which of itself is a tremendously long run.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The week of Monday, November 12, will be an event of importance and delight at the Hollis Street Theatre. One of the best stock companies in existence is that controlled by Charles Frohman, Rich & Harris, and whose business affairs are directed by the first named gentlemen, and whose home is at the Empire Theatre, New York, which is controlled by the same firm. This company rarely travels, but arrangements have been made whereby they will be seen for one week only at Manager Isaac B. Rich's favorite and fashionable house, the Hollis. This company has a record of unbroken success at New York, and will present one of their greatest pieces at the Hollis,—the comedy, "Liberty Hall," by R. C. Carton. This play has enjoyed a protracted run in England, and was given for 105 nights in New York with immense success. It is a dainty love story charmingly told.

Columbia Theatre.

The fourth week of "Sowing the Wind" at the Columbia will begin on November 12, and indications are that it will be one of the most prosperous of the engagement. This play has enjoyed a most decided success here, not to be wondered at when it is considered how full of color and vigor the piece is. The question of sex against sex, which has been the subject of discussion for years and is no nearer settlement than ever, is so admirably handled by Mr. Grundy, the author, that the play serves to fascinate and attract. Learned divines have said that "Sowing the Wind" was a sermon in itself, and taught a more vigorous lesson and contained a greater moral than half the discourses delivered from the pulpit. It has become a great favorite with society people, and the large audiences at the Columbia are made up of men and women whose faces are familiar and whose names are household words.

Park Theatre.

On Monday evening, November 12, at the Park Theatre, Boston, will begin the last week of the fantastic operatic travestry, "A Trip to the Moon," or, "Off the Earth," which is decidedly the most successful, most expensive and most gorgeous production seen in the east this year. The press and the public have united in according the most unstinted praise to this production on account of the magnificance of the scenery and costumes, the beauty of the music and the strength of the cast. Eddie Foy easily takes the lead among the fun-makers, and is seen in a series of the funniest of funny make-ups. His antics in the scene where he represents the freaks in a museum are most amusing, but it is when he appears as full-fledged fairy that the audience bursts into a roar, and that state of things continues as long as he holds the boards.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back.

Paskola

TRADE MARK

A Flesh Forming Food

Artificially Digested.

For pale, thin people. The tired and weary feeling which accompanies all wasting diseases will be relieved at once, the wasting arrested and new healthy tissue will be formed so that they will become plump and strong. An increase in weight will be noticed almost at once. It is stimulating although it contains no alcohol. It is assimilated without digestive effort. Paskola supersedes Cod Liver Oil, but has not its repulsive taste. You can buy it at any drug store. Send your name to The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade street, New York, and get their interesting pamphlet.

A. G. DURGIN, Quincy, Mass.

Household Receipts.

BUTTERED PARSNIPS. Boil until tender in boiling water. When done scrape and cut lengthwise in slices about one-quarter of an inch thick. Broil on a well-buttered gridiron. Serve on a very hot dish, after buttering well, with a hot cream sauce. If the broiling facilities are not good the parsnips may be fried in butter, and served in the same manner.

BAKED YELLOW SQUASH. Chop into small pieces a Hubbard squash. Pare the pieces and cook in boiling water until they may be pierced by a fork. Drain through a colander, mash finely, season with salt, pepper and plenty of butter. Put into a baking-dish and bake in a hot oven for about twenty minutes.

CARROT PUDDING. Two cupfuls of grated carrot, one and one-half cupfuls of finely chopped suet, four tablespoonfuls of dark, brown sugar, eight tablespoonfuls of flour, one-half of a pound of raisins, one-half of a pound of currants, one saltspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of mace. Steam four hours. Set in the oven twenty minutes before serving.

WHITE ONION SAUCE. Cover with boiling water and cook until soft one dozen small white onions. Drain and press six of them through a fine sieve. Mix to a smooth paste two tablespoonfuls of butter and one tablespoonful of flour. Add gradually a pint of boiling milk, stirring carefully, and remove from the fire as soon as it is thickened; salt and add the sifted onion and the whole onions and serve with as little delay as possible.

BAKED INDIAN PUDDING. Scald one quart of rich milk, and pour it over five tablespoonfuls of corn-meal; add to this one cup of molasses. Pour this into a pudding-dish in which you have melted a piece of butter the size of a large egg. If whey is liked, add, just after the pudding begins to cook, a cup of cold milk. Bake in a moderately hot oven.

The Advantages of Rest.

There is no better preventative of nervous exhaustion than regular, unhurried, muscular exercise. If we could moderate our hurry, lesson our worry, and increase our open air exercise, a large proportion of nervous diseases would be abolished. For those who cannot get a sufficient holiday the best substitute is an occasional day in bed. Many whose nerves are constantly strained in their daily avocation have discovered this for themselves. A Spanish merchant in Barcelona told his medical man that he always went to bed for two or three days when he could be spared from his business, and he laughed at those who spent their holidays on toilsome mountains. One of the hardest worked women in England, who has for many years conducted a large wholesale business, retains excellent nerves at an advanced age, owing, it is believed, to her habit of taking one day a week in bed. If we cannot avoid frequent agitation we ought, if possible, to give the nervous system time to recover itself between the shocks. Even an hour's seclusion after a good lunch will deprive a hurried, anxious day of much of its injury. The nerves can often be overcome by stratagem when they refuse to be controlled by strength of will.—Nineteenth Century.

Temperance.

Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. U.

Brandy Not Needed.

"Should you become ill," says Canon Wilberforce, instead of resorting to Dr. Brandy, try "Drs. Rest, Quiet and Do-nothing." Before I became an abstainer, I was much subject to fainting fits. I even fainted in the pulpit, and my life was a burden, and when I had made up my mind to abstain, my medical man come from London, and said, "If you do, you will probably die. You want the whip for your constitution." I did not believe him, and I said: "Very well, doctor, then I'll die, and there's an end to it."

But I have not died. And when I met that medical man more than a year after, I said, "Now, doctor, what do you think of it?" He said: "You beat me altogether. I was never more mistaken in any case in my life. And now let me tell you, that if there was no such thing as alcohol, I should have to put up my shutters. Nearly all the illnesses that come before me have, in one sense or another, come from that; not always from the personal indulgence of the patients, for sometimes it is hereditary."

Build Your Own Home.

If the money spent by wage-earners for liquor were kept for home building, enough would be saved in a few years to put a roof over the heads of every workingman's family between Maine and California. The saloon is the cause of more strikes than are capitalists. The saloon keeper is a worse tyrant over laborers in this land than any other man can ever be. All the combines that can be formed cannot rob the wage-earner as heartlessly and systematically as the rumseller does.—Sacred Heart Review.

Medical skill can no more replace a lost lung than a lost leg. But in its early stages yields to the right kind of treatment. The cod liver oil is nasty to take and likely to upset the stomach.

is palatable. It contains Ozone, the life-giving principle of sea air, and Guaiacol, made from the resin of beech trees. That is why it cures diseases of the lungs. It produces a great appetite, too, and is pleasant to take.

THE RESULT

OF AN AMERICAN WOMAN'S WORK.

Not An Assertion, But a Truth, Proven by the Accumulated Testimony of 20 Years.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

THERE'S a reason for it, when a special remedy for a special disease maintains the first place in the faith of the people for twenty years; when, year after year, the confidence given cautiously at first rolls into a tremendous volume; when one woman's name is known throughout the civilized world; when letters by the thousands come by every mail from all parts of the earth in gratitude and praise; when druggists place this remedy first on the list of standard remedies.

Then there is a reason for it. Lydia E. Pinkham and her wonderful Vegetable Compound, deserve the first place in the hearts of womankind.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured more women from all disease arising from irregularity and derangement of the uterus and womb than any remedy known to medical science.

Are you suffering? then profit by the experience of this thankful woman:—

MRS. VAN BUREN

Dear Mrs. Pinkham,—Last winter I did not think my little ones would have a mother long. I suffered terribly with female troubles.

I could keep nothing on my stomach, and got so "poor" my friends hardly knew me. I suffered with severe headaches, dizziness, faintness, backache, and the blues.

Thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am now as fat as ever, and have no female troubles.

If you use my letter I hope it may be the means of saving some other poor mother's life as it did mine.—MRS. ELLA VAN BUREN, St. David, Fulton Co., Ill.

Thanksgiving.

The beautiful summer is cold and dead,
  She has passed away like the rest—
The other fair summers long since fled
  From the woods and the meadow-crest;
The blossoms of spring were white and sweet,
But they paled and shrank from the touch of the heat.
  The fields are shining yellow and dun,
Where the autumn gathered its tale of grain,
  We thank Thee, Lord, for the blessed sun,
We thank Thee for the rain.

Our beautiful summer is passed and fled,
  We are older grown and gray;
The spring is gone from the youthful tread,
  The laugh from the lips once gay;
The childish hope in the childish eyes
Is darkened by many a sad surprise;
  But the promise stands sure as then it stood,
We can smile in loss as we smiled in gain,
  And we thank Thee, Lord of the year, for the good,
And we bless Thee for the pain.

SUSAN COOLIDGE.

ISABELLA'S GOOD LUCK.

Deacon Darley's old red wagon had just trundled up to the post-office door, and its occupants slowly dismounted, eyeing the other vehicles that were already hitched to the rail, for Ike Smith's store was a popular rendezvous for the whole neighborhood when the daily mail was opened.

He was a big pompous man, with stiff side whiskers, bristly eyebrows, and spectacled eyes which seldom looked at you straight, and the assemblage instinctively made way for him as he shouldered himself into the little room.

"Six yards of brown calico like this sample," said the deacon to the store boy:" "a jug o' molasses, and half an ounce of cinnamon—ahem-m! Any letters for me, Mr. Smith?"

"No, deacon; no mail for you tonight, except the Weekly Farmer," said the postmaster. "Wasn't expectin' to hear from Isabella, was you?"

The deacon's bristly eyebrows met in a frown. The crowd nudged each other, and exchanged furtive glances. For Isabella Ilford was the great man's penniless cousin who had appealed to him in vain for shelter and support; and in your New England village everybody knows all about everybody else's business.

But he ignored the question, and turned with apparent unconcern, to read the notice newly tacked up above the post-office window.

"'Dress and mantle making at reasonable prices, by Miss Ilford!' Eh! why—"

He stepped back into the little group, looking vaguely around him.

"Yes," said the postmaster, answering the implied question, as he handed a letter to old Betsy Doolittle; "you're right, deacon. It's Isabeller, sure 'nough. She did talk 'o going to Providence, but she hadn't no friends there, nor no money to pay her railroad fare"—here again the deacon winced—"and so my wife advised her to stay and try her luck here"

"Humph!" commented Deacon Darley. "Is my caliker an' molasses ready, then?"

"An' what d'ye think? persisted Isaac, the valiant. "She's bought the old Indian buryin' groun'. Well, why not? It's all laid down in buckwheat now, and a good crop they riz on it. We ain't no sartinty but that all the bones an' arrer heads an' things was took away long ago—and she got it all fired cheap. All she paid down was the makin's of a dress for the widow Fletcher, and the rest's on bond and mortgage, Bill Decker, he's goin' to patch up the old shed that's on it now, into a decent little house, and Isabellar's goin' on with the maple-sugar makin' in spring, and sewin' the rest of the year. She's got pluck, that gal has, and, sooner or later, she's bound to succeed.

The deacon turned frigidly to the boy behind the counter.

"Young man," said he, "I'll thank ye for my caliker and that molasses jug. I haven't time to stand here gossiping all day."

It was quite plain that in the matter of Isabella Ilford versus Deacon Darley, public opinion was all on the young lady's side.

As the red wagon jolted along in the rosy May twilight, the deacon did not see the young couple standing in the bowery lane that led up to the house where dwelt the postmaster's cheery wife—Isabella Ilford and his only son—Howard Darley—a straight, manly young fellow, with eyebrows as thick as his father's, only with laughing black eyes sparkling beneath them. Isabella herself was a tall, pretty girl, with cheeks like carnations, and glossy brown hair, brushed in natural waves back from her forehead.

"Yes; I know you're astonished, Howard," said she; "and when I come to think of it, I'am a little astonished myself. But I couldn't bear the idea of going back to the silk factory in Providence—and it was such a sudden idea. Howard, do you believe in dreams?"

"I don't understand you, Isabella."

The sea-blue eyes shone with a sudden ray. Isabella stole her arm through Howard's, and drew him gently away.

"Don't you want to come and look at my new home?" said she. "It will be light for half an hour at least, and I want to show you where I sat on the wooden step with my head against the side of the door, when I fell asleep and dreamed that dream."

"What dream, Isabella?"

"There! Isn't it a pretty spot? You can just get a glimpse of the river below; and it seems to me as if the air were purer here than it is anywhere else. And the little, tiny cabin is certainy picturesque if it is nothing else; and when I get the few bits of furniture into it that Mr. Smith is going to lend me—"

"Isabella, you're the bravest woman I ever knew!" exclaimed Howard Darley. "But what about the dream?"

"I had been sweeping the place out, you know, and clearing the old swallow's nests out of the chimney, so I sat down a minute to rest and breathe in the sweet spring air, and all of a sudden—you know how it is in dreams—I looked around and there was an old, old wrinkled Indian chief, all in his paint and feathers, with a blanket wrapped around him and eyes that shone like coals, standing on the threshold; and he picked up a horse shoe from the ground and hung it right there," pointing to the top of the door, "and said aloud: 'Daughter, you have come into the door of luck!'"

"Why," cried Howard, involuntarily starting back, "there's a horse shoe there now!"

"Yes, I know," said Isabella, quietly; "that is the one."

"But, darling you know that's nonsense."

"Well, I don't know whether it is or not," said the girl. "But how did it come there?"

"It must have been there before."

"That's just what puzzles me," declared Isabella. "Mrs. Smith's great grandmother who can remember when the Indians really were buried here, says there never was a horse shoe over the door. And she used to pick berries here and play at hide and seek with the other children when she was six years old. And old Seth Soper—he that's the oldest man in the county house, you know—he says that his father nailed it up himself. And it does look very old and rusty, dosen't it?"

"But, Isabella—"

"I've made up my mind," said Isabella, with a nod of her head. "I do believe the dream meant something, and I'm glad I bought the place. It's less than an acre, but it's quite a little farm to me, and I mean to save money and pay the mortgage—"

"Dear Isabella, you must let me do that for you," protested Howard.

"No!" The sea-blue eyes sparkled with sudden decision, a deeper carnation dyed the round cheek. "I love you, Howard, and I shall always love you; but I never shall marry any man whose father does not want me to enter his family."

"You're not marrying my father, Isabella; you're marrying me; and whatever my family say, I will have you for my wife!" cried the young man, excitedly.

She put her hand gently on his shoulder.

"Wait, Howard," she said; "wait. We are both young; and I have a sort of pride in proving to the man who declined to support his poor relation that I can take care of myself. And you don't know how much that dream encouraged me. Oh, you will see how I shall make my way."

And Howard Darley's entreaties were powerless to alter her resolution.

"Where have you been, Howard?" asked the deacon, when his son came home that evening.

"Do you really want to know, sir? Well, I have been up at the old Indian burying ground, talking to Isabella Ilford."

"Humph! You won't give up that infatuation?" frowned the old man.

"No, sir; I won't give up that infatuation."

"Miss Cornella Thimpleton—"

"I don't want to hear anything about Miss Cornelia Thimpleton," said Howard; and his father wisely abandoned the subject of the red-haired village heiress who was supposed to be fond of his tall son. He only shrugged his shoulders and began to read the Weekly Farmer, while Howard sat down to calculate how soon, if the crops were good and the price of hay kept up, he could afford to marry.

The red leaves of the sugar maple grove behind the old Indian burying ground were fluttering down in the October gales, when one day Deacon Darley knocked at the door of the little house, which Isabella had made quite habitable by this time.

She came quietly forward, with her sewing in her hand. No princess could have been more dignified or more composed.

"Isabellar," said the deacon, looking ineffably foolish, "I—I begin to find out I've made a mistake. Howard, he ain't easy 'thout he can have you for his wife——an' Howard's like the rest of the Darley's he's dreadful sot in his ways. My wife, she always liked you—and—and—"

Isabella stood there looking him straight in the face. By no single word or gesture would she help him out of the labyrinth of apologies, and the faintest gleam of an amused smile hovered around her lips, and sparkled beneath her eyelashes as she gazed.

—"And," went on the deacon, suddenly spurring himself up, "I've come to ask you to let by-gones be by-gones, and marry Howard. It seems kind o' forlorn for you to live here alone in this haunted spot, where dead Injuns were buried once, and to work for your livin', when you've got relations who'd be glad to give you a home."

"Oh, certainly, of course," demurely answered Isabella. "But I didn't know, you see, that you were so anxious to give me a home."

"Well, I be," stoutly asserted the deacon; and Isabella Ilford was wise enough not remind him of the very different testimony he had born not so very long ago.

And it was not until Isabella had come, a bride, to the old Darley farm-house, that her mother-in-law bustled in one day full of news.

"The Orangebrook railroad's comin' right slam through the place," said she. "I heerd it down to Doctor Cullen's. It'll make a deal o' difference to us all, and they say the station's to be built just where you used to live, Isabellar, on the old Indian burying ground."

"Yes," said Isabella, "the directors were here to see Howard about it this morning. They are to pay me five thousand dollars for it."

"Five — thou — sand — dollars! And didn't you never suspicion nothin' about it?"

"No," said Isabella, quiety; "why should I?"

"I did," said the deacon, folding the Weekly Farmer, with a complacent twinkle in his eyes. "I heerd three months ago that the like was projected right through the buryin' ground."

"And that was the reason," thought Isabella, "that he was so anxious to receive me as his daughter-in law. And neither I nor Howard suspected."

Again she smiled and made no comment. But a little afterward when her husband said to her:—

"This is the good luck that came through you, dear Isabella," she answered, softly:—

"No, dearest; the good luck was your true and steadfast love!"—New England Farmer.

Neatness in Children.

Be sure and shut the closet doors before you stir the beds," was the charge our mother called after us as we were sent to put in order the chambers of the wide old farm-house that was our childhood's home. A full quarter of a century has swung past since then, and we now are trying to teach our own little girls the wise counsels we sometimes so unwillingly heard from our mother. If every housekeeper would insist that the occupants of her sleeping apartments,—children, help, boarders and visitors,—should air their beds and throw open windows each morning before leaving their room, unless beating storms made this impracticable, we should have less ailments of lungs and liver and nerves in our midst. To breathe, night after night, unclean, vitiated air is enough to poison and disease the soundest lungs and undermine the strongest constitution created.

Teach your girls to close all closet and chamber doors before commencing to make beds and to put rooms in order, else dust and lint will puff and settle over garments in closets and needlessly litter hallways and landings. Maybe half their wardrobe is not neatly hanging in smooth, well shaken folds on their hooks, but is lying in tumbled heaps on the closet floor. We have seen dainty suits, the work of painstaking, loving mother hands, grimed with dust and crumpled with wear and their last toss and flop on to chair-back or foot-board, their pretty ruffles and plaits spoiled with careless crushing. We have seen elegant wraps and velvet and lace-trimmed garments swinging, "right side out," on a closet hook or on a jagged headed nail in the chamber wall, caught at some point of the rich drapery when heedlessly flung hook-ward, a muddy gossamer brushing their clinging folds and carefully laid plaits and delicate ruchings ruined with their deep creasings and gray siftings of dust and lint. Nowhere does slovenliness so quickly tell of itself as in the shabby wrinkles and crumpled folds and drapery of a lady's wardrobe. Our little girls and boys should early be taught habits of neatness and method, that they may not be left to form such undesirable traits of character. It is easier for a child of seven than one of seventeen to learn to take proper care of her clothing.

With careful and constant example and now and then a warm word of approval these little home makers of the next generation soon take healthy pride in keeping their dainty dresses and wraps neatly shaken out, turned on their linings and carefully hung or folded away from clinging lint and sifting dust. Give them pretty boxes for their prized, lace-trimmed aprons and dainty collars and bonnets; an elaborately embroidered shoe bag for the smart little button boots and leggings, and these little folks soon learn to delight in keeping their wardrobe in neatest order.—Good Housekeeping.

She Sent Him a Note.

Of course she was provoked when he passed her on the street without stopping to speak to her. He lifted his hat, it is true, but she recalled the time when he would have turned and walked several blocks with her, no matter how pressing his business. Hadn't they been sweethearts a few years before? Why should the fact that they had not met for three years so change him? Ought he not to be the more pleased to see her?

The more she thought of it, the more she felt that he should have paid her some little attention, if only for the sake of old times, and when she reached home she was so angry that she resolved to make him repent his slight.

The next day he received the following:—

MR. FILKINS: I believe you have a photograph of me—one that I gave you several years ago in a moment of girlish folly. I have since regretted that I was thoughtless in such matters. I will esteem it a favor if you will return the photograph at your earliest convenience.
ETHEL DEANE.

She held that it was a cutting note, and that it would bring him to his senses if anything would. She told her best friend that she had brought him up with a round turn, but she didn't tell her best friend anything about the following reply which she received:—

MISS DEANE: If you insist, of course I will do as you wish, but it will be a great deprivation to the baby. The little fellow is passionately fond of pictures, and for nearly six months the photograph of you has been regarded as his special property. Still, my wife says she will take it away from him if you really need it.
Very truly,
ALBERT FILKINS.

She didn't send for it. She didn't even bow to him when she next met him on the street. She didn't do anything except wonder when he was married and why she was so foolish.—Chicago Tribune.

A Well-Matched Couple.

A convict at a French penal settlement, who was undergoing a life sentence, desired to marry a female convict, such marriages being of common occurrence. The Governor of the colony offered no objections, but the priest proceeded to cross-examine the prisoner.

"Did you not marry in France?" he asked.

"Yes."

"And your wife is dead?"

"She is."

"Have you any document to show that she is dead?"

"No."

"Then I must deline to marry you. You must produce some proof that your wife is dead."

There was a pause, and the bride prospective looked anxiously at the would be groom. Finally, he said,—

"I can prove that my former wife is dead."

"How will you do so?"

"I was sent here for killing her."

And the bride accepted him notwithstanding—Texas Siftings

Long Distance House Moving.

A curious case of house moving was recently witnessed in Oregon: A man who owned a residence at Seattle, which cost him $5,000 to erect, removed to Olympia and did not have sufficient funds to build another house. He bought a lot and concluded to remove the building he owned at Seattle. Every one laughed at him, but he persisted. Rolling the house down to the river, he loaded it upon a scow and it was soon at Olympia, a distance of about 60 miles. Then he had it rolled upon his lot and, strange to say, not a timber was strained not even a piece of furniture broken, although he had not removed the contents before starting the house upon its unusual journey.—Scientific American.

For the Patriot.

My First Glimpse of Florida.

While I was dressing the next morning, G. left me, went down to the grove and picked a lime, which he brought to me, and without a smile on his face said something about "a new variety of very small orange" and held it out to me. I took it, bit a hole in the skin, and sucked it perfectly dry, without making a single grimace. G.'s face was a study, and I thoroughly enjoyed having turned the laugh upon him. We joined C. and L. and went down to breakfast, when, I give you my word, I was closely stared at, and no doubt, my features, and gown literally picked to pieces. I suppose it was natural, this close scrutiny. G. having preceded me, built the house, etc., before my arrival.

After breakfast we walked through the "Twin Oak Grove" and Mr. H—r showed us his wonderful Mairchal-Niel rose which is budded into the native rose, the "Cherokee." This vine starts from the ground at a side door of the house, climbs up, over the porch, and thence to the second story window, covering a distance of about one hundred and forty-four square feet. You can imagine its size, but of its beauty one can not form any idea. Mr. H—r, allowed us to pick about a bushel of buds, which are incomparable I think, so rich in size, coloring and odor. Next we started to explore the town, which is built on a "bluff" which rises some twenty-five feet from the river. I wish that you could see it, as I saw it, or that my words could convey to you some idea of the great beauty of this most picturesque town of W. seen in the early morning, under a cloudless sky of deep blue, its grove (natural) of huge oaks hung heavily in the graceful swaying moss. This and the rich dark green foliage glistening with dew, which in the twilight flashed forth matchless rays of light, like so many finely cut diamonds.

As we stood on the bluff directly in front of the post-office, and looked south, we saw the celebrated McClure grove, with the large typical Southern house surrounded by broad piazzas and sheltered by tall oaks and showing through, the foliage of the orange trees, with which nothing can compare in color. And then looking north, the Bryant grove, its house standing quite near the road in a garden composed of countless varieties of the rose, each bush in full bloom, and over the entrance of the front door, climbing an Arabian or star jossamine, a delicate vine, and most fragant; the blossom, a waxy white star, with a yellow centre, made a picture once seen, never forgotten. After lunch G. hired a team, i. e. one horse harnessed to a two seated wagon and C., L., G. and I drove out to "Ivy Cottage" which G. has made so cosey, and which is to be our winter home, I hope, for many years to come, and which I will describe in my next letter. We drove back to the "Twin Oak" for the night, and leaving C. and L. there, where they will remain till their furniture arrives from the North, and they can get their litte cottage in order. We came out home this morning, and have commenced housekeeping, under "our own vine and fig-tree."

Poor Quality of Milk.

Everything in this world is in motion, either in the line of progress or of retrograde; the retrograde is usually easier and more rapid. This applies to developing milch cows as well as everything else. When milk is considered as milk, without any regard to quality, there is a tendency to breed down, to develop a race of animals which will produce a large quantity of milk without regard to quality. But here the law steps in and says: "Thus far shalt thou go and no further. If you get down to 13 per cent. you must stop, as milk below that will be illegal." It is difficult, however, to start a ball rolling down hill and plan to have it stop at a certain specified point. The inertia is pretty sure to carry it beyond. So in the breeding of stock. Those who have had in mind quantity only and have tried to breed down and still keep within the law, find it difficult to stop at the 13 per cent. limit and hence occasionally find themselves in trouble with the standard. Milk is the only article on the market, so far as Boston is concerned, in which there is no inducement to produce a good quality. The law required 13 per cent. of solid matter but everything above this stands on the same footing.—New England Farmer,

Opportunities.

Some one has said that "every face ought to be beautiful at forty," and another that "no old person has a right to be ugly, because he has had all his life in which to grow beautiful." That is to say, that life's opportunities of nobleness, of even forty years of opportunity, if well used, are enough to make so much beauty within that it cannot help coming to the surface in graceful habits of the nerves and muscles. The transfiguration of a pleasant smile, kindly lightings to the eyes, restful lines of self control about the lips, pure shining of the face as great thoughts kindle inwardly—these things no parent makes inevitably ours and no fitful week or two of goodness gives them, and no schooling of the visage either, but only habitual nobleness and graciousness within, and this will give them all. Nor does a wise man think he has watched the quick expressions which flit across the face unconsciously. The truth will out, and in these flashing motions sometimes we catch the rascals under a handsome mask, and sometimes catch the angel where we had not looked for one.—Rev. W. C. Gannett.

Babies Made Ill.

Bad ventilation deforms more children and destroys more health than accident or plague. There is reason to believe that not a few of the scrofulous diseases common among children proceed from the ignorant habit of being put to sleep in beds and perambulators with the head under the bedclothing, and so inhaling air already breathed and further contaminated by exhalations from the skin. Plain talk is heard at the clinics of a great city. It is the only way to impress the dense.

"Look here," the pathologist was saying to a woman, "you are smothering the life out of your child's lungs. How would you like to drink the water you wash in? Well when you cover your baby's head up you force him to use air that is just as bad, and just as impure."—Plymouth Memorial.

—A turkey raiser estimates the total cost of food for each bird at fifty cents, and gets them to weigh an average of fifteen pounds each, making the cost of turkey meat about three and one-third cents per pound.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, NOV. 17, 1894.

Thompson Not a Candidate.

Ex-Councilman James Thompson was personally the almost unanimous choice of the Republicans of the city for Mayor, but in view of his connection with the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association there were many who did not regard him as the most available candidate.

Mr. Thompson has done nothing during this campaign to secure the nomination but he has been besieged with representative citizens and by the workingmen of the city to permit the use of his name. To none has he given encouragement, but has told all to wait. This week he has told his intimate friends that he does not desire the nomination. Not having been a candidate he informs the PATRIOT that he does not see the necessity of writing a formal letter of declination.

The report that there is to be a reduction in the wages of granite workers on December 1 has no foundation in fact, and cannot take place under the agreement. If the business depression continues, it is possible that on March 1 next there may be some changes but the manufacturers hope it will not be necessary. As a candidate for Mayor, Mr. Thompson feels that he might be unjustly assailed.

Mr. Thompson believes that as president of the Granite Manufacturers' Association he may be able to prevent any trouble and thereby be able to do more for the city than though he was Mayor. This is a very unselfish view for the gentleman to take and one which the voters may remember a few years later, particularly if President Thompson, who has always been a friend of labor, averts a labor trouble. A granite man as mayor could do much for the granite industry of the city and manufacturers and granite cutters alike would be wise in uniting and pushing their claim for recognition in this city of granite.

But who will be the Republican nominee this year. Indications are that it will be Councilman Stephen O. Moxon, although Auditor John O. Hall is developing considerable strength. It lies between these two and both are worthy of being placed in the executive chair. Both are doing good work for the city in their present positions, but it cannot be expected that Councilmen Moxon can afford to give his services many more years in the legislative branch. This fact together with the fact that it would be difficult to secure as good an Auditor as Mr. Hall, will it is thought lead the voters to select Mr. Moxon at this time.

Congressional Recount.

The greatest change ever made by a recount of votes in Quincy was that of Wednesday when it was found that 26 votes for one candidate had been given to another. In many of our close elections this would have effected the result, but this recount was for another purpose and nobody expected that Congressman-elect Atwood with his large plurality would be counted out. Candidates defeated by 50 votes may, however, in the future reasonably ask for a recount, for McNary gained 48 on Peabody.

The changes in the vote by the recount were:

Atwood,—Ward One, 313 to 312. A loss of 1.

McEttrick,—Ward One, 109 to 108; Ward Two, 115 to 114; Ward Four, precinct one, 148 to 147. A loss of 3.

McNary,—Ward One, 76 to 77; Ward Three, 122 to 119; Ward Four, precinct one, 64 to 90; Ward Four, precinct two, 69 to 68. A gain of 23.

Peabody,—Ward Four, precinct one, 27 to 2. A loss of 25.

The revised vote and the original count are given side by side below:

	Original.	Recount.
Atwood	1477	1476
McEttrick	793	790
McNary	529	552
Peabody	176	151

Art Exhibition.

The exhibition of art needle work and china attracted a large gathering of society people to the residence of Mrs. Adelaide C. Armstrong on Grand View avenue, Wollaston, on Wednesday afternoon and evening.

The exhibition was rich in examples of all kinds of art needle work, including Honiton lace, Mexican, laid work, Kensington, dainty pin cushions, picture frames, toilet boxes, doylies, centre pieces, carving and tray cloths and table covers.

Of especial interest was the exhibit of elaborate center pieces in the latest fads, such as sun bursts with Honiton lace borders, and also pieces done in the new bluette so much in vogue.

And then there were bits of delicate China in small pieces, cups and saucers, pin and card trays, and candle sticks.

The interior of the house was prettily decorated with palms and chrysanthemums. The chocolate was poured by Miss Lillie McKenney of Cambridge and Miss M. Beulah Wadleigh of Medford.

The exhibition was continued this afternoon and evening.

The Quincy Congress.

The intrinsic value of the Young Men's Congress for training young men to take an intelligent interest in public affairs and to discuss the same, and at the same time to understand the ordinary rules of parliamentary law, has been proven beyond a doubt. We know of one organization in our city which offers such an opportunity to young men who desire to take an interest in public affairs. It affords a splendid training school for would-be candidates for the City Council. There are a few vacancies in the Congress at the present time and we would advise him who wants to spend two evenings every month where he will have an opportunity to learn something which will be of benefit to himself and his fellow citizens, to join the Congress.

The New Voting Lists.

The board of registrars were in session Wednesday from 12 o'clock until 10 o'clock P. M., when registration for the city election closed. Seven names were restored and 18 males and 6 females added.

There were 3,711 names on the lists at the state election, and since then 12 names have been dropped and 48 males added and restored, so that now the total number on the lists not including females is 3,745, an increase of 37 over the State election, and an increase of 72 over the Municipal election of 1893. The total number of female voters now on the lists is 27, all in Ward Five.

Granite Manufacturer Dead.

Mr. Matthew Breen of the firm of Moynihan & Breen granite manufacturers, died at Elizabeth, N. J., last Tuesday of heart trouble. Mr. Moynihan went on immediately and brought the body back and the funeral will be held Saturday morning from St. Mary's church, West Quincy, at 9 o'clock.

Mr. Breen has been at Elizabeth, N. J., for the past two years attending to the firm's branch house there. He leaves a widow and several children.

The next lecture in the course in the Methodist church will be by Chaplain Crawford of the U. S. Navy, who spent much time on the flagship off the coast of Asia, and he will speak on the Chinese and the causes of the present war.

—Postmaster Torrey of South Braintree, and Miss Josephine Rogers of Holbrook, were united in marriage Wednesday evening at Holbrook, by Rev. A. H. Johnson.

CITY BRIEFS.

G. A. R. fair tonight.

Bicycles are out again.

But little snow remains.

How about the no-license campaign?

Have you read the Thanksgiving receipts in this issue?

The no-license majority last year was 826, and there were but 249 blanks.

Mr. Edward Lovejoy and family have moved to their new home on Butler road.

The new switch board at the telephone exchange is nearly ready to put into service.

Postmaster Burke has caused a letter box to be placed on the street railway building.

Miss Shimer is busy every day at D. E. Wadsworth & Co.'s, and will remain all the week.

Miss Thayer, matron of the City Hospital, has returned from a pleasant vacation trip to New York.

The street railway has received its winter supply of salt, which will be distributed along the tracks when the snow flies.

Hose 4 is now located in its new quarters and mindful of the old motto "They are ever ready and willing" when duty calls.

Too many entertainments this week. But next week all can attend the Johnson concert. Not Mayor Johnson, but its in his ward.

Mount Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., worked the first degree Tuesday evening upon four candidates. Instrumental music added much.

Merry Mount lodge, A. O. U. W., has put out a transparency at its hall, giving notice that the lodge meets. A good idea for others to follow.

Charles P. Brackett of this city was one of the ushers at the wedding of Mr. Charles E. Tileston and Miss Susan E. Day at Dorchester Wednesday evening.

The terms of Dr. John A. Gordon, at large, Hon. Charles H. Porter of Ward One and Wendell G. Corthell of Ward Five of the School Committee expire this year.

Miss Fannie French, sewing teacher of the public schools, entertained her young lady friends Tuesday evening with a telegram party. Refreshments were served.

There is so much real politics in the air this week that the Quincy Young Men's Congress postponed its debate on the Squantum annexation until the excitement was over.

Col. Parker, Quincy's first superintendent of school, was in attendance at the semi-annual meeting of the New England Association of School Superintendents in Boston, last week.

Arthur E. Sproul of this city, who was the correspondent of the Boston Herald in this section for many years, has reentered the newspaper business, as general manager of the Boston Traveller.

Miss M. E. Fish, the Chestnut street milliner, is incapacitated from work for a few weeks, and during that time she has secured the services of a New York milliner to look after the interests of her patrons.

Mr. F. A. Tupper had an article entitled "Over-refined Pronunciation," in the Atlantic Monthly "Contributor's Club" for November; also some verses in the Boston Transcript of November 12.

Walter, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Haley of Brackett street, died Nov. 9 of diphtheria. He had been sick but a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Haley have suffered much from this dreaded disease, and they have in their present loss the sympathy of all their neighbors. The funeral was at 1 o'clock last Saturday.

The ladies' Social Circle held its monthly business meeting in the vestry of the Methodist church, Monday evening. Arrangements were made for a sale and entertainment, December 6. The circle also held a "sewing meeting" on Wednesday evening, at the house of Mrs. A. S. Stiggins, Safford street, at which they were joined by a company of young people, and after the work was over a half hour was spent socially.

The average man is always desirous of getting rich. He dreams of the day when he will get a fat salary or will have a good sized fortune left him. He does not realize that the pennies and dimes spent every day, if systematically invested would put him in every comfortable circumstance in a few years. One of the greatest aids to systematic saving is the co-operative bank. No man is more thoroughly acquainted with the advantages of these than ex-Gov. J. Q. A. Brackett who gave a free talk on the subject Wednesday night at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

The Wollaston School.

In the matter of the defeat of Mr. W. G. Corthell as a member of the school committee from Ward Five, there appear to be no dispute as to the cause of the defeat. There has been no question as to his ability, and to his thorough devotion to the duties of his office. But nobody who is interested in educational matters doubts but that the Wollaston school is in a condition which plainly calls for re-organization. We cannot afford to impair the education of our children for personal considerations. If the school is not what it should be, the changes needed to raise it to the desired standard should immediately be made. If those occupying positions as teachers can be shown to be in all respects fitted for their work, they should be retained. If they have proved by their work that they are not qualified for the trust imposed in them, there should be no hesitation shown in removing them.

Reception at Mrs. Rice's.

Outside, Tuesday was a typical November day, dreary; but inside the beautiful home of Mrs. W. B. Rice our "four hundred" found cheer and brightness. The gracious host attired in black relieved with jet and a cluster of violets, stood by a high bank of white chrysanthemums.

Miss Rice, lovely in rose pink, was assisted by Mrs. Price and Misses Pratt and Harlow. Misses King and Whicher in white, poured coffee and chocolate.

The pink shaded candle lights on the tea table reflected in the mirror, doubled the pretty scene. Music from violin and piano blended agreeably with the happy voices and the big shaded lamp on the staircase landing, reflected the daintily dressed guests.

Christmas Carol.

The Unitarian ladies gave a very pleasing entertainment Wednesday evening, presenting Bird's Christmas carol. The principal parts were admirably taken by Miss Sibley, Miss Russell, Miss Harlow, Miss Whicher and Mr. Price, but the smaller one—Jane Reed, Patty Faxon, Beatrice Tisdale, Alice Claflin, Bertha Packard, Wallace Carr, Brooks, Keyes, Joel and Carl Sheppard—added mirth as members of a family of nine children.

The musicale Thursday evening conducted by Prof. Wrigley delighted a good audience. It was by the men of Christ's church choir and the Quincy Male quartette.

After Transgressors.

If "B." will notify me when he will call at my residence or at 36 Bromfield street, Room 34, Boston, I shall be pleased to grant a strictly confidential interview.

Nov. 17—1w HENRY H. FAXON.

Those Kersey Overcoats at the Granite Clothing Company's store are a bargain.

WEST QUINCY.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Jose have returned from their trip to Maine.

Mrs. John A. Lincoln of Mattapan, formerly of West Quincy is visiting friends in town this week.

A party went to Milton to the Pilgrim Union in one of E. H. Doble's teams Thursday evening.

Rev. E. W. Virgin has received from the polishing shop of Wesley Fuller, a paper weight made from one of the granite sleepers of the first railway in the country—a beautiful sample of Quincy granite.

W. P. Dalpe, clerk for E. H. Doble & Co., has gone to Canada on a two weeks' vacation.

Allen H. Daugherty of Lebanon, Pa., is playing in the Granite City band at the Grand Army fair this week.

A company from the Epworth League, West Quincy, attended the meeting of the Pilgrim Union, in the Dorchester Methodist church, Thursday evening.

An evening with the poets, was opened Monday evening in the vestry of the Methodest church by a paper on Tennyson, together with recitations from his poems by Mrs. Nettie Badger. "Sweet and Low"—also by Tennyson was sung by the following quartette, Charles Glucher, Belle Moir, Mary Geer and Wesley Fuller, with Miss Georgie Thayer as accompanist on the piano. A paper on Bryant and his poems, by Belle Moir, together with reading of selections from the works of the poet, followed.

Papers on Longfellow, Whitter and Holmes were presented by Addie Miller, Belle Moir and E. H. Virgin, and several pieces were recited by Bertha Turner and Mary Pierce; and other pieces were sung by the quartette.

QUINCY POINT.

Mrs. Susan Arnold has gone to Richmond, Virginia, for the winter. During her sojourn there she will be the guest of her daughter, Mrs. H. K. Terry.

Rev. Herbert M. Youtz of Boston has accepted a call from the Washington Street Congregational church, to be its pastor for one year, and will commence upon his duties at once.

A surprise party was tendered Mrs. Joseph Lapham at her home, Wednesday evening. Games, music and dancing were indulged in. One of the pleasing features of the evening was the minuet dance by Miss Jennie Harris, which was done in a very graceful manner.

It is reported that a large land deal is about to take place at Quincy Point.

Miss Anna Starbuck who has been visiting her parents for the past few weeks has returned to New York.

Munroe Perry has left the employ of Miss Ella M. Freeman and his position has been filled by Marcus Wight.

Men are at work this week raising a yacht that was sunk off the wharf of the Quincy and Nantasket Stemboat Co.

The indications are that Lovell's grove will be a popular resort for picnic parties next summer, as the prospect is that a line of steamers will ply between there and Boston.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Abel Nutting felt happy Saturday afternoon when he received a check from the government for $49 01 for work done in 1862.

A testimonial and dance will be given for the benefit of Francis Rafferty at Cahill's hall on Tuesday evening, Nov. 20.

Miss Mary Grace MacMillan of Prince Edward Island is visiting her relatives in this city.

Cards are out announcing the marriage Nov. 21, at South Braintree of Mr. Albert Jewett Williams of Quincy to Miss Hadassah May Dyer, daughter of Mr. Lawrence A. Dyer of Braintree.

DOWNS AND PARK

Mr. A. F. Blaisted has moved from Faxon Road to Edwin street.

George Vinton of Beach street is very ill.

Carpenters have commenced work on a new house for Mr. Whitehouse on Rawson road.

Mr. Amadem has exchanged his house on Freeman street, for a farm at Bridgewater and he has moved his family there.

Tuesday evening a number of the friends of Frank Garham of Beach street tendered him a surprise party. There were dancing, games and a collation, all of which made the evening pass pleasantly. Mr. Garham was presented with a pair of slippers.

The Political Field.

The mayoralty convention is entitled to 62 delegates, as follows:

Ward One,	13	delegates.
Ward Two,	9	"
Ward Three,	12	"
Ward Four,	9	"
Ward Five,	12	"
Ward Six,	7	"

Dr. John A. Gordon after a dozen or more years of faithful service on the Quincy school board, has declined to be a candidate for re-election. M. D.'s are however recognized as valuable men and Dr. John F. Welch may be his successor.

Republicans of Ward One have made some good nominations, and brought the young men to the front. All parts of the ward seem to be well represented: The residential and business part of Granite street by Mr. Bass, the residential and business ends of Hancock street by Cashier Spear and Bigelow street and the Boston contingent by Lawyer Sears. Who will be the candidate at large, if the ward is entitled to one?

But 3 of the 13 Republican Councilmen have been renominated, and not over 5 more can be on the ticket at-large. It is doubtful if half are renominated, so that it will not be necessary to vote the Democratic ticket to secure a change.

These names are suggested by the Republicans at large for the Council: Charles H. Johnson, John P. Bigelow, Jonas Shackley, Eugene H. Sprague, Stephen O. Moxon and Edgar G. Cleaves or Luther S. Anderson.

Three Republican ex-Councilmen are candidates for re-election: Charles H. Grindell in Ward Three, Charles M. Bryant in Ward Five, and Louis Rinn in Ward Six.

John C. Ring desires the PATRIOT to state that he is not a candidate for the Democratic nomination in Ward Two for the Council. Furthermore, he would not accept any political office.

John A. Duggan has resigned the chairmanship of the Ward Six Democratic committee.

Ward Four Republicans will feel better over the recount. While the 27 votes for Peabody in precinct one occasioned some surprise, the accuracy of the returns were not doubted. Now that Peabody received but 2 in that precinct and only 8 in the ward they will be elated.

Birthday Party.

The residence of Mr. Geo. Prout, 141 Granite street, was the scene of a very merry party Thursday evening, the occasion being in honor of Mr. Fred Goss's 24th anniversary of birth.

Mr. Goss was the recipient of many beautiful presents. One of which was a gold ring emblematic of the I. O. O. F., presented in behalf of the company by Mr. Joseph P. Prout. An elegant gold scarf pin was presented by his employer, Mr. John W. Nash, and a fountain pen by A. F. McLeod.

A bountiful repast was served, after which whist was indulged in till midnight.

—Mrs. Joanna Taylor, 97 years of age, and a well known resident of East Weymouth, fell Saturday and received injuries from which it is thought she cannot recover.

WOLLASTON.

At the regular meeting of the Unity club, which will be held at the Wollaston Unitarian church vestry on Tuesday evening next, the subject discussed will be "Our public schools, their defects and the remedy." The meeting will be in charge of Mr. Sylvester Brown. As Mr. Brown, besides ranking high on educational matters, has been nominated for the school committee from Wollaston on what might be called the reform ticket his remarks will have especial significance. Wednesday afternoon's LEDGER will contain a full report of the meeting.

Rev. J. H. Mansfield D. D. Presiding Elder, visited the Wollaston Methodist Episcopal church Friday evening. The Quarterly Conference was held at 8 30 after the prayer meeting.

Charles S. Thomas of Wollaston has had his pension reissued.

A new hydrant has been placed at the corner of Brook and Taylor streets, Wollaston.

A "neighborhood meeting" was held at the residence of Mr. George A. Brown, corner of Farrington street and Elmwood avenue, Wollaston, on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. A. L. Baker entertained the Ladies' Reading Circle connected with the Wollaston Congregational society, at her home on Central avenue, on Tuesday afternoon.

The second entertainment in the Wollaston Congregational church course was given on Tuesday before a crowded house. The concert was given by Mrs. E. Humphrey Allen, soprano; Miss Nellie Plummer, pianist; and Mr. Charles N. Allen, concert violinist; assisted by Mrs. W. C. Whitman, reader.

Mr. Richard R. Freeman entertained the Elliot club of Wollaston, on Wednesday evening. Subject: Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Wollaston Congregational church, met at the residence of Mrs. John Thompson, 2d, of Arlington street, on Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Maud A. Perry, Miss Margaret Thompson, Miss Cora Jones and Mrs. A. E. Rhodes, of Wollaston, attended the State convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., at Fall River, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Monday evening, Nov. 19, Wollaston lodge, No. 926, will have a very interesting meeting. The full board of grand officers will be in attendance, together with the degree staff from Scandia lodge of South Boston, who will work the degree on a bona fide candidate. This degree staff has the reputation of being the best in the State. It is hoped that the members who attend only once a year, will make an especial effort to be present.

Concert at the Wollaston Congregational church on next Thursday evening.

The hat was passed around at the Ward Five Republican caucus on Thursday evening and $13.05 was collected.

The regular monthly sociable of the Wollaston Unitarian Society will be held in the church vestry on the evening of Nov. 22.

The week Nov. 18-25 is to be observed by the Epworth league of Wollaston and many of their friends as a "week of self-denial" for the cause of missions.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Wollaston Congregational church will hold an attic sociable and quilting party at the residence of Mrs. H. T. Whitman on Wednesday afternoon next.

At the harvest concert to be given at the Wollaston Congregational church on Sunday afternoon at five o'clock the music will be by the regular double quartette and an orchestra of ten pieces beside the organ and singing by the school. Miss Shepp of Japan will deliver an address.

The Wollaston Union Thanksgiving service will be held on Thanksgiving forenoon at 11 o'clock in the Methodist church. The Rev. Preston Gurney, who was to have conducted the services, has invited the Rev. Stephen G. Abbott, the first pastor of the Baptist society, to preach the sermon.

The annual meeting of the Pilgrim Union of the Epworth leagues of Dorchester and Quincy was held Thursday evening at the Dorchester Methodist Episcopal church. A delegation of twenty-five or more from the Wollaston Chapter were present, most of whom participated in a moonlight walk home, after the services.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Wollaston Congregational church held a sociable in the vestry on Thursday evening. The large gathering had a good time playing at games and acting charades. Mr. Charles A. Tanner sang very acceptably the baritone solo, "Thursday," and Miss Collins read a selection. A lunch was served at the finish of the games.

MILTON.

The whist club met Wednesday with Miss Webster. Mr. Chas. Eaton and Miss Buck were the fortunate ones, each securing a prize.

Dr. Chas. Adams of Wollaston has established an office at Quimby's pharmacy.

The corner of Adams street and Granite place is much better lighted, the electric light having been placed on the opposite side of the street.

The dance Wednesday evening of the coachmen of Milton Hill was poorly attended and not a financial success.

The sewing circle met Wednesday afternoon at Mrs. Kelsey's. The ladies are especially busy preparing for their annual sale, which will occur the middle of December.

The Milton brass band gave a successful dance Tuesday evening at Ellsworth hall. The next dance will be Thanksgiving eve, an all night affair. Mr. Sheldon and Selectman Simpson have been at Concord, N. H., this week on business.

Mr. A. A. Brackett is on a business trip in the South.

The cards are out for the marriage of Miss Marion Bradlee to Mr. Leonard E. Littlefield, Dec. 6th.

A whist party was held Thursday evening at the pretty house of Samuel Robertson on Washington street. A pleasant time was enjoyed. The prizes were awarded as follows: first prize, Miss Bertha Robertson; booby prize, Samuel Robertson.

WEYMOUTH.

Orphans Hope lodge, F. A. M., of East Weymouth, has elected these officers:

W. M.,—William T. Rice.
S. W.,—J. M. Whitcomb.
J. W.,—W. O. Collyer.
T.,—F. D. Thayer.
S.,—T. J. Evans.
Trustees,—R. L. Bicknell, J. F. Bicknell, T. H. Humphrey.

Miss Jennie Blanchard had her pocketbook, containing about $4, stolen from her satchel at the Food Fair at South Weymouth, Wednesday evening. She had left it for a few moments on a settee.

Miss Joanna Taylor of East Weymouth, who was injured last Saturday by a fall, died Thursday, which strange to say was the 96th anniversary of her birth. She was the oldest woman in Weymouth.

In New Quarters.

Merry Mount lodge, A. O. U. W., held a rousing meeting Tuesday evening. It was the first meeting of the lodge in its new hall over Wilson's market, and the brothers turned out in good numbers to give it a kind of house warming. Deputy Grand Master Workman Rankin of Malden was present and gave the members an interesting talk on the aims and objects of the order and the good work it was doing, also congratulating them on the large increase in membership which had been made during the past few months. At the close of the meeting the members marched to Wales' restaurant where they partook of an appetizing oyster stew in which there were plenty of oysters. Collation at each meeting has become a pleasing feature with this lodge.

ATLANTIC.

Everyone in Atlantic is glad to see Mr. James F. Gay about again, after his severe attack of rheumatism.

Many of the ladies of Atlantic will miss the pleasant rides they have had with Mrs. Harry Read and the little black horse. Harry has made a good trade and the little horse now travels the streets of Newburyport.

One of our local sportsmen Mr. John Carver is making great preparations for a deer hunt in the wilds of Maine and his Atlantic friends are already smacking their lips in anticipation of a venison supper similar to the coon supper given by Harry Read.

The many friends of ex-Councilman Frank E. Badger sympathize with him in the loss of his wife, Mrs. Annie B. Badger, who died Saturday. Mrs. Badger has been suffering for several years with a brain trouble, and although able to be about at times, the disease has been gradually growing upon until of late she has been confined to her bed. Mrs. Badger was 36 years of age and leaves a husband and two daughters.

J. T. Thomas of Atlantic street has purchased the estate of the late Mrs. R. A. Arnold, and B. F. Church. An employe of the N. Y., N. H. and H. railroad will occupy it.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Atlantic Memorial church held a supper and entertainment Wednesday evening.

The ladies' supper held Tuesday at the M. E. church, Atlantic, proved a very enjoyable affair, both socially and financially.

Autumn rally at the M. E. church, Atlantic, Thursday evening, Nov. 22. Rev. W. B. Holengshead and Mr. S. Holbrook will speak.

The ladies' society of the Atlantic M. E. church are preparing for their annual fair in December. Any who would like to contribute fancy work, fruit or candy can leave the same with Mrs. James Burr or Mrs. Annie Thompson.

There are those in Atlantic both ladies and gentlemen who are very fond of bowling and they ought to have a bowling alley. All good things come to those who wait, and a bowling alley is certainly one of the possibilities. Mr. Harry Read has joined the Old Dorchester club and many of his friends will no doubt have an opportunity to bowl with him there this winter.

Mrs. James Paul of Atlantic street is said to have made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide Tuesday morning by taking poison. Medical aid was summoned and her life was saved, although she is still in a precarious condition.

We are all glad to know that our genial friend Chase of Appleton street is to pass the winter in Atlantic. Formerly he has made it simply a summer residence, but is convinced that Atlantic is equally as good in winter as in summer for a place to live. Plans will be made for great improvements during the next spring which will benefit all of Atlantic but the people who love the water and boating the most. He is to raise his house and place it on piles and move it several feet nearer the water. He is to be congratulated on the improvements he has made on the water front.

Alumni Association.

There must be enthusiasm in the movement to organize an association of the alumni of the Quincy High school, when a large gathering like that of Friday evening assembled at the new school building. Twenty classes were represented as follows: '57, '64, '66, '72, '75, '77, '79, '80, '81, '83, '84, '85, '86, '87, '88, '89, '90, '91, '92 and '94.

Frank F. Prescott, '77, presided, and H. W. Battison, '85, was secretary.

The Constitution.

Dr. Sheahan, '66, for the committee of ten appointed at the first meeting reported the following constitution which was considered article by article and adopted.

Officers Elected.

Under the newly adopted constitution the meeting proceeded to the nomination and election of officers. Amos L. Litchfield, '72, Miss Edith Gray and Arthur V. Curtis, '92, were a committee on ballot, and the result was:

President,—Hon. Charles H. Porter, '57.

Vice Presidents,—Frank F. Prescott, '77; Dr. Joseph M. Sheahan, '66; and Miss Mabel Adams, '82.

Secretary,—Howard W. Battison, '85.

Treasurer,—George W. Holden, '88.

Directors with the above,—Miss Eliza C. Shehan, '64; Miss Clara E. Thompson, '86; Miss Dorcas C. Higgins, '79; and Miss Eliza S. Dinnie, '84.

Annual Reunion.

The subject of an annual reunion was considered, and it was voted that the matter be referred to the board of government, to report at an adjourned meeting to be held in two weeks.

Prescott High Man.

The Wollaston Trap Club held its regular shoot on Saturday afternoon. Hereafter the shoot will be held at three o'clock sharp.

Prescott still retains his position as high man and tumbled 20 birds at Saturday's shoot.

A Large Business.

The O. T. Rogers Granite Company has loaded at their works since Jan. 1st '94 to date, 143 car loads of granite, weighing 4,262,195 pounds; an average of about fifteen tons per car. This is supposed to be the largest amount of granite shipped over the N. Y., N. E. & H. R. R, by any firm in Quincy this season.

Besides the above, this firm also loaded in eighteen days, during the month of October, 125 car loads of gravel and small grout for the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., which was used for filling at the Codman street grade crossing.

Young Men's Christian Association.

Dr. C. R. Seerman will address the men's meeting Sunday.

The special service Saturday evening at 9 o'clock will be conducted by Dr. E. R. Johnson, physical director.

The membership of the association has been booming for the past three months, over fifty persons joining. An entertainment and reception will be tendered the juniors next Thursday evening, at 7 o'clock.

Banquet at The Greenleaf.

Dr. Joseph M. Sheahan entertained the members of the Knights of Columbus, Tuesday evening with a banquet at The Greenleaf. Following the banquet were brief remarks by J. W. McAnarney, Postmaster James F. Burke, Thomas H. McDonnell, John A. McDonnell, Councilman McKean, William F. Powers and others.

Mr. James N. White gave several vocal solos which added to the pleasure of the occasion.

QUINCY DIRECTORY. The publishers of the Quincy City Directory wish to inform the citizens of Quincy that they are not making any canvass for the Quincy City Directory at present. We shall publish our book when the time arrives. This notice is inserted in order that our patrons will understand that it is not the city directory that advertisements are now being solicited for and has no connection with it whatever.

Republican Caucuses.

Without exception, the Republican caucuses which were held Thursday evening throughout the city, were very largely attended, great interest being shown in the approaching city election. Good reports from each ward appear below:

Ward One.

The Centre ward has certainly out-grown the primitive marking list, for it was certainly tedious and unsatisfactory at the caucus of Thursday evening, when over 100 voters were in attendance.

Warren W. Adams was chairman and Wilson Marsh secretary.

It was voted to proceed to the nomination of 3 candidates for ward Councilmen, 1 candidate for School Committee, and 13 delegates to Mayoralty convention, and that three marking lists be employed.

The following names were placed on the lists and tellers appointed: For Councilmen—E. W. H. Bass, L. S. Anderson, W. T. Babcock, Russell A. Sears, F. F. Prescott, Edgar G. Cleaves and Horace F. Spear.

For School Committee—Henry W. French, Hon. Charles H. Porter and Dr. H. C. Hallowell. And 22 names for delegates.

It took 55 minutes to vote, and the marking resulted in the choice of the following, names, with largest vote being given first:

Councilmen—Russell A. Sears, E. W. Henry Bass and Horace F. Spear.

School Committee,—Hon. Charles H. Porter.

Delegates,—Joseph C. Morse, E. W. Sheppard, Edward Southworth, R. A. Sears, E. B. Souther, W. W. Ewell, Rev. Edward Norton, Henry H. Faxon, L. S. Anderson, John O. Holden, Horace F. Spear, Osborne Rogers and E. G. Cleaves.

This ward committee was elected,—Russell A Sears, John C. McGowan, Edgar G. Cleaves, Thomas Butler, Edward L. Goodridge, Wilson Marsh, W. W. Osborne, Jonas Reinertson and L. S. Anderson.

Ward Two.

The caucus in Ward Two was the largest held for some time which shows that the voters take more than the usual interest in the coming municipal election. Charles H. Johnson was chairman and William Caldwell, clerk.

Upon motion a number of candidates for Councilmen were nominated from the floor among whom were Hiram W. Phillips, Edgar F. Hayden, George A. Sidelinger, Benjamin J. Weeks, Charles H. Winslow, Albert Keating, Horace O. Souther.

A marking list was then opened and as a result of the ballot Hiram W. Phillips, Edgar F. Hayden and George A Sidelinger were nominated.

The following delegates to the Mayoralty convention were also elected: Luther M. Hersey, William Caldwell, T. H. Newcomb, Edgar F. Hayden, George Mead, Rollin H. Newcomb, E. W. Newcomb, Charles H. Johnson and Frank E. Burrell.

The following Ward committee was also elected: Charles H. Johnson, Edwin W. Newcomb, Rollin H. Newcomb, John S. Gay, John R. Graham, Edgar F. Hayden and George A. Sidelinger.

Candidates Johnson and Phillips made remarks and predicted Republican success in the ward and city. A collection was taken.

Ward Three.

There was another large caucus in South Quincy, at which James Thompson was chairman and John N. Kelly secretary.

Nominations were made from the floor and the marking list used, and the result for Councilmen was:

A. F. Gustafson had	11
W. W. Mitchell,	39
Alexander Falconer,	45
Charles H. Grindell,	59
Alexander Clark,	59
John P. Bigelow,	70

And the last three were declared the nominees.

It was voted, however, that if the ward should be entitled to a candidate at-large that the name of Mr. Bigelow be presented, and that the ward committee be authorized to fill the vacancy with the name of Mr. Falconer.

These delegates were chosen to the Mayoralty convention: Albert Nelson, J. M. Cutting, George H. Field, Abel Nutting, William H. Perry, F. L. Jones, James Thompson, L. M. Pratt, F. L. Goss, John C. Murray, Frank Mitchell and W. W. Mitchell.

Ward Committee,—James Thompson, W. W. Mitchell, Joseph Johnson, Alex. Clark, Andrew Stewart, Price Morris and James Copeland.

The caucus endeavored to obtain the consent of James Thompson to allow the use of his name at the Mayoralty convention, but that gentleman was firm in his withdrawal.

While the committee was out Councilman Bigelow spoke words of encouragement for the Republicans.

Ward Four.

West Quincy Republicans are enthusiastic and also had a large caucus. Representative Hammond was chairman and Nathan Ames secretary.

The caucus thought it had an opportunity of electing more than one Republican Councilman in this Democratic stronghold this year, and therefore departed from the usual custom and nominated three: John E. Johnson, John W. Dunn and William C. Hart.

These delegates were elected to the Mayoralty convention: C. L. Hammond, Nathan Ames, Hiram W. Campbell, Tobias H. Burke, John Williams, Edward J. Sandberg, William H. Teasdale, A. M. I. McLeod and William B. Donald.

It was voted to present the name of Councilman Shackley to the convention for a renomination at large.

Ward Committee,—C. L. Hammond, Nathan Ames, H. W. Campbell, William B. Donald, John J. Werme, Alex. M. I. McLeod, T. H. Burke, E. J. Sandberg, William H. Teasdale.

Ward Five.

The Wollaston Republican caucus was held in the Brasee building on Thursday evening. Hon. Henry O. Fairbanks was elected chairman and Mr. Harry E. Gifford secretary.

It was the most harmonious caucus that has been held in that ward for several years. In number of ballots cast it was the largest ever held, the total number being 163, an increase of three over last year.

The interest centered on the candidate for school committee. Before the balloting began Mr. Sylvester Brown stated to the caucus that his name had been placed upon the ballot without his consent, and that under no circumstances would he allow his name to be used as a candidate for the school committee. When the result of the balloting was declared it was found that Mr. Corthell's opponents had used Mr. Brown's name and had nominated him by 97 to 57 for Mr. Corthell. There is but little doubt but that the Park vote was cast solid against Mr. Corthell for his alleged action against the proposed new school in that district. There also seemed to be a feeling that the Wollaston school is not what it should be and that the fault lies primarily with him. Mr. Corthell's defeat will be regretted by a large number of citizens. Mr. Sylvester Brown, who received the nomination, is one of the foremost educators of the State, and is at present the master of the Martin school of Boston. Mr. Brown was superintendent of the Quincy schools, 1880-1883, and chairman of the School Committee, 1888-1891.

There was no excitement in the contest for councilmen. The successful candidates, Charles M. Bryant, N. G. Nickerson and Walter S. Pinkham, are the ones which the LEDGER suggested over a fortnight ago.

The Park voters made a mistake and divided their vote. If they had been united they could have nominated a candidate.

It was the sense of the caucus that the delegates to the Mayoralty convention present the name of Eugene H. Sprague for councilman-at-large. The delegation was uninstructed on the mayoralty candidates.

The vote for councilmen was as follows:

Samuel E. Blanchard,	53
Charles M. Bryant,	89
Harry E. Gifford,	58
Walter F. Nichols,	60
Nathan G. Nickerson,	104
Walter S. Pinkham,	99
William B. Given,	11
E. H. Sprague,	3

These delegates to the convention were chosen: Hon. Henry O. Fairbanks, James S. Whiting, Sylvester Brown, W. J. Wellington, E. S. Litchfield, George F. Pinkham, Edward E. Brown, Israel Waterhouse, H. E. Gifford, Charles R. Sherman, Benjamin King and N. G. Nickerson.

The new ward committee consists of W. S. Pinkham, Henry O. Fairbanks, H. E. Gifford, Geo. F. Pinkham, R. R. Freeman, E. S. Litchfield and T. F. Mitchell.

Ward Six.

The largest and most enthusiastic caucus ever seen by the Republicans of Ward Six, was held at Music hall. Meeting called to order by Roger H. Wilde, chairman of ward committee. Election of chairman of caucus resulted in the selection of Frank E. Badger with B. Frank Thomas as secretary. Committee of five, consisting of Roger H. Wilde, John S. Blagdon, T. H. Kingston, Theodore Parker and W. A. Churchill, was chosen to bring in a list of seven names as delegates to city convention. Names were taken separately and voted for and resulted in the choice of: Eben L. Davis, Louis Rinn, H. H. Chapman, J. S. Blagdon, Cephas Drew, B. Frank Thomas and Harry W. Read.

Five names were placed upon the marking list as nominees for the City Council, viz:

J. E. Drew, H. S. Baker, Theodore Parker, Louis Rinn, J. E. Alyer, and of these three were selected as candidates, viz: H. S. Barker, Louis Rinn and Theodore Parker.

The caucus proceeded to elect Ward Committee, viz: Elliot Green, Frank E. Badger, W. F. Cummings, Frank A. Rogers, Eben Stocker, Daniel McGrath, Henry Von Embden.

Business was carried on with despatch and the caucus might have adjourned by 8.45, but everyone seemed so interested and so full of zeal, that to enthuse them they called upon Councilman Stephen O. Moxon, whose remarks were of a high order and gave some an insight on the methods of conducting business and affairs by the City Council. Ex-Councilmen Roger H. Wilde, Harry W. Read and Louis Rinn were called upon in turn and all made brief but interesting remarks.

Nominees for the Council, Mr. Barker and Mr. Parker, were called upon and responded nobly.

With great hope of success in December the caucus adjourned with every one feeling in the best of spirits, and a belief that there must be something "in it" when Ward Six could turn out over one hundred at a caucus.

Extraordinary Advertising!

The vigorous advertising of the Clothing Dealers of Boston would have the effect of driving buyers insane if they spent time to read them all. The writers are artists in astonishing phrases, the prices "beggar description." They will sell Overcoats or Suits worth $20 for $8.50. Don't you think they are just a trifle dear, those $8.50 Overcoats, when they are marked $20? Prices are "knocked to Smithereens." Isn't it strange such generous storekeepers don't become impoverished?

In the face of this humbug way of advertising, we have respect enough for our superior make of Clothing to say:

It Sells at a Profit.

We distinguish profit from a usurious price, just as you will distinguish our Clothing from the trash of the "markdowners."

We want you to keep in mind also, that we sell Furnishing Goods, Hats and Shoes—in fact everything that man or boy wears, from his Hat to his Shoes, at prices that we know will interest you.

See if we don't give you your money's worth.

Dr. H. A. Tucker's

Valuable Remedies.

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE,

Who, after 20 years' personal use, writes as follows: TO THE PEOPLE:

I know by personal observation that DOCTOR H. A. TUCKER'S medicine, popularly called "No. 59," is potent and safe. It ought to be on the shelf in every nursery, and in the satchel on every journey. Going from home I always carry some of it with me, and have administered it to many who in car and steamer have been taken sick. Better smash your brandy flask and the various styles of "Bitters," which are Rum put up under enticing nomenclature, and take with you a bottle of DOCTOR TUCKER'S 59 as a pocket pistol with which to shoot down physical disorders.

Awarded $14,000.

The report of Hon. Moses Williams, Mr. Morris Gray and Mr. Samuel B. Capen, auditors in the suit of the Quincy Quarry Company against the commonwealth, has been filed in the Norfolk superior court at Dedham. The auditors find that the quarry company is entitled to recover $14,000 for the 105 acres of land in Quincy taken by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners in 1893 for public park purposes.

Hon. E. C. Bumpus appeared for the petitioner; Hon. W. S. B. Hopkins and Messrs. Balch & Rackemann for the commonwealth.

While the award is over twice the amount offered by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners, it is a fact that the Quincy Quarry Company is not at all satisfied and would much prefer to own the property which was about to be developed by their railroad, and promised big returns.

Bessie and Billy.

Two little live bears captured in Maine and brought to Boston last week are attracting much attention in Boston. They are at the front window in the International Fur Company's store, at 45 Summer street. Hundreds stop daily to watch their manœuvres. They are about ten months old and so tame that they never give any trouble. Don't forget when in Boston to go by the International Fur Company's store on Summer street, and see these curiosities.

The Duck's Nest.

At the Duck's Nest bowling alleys McClintock is in the lead for the prize regulation ball, his score being 207. Beal leads in the pool contest for the prize cue with 11 balls, and in the billiard contest Barker is first with a run of 15. In the contest for the gold badge for the highest score in the new rifle gallery Starrett is high man with a score of 40 out of a possible 50.

Hereafter the entire Duck's Nest, including the pool and billiard tables and rifle gallery, will be let to private bowling parties on Thursday evenings.

Park Assessments.

The commissioners appointed to apportion the cost of the land taken for State parks gave a hearing Wednesday in Boston. The Herald says:

"There was a large attendance of lawyers, and the meeting was a decidedly lively one, the members of the Metropolitan Park Ccommission coming in for a good deal of sharp criticism from many of the lawyers, and being as warmly defended by others.

"Under the statute, the commissioners are to apportion the cost of the work for the first five years, of which one year has expired, and the amount to be apportioned is $1,000,000 for parks and $500,000 for boulevards, although in case the boulevards are not constructed their cost may not be assessed at present.

"The hearing was of a preliminary character, and developed the fact that there are two parties who will be heard, one representing towns and cities who are directly affected by the park system; this party favors an apportionment based on the valuation of the municipalities. The other party represents towns and cities indirectly benefitted, and this contingent believes that the commissioners should, in apportioning the cost, consider minutely the benefits sustained by a town or city, and act accordingly.

City Solicitor Bowman of Somerville and H. E. Fales, representing the town of Dover, were the principal critics of the park commissioners, and they insisted that the latter ought before anything is done, tell the people what they propose to do as well as what they have done.

Moorfield Story, representing the town of Milton, opened what proved to be a long discussion by saying that in his opinion the park commissioners should produce plans showing what has been done and estimates as to what amount it is necessary to raise.

Mr. Fales thought it a pretty cool proceeding for the towns and cities to be called upon to come in and address the commissioners without knowing anything about the facts in the case.

Mr. F. Rackemann, who represents the park commissioners, said he wished to correct an impression that seemed to prevail that the park commissioners were not ready to give information. They are ready and willing to give all proper information and it will not be necessary to pass any orders directed to them.

Mr. Cook, for the town of Weymouth, considered that the commissioners ought to consider the benefits resulting to every community from the park system; he could not see where his town is benefited in the least by it.

Judge Asa French, for the town of Braintree, said that there is a practical as well as a poetic side to this question and the people are entitled to know not only what has been done but what in a general sense is to be done. The scheme may cost many millions, no one knows how much, and the people have a right to say something about it.

After consultation, the commissioners announced that as the principal question appeared to be the matter of justly and equitably determining the method of apportioning the cost of the work, and as the commissioners could not in advance, state what the basis of apportionment should be, it had been decided in view of the statement of the park commissioners that the latter were ready to furnish all needed information to hear first the park commissioners and after that such competent evidence as the parties interested might see fit to offer. As the commissioners have no power to compel attendance of witnesses, the parties must produce their evidence. On all questions of the admissibility of evidence the commissioners to rule as the questions arise.

"The commissioners further decided to give the first hearing on Dec. 3d, and after the park commissioners are heard, the cities and towns will be taken up in the order in which they are named in the act."

Should Quincy, which will receive no benefit unless a boulevard is built, which has lost 2500 acres of taxable property and has already suffered an increased in tax rate, pay any assessment? If so should it not be small?

High School Debate.

President Chapman opened the meeting of the Quincy High School Debating Society on Wednesday. Secretary Wilder read an excellent report. Under unfinished business Miss Grace Lord, '96, spoke on Evolution.

The election of officers followed. These nominations were made:

For President,—Miss Lowe, '95; Miss Pope, '95; Mr. Northcott, '96.

For Vice President,—Miss Briggs, '96; Mr. Coe, '96.

For Treasurer,—Miss Bryan, '95; Miss Dinnie, '95; Miss Mudgett, '96.

For Secretary,—Mr. Barry, '95; Mr. Winlock, '96; Miss Mary Pitts, '96.

The election resulted thus:

President,—Mr. Northcott, '96.
Vice President,—Miss Briggs.
Secretary and Treasurer, not chosen.

The entertainment was as follows:

Declamation, "McBean's Child," Mr. Coe, '96; a stirring selection well rendered.

Declamation, Miss Briggs, '96; a spirited battle-piece; effectively given.

Essay, "A View From the Quarries," Miss Dinnie, '95; an interesting account of one of our magnificent local views.

Declamation, Mr. Northcott, '96; a standard selection intelligently rendered.

Declamation, "The Chambered Nautilus," Miss Melzard, '96. Oliver W. Holmes's masterpiece. Such selections are well worth learning. Well rendered.

Essay, "A Ghost Story," Miss McGovern, '95; a well written, entertaining essay.

The debate followed: Resolved,—"That Michael Angelo was a greater artist than Raphael."

Affirmative,—Miss Peterson, Miss Marion Pitts, Miss Mary Pitts, Miss Ramsey, Miss Roche, Miss Rothwell, Miss Sweeney.

Negative,—Mr. Marnock, Mr. McIntyre, Mr. Pirovano, Mr. Warshaw, Mr. Wilder, Mr. Winlock.

The debate was a very creditable one. Much study must have been devoted to the subject. When the debate was opened to the society Miss Mary Pitts spoke.

Miss Temple, the critic, read an excellent report. The Board of Decision brought in a verdict for the affirmative.

Chrysanthemum Supper.

A very pleasant party gathered at the Universalist vestry Tuesday evening. After an excellent supper the audience had the pleasure of listening to an excellent entertainment. The readings by Miss Beatrice Porterfield were greatly admired; also the fine pieces played on the piano by Mr. Pratt of North Weymouth, and Miss B. A. Lloyd of Cambridge, on the violin. The solos by Miss Fletcher of Quincy gave great satisfaction and was received with applause.

The G. A. R. Fair.

The annual fair of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., was opened Monday evening at Hancock hall and although the evening was all that could be desired the attendance was not as large as hoped.

Every year sees this body of brave defenders rapidly growing less and every year the burden of relieving the suffering falls more heavily upon those who are left, therefore it behooves all who enjoy the benefits of this free and united country to come forward and help along the cause with their mite for every little, no matter how small, helps.

The opening exercises were brief. Commander Holt called order and introduced Department Commander Weatherbee who made a few remarks about the Grand Army and then declared the fair open. The Granite City band gave a concert throughout the evening.

There were plenty of things on the several tables to attract the attention of those who attended the fair and as the prices marked upon them are in keeping with the times they should meet with ready purchasers.

The tables extend along either side of the hall and they are prettily trimmed with bunting and flags. On the right the Wards One, Two and Three tables are in charge of the following ladies: Ward One,—Mrs. John Pratt, Mrs. F. P. Loud, Ward Two,—Mrs. J. H. Webb, Mrs. Isabella Souther, Mrs. John Bent. Ward Three,—Mrs. Emma Marnock, Mrs. Fannie Lane, Mrs. Edward Richardson.

There is also on this side the confectionery table, at which are Mrs. Andrew Gardner, Miss Mamie Gardner and Miss Lulu Osborne.

The pop corn table is in charge of Mrs. Mary A. Alden, and the vegetable table in charge of Mrs. E. B. Holmes and Mrs. Vesta Rich.

In the centre of the hall is the large wheel of fortune which Samuel DeForrest keeps his eye on. He is assisted by Charles E. Bowker, George Phillips, Henry Chubbuck and Fred Leavitt.

On the right of the hall is the Sons of Veterans table at which are: Clarence Bayard, George H. Foss, H. R. Holmes, G. M. Chubbuck, Capt. M. C. Holmes, L. H. Parrot, Charles Richardson and Frank Gardner.

Then comes the small wheel of fortune Mrs. Laura Cameron and Mrs. Henrietta Gourd in charge.

The last table on this side was the refreshment, which was in charge of Mrs. C. Alice Litchfield, Mrs. Lizzie Monk, Mrs. Ann Wight, Miss Alice Litchfield.

Down stairs, Warren Monroe had charge of the shooting gallery, and George H. Osborne of the ice cream.

Among the many articles contributed were: quilt, Miss C. S. Hubbard; barrel of flour and loaf of bread, George F. Wilson & Co.; vegetables, J. W. Dennen, Capt. Doane, T. H. Newcomb, E. S. Brown and E. B. Holmes; derby hat, C. F. Derby; ladies trimmed hat, G. M. Whitman; cake, Mrs. J. Q. Bent; pair of shoes, J. M. Cleverly; loaf of cake, Edward Richardson; quilt, Mrs. Fannie Lane; upholstered rocker, H. L. Kincaide & Co.; box of cigars, Stephen Pierce; writing desk, Mrs. S. Kincaide; barrel of flour, J. F. Merrill; tablecloth, etc., Miss Bartlett; barrel of crackers, W. A. Hodges; lunch baskets, C. M. Jenness; paper flowers, Mr. Somes; oil stove, C. W. Guy and W. G. Shaw; bag of meal, A. J. Richards & Son; umbrella, Granite Clothing Co.; album, McGovern, Bros.; small articles, Gordon's five cent store; boiled dinner, G. F. Wilson & Co.; ladle, Sanborn & Damon; pair of shoes, Henry Rodgers; tea kettle, G. B. Bates; two large boxes of water colors, Frederick Hardwick.

On Tuesday evening the entertainment consisted of music by the Granite City band, which was of a high order, and a fine drill by Prof. Holmes.

Wednesday evening the entertainment was furnished by the Woman's Relief corps and consisted of songs by little Miss Hoyt; piano solo, Arthur Metcalf; humorous selections, John Phalen, and music by an orchestra.

The child singer, Miss Mabel Hoyt of Chelsea, is a good singer for one so young and charmed the audience by the sweetness and purity of her notes. She was loudly encored, and responded in a pleasing manner, being called before the curtain three times.

A large crowd was present on Thursday evening and the entertainment provided by the S. of V. was greatly enjoyed. The entertainment consisted of humorous selections, banjo and harmonica solos and duets by Prof. Charles Baron, and selections by an orchestra that was present. Between the several numbers on the programme those present had an opportunity to patronize the tables which they did liberally.

Conductor Osborne.

Mr. William A. Osborne, for twenty years an esteemed resident of Wollaston died at the home of his son, Mr. William A. Osborne, Jr., at Whitman, Mass., on Friday Nov. 9, after a long illness.

He was born at South Hanson, Mass., in 1829 and began his long railroading career, which lasted upwards of forty years as station master at South Hanson. He was soon promoted to be a conductor and was placed in charge of a train on the old Bridgewater branch. For several years he was one of the North Bridgewater expresses and resided in that town, afterwards moving to Middleboro when he began to run the Cape train. Mr. Osborne ran that train for nearly twenty years, going from Boston to Provincetown one day and returning the next.

In March, 1892, as his train was pulling into the South Yarmouth station he was stricken with paralysis. He was passing from one car into another when the shock came, but managed by an almost superhuman effort to cling to the guard rail until the train stopped at the station, when he was discovered and taken into the depot.

Petition for Pardon.

Strenuous efforts are being made in Quincy to have the officials of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, now imprisoned in Plymouth jail pardoned and the following petition is being circulated and extensively signed by prominent citizens among whom are: Mayor Hodges, ex-Mayor Porter, Charles F. Adams, 2d, Henry H. Faxon, John O. Holden, Charles A. Howland, George L. Gill, R. F. Claflin, Horace F. Spear, Warren W. Adams, Charles L. Hammond, Thomas A. Whicher, Timothy Reed, Charles A Price, J. Franklin Faxon, E. H. Dewson, James F. Burke, J. Q. A. Field, Henry M. Faxon, Clarence Burgin, Walter T. Babcock and others.

The petition is as follows:

To His Excellency Governor Greenhalge and the Honorable Executive Council:

The undersigned citizens of Quincy respectfully ask that a pardon may be granted John C. Sanborn of Boston, Christopher F. Bailey of Boston, Charles H. Bryant of Boston, Augus L. Frazer of Boston and John Boyden of Scituate for the misdemeanors committed in connection with the crossing of the Old Colony railroad by the Abington electric street railway in August 1893 and for which they are now serving sentence in the House of Correction at Plymouth.

We believe that justice has been fully satisfied in this case by the suffering and humiliation to which they have already been subjected.

It is understood that similar petitions are to be circulated all along the line of the Plymouth Division.

☞ Everybody did not attend the Republican caucuses in Quincy, Thursday evening, neither will everybody vote for Mayor at the coming election, but everybody should visit the furniture warerooms of C. W. Guy and W. G. Shaw at the Quincy coliseum to admire the display of beautiful house furnishings. lpo 1t

Pulpit and People.

The Quincy Young Men's Christian Association, in common with the Y. M. C. A. at large, have observed a week of prayer for young men. Rev. W. W. Baldwin of Lynn, spoke Sunday afternoon, and each evening Evangelist Avery has given a Bible lecture.

Dr. Mansfield, the Presiding Elder, preached a very interesting sermon at the Atlantic Methodist church, on Sunday evening. At the close of which the Second Quarterly Conference was held. The song service held at 3 30 was quite well attended. Mr. Pride from Dorchester was present and addressed the meeting. Miss Burr sang very touchingly the "Gipsy Boy," and a quartette also sang. Mr. Cassidy who has charge of this meeting, is trying to make it a success and wishes the hearty cooperation of the people. It is a good way to spend the afternoon.

The Ladies' Missionary society of the Congregational church met Monday with Mrs. Burns of Granite street. Subject: "Thank Offering Meetings."

The services Sunday by Rev. W. Steele in Wilson hall were attended by large and attentive audiences, especially the evening service. Subject: "Christ, Who is He?" Matt. 21:10 and "A Fatal Assumption" 1 John 1:10. These services will be conducted under the name of the "Independent Presbyterian church. Non-churchgoers, strangers and all welcome. "Come with us and we will do thee good."

On Monday the Unity Circle of King's Daughters of the Congregational church met with Miss Pearl Elliott of Granite street.

The ladies of the M. E. church, Atlantic, held their supper on Tuesday at 6 o'clock. Wednesday evening the weekly prayer meeting was held, on account of the meeting of the Pilgrim Union on the regular night.

"The Art of Hearing" was the theme of Rev. Mr. Norton on Sunday morning, and he took his text from Matt. 11:15; Luke 8:18. Attentive listeners are as necessary as model preachers, and the Congregational church has both.

At the first Unitarian church Sunday morning Rev. Ellery Channing Butler preached an extremely interesting sermon, making the life of the late Czar of Russia the principal topic of his discourse.

"Biblical Examples of Triumphant Faith," was the subject at the weekly prayer meeting of the Quincy Congregational church on Friday evening.

The annual harvest and Thanksgiving concert of the Wollaston Congregational Sunday School will be held on Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Rev. Charles W. Wilder of the Wollaston M. E. preached an interesting sermon Sunday on "The Young People's Age."

Rev. James E. Bagley of the Wollaston Unitarian church spoke Sunday on "What is Success?"

It inadvertently said in these columns last week that $26 was collected at the Wollaston Congregational church in aid of the hospital. This was a mistake as the collection referred to was taken up at the Unitarian church.

The topic at the Wollaston Congregational church Sunday School on Sunday was "The Twelve chosen." Mark 3: 6 19. At the Y. P. S. C. E. service in the evening the topic was "Some Application of the Golden Rule." Luke 6: 27-38.

Dr. Hazlewood formerly pastor of the Baptist church, at Lynn, spoke on Sunday at the Wollaston Baptist church on "Home Missions."

The Epworth League entertainment at West Quincy for Thursday evening was postponed on account of the storm. It was given Monday. Following the entertainment there was held a League business meeting.

The vesper services to be held in the First church semi-monthly, on Sunday afternoon from 4 to 5, during the winter, have thus far been an undoubted success and the pastor has reason to be gratified at the large attendance. The music will continue to be an especial feature and was on Sunday exceptionally good. This together with the fact that everyone is invited to attend, will serve to attract many of other denominations.

Rev. W. W. Baldwin of Trinity M. E. church, Lynn, preached Sunday morning at the West Quincy M. E. church.

The Carriage Drivers

The District Court room was crowded Saturday, the centre of attraction being John C. Sanborn, Supt. of the Plymouth Division of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., and Christopher T. Bailey, both of whom are serving a sentence at Plymouth jail for inciting a riot at Abington last year.

There presence was due to the fact that they were witnesses in the cases against James H. and Alfred W. Bisson and James E. Dunn, the carriage drivers who were on trial for loafing about the depot at Quincy.

Constable Furnald visited Plymouth on Friday armed with a habeas corpus but the officers at Plymouth, perhaps fearing some scheme, sent Deputy Sheriff Collingwood along with the prisoners.

The first witness was Charles N. Crane, clerk of the board of selectmen at Mansfield. Almost the first that he read from his records was the appointment of railroad police. Objection was raised that the selectmen could not appoint except upon petition of the railroad corporations and before these records could be used it must be shown that there was a petition. A discussion on legal points followed.

Mr. Crane then testified that upon petition of Mr. Kendrick, the selectmen in March, 1894, appointed 349 policemen for the road.

The petition was then produced, signed by James R. Kendrick and after some discussion was allowed.

The next point raised was whether there had been deposited with the City Clerk of Quincy a legal copy of the record of appointment of the railroad police. The court said that the paper filed did not gain anything by the addition of Mr. Crane's name, and it was simply of no more value than a printed copy.

The point raised was a delicate one and the case was continued two weeks.

Among the interested spectators to the trial was General Superintendent, E. G. Allen; Mr. Maxwell, the railroad's claim agent, and Mr. Sanborn's sons; while among the witnesses sworn were Mr. Sanborn, the selectmen of Mansfield, Officer Connelly, Charles H. Penniman and George Carter.

At the present rate the case will not be settled for some time to come.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

A CARD. The members of the Quincy Charitable Society, through the medium of Quincy PATRIOT, wish to express their grateful acknowledgement, of legacy of two hundred and fifty dollars from the late Samuel Eaton Brackett, of Braintree, by his daughter Miss Anna C. Brackett, of 65 West 51 st, New York City, N. Y., his executrix or trustee.

Per order,
MRS. CHARLES A. SPEAR, Secretary.

Three Papers Discussed.

The regular meeting of the Quincy Literary society was held in Doble's building on Friday Nov. 9, the vice president, Mr. William Traynor, in the chair.

The editor of magazine announced the receipt of four papers, but owing to lack of time no more than three of the contributions were read and discussed, the other being laid over till next meeting.

The first article submitted was upon that theme which is as old as humanity itself, and has been a source of inspiration to so many writers, as well as the great controlling force that has shaped the destiny, of nations and individual:—"Love."

There were many writers of poetry and fiction, it observed, who surround the passion of love with altogether too much sentimental idealism, and entirely ignore its practical side. The picture drawn by sentimental authors is usually too suggestive of death and burial grounds to be wholesome.

The influence of pure, unadulterated love is uplifting and ennobling, and although it may be exacting, it is neither gloomy nor malignant.

The reception accorded to this paper was in keeping with the subject itself. All confessed at having at some time or other felt the tender glow, but it was conceded to be a matter of personal experience rather than a subject for the exchange of words and impressions. Its great influence in the making and writing of history was readily allowed, and as a factor in developing the higher elements of man's nature it was admittedly supreme.

The next article read, was a departure from the ordinary character of contributions. Hitherto there has heen no department of fiction in the magazine, not because of prohibitory laws, but on account of the greater demand for, and better discussive qualities of other forms of literature.

The new departure in question was inaugurated by a short story entitled "Minnie's Choice." The central feature was of course the inevitable struggle for supremacy between two rival suitors and the mental oscillations of the heroine in determining her choice. As an experiment in this class of writings the story was well received, and hopes were expressed that the provision for creation of fiction would have a permanent place in the magazine.

The last paper of the evening bore the somewhat forbidding title of "Gynecocracy." It may seem a reflection upon the literary knowledge of the society, that but few had any clear idea of the meaning of the term. There was a vague consciousness that it had something to do with women, and for that reason had to be tenderly approached, but it was not until the standard definition was given that it was fully realized that female government was the reduced rendering of the word. The article, in a satarical vein, assumed to trace the ultimate logical result of women's professional, social and political progress.

This supplementary article on the woman question, was considered by the critics who discussed it, to be a sort of post mortem examination.

Although the identity of the writer was obscure, it was thought to emanate from some one who was smarting under the defeat that the anti-suffragists received the previous week, and had taken the opportunity of asserting logical conclusions that were assumed to be the unavoidable outcome of the movement. As a satire it was admitted to be well and vigorously written, but beyond affording an opportunity for maturer statement, it elicited few original expressions of opinion.

Sheds and Quarries.

The granite manufacturers are inclined to believe that the quiet trade this fall means an active spring.

Joss Brothers are at work on a plain polished die to go to Baltimore, Md., in memory of Adam Stzel, Jr., a professor of music. There is an open music scroll on top, the same bearing words and music of a hymn.

Ecock & Sons have completed a cottage monument for New Jersey parties.

R. E. Turner & Co. are completing a monument upon which the inscription reads: "Lent to earth July 1830, Recalled April 1893."

Cook & Watkins are cutting a large monument the work on which is being done partially in Quincy and part in Barre. The shaft is of dark Barre and the balance of Quincy granite. The carving is to be all done with pneumatic tools.

Joss Brothers are to build a forty foot addition to their sheds.

Deacon Bros. are quarrying some handsome fine grained dark blue granite from their new quarry.

R. E. Turner & Co has secured the contract for the Lewis memorial to be set at New Haven, Conn. It is to be cut from Hollowell granite.

A backbone of granite is said by a superintendent of schools to be a requisite of a schoolmaster.

An informal meeting was held in Boston, Monday, by French-Canadians and steps taken to raise funds for a monument to Hon. Honore Mercier, late of Canada.

There is a good deal of talk in Philadelphia about erecting a statue of Admiral John A. Dahlgren, who was a native of that city. A number of naval societies are moving in the matter.

Thomas H. McDonnell of McDonnell & Sons has returned from a business trip in the West, and brings some orders.

"Will we ever get better facilities for loading granite upon the cars at South Quincy?" remarked a well-known granite dealer Tuesday, and in that question he only repeated what many others would also like to have solved. As it is now it costs nearly as much to load the cars as it does for freight. Owing to the want of room it sometimes takes hours to wait for one's team to load a car, and many times teamsters have gone very early in the morning that they might not be obliged to wait so long in the middle of the day. That the granite dealers should be provided with better facilities for loading cars by the railroad there can be no doubt, but when they will get them is still an uncertainty.

An addition is being built on Smith's polishing works.

The weather is getting almost too cold to work in the open sheds and the proprietors of the more modern erected ones were wise when they built them in such a manner, that they can be heated in cold weather.

At a meeting last week of the committee on municipal government of Philadelphia, Messrs. Hawkes, Davidson, Meehan, Keith, Smith and Apple were appointed a special committee to co-operate with the Philadelphia Brigade for the purpose of developing a plan whereby a suitable monument may be erected to the memory of the Philadelphia soldiers who were killed during the late war.

Alex. Clark & Co. has just completed a large derrick for Deacon Bros. to be used in their new quarry in Milton.

The statues of Webster and Stark which the state of New Hampshire will place in Statuary hall, in the capitol at Washington, are expected at New York today from Italy. The pedestals of granite manufactured in this country are nearing completion. The memorials will be set up at once and will be formally dedicated when congress assembles.

The New England Cooperative Granite company filed papers of incorporation with the Essex county clerk in New Jersey, on Tuesday. Its object is to manufacture and sell granite paving blocks and monuments. The business will be conducted principally in Maine. The capital stock is placed at $50,000 and business will be commenced with that amount. James Grant and James Murphy of New York and Wm. H. Spencer of Brooklyn are the incorporators.

Visitation at Wollaston.

Monday evening, Nov. 12, John Adams Council, R. A., received a visit from Grand Vice Regent Albert W. David of Lowell, and Grand Warden Charles W. Clark of Andover. They were royally entertained. At the close of the meeting, members and guests gathered around the well laden tables and partook of some of the good things prepared under the very able management of Bros. Baker, Bates and Brasee. Cigars were lighted and Regent William C. Pierce called on Bro. Daniel who responded in a very interesting manner, he was followed by Bro. Clark and Bro. W. B. Orcutt of John Adams Council. The officers of the council are perfecting arrangements for a public meeting, which is expected to be what the boys call "a corker;" date not yet fixed.

The Bright Side.

Cheerfulness can become a habit, and habits sometimes help us over hard places. A cheerful heart seeth cheerful things.

A lady and a gentleman were in a lumber yard situated by a foulsmelling river.

The lady said: "How good the pine boards smell!"

"Pine boards!" exclaimed the gentleman. "Just smell this foul river!"

"No, thank you," the lady replied: "I prefer to smell the pine boards."

And she was right. If she, or we, can carry the principle through our entire living, we shall have the cheerful heart, the cheerful voice, and cheerful face. Wealth cannot give it, nor can poverty take it away.—Miss Mulock.

☞ The Samoan islands are the natural habitat of the most diminutive species or variety of the genus bos now known to the naturalist. The average weight of the males of these liliputian cattle seldom exceed 200 pounds, the average being not greater than 150 pounds. The females usually average about 100 pounds larger, are very "stocky" built, seldom being taller than a merino sheep. These dwarf cattle are nearly all the same color—reddish mouse color—marked with white. They have very large heads as compared with their bodies, and their horns are of exceptional length.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach."
Carlos Martyn, D. D.,
New York City.

Castoria.

John White's Thanksgiving.

"Thanksgiving!—for what?"
—and he muttered a curse—
"For the plainest of food and an empty purse;
For a life of hard work and the shabbiest clothes?
But it's idle to talk of a poor man's woes!
Let the rich give thanks,
it is they who can;
There is nothing in life
for a laboring man.
So said John White
to his good wife Jane,
And o'er her face
stole a look of pain.
"Nothing, dear John?"
and he thought again;
Then glanced more kindly down on Jane.
"I was wrong," he said;
"I'd forgotten you;
And I've my health,
and the baby too,"
And the baby crowed—
'twas a bouncing boy—
And o'er Jane's face came a look of joy;
And she kissed her John
as he went away;
And he said to himself,
as he worked that day:
"I was wrong, very wrong;
I'll not grumble again,
I should surely be thankful for baby and Jane."

Notes and Comments.

—Marlboro will introduce department work in the grammar grades of its public schools.

—Dedham will celebrate on January 1st next, the first free school in America within its limits.

—The First parish of Dorchester has called the Rev. Eugene R. Skippen of Washington, D. C.

—Not only should Boston appropriate a million for new school buildings, but the school funds are short $43,000.

—The grand old state house on Beacon Hill is now one of the most beautiful of buildings, with its new coat of white and gilt.

—A "dun" took its name from a celebrated bailiff of London during the reign of Henry VII, named John Dunn. He was extremely clever in devising ways and means to compel unwilling creditors to settle their accounts, and hence the saying, "Send Dunn after him," or "dun him."

—Mayor Matthews of Boston now recommends the placing of the Water Board, the Board of Commissioners of Public Institutions and the Board of Fire Commissioners each under a single commissioner, thus the idea of the Quincy city charter is endorsed and extended.

—Citizens of the United States have to pay English "owners" rent for American soil. American tenants working for English landlords! Americans paying tribute to foreigners for the privilege of living on American soil!—working and keeping up the English snobocracy! No, the Americans are not gullible!—Coming Nation.

—Among our exchanges, from week to week, is the New England Farmer, one of the brightest and best agricultural papers published in the State. It is always full to the brim of articles of interest and profit to the farmer, and his wife and daughters. Its editor and manager, Geo. M. Whitaker, is full of life and energy, and is always ready to give his readers the best there is in the market; for this reason it is a necessity in all good households.

—In Ashantee no man is ever allowed to see one of the king's wives, and should he happen, through accident, to get a glimpse of one of the "sacred creatures" he is forthwith put to death. The law of that country allows the king to have 3,333 "helpmeets" and no more. These wives all live on two long streets in the city of Coomasie, the Ashantee capital, the quarters occupied by them being locally known by a word signifying "heaven."

—Birds have very acute vision, perhaps the most acute of any creature, and the sense is almost more widely diffused over the retina than is the case with man; consequently a bird can see sideways as well as objects in front of it. A bird sees a hawk long before it is visible to man; so too fowls and pigeons find minute scraps of food, distinguishing them from what appear to us exactly pieces of earth or gravel. Young chickens are also able to find their own food, knowing its position and how distant it is as soon as they are hatched, whereas a child only very gradually learns either to see or to understand the distance of objects. Several birds can see quite well directly they come out of the shell, but the young of birds that nest in trees or on rocks are born blind, and have to be fed.

The Fair Goes On.

The Reproduction of the World's Fair, so finely executed by E. J. Austen, draws daily large gathering to the Casino Building, 541 Tremont street, Boston.

The Exhibition is open from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M., on week days, and from 2 to 10 P. M., on Sundays. The Exhibition is in every respect the same in the day as at night, as no daylight penetrates the building.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back.

Anecdotes.

Murray—"Aren't you positively ashamed to meet your creditors, Madison?"

Madison—"I don't meet them. Do you suppose I would associate with such people?"

Carrie—"What did you accept Mr. Murray for, Lucie?"

Lucie—"I had to. Papa owes his father a great deal of money, Jack owes his brother a thrashing, sister owes his sister a snubbing, and mamma owes his mother a party call."—Truth.

Mrs. Backbay, to new girl—"Bridget, is it customary for girls like you to receive so much company in the kitchen?"

Bridget—"Divil a bit, mum; in me lasht place tree noights in the week Oi had the parley."

"Dear," asked Mrs. Wickwire, looking up from her paper, "what does this paper mean by referring to the 'superfluous woman?' Where is the 'superfluous woman?'"

"In our engagement days," answered Mr. Wickwire, "the superfluous woman was your younger sister."

He (reading paper)—"Here's a note about an accident at White's house. The servant put some gun-powder in the fire, and she was blown through the roof."

She (sympathetically)—"Poor Mrs. White has so much trouble with her girls. They are always leaving her without giving notice."

The Boston Stage.

Castle Square Theatre.

At the new Castle Square Theatre Monday Manager Rose presented one of the most remarable pieces of stage realism ever attempted, and won a magnificent triumph with it. In the third act of "Capt. Paul," the play by Mr. Rose with which the Elks opened the new house, the scene is on board an eighteenth century American privateer, the Ranger. The Boston dailies were unanimous in declaring the scenes the most elaborate seen in Boston for some years, and with one accord gave the palm to the ship scene of the third act as the most realistic ever put on the stage. It is a grand triumph for author-manager Rose and all his associates who have given their tireless efforts to make the Castle Square theatre's opening production, the grandest success known in Boston for years. The first night's house of this week, which is entirely for the Elks benefit, figures just $3,500 in receipts including the premiums. This is but an indication of the grand success that the Elks are sure to accomplish in their undertaking, a whole week for their annual benefit. Beginning Monday next will be the second week of "Capt. Paul."

Boston Theatre.

The production of "In Old Kentucky," which is just entering upon the second month of its successful season at the Boston Theatre, is meeting with a degree of popular success unprecedented in the history of that play-house, famous as it is for long and successful runs. The audiences have been uniformly of phenomenal proportions and on many occasions hundreds have been turned away unable to gain admittance. The enthusiasm with which the play is nightly received is the best evidence of its enduring popularity. So familiar is the public with every function of the famous melodrama that any detailed description of the play is needless.

Columbia Theatre.

"Sowing the Wind" could easily remain at the Columbia throughout the entire season, but contracts have been made for it in other cities and necessitate its withdrawal, and the week beginning November 26 will be the last but one of its stay in Boston. This powerful play has made a most enviable record and reputation for itself and has drawn audiences of brilliant and fashionable type and largest size throughout its entire stay. The horribly inclement weather during the early part of November had no effect upon the size of its audiences, as each performance was given before a crowded and enthusiastic house. It has become a fad to attend the "Sowing the Wind" matinees, and each afternoon performance has found the matinee girl out in full force.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The annual visit of Mr. E. H. Sothern to Boston will begin on November 19, and as usual he will be seen at the Hollis Street Theatre. Each time that Mr. Sothern comes to Boston he has endeavored to produce a new play, and this occasion will be even more delightful than heretofore, as the probabilities are very strong that he will be seen in at least two new characters, besides reviving one or two of his most popular successes. Like every ambitious and talented man. Mr. Sothern is always seeking a higher plane of art, and will, therefore, present in his new play a character of more weight and of more serious purpose than those characters which he has hitherto impersonated. The opening play will be "The Victoria Cross," written for him by Paul M. Porter, whose recent work had attracted much attention.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief, It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take.

☞ On one of the estates of count Potocki, in Galicia, Austria, the very rare event of a mother, daughter and granddaughter each giving birth to a son on the same day has occurred recently. The mother is 48, and the infant son is her 16th child. The daughter who has just presented her husband with his eighth, is 33 years old; and the grand-daughter, who was married last year, is not yet quite 16. All the three new-born sons are strong and healthy, and the same may be said of their mothers, who belong to the Polish peasant class.

PALE, THIN AND EMACIATED PEOPLE.

The country is full of them. They do not know what it is to feel well like other folks. Medicines of all kinds have been tried without good results. Cod Liver Oil and the preparations of Malt have all failed. What is the reason? These emanciated people cannot digest starchy foods. The fat of the body is produced with bread, potatoes, and other starchy food. If they will eat food that is artificially digested, they will grow fat, strong, plump and robust. They will commence gaining flesh at once. The Flesh Forming Food is called Paskola. You can buy it at any drug store. HANDSOME HOME

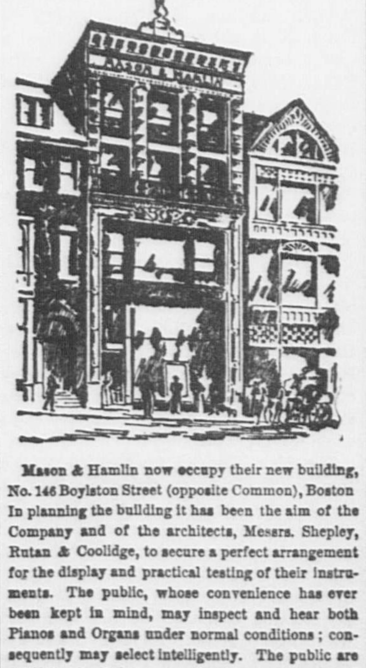
OF THE

Mason & Hamlin Company.



Mason & Hamlin now occupy their new building, No. 146 Boylston Street (opposite Common), Boston In planning the building it has been the aim of the Company and of the architects, Messrs. Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge, to secure a perfect arrangement for the display and practical testing of their instruments. The public, whose convenience has ever been kept in mind, may inspect and hear both Pianos and Organs under normal conditions; consequently may select intelligently. The public are cordially invited to examine the large stock of Grand and Upright Pianos, and of Liszt, Church, Chapel and Parlor Organs.

Thanksgiving Receipts.

We have compiled the following receipts for the Thanksgiving feasting. Our readers will find them excellent and appropriate for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Roast Turkey. After the turkey has been thoroughly singed drawn and well washed, dry it, and fill with the following dressing: Add to equal quantities of bread and cracker crumbs one egg, a piece of butter the size of an egg, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half a teaspoonful of pepper, and one heaped teaspoonful of summer savory. Fill the turkey, sew up the opening, and truss the turkey from wing to leg. Rub a little salt and butter over the outside, and when placed in the pan dredge with flour, and place small slices of larding pork on the breast. Baste occasionally with the gravy in the pan. From two hours to two and a half hours are required to cook a turkey weighing from eight to ten pounds. The fire should be brisk.

Thanksgiving Pudding. Six buttered crackers, three pints of milk, one-fourth of a cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, one-half of a teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of mixed spice, six eggs, one pound of raisins.

Plum Pudding. One pound of chopped suet, one pound of flour, one pound of currants, one pound of stoned raisins, one-fourth of a pound of chopped citron, four eggs, one glass of brandy, spice to taste milk to make a stiff dough. Boil in a tin mould four hours.

Chicken Pot Pie. Cut the chicken into pieces. Put it in a kettle with enough water to nearly reach the top of the meat, cover the pot and simmer gently. Make a crust from one pint of flour, one-half tablespoonful of lard, one teaspoonful of baking powder, and one of salt. Rub the lard into the flour in which the salt and baking powder have been mixed. Add enough sweet milk to make a dough to roll out. Roll an inch thick and cut like biscuit. Put the pieces on a plate and set the plate in a steamer over a kettle of boiling water and steam half an hour. When the crust or dumplings are done season the chicken with salt and pepper and thicken the gravy with two tablespoonful of flour mixed with a cup of sweet milk. Skim out the chicken and lay on a platter, lay the dumplings over and pour the gravy around.

Chestnut Dressing for Game or Poultry. Remove the shells and skins from a pint of chestnuts and boil in a very little water. When tender crush with a spoon, season liberally with butter, celery salt, mace and a dash of cayenne. A few bread crumbs and an egg may be added.

Cranberry Jelly. To one quart of cranberries allow six good-sized sour apples. Put the cranberries into a porcelain kettle, and the apples, after being peeled, quartered and cored, with them. Cover with cold water and stew until soft. Strain through a jelly-bag and add a pound of sugar to one pint of juice. Pour into tumblers or into a jelly-mould if to be used for dinner.

Cranberry Sauce. One quart of cranberries, one pound of granulated sugar, one-half pint of cold water. Boil fifteen minutes.

To Fringe Celery for Garnishing. Cut the stalks into two-inch lengths; stick plenty of coarse needles into the top of a cork; draw half of the stalk of each piece of celery through the needles. When all the fibrous parts are separated, lay the celery in some cold place to curl and crisp.

Foaming Sauce. One cupful of butter, two of powdered sugar, the whites of two eggs, five table-spoonfuls of wine or three of brandy, one-fourth of a teacupful of boiling water. Beat the butter to a cream, and gradually beat the sugar into it. Add the whites of the eggs, unbeaten, one at a time, and then the brandy or wine. When all is light, smooth mass, add the water, beating in a little at a time. Place the bowl in a basin of hot water and stir until smooth and frothy, which will be about two minutes.

Hard Sauce. Rub half a cupful of butter to a cream, add gradually one cupful of powdered sugar. When light and creamy add one teaspoonful of vanilla or lemon, and a little nutmeg. Pile it lightly on a fancy dish and set away in a cool place.

Boiled Ham. Simmer in a porcelain-lined kettle for fifteen minutes to the pound, more than covering with water. Allow it to cool in the liquor in which it was boiled. Then remove the skin carefully, brush the top with beaten egg, sprinkle with dried breadcrumbs and place in the oven, basting with the liquor remaining until it is brown.

Chicken Salad. For one good-sized chicken, chopped up with twice the amount of celery, allow four eggs, two tablespoonfuls of mixed mustard, one teaspoonful of salt, a pinch of red pepper, and two ounces of butter. Beat well together, then add a gill of vinegar, and stir over boiling water until it becomes of the consistency of thick cream.

Puff Paste. One pound of the best butter, one pound of pastry flour, one scant teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of ice water.

Mince Pie. Bake in two crusts, mincemeat made from the mixture of one pound of boiled beef, one pound of chopped suet, four pounds of apples, two pounds of raisins, two pounds of currants, one-half of a pound of citron, one pound of sugar, one quart of cider, alcohol to taste, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and mace, and one-half of a teaspoonful of cloves.

Pumpkin Pie. Pumpkin pie will need a fine-grained, dry pumpkin, stewed and strained; one pint of rich milk or part cream, one-half pint of pumpkin, two eggs beaten well with a fork, granulated sugar to be real sweet, a little vanilla, and nutmeg grated thickly over the top; a straight up and down earthen dish two inches deep. Bake slowly and carefully as it should be firm when done. Some people like to add a little molasses, plenty of powdered cinnamon and a little ginger.

Cranberry Pie. When the bottom pie crust is on the plate, fill with cranberry jam made from first rule. Cut strips of pie crust and twist and lay across the pie one way and then put them across diagonally as you would on tart pies.

Custard Pie. Two eggs, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one pint of milk, nutmeg to taste. Bake slowly.

Apple Custard Pie. Bake, in shell of pastry, custard of one-half of a pint milk, one-half of a pint of sweet apple sauce, two eggs, vanilla.

Cocoanut and Apple Tart. Bake, in pattypans lined with pastry, rich, sweet apple sauce and sprinkle with cocoanut.

Lemon Tarts. Peel and grate a good lemon, add two-thirds of a cup of white sugar, yolk of one egg, one cup of cold water, in which has been well mixed a dessert-spoonful of corn-starch; stir well together; cook in a new tin or porcelain pan; stir until it is a smooth jelly. This is good between layers of a cake. Fill the tart shells, ice with the white of one egg whipped to a froth with a spoonful of sugar, and set them in a hot oven one minute.

Fruit Cake. One pound of butter, one pound of finest granulated sugar, a teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice and ginger, one nutmeg, grated, twelve eggs, one pound of flour, one wineglassful of brandy, one pound of raisins, stoned, one-half pound of currants thoroughly washed and dried, one-half pound of citron cut in small bits. Cream the butter; add the sugar, spices, and brandy; stir in the eggs by degrees; rub the fruit with part of the flour weighed for the cake; then add the flour, then the fruit. Bake slowly four hours.

Company Manners.

I know a woman who is always harping about "culture" and "refinement" and "etiquette" and who does not this minute know the meaning of that old-fashioned term, "good manners." She is always regretting the lack of culture among her neighbors, and there is not one of them who is not more polite than she is. I have heard her actually yell at her servants, and storm at her children, and I do not think her husband is the happiest man in the world. In society she is a charming woman. She knows always just what to say and how to say it. I never saw a woman who could excel her in gliding across a room and sinking gracefully into a chair. Her little boys can tip their hats so prettily to ladies on the street; her little girls can enter a room with toes properly turned out and with the grace of little queens; and, alas! both the little boys and little girls can be as impertinent and display the worst manners of any children I ever saw. And they literally fight among themselves. They are not taught to be polite to each other. Their mother seldom favors them with her own properly chosen words and graceful manners when they are alone with her. Discord reigns until the door-bell rings and then the entire household must put on good manners.

Oh, these "company manners!" They are the ruination of a household. They cannot always be put on and off at will. Traces of the every day discord and lack of harmony will manifest themselves through the affectation of all the mere "company manners" one can assume. Habitual politeness and kindness and gentleness should be the unwavering rule in every house, even on "Blue Mondays."

I have been in homes in which it seemed to me that every member of the household seemed bent on seeing how hateful and disagreeable they could be to each other. The mother would speak in a nagging, fretful tone; the father "ordered everybody around;" the children quarreled; the servants went around with their noses in the air, ready and eager for little tilts with anybody and everybody. How wretched such homes are! In some of them they don't even have "company manners."

Let us agree that we will not say a single cross word to any one this whole week. Let us be studiously polite to each other and to the children. Let us be very mindful of the feelings of every person with whom we may come into contact. Let us not fret nor complain nor do anything that good, decent, well behaved Christians should not do. And if when the next Sunday comes we have, through the grace of God, kept this resolve, it goes without saying that we have been happy and the world has perhaps been made a little better for our being in it.—Good Housekeeping.

Gloves, How to Wear Them.

Gloves are an expensive part of one's apparel. To be well gloved costs money and thought. Such a person is extravagant in gloves, we say, and another, in contrast, is careful and makes her gloves last a long time. The fastidious woman dislikes soiled gloves, and the neat one disdains those which are torn or ripped, while she who can afford to indulge her tastes has gloves to match her several toilettes, and is particular about their nice fit, knowing whether to purchase the long-fingered, the short-fingered, or the medium, when adding this finishing touch to her costume.

A large hand is not made to look smaller by being compressed into too tight a glove. On the contrary, the pudgy hand of the stout woman gains in apparent size by its squeeze into a small glove, and the scrawny fingers of the thin woman show no less length and attenuation if encased in a glove that it is too short.

In wearing gloves avoid hastily thrusting them on the first time of using. The people at the glove-shop give you a lesson here. They rest your elbow on a cushion, powder the hand which they have softly dried, then gently insinuate the fingers and the thumb into their respective stalls, moulding the glove on the hand with light, deft pressure. The glove retains the character it receives with this first careful fitting, or the reverse if you have not time or patience to treat it with gentleness.

When gloves are ripped, mend them immediately. A stitch in time literally saves nine here. Keep sewing silk on hand of the precise color of your gloves, and have two or three needles threaded, and you will not be long detained by a needful repair. Button-hole stitch the edges of a rent, then delicately draw them together, and a torn glove will enter on a new term of usefulness.

In taking off gloves pull them from the wrist downward, so that they are wrong side out when they leave the hand.

The woman of limited means has her best, her second-best, and her every day gloves.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croups as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon affected a permanent cure. 25 aed 50 cent bottles.

A True Ghost Story.

About a mile beyond the Beech Hill stood Squire Macdonald's store, and one dreary night in late autumn there came thither first Rory O'More, and then Sandy Big John, and finally Alec Gillies, all in a high state of excitement, and asserting with much positiveness that they had seen the ghost on Beech Hill. Now the squire was as shrewd, hardheaded, and unsuperstitious a Scotchman as ever traded tea for butter or sugar for eggs, and he had no more faith in the Beach Hill ghost than in the man in the moon.

But this time the testimony of the terrified witnesses happened to agree remarkably. The ghost had appeared to all in precisely the same form, namely as a white shapeless thing that rolled along the ground, uttering shrill and threatening shrieks. The matter was surely worth looking into.

"Hark ye, now," said the squire at last, "I believe you're nothing better than a parcel of foolish boys; and to prove it, I'll go up to the Beach Hill myself and see what it is that has come so nigh scaring the life out of you."

Thus speaking, he got his coat and hat, and calling them to follow, set off for the scene of the ghost's walk. Rory and Sandy and Alec would much rather have been excused, but pride overcame their timidity, and they followed in their leader's track. Hardly had they reached the foot of the hill than the shrieks they had heard before came to their ears.

"There it is again!" exclaimed Rory, with trembling lips. "Can ye no hear it, squire?"

"To be sure I can," responded the the squire, stoutly; "and I'm going to see what it is. Come along."

The distance between the doughty squire and his followers increased as he went on, while the shrieks grew stronger with each forward step.

When about the middle of the ascent he saw the ghost. It was, as the men had reported, a white shapeless thing rolling upon the ground, and from it undoubtedly came the piercing cries which had proved so alarming.

Going straight up to the thing, the squire touched it with his foot, then bent down to feel it with his hand, and then burst out into a roar of laughter that at first startled the three farmers almost as much as the ghost's shrieks.

"Come here, you fools!" he shouted. "Come and see what your ghost is."

In a hesitating way they drew near, and examined the cause of their affiright. It was a white meal bag containing two very lively young pigs, which had in some way fallen off a farmer's wagon into the middle of the road, there to prove a source of terror to the superstitious and perhaps not altogether sober passers by.—Harper's Young People.

New England Magazine for 1895.

Some important illustrated articles which will appear in early numbers are, Old Milk street, by Hamilton A. Hill; Round About Monadnock, by Dr. Edward Emerson; Horace Mann, by Frank A. Hill, Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education; Harriet Beecher Stowe, by George Willis Cooke; Sir William Pepperell and the Capture of Louisburg, Old New England Songs, Dartmouth College, The Harvard Annex, Lowell Mason, Raleigh's Lost Colony, The Part of Massachusetts Men in the Ordinance of 1787, The Boston Public Library and New England in Chicago, by Edward Ishan. The series of articles on our towns will be continued with Boscawen, by Charles Carleton Coffin and Litchfield, Connecticut. Dr. Samuel A. Green of the Massachusetts Historical Society will contribute The Several Places Called Groton, telling of the old English Groton, the home of Winthrop, and the various American Grotons. The history and antiquities of Boston will not be neglected. Many strong articles on social, political and educational subjects will be published in the coming year; and poetry and fiction will be well represented.

In short, this excellent magazine will continue to improve along the lines which its subscribers and the press of the country agree in recognizing as so important and unique.

License a Base Delusion.

The hardest blow the temperance reformation has had in this country has been in the fact that some reformers have halted under the delusion of this high-license movement. You know what it is. It is the white flag of truce sent out from alcoholism to prohibition, to make the battle pause long enough to get the army of decanters and demijohns better organized. Away with that flag of truce, or I will fire on it. Between these two armies there can be no truce.

On the one side are God and sobriety and the best interests of the world, and on the other side is the sworn enemy of all righteousness, and either rum must be defeated or the church of God and civilization. What are you trying to compromise with? Oh, this black destroying archangel of all diabolism, putting one wing to the Pacific, putting the other wing to the Atlantic coast, its filthy claws clutching into the torn and bleeding heartstrings of the nation, as it cries out: "How long, O Lord, how long?" Compromise with it! You had better compromise with the panther in his jungle, with the cyclone in its flight, with an Egyptian plague as it blotches an empire, with Apollyon for whom this evil is recruiting officer, quartermaster, and commander-in-chief.

Shawmut Spring Water.

F. J. FULLER, Proprietor.

WEST QUINCY, - - MASS.

This is an excellent water of remarkable purity.
H. L. BOWKER, State Assayer,
Boston, Mass.

The water question is engaging the attention of residents in thickly settled districts, and an intelligent investigation shows a large proportion of disease directly traceable to drinking water.

Experiments have shown that microbes that form in decayed vegetation, stagnant water and sewerage, which are the principal cause of fevers, will filter through seventy-five feet of jacked sand and how much farther through sand or earth is not known. Nearly three-fourths of the human system is water. How important then that we should drink only pure soft water which absorbs and eliminates lime and other earthly salts from the body. There is no other sensible preventive or cure for the system that is choked and clogged with calcarious salts than a systematic use of pure water.

This Shawmut Spring Water comes from a fissure in the face of a hill of Granite. Its use in cooking, drinking and bathing will, we think, show marked improvement in health. Different from hard water, in bathing it gives a soft, velvety appearance to the skin and should be used exclusively in washing young children.

It is free from all surface contaminations.

Pure water is the best medicinal water; there are no typhoid fever germs in it. It assists nature and restores to healthy action the digestive organs, and is conducive to the health of children and all persons of delicate constitution.

The very low price of this excellent water is within reach of all; just enough to defray the expense of delivery. All communications sent the proprietor will be promptly attended to.

THE CHANGE OF LIFE.

A PICTURE FOR WOMEN'S EYES,

With the Hope That It May Do Some of Them Good.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

To-day there is the happy mother, healthy boys and girls, sunshine, music, amusements, the church, the romp and the ramble, the country and seashore. Whatever healthy minds in healthy bodies may desire, that they may have, and mother is ever ready to join with them in the pleasure and fun.

Years come and go. The boys and girls grow up to men and women. Mother's hair is turning white: her steps are not so elastic, her spirits flag; there is an uneasy look in her dear eyes.

What can be the matter with mother?

She is approaching the most important crisis of her life, "the change of life." Those watchful eyes detect the evidences. Years bring this change demanded by nature. What preparation have you made to carry the brave mother safely through it?

Within a comparatively short time the issue will be decided. Either nature fulfilling the law in proper, healthful manner, or—there is the wreck of a noble woman for you to grieve over.

There is salvation in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will carry the mother safely through the inevitable change in her physical life.

All reputable druggists keep for you this grand remedy. See that "mother" has it, for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was won from the heights of medical science by a woman for all women nearing the change of life.

The CENTURY IN 1895.

Taking advantage of the general revival of interest in the Great Emperor, The Century will print during 1895

A NEW LIFE OF

NAPOLEON,

Magnificently Illustrated.

The Century is famous for its great historical series, and never in its history has a greater one been projected than this new "Life of Napoleon," written by Prof. William M. Sloane of Princeton, who has spent many years in preparation for his work. Thus far no biography of the "man of destiny" has appeared in either English or French that is free from rancor and attentive to the laws of historical criticism. The Century has secured it—the great, all-round, complete and interesting history of the life of one of the most marvelous of men. No matter how much you already know of Napoleon, you will want to read this;—here is the concentration of all the lives and memoirs. The illustrations will be magnificent—the wealth of The Century's art department will be lavished upon them. Two members of the staff have just returned from Paris, where they have been securing all that is best of Napoleonic material. New portraits will be printed, great historical paintings reproduced, and Castaigne and other modern artists have drawn anew some of the great scenes of Napoleon's life for this history

In addition to this there will be

A NEW NOVEL BY MARION CRAWFORD.

The title is "Casa Braccio," and it is a romance of Italy, full of human passion and exciting episode.

A NEW NOVEL BY Mrs BURTON HARRISON

will be published during the year. It is called "An Errant Wooing," and is a tale of wandering (and love) among new scenes of travel in Northern Africa and Southern Spain.

Other Features

will be several familiar papers on "Washington in Lincoln's Time," by Noah Brooks, who was on terms of unusual intimacy with the War President; "The Cathedrals of France," by Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, with illustrations by Joseph Pennell. Many more serials will be announced later.

RUDYARD KIPLING

contributes his First American Story to the December number of The Century.

THE PRICE of The Century is $4.00 a year. "No home is complete without it. Begin subscriptions with November number. Whatever other magazines you may take, you must have The Century. All agents and dealers take subscriptions, or remittance may be made directly to

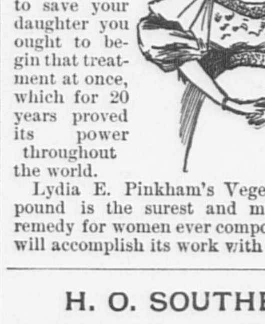
A MOTHER'S DUTY
TOWARDS HER DAUGHTERS.
Suggestions Which May Help to Avoid Many Dangers.
[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]



Less than twenty years ago even the medical profession scouted the idea that young girls could suffer from the misery of uterus troubles.

That form of disease, it was claimed, came only to married women.

When Lydia E. Pinkham first sent out the news of her great discovery, there was no lack of harsh speech from those whose practice and opinions she set at defiance.

But when young girls by the hundreds were absolutely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then the tongues of the traducers were stilled, and faith was allowed to live in the hearts of the people.

Young girls are subject to this trouble. It robs them of the buoyancy of youth. It makes all effort distasteful.

It causes retention and suppression of menses, leucorrhœa, severe headache, waxy complexion, depression, weakness, loss of appetite and interest.

This being the condition of your daughter, what is your duty, loving mother?

Certainly you ought to know that these are all symptoms of the one cause of nearly all the suffering that comes to women; and to save your daughter you ought to begin that treatment at once, which for 20 years proved its power throughout the world.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the surest and most natural remedy for women ever compounded. It will accomplish its work with certainty.

Thanksgiving Day.

Back to the home of childhood,
Though scattered far and wide,
Back to the dear old kitchen,
Yes, back to your mother's side.
Come, kiss her wrinkled forehead,
Her hair, as white as snow,
And sit down on her foot-stool,
As in the long ago.

While father bends above you,
Weak with the weight of years,
His trembling voice with gladness,
His dim eyes filled with tears.
To both the greatest pleasure
The year brings on its way
Is this, the glad home-coming
Upon Thanksgiving Day.

Once more the rooms re-echo
From kitchen, stairs and hall,
The sound of old-time voices,
And merry dinner call.
While many sweet grandchildren,
With laughter light and gay,
Come pressing round the table,
This glad Thanksgiving Day.

So come, ye sons and daughters,
From restless city strife;
Come, ere you lose your relish
For the quiet joys of life;
Come back, ye roving children,
From prairies far and wide,
And cluster round the hearth-stone
Once more at even-tide.

Take up the song of childhood,
And sing it o'er again;
Forget that ye are matrons,
Or business-loving men.
And if your eyes grow misty,
Rejoice that it is so;
A heart sincerely tender
Is the purest one to know.

Remember, with your loved ones
Life's lamp doth feebly burn;
Your parents may not linger
To greet a late return.
Forget them not, though patient,
Oh, come now while you may;—
Praise God—rejoice together—
On this Thanksgiving Day.

—Mrs. Mary Felton in Good Housekeeping.

Miscellany.

Miss Anne's Thanksgiving.

"If we had anything to be thankful for, there would be some sense in making Thanksgiving," said Miss Bradford fretfully, "or even if we had anybody to invite."

Miss Anne stood by the window looking out on the gray November landscape, watching the columns of mist as they came up from the river and obscured first one familiar object then another, but with a little sigh she turned away and came over to the fire.

"I am not so sure" she said softly, "that we have nothing to be thankful for, I do think, Jane, that we are over-apt to magnify our troubles and reverse the glass when we look at our mercies. Every little unexpected pleasant thing I mean to call a blessing."

Miss Bradford sniffed contemptuously: "You always were childish." Then she rose with a yawn and proceeded to light the lamp, while Miss Anne stirred the fire and looked into its depths wistfully, yet with a pleasant little smile as if she saw happy as well as sad visions of the past, and as if hope, perhaps, hovered among the rosy darts of flame.

Miss Anne always did the marketing, and the next morning as she stood before the little glass in the sitting-room to make sure that her hat was quite straight and her jacket neatly fastened at the throat, she laughingly said to her sister:

"And so I am not to bring home a fifteen-pound turkey, several bunches of celery, quantities of cranberries and anything else that strikes my fancy."

The fresh air brought color to her cheeks and revived her spirits; her soft brown eyes were bright and she walked with quick elastic steps, and when she met an old-time servant who told her that she looked almost as she did when a young girl, she laughed a little, calling it another blessing. Next she met two news-boys selling rival papers, but amicably crying their wares together: "Times, on-ly five cents! 'Lustrated Thanksgivin' sto-ry extra!" She could at least read a Thanksgiving story, so she stopped them.

"Do you know what Thanksgiving is?" she asked, after making her purchase.

"Thanksgivin'?" repeated the largest boy thoughtfully, scratching his head, "Why, it's a hollerday when you don't do nothin'."

Miss Anne smiled. "Yes," she said, "and a day on which to be thankful for your blessings. You know what I mean by blessings,—things that you are thankful for. Hasn't one little thing happened today to make you glad?"

"You just bet!" he exclaimed emphatically. "such a crack as I give young Jimson—sent him sprawlin'."

Miss Anne looked very stern.

"O, don't scold him," pleaded the smaller boy. "He hit him because he was pushing me and spoiling my papers. I'm Mike's boy," he explained, "and so he takes care of me. I know what Thanksgiving is," he ventured shyly, "it's own folks and a dinner." Then he turned away and Miss Anne espied him wiping his eyes on his ragged coat sleeve.

"What is it, my little man? What makes you cry?"

He bravely swallowed a sob and said in a husky little voice, "It's—it's just because your eyes look at me just as my mamma's used to."

Mike had gone on and was lustily calling, "Times, on-ly five cents!" but he came back to hurry up his companion. "Come on, Neddy, the other fellows'll get ahead of us," he urged.

"Wait a moment, Mike," called Miss Anne peremptorily, "I am going into town to do some errands; I shall be gone about two hours, by that time you will have your papers sold. I want you to meet me here when I come back. Will you?"

The boys promised, but with little faith that they would keep their word, Miss Anne went on her way, planning as she went.

Contrary to her expectations they were on hand.

"Boys," said Miss Anne, "day after to-morrow is Thanksgiving, and I want you to come and eat dinner with me. Come at four o'clock. I live in that little cottage at the end of Lane street."

"I know the house," exclaimed Mike promptly. "I've looked over the fence at the posies lots of times."

In spite of Miss Anne's determination to forget the past, her eyes turned regretfully to the old homestead, and she had only to look to the left on her homeward walk to see it standing, stately and fair at the foot of the hill.

How well she remembered the day when her father came in with bowed head and broken voice to tell them that his folly had made them homeless and almost penniless! The glowing representations of a trusted friend had induced him to go into speculation; at first his investments doubled, then trebled. Led on by the glittering bubble he mortgaged his property even to the homestead and borrowed money besides; then the bubble burst, Stewart absconded with the funds, the securities were worthless and Squire Bradford was bankrupt.

"Never let Robert Stewart darken my doors," he commanded his daughter, for Anne was soon to have married a nephew and ward of the very man who led Squire Bradford on to his ruin.

Well enough Anne knew her father's implacable will, and she well remembered the day when he sent her only brother from home because he refused to bend before it.

In the night Squire Bradford was seized with paralysis, lingering a few days, when he died. His wife soon followed him, and the two daughters, with a few hundreds accruing from the sale of some property of their mother's, removed into a little cottage which had been deeded to her and began life anew. Young Stewart tried vainly to see Anne, but her sister, bitter against him, prevented; he wrote letters which were returned unopened, and finally, under a cloud of despair and unmerited disgrace, left, never coming back.

Miss Anne was just twenty then, and full of life and hope; now she was forty and perhaps by and by would be fifty and sixty, and still life would go on, each decade bringing more and more wrinkles and decrepitude and less and less joy, she sadly thought; then, after awhile, she and Jane would be laid side by side in the old cemetery.

She wiped away a tear over her mournful vision, and thinking of Jane dead, made her think of the live, formidable Jane she had to encounter with her Thanksgiving project.

With some trepidation she made the announcement,—"I have invited two young men to dinner Thursday," and she made a clean breast of the matter to her sister.

Miss Bradford offered many objections, called it a Quixotic undertaking and suggested small-pox and various other ills which might follow in the train of these guests. The next morning, however, she called out after Miss Anne as she started for market, "Perhaps you'd better get a plump fowl, a bunch of celery and some nuts and raisins. There is currant jelly and I will make a berry pie and plenty of buscuit."

Miss Anne, who was always impulsive, wheeled about and ran back, surprising her sister by dropping a soft little kiss on her thin cheek.

"You are lovely to help me," she exclaimed. "You see it almost broke my heart to think we were so alone in the world, and when I found this little waif who longed for her 'own folks and a dinner,' just as I did, I couldn't help thinking that he would help us "keep" the day, for, somehow, all alone, I don't think, Jane, that it would stay with us,—we couldn't hold it."

"Anne will never see those boys again," soliloquized Miss Bradford, as she went about her preparations. But promptly at four Thanksgiving afternoon the door-bell rang long and loud, and there stood Mike, scraping and bowing, holding Neddy by the hand.

"Come, Ned," he said encouragingly, as Neddy hung back somewhat abashed. "Looks all right, don't he?" asked Mike anxiously as he saw Miss Anne looking at him.

Miss Anne made no remark upon Neddy's appearance because she had been so busy looking at him. He was like, very like—who? Why, poor brother Jack, of course, who had eyes like their mother.

"I am sure you both look nice," she returned pleasantly. "This is Miss Bradford," she said, leading them to her sister. "Jane, these are my boys."

"How d'do, Miss——," but Mike quite forgot the name, so he simply took refuge in "How d'do Jane," and stepped forward and cordially thrust out his stubbed hand.

Miss Bradford let him touch the ends of her slender finger and looked very dignified and much disgusted, while Miss Anne was over by the window shaking with suppressed laughter.

"Well, boys," she said, as she came back with the pretty dimples still showing in her cheeks, "dinner is the first thing on the programme." She led the way into the cozy dining room where she arranged the table attractively as possible, putting a vase of flowers in the centre and a little bouquet by each boy's plate.

Neddy, who sat next to Miss Anne, seemed fascinated by the vase of bright chrysanthemums. "You like them, don't you?" she asked in her pretty way.

"Yes, there're like my mamma; she always had them on the table."

After dinner a box of dominoes was hunted up and Miss Bradford set herself about amusing Mike, who eyed her playing with good-natured contempt.

"Say, it wouldn't be much of a job to cheat you," he said. "You're pretty fresh."

Which made Miss Bradford smile grimly to think of the situation,—she, Jane Bradford, once the proudest belle of the town, playing dominoes with a street Arab and being told that she was "pretty fresh," whatever that was!

Miss Anne had gone back into the dining room with Neddy for a glass of water, and when he looked up to thank her she gave a little start, for his eyes certainly were Jack's very own! "Tell me," she said excitedly, "what was your father's name? Where did he live?"

"His name was John, but mamma always called him Jack. I don't know where he lived; he married mamma over the water, and when he died he told her to bring me to find his folks."

"Well," said Miss Anne, breathlessly, "what else?"

"She waited a long time to get money enough to come; then it took more than she thought and she got sick and when she got here she died, and they were going to put me in the county house, and I cried and cried. Then Mike—he'd done errands for mamma and told her one time when she was worrying about me that he'd always see to me—said I should be his boy, and he set me up in newspapers and we sleep at Mrs. Timpkins' and eat all over."

"What was your father's other name?" trembling asked Miss Anne, who was now very pale.

"Why the same as yours—Bradford. The boys all call me Jack Brad for short."

"Have you anything of your mother's?"

"Oh, yes; there's a little trunk with letters and trinkets; everything else was sold to pay the woman who took care of her when she was sick."

"Go and get it," commanded Miss Anne.

Miss Anne met him at the door, took the trunk and set it on the table, taking the key which was attached to a string tied around his neck and opening it.

Removing one thing after another she came to a package of letters tied with a black ribbon. There was her poor brother Jack's familiar hand-writing! She opened the letter, which began, "My dear wife," read a little ways, then she seized Neddy and fell to kissing him and took him right up in her arms and carried him out and put him in her sister's lap.

"Jane," she explained, with pale and luminous eyes, "this is our Thanksgiving—Jack's boy!" Her voice trembled so that she could hardly speak, but she gave her the letter directing his wife in event of his not returning, to go to his mother and sisters, who would welcome her and care for her. His father, too, he hoped had forgiven his waywardness.

"Thank God!" exclaimed Miss Bradford fervently, when she finished the letter.

The door-bell rang at this moment and Miss Anne, impatient of the interruption, hastened to answer it.

"Does Miss Anne Bradford live here?" asked a pleasant manly voice. Then, as she turned up the hall lamp while she answered in the affirmative, she saw a stranger, brown and bearded. She looked again.

"Robert," she said faintly, and would have fallen, but he caught her in his arms; two such surprises were too much even for Miss Anne.

"Why did you never answer my letters?" Then there was a hurried explanation, but before it was finished Miss Bradford came into the hall to wonder if miracles would never cease, for there was Anne—her sister Anne—with a man's arm around her!

"This is my Thanksgiving," said Miss Anne shyly and happily, as she looked at her lover. "What a day of mercies and blessings this has been!"

Robert Stewart had come back a rich man, with ranch and mining property untold, and was about to buy the Bradford homestead. His heart had never swerved from its old love, and hearing that Anne remained unmarried he had taken hope that she, too, was faithful to his memory.

Then followed the remarkable story of the finding of Jack's boy—"Mike's boy," Miss Anne said with a little break in her voice.

There was long and earnest conversation in the little sitting-room that night, and many plans for the future were made. Both boys should be Robert Stewart's especial care, he said; Neddy, because he was Jack's son and it would be in a measure restitution, and Mike, as a reward for his fidelity. There were other plans to make and tender words to be spoken; then came the reluctant good-night when Robert Stewart held Miss Anne in his arms a moment to say: "Of all the Thanksgivings of all my life this is the happiest!"

House Plants.

The way house plants thrive on the dregs of coffee left at breakfast is admiration. Bowker itself hardly turns a stronger leafage or such thick bloom. The grounds are a good mulch on the top of the soil, but a little care must be given not to let them sour and get musty in coolish, damp weather.

The great trouble with house plants, greater than errors in watering, is letting the pots be exposed to the sun. The fibrous roots soon grow to the side of the pot, and these are baked in full sunshine, trebly hot coming through the glass, which condenses its rays; the root tips are soon killed. The whole ball of earth is baked over and over daily, and yet people wonder why they don't succeed with house plants. Shade the sides of the pots always, either by plunging in a box of sand, moss, cocoa fiber or ashes, or place a thin board on edge across the front of the plant shelf, that will come almost to the top of the pots. Let the plants have sun but shade the pots. A good way to screen them is to set each pot in one of two sizes or more larger, filling the space with moss or sand.

The best gardners say that the porous common pots are not so good for house plants as those glazed or painted outside. The reason is that evaporation is constant from the sides of the porus pots, and the roots are not only drier, but colder for it.—Vick's Magazine.

The Quaker Yielded.

De Wolff Hopper in his younger days was passionately fond of the theatre, but owing to the religious scruples of his Quaker father, and the Quaker costume he wore, he was somewhat handicapped in the fulfillment of his desires.

But it appears that the family butler wore citizen's clothes, and also that he was about the same build as De Wolff. Accordingly, between them they concocted a little scheme whereby De Wolff donned the butler's clothes and the butler donned De Wolff's. Things went swimmingly with young Hopper until one fatal night one of his father's acquaintances happened to spy him at the theatre and remarked in a casual way to the old gentleman that he had seen his son at the play.

The father called the unfortunate youth into his study and said: "Son, hast thee been to the playhouse?"

"Yea, father."

"How many times hast thee been to the playhouse?"

"Seventy times, father."

"Whom hast thee seen seventy times?"

"Booth, father."

"And thou hast been seventy times to see this man Booth?"

"Yea, father."

"Then if thou hast been seventy times to see one man there must be some hing in him. I think, son, I will go myself."—New York Sun.

Gold Mining in Colorado.

DENVER, Nov. 10th, 1894.

"Pike's Peak or Bust," in all our joyous Fourth of July celebrations the above is always seen stamped onto an old covered wagon, and hung around the wagon are the various utensils used by a movable housekeeper, and it literally is now come to pass. Cripple Creek nestled at the base of the grand old Peak, contains today nearly 15,000 people some in extreme luck, others working, hoping and praying for the lucky bonanza, and as Wm. E. Curtis so graphically says in the Chicago Record of Oct. 9th and 10th, 1894, no artist could design a more suitable and attractive site. It was for ten years a cow pasture for two long-limbed old Kentuckians of the names of "Bob" and "Bill" Womax who took up a section of land under the desert-land act here about 1876.

In the early days of gold excitement in Colorado, when people crossed the plains with "Pike's Peak or Bust" painted on their wagons, some little gold was washed out here, but not enough to encourage people to stay. So the prospectors passed on into the mountains. The man who discovered gold was an old blacksmith by the name of "Dick Wooten," who had been hanging around and of course found it by accident. He at once advertised the fact among all the prospectors and mining men in old Colorado, and they came in swarms to scrape over the beds of the streams and rake out the grass roots. A man by the name of "Frisbee," was the first to discover gold quartz—a few weeks after Dick Wooten's find. In less than six months there were a thousand prospectors at work in the valleys and streams. They have taken out of this camp 7 to 8 millions in gold. The yield this month at this mining district will average $700,000 per month. Until recently very few of the miners had been working with improved machinery without capital to develope, and compelled to putter along with primitive apparatus until they had made enough to buy modern machinery.

On the Fourth of July, 1892, Bill Stratton, (now W. S. Stratton, Esq., millionare gold miner of Colorado,) went up into the mountain camp to celebrate the the glorious day, partaking of a good substantial mining camp dinner, and washing it down with some fine old Kentuck Blue Grass he wandered out with his old friend, and taking off his old hat, (this puts me in mind of our Happy Harry Baxter of old 7th inning active fame,) said in a jocular way to his chum, that he was going to throw his hat down the hill and locate a claim wherever it fell. He drove his stake, filed his papers and worked his assessment according to law, and after a while he struck a vein of gold that is said to be richer than any other that has been discovered here. He had no money and was very shy of partners. A Denver syndicate offered him $1,000,000 for the property and at first he thought they were joking. Little by little as he got out ore he was able to make improvements, and upon the reputation of his mine he succeeded in persuading a Chicago firm to furnish him a $50,000 plant that runs by electricity. He gave notes in payment, and within 30 days after his machinery started was able to take them up with his profits. The mine is now paying $90,000 a month net, the bankers at Denver says, and there are millions of dollars in the ore in sight.

The strike last Spring was supposed to have fixed the pay and the hours of labor for the miners. It may seem strange, but it is the truth, nevertheless, that the owners who were the last to give in, and who have been the most restless and dissatisfied under the present agreement are those who had themselves always worked for day wages until one or two years ago. I have noticed this phenomenon right there in Quincy granite strikes.

It is often true that a boss who has been a laborer himself is more severe in his discipline and shows less sympathy in his treatment of men under him than those who have been employers or superintendents all their lives.

About eight hours' ride from Denver on the Union Pacific system at Coal Branch Junction and Como, runs Tarryal Creek starting from the Park and Continental mountain ranges and running southerly through Tarryal valley. Located in this valley lies the property of the Park County Gold Mining Company, who has lately acquired by purchase the sole and complete ownership of an exceedingly valuable track of placer mining ground. The track comprises five hundred and sixty-one acres of gold carrying gravel, and extends in a continuous body for more than two miles along gulch; and varies in width from a fourth of a mile to a mile. From a few acres of this ground gold to the value of between three and four millions of dollars has been taken by rude contrivances, and the tract is now practically intact, and cannot be worked out by any possibility for fifty years to come, and the gravel is readily handled and the mineral in it is easily saved.

Included in the property is the exclusive right to use all the water in the gulch, and also ample dumping ground for the debris from the flumes. On the tract is a fine town site, with springs of pure cold water close at hand. A large, valuable vein of coal has been discovered and opened, and experiments show that the product of the vein is an excellent coal for steam, electricity and blacksmithing purposes. There is now standing on a considerable portion of the land a great quality of large and sound timber, entirely suitable in amount and quality for all the needs of the company in mining and building for many years to come. The great amount of gold dust (much of it coarse particles of gold,) now incorporated with the gravel on this tract, was undoubtedly washed down during past ages into the gulch from gold quartz veins existing in the range of mountains that wall in the property on the west, north and east sides, and crossing the company's lands, and leading into this mountains are without question true fissure veins of gold quartz, which will have due attention in the near future. The Denver Lakewood & Golden Railway touches the northeasterly and southeasterly portions of Tarryall valley and all the necessary conditions are present for the thorough, economical and exceedingly profitable working of the mine.

The vast mining territory now owned by this company was formerly divided into numerous claims which were worked on a small scale and in a primitive manner by a host of "placer miners" who knew little, and in many cases cared less for legal titles to their holdings, many of which were jumped, and were often retained by the ready display and use of the deadly revolver.

The parties of whom the Park County Gold Mining Co. recently bought the tract and its appurtenances were among the original locators, and had brains, money, energy and full faith in the value and future of the property, and for many years they persistently prosecuted and defended lawsuits and bought up and silenced contrary interests, until within the past year they acquired a complete and perfect legal title to the entire tract, and it is to-day perfect. The title is now based upon United States patents, and the company has full and legal assurance from competent counsel, that their property is very valuable, and is capitalized at a moderate amount (250,000 non-assessable shares of the par value of $3.00 each.) This conservative capitalization will admit of the payment of large dividends, and there is every reason to believe that these original shares will be worth several times their par value when the mine is in full working order.

The sale of 47,700 Treasury shares, full paid and non-assessable is receiving merited success from the investing public, and the cash capital thus received is to be expended in developing this property. The company guarantees a preference dividend of ten per cent. on the cost of these shares, and reserves the right to advance the price of the Treasury shares without notice, and the offer at $1.00 per share cannot be held open for any stated time in any case, as many of the said shares have already been sold. In truth the world wants gold and since 1859, Colorado's mountain veins and river placers, have added $112,000,000 in gold to the wealth of the United States.

The 1893 panic created a new industrial era in Colorado, and a vigorous gold development was its outgrowth. At the present time the gold production of Colorado is $40,000 per day, and good judges say the close of 1894 will show a total yield of $24,000,000 of the yellow metal. Of course this wonderful activity is attracting to Colorado many bright people from all parts of the continent, but gold is only one of the great sources of this state. Silver mining alone yielded $15,000,000 in 1893, and the coal mines produced 4,200,000 tons of the black diamonds.

It is a fact known at the mints, that in the years 1848 to 1860 the enormous amount of $605,000,000 in gold was extracted from the gravel in the old beds of mountain torrents in California by placer or hydraulic mining, and now Rocky mountain streams in Colorado are adding vast quantities of gold to the wealth of America.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS.

Greet One Another in Church.

What would you think of yourself if you should allow a visitor, whose presence you desired, to enter and leave your house, to brush past you in the hall, without speaking a word of welcome or friendliness to him? But the church is your house, as hosts in God's behalf; and you are glad to have visitors attend its services. Then show them the pleasure you really feel at their presence. As host, introduce yourself; and make the visitors acquainted with others, so that they may feel that they are welcome. Invite them to come again. Do not give them occasion, from your manner, to think that your congregation is made up of a cold or exclusive set. A church is not a club, where all but those who belong certain circles must expect to be snubbed, if they presume to intrude. If you are too high-toned to exchange a word of Christian greeting with the stranger who worships on the same bench, or walks by your side down the aisle, then you had better set up a church of your own, and make sure beforehand of having reserved for you a little corner in heaven, where Christian brotherhood shall be prohibited.

But there are some visitors, on the other hand, who are chillier than an iceberg to approach; and their temperature always runs down to the lowest point in church. We have often tried to give you a hearty welcome, Mr. Zero, when you visited our services; but you always act as if you thought us mighty presuming and impudent. If we were able to force a handshake, what a limp, clammy, hyperborean grasp you return. It is even worse in the case of your beloved better-half, and your charming daughter, Miss Gingerly Zero. More than once they have looked straight in our face, as they brushed by us in the aisle, when we tried to welcome them; but evidently they are blind and deaf, else they would not have been so ill-mannered as to toss their heads as they did, and pass by in silence with an insulted air. And yet we have heard some of your family complain about the unsociability of our church!—Rev. William Durant.

Dry Bread as a Disinfectant.

Every one knows the cleansing power of rubbing a dirty surface with bread crumbs. This is the germ of the Berlin method. Permission was given me to see how the operation was carried out in two rooms, where a child had died of diphtheria. Four men were engaged. After everything that could be subjected to steam without detriment had been removed to the disinfecting station, all the things were removed from the walls, and the men began rubbing these with bread. Ordinary German loaves are used, forty-eight hours old. The loaves are cut into substantial chunks about six inches square, the back of each piece consisting of the crust, thus allowing a good purchase. The walls are systematically attacked with strokes from above downwards, and there can be no question as to its efficacy in cleaning them, nor does the operation take as long as one would imagine. The crumbs are swept up and burnt. After this the walls are thoroughly sprinkled with a five per cent. carbolic-acid solution. The floor is washed with a two per cent. carbolic-acid solution, and all the polished wood work and ornaments as well.—Medical Magazine.

Cure for Pneumonia.

Take six to ten onions, according to size, and chop fine, put in a large spider over a hot fire, then add about the same quantity of rye meal, and vinegar enough to form a thick paste. In the meanwhile stir it thoroughly, letting it simmer five or ten minutes. Then put it in a cotton bag large enough to cover the lungs, and apply to the chest as hot as the patient can bear. When this gets cool, apply another, and thus continue by reheating the poultices, and in a few hours the patient will be out of danger. This simple remedy is said to never fail to cure this too often fatal malady. Usually three or four applications will be sufficient, but continue always until the perspiration starts freely from the chest. This recipe was given many years ago by an old physician of large experience.—Boston Ploughman.

SATURDAY, NOV. 24, 1894.

DISSOLUTION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given, that the partnership lately exsisting between us, the undersigned, George W. Prescott and M. Elizabeth Green, carrying on business as publishers and printers at Quincy, under the style or name of M. Elizabeth Green, Publisher, and also under the name of Green & Prescott, was on the nineteenth day of November, 1894, dissolved by mutual consent, the said M. Elizabeth Green having sold to said George W. Prescott all her right, title, interest and good will in said business, and that said business in the future will be carried on by the said George W. Prescott alone, who will pay and discharge all debts and liabilities and receive all moneys payable to the said late firm.

M ELIZABETH GREEN,
GEO. W. PRESCOTT.
Quincy, Nov. 19, 1894.

Valedictory.

In closing my connection with this paper I wish to thank my many friends and patrons, who for thirty-five years, have generously given me their trade. I regret very much that I have been retired from active work, but this is only one of the many changes that are constantly being made in the business world.

M. ELIZABETH GREEN.

George W. Prescott & Son.

With this number the QUINCY PATRIOT is issued by a new firm, but by gentlemen familiar with the newspaper, its readers, its advertisers, and the people generally. Since 1869, a period of over a quarter of a century, its publishers have been Green & Prescott, and most of the management has devolved upon the junior member. He has been assisted for seventeen years by his son who is now associated with him as publisher. It will be the effort of George W. Prescott & Son to make the PATRIOT, and its daily edition, the LEDGER, even more bright, newsy, attractive and up-to-date. Time will tell how well we fulfil the promise.

The partnership existing between Mrs. M. Elizabeth Green and Mr. Prescott has been much longer than the average, and has been usually pleasant. Dissolutions are not easily effected without some feeling. This was first broached by Mrs. Green, and it was she who took it into court. The court made no discrimination between partners, and it resolved itself into a question of which partner would give the more money for the interest of the other. Mrs. Green has received a good round sum, more perhaps than her interest was worth, and we trust she may enjoy the declining years of her life in happiness.

The PATRIOT will be continued by the new publishers in the free, independent manner which has characterized it since its birth in 1837. It will not be issued in the interest of any party, sect, or society; and all communications of interest, not of a personal nature, will be cheerfully received, if written in a gentlemanly manner.

We shall endeavor to publish the PATRIOT for the interest and benefit of our citizens as a whole, but if any portion of the city is neglected by the officials, our columns will be open to right any wrong that may exist.

Our principal labors will be to give our citizens a good local sheet, full of news, and free from everything objectionable in the home; and a paper that will command the respect of our citizens and have a large circulation in all parts of the city. If any of our readers will help us in this good work by sending in items of news they will receive our hearty thanks.

Miss Annie L. Prescott will continue to edit and conduct the outside pages of the PATRIOT. Her experience the past five years insures the readers of a bright attractive paper as she will endeavor to make the story interesting, the receipts timely, and the miscellaneous matter newsy and up to date. Miss Prescott has been a member of the New England Woman's Press club for several years and has served on the finance committee the past year. As Miss Prescott has been ill since early spring, she will not have any regular hours for being at the PATRIOT office at present but is in hopes by the first of January to be able to attend to her duties. In the meantime she will edit at home.

One thing all writers should remember, and that is to send the name of the author with the article, no matter if it is simply a marriage, a birth or death, or any item of news. We do not care for the name to publish, but simply to protect ourselves against frauds. There are a few individuals who occasionally take delight in deceiving newspaper publishers by sending items that are not true; for this reason we must have the name of the sender of every article for our own protection.

KIND WORDS.

While the dissolution was pending many kind words were received, and the following was sent for publication. In justice to his partner, the junior member suppressed it, and it is now published in the PATRIOT for the first time:

> "It would be a matter of serious regret to those who have taken the PATRIOT for scores of years, if the control of it should pass into other hands. While the names of Green & Prescott have been associated with its management, its prosperity has been due, in a very large degree, to the last named family, and most every citizen is aware of the untiring efforts of father and son in collecting the news and giving it to the people in type and on paper not excelled by any newspaper and equalled by but few. To those who have occasion to read the average county weeklies with their miserable paper and equally miserable print, the perusal of the PATRIOT has been a source of gratification on account of its excellent quality when compared with the others. The refusal of the court to oblige its sale at auction, will meet with general approval, and the public will desire it to remain in the hands and under the guidance of those who have made it a success."

Young Men's Christian Asso'.

Rev. E. W. Virgin will speak at the men's meeting Sunday at 3 30 on "No License."

Among the prominent speakers engaged for the New England Secretary's Conference, which meets in Quincy Feb. 5 and 7, are Dr. A. J. Gordon and Rev. Jas. M. Gray of Boston, and Rev. W. H. P. Faunce of Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Lawrence B. Greenwood will have charge of the singing.

Seventy-five boys were royally entertained by the association Thursday evening. Mr. W. H. Graham of Haverhill gave several interesting readings, and Mr. Charles Scammell rendered a cornet solo. The interesting feature of the evening was the gymnasium exhibition given by ten members of the Junior class, under the direction of Mr. J. E. Merritt. The exercises commenced with the dumb bell drill, followed by some very smart work on the elephant and parallel bars. Lemonade and cake was served by the ladies later in the evening.

"The Nervous System" will be the subject of a talk by Dr. E. R. Johnson at the Y. M. C. A. at 7 o'clock this evening.

A Short Respite.

Supt. John C. Sanborn of the Plymouth division of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., and Christopher T. Bailey of the same road, who are now confined in Plymouth jail and who were Thursday refused a pardon, will have another opportunity tomorrow to breathe free air again, as they are witnesses in the cases against the carriage drivers at the Quincy depot. Friday morning Constable Furnald left for Plymouth armed with a habeas to bring them to Quincy.

CITY BRIEFS.

It is said the People's Party will endorse Stephen O. Moxon for Mayor.

The street department is busy scraping the mud off the principal streets.

The regular meeting of the School Board will be held next Tuesday evening.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. would be happy with the Malden association building.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Brown celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary on Monday evening.

The local division, A. O. H., celebrate its anniversary Friday evening by a social gathering.

A good game of foot ball may be expected at Merrymount park on the morning of Thanksgiving.

The bicycling season is about over, although many still ride their wheels regardless of the mud.

From now out it will be a case of hustle for votes, with the several candidates for municipal offices.

For a wonder there was not a single case in the district Monday, which is unusual for Monday.

No Quincy business was transacted at the session of the Probate Court at Dedham on Wednesday.

The Quincy foot ball team were defeated by the Rovers at Waltham, Saturday, association rules, 1 to 0.

Inspector Fletcher of Post 102 of Milton visited Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., on Thursday evening.

If the young man who took the five dollar gold piece yesterday, does not return it, he will be exposed.

"Cujus Animam," Stabat Mater,	Rossini

Street Railway Not Wanted.

A special town meeting has been called by the selectmen of Milton for Wednesday evening, Nov. 27, to see if the town will accept Chapter 324 of the Acts of 1894, and to see if the town will instruct the selectmen to petition the Legislature for such legislation as will require that any location hereafter granted to any street railway in the town shall be in such reserved places as are authorized by said chapter.

If the provisions of this act are accepted the selectmen can in the future in granting locations to street railways compel them to locate their tracks anywhere they choose, and can place such conditions upon them that it will be impossible for any railway company to accept such location.

This action originates with Milton's 400, who are bitterly opposed to any railway constructing its tracks within the borders of the town.

A new objection to granting a street railway a franchise was advanced at the hearing at Hingham on Saturday: "The disintegration of water pipes by electric loses from the leakage of the current from the electric road." About 600 attended the hearing.

The Seventh Annual.

The seventh annual dinner of Co. K., 5th Regiment, M. V. M., was held Wednesday evening in the armory at Braintree, and like those held in the past, was a grand success as well as a very enjoyable affair.

Dinner was served at 7 o'clock, and at that hour 150 or more gentlemen sat down to three long tables that had been tastefully arranged in the drill hall.

Dinner over, Capt. W. E. Morrison rapped the assembly to order and in a few remarks welcomed those present.

He complimented the boys of Co. K., who, he said was the heart of the best regiment in Massachusetts.

Hon. Elijah A. Morse, Congressman from the 11th district, was then introduced and he spoke at length. Remarks were also made by Dr. T. H. Dearing, Col. A. C. Drinkwater and others.

New Quarters Dedicated.

Maple lodge, Knights and Ladies' of Honor, No. 313, dedicated its new quarters, which are in Plumer's hall, Thursday about 100 being present. The grand officers and members from United, Unity, New England and Friendship lodges were also present, one candidate was initiated, and three new applications received. Remarks were made by Brother Fairbairn, Tibbetts and Hathaway and all spoke very highly and congratulated Maple lodge on its growth and the manner in which the work was performed by the Degree Team and Mrs. A. D. Loud, the secretary. Mrs W. W. Penniman, M. Lizzie Furnald and Hiram P. Campbell were each presented during the evening by the Protector, Wm. W. Penniman, in behalf of the Grand lodge, with a gold jewel of the order, for securing relief members.

A bountiful collation was served under the superintendence of Mrs. J. N. Fox and an able body of assistants. The lodge now numbers 172.

Amana Rebekah Lodge.

After the close of the regular meeting of Amana Rebekah Lodge, No. 97, held in Odd Fellows' hall, South Braintree, on Thursday evening, about one hundred and fifty assembled to witness the following entertainment:

Piano solo,—Wm. Woodsum.

A drama entitled, "Mrs. Bolivar's Quilting,"—parts taken by sisters Richards, Mellen, Porter, Crosby, Mellen and Stoddard.

Song,—Miss Ham.

Closing with a laughable farce, entitled, "The Bobtown School,"—H. W. Mansfield being master and brethren Richards, Laulpaugh, Brown, Tupper, Borden, Woodsum, Hobart and Sampson were the scholars.

All were loudly encored. A fee of ten cents was charged. Ice cream, cake, chocolate, coffee and cups and saucers were for sale. It was a financial success.

Among those present from Quincy were: Mrs. G. Monk, Mrs. N. B. Furnald, Mrs. Wm. F. Loud and daughter, Mrs. Elisha Hobart, Mrs. Toplez, Mrs. Bell, M. Jennie Davis and M. Lizzie Furnald.

G. A. R. Fair.

The six days' fair of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., closed Saturday night, the attendance being the largest of the week. During the latter part of the evening the articles remaining unsold were put up at auction and brought fairly good prices. As a whole considering the number of people out of work the fair was a financial success, although the amount cleared is not known at present.

The following is a list of those who contributed articles toward making the fair of Paul Revere post a grand success:

Ton of coal, C. Patch & Son; ton of coal, J. F. Sheppard & Sons; bottle of perfumery, S. F. Willard; box of soap, W. H. Doble Company; bush chisel, D. Drummond; Scotia hammer, A. Clark; L. Chief Houghton Surprised.

Oliver Houghton, one of Weymouth's veteran police officers, reached the ripe age of 73 years Monday, and that evening a number of his relatives and fellow officers took occasion to call upon him to extend congratulations. The gathering was a surprise to the Chief, but the welcome was none the less warm and a very enjoyable evening was passed.

Chief Houghton received several presents, among which was an elegant easy chair, which was presented by the officers and newspaper men of the Quincy district court.

ATLANTIC.

The Journal says it looks as though Squantum would be annexed to Boston, however Quincy people have got something to say about it.

The Atlantic Land Co. are building a new house on Squantum street.

Walker street extension is no longer a fact. One of the abutters, Mr. Churchill, has built a high board fence across the roadway and all passing has ceased.

Mrs. W. H. Yeoman of Wilmot, N. H., is the guest of her son Rev. J. H. Yeoman.

Miss Annie Clean led the C. E. meeting at the Atlantic Memorial church. Topic: "Some applications of the Golden Rule."

A valuable addition to the choir of the Atlantic Congregational church is Mr. Walter Hall of Boston, with a rich basso voice. Miss Leila Moxon sang as a solo on Sunday, "O Thou whom from all goodness flows."

Mrs. C. L. Coe was at the organ Sunday and was warmly welcomed after several weeks absence on account of sickness. Rev. W. F. Bacon of Boston was the preacher for the morning, he gave an eloquent discourse on "Being a credit to God." Mr. Sing Gun and comrade were in the audience.

Mr. Edward Bowlen, of the firm of Bowlen & Alger of Atlantic, has returned from Prince Edwards Island where he has been for the past month, sick with malaria.

The autumn rally of the Atlantic M. E. church will be Thursday, Nov. 22. Rev. Mr. Holenshead of West Roxbury and Mr. Holbrook will be present and address the meeting. All welcome.

The first ladies' night was observed by the Atlantic Social club of Ward Six Wednesday evening and though the weather was very cheerless outside; within the hall was gathered a large and very jolly company. Games and dancing was indulged in and all who were fortunate enough to be present passed a most enjoyable evening.

Tuesday evening while the balloting was going on, Stephen Moxon the nominee for Mayor of our city, was quietly enjoying the evening with the Compass Whist club of which he is a member. At about 9.20 a carriage drove up hastily to the residence of Mr. C. L. Coe on Billings street and he was summoned to appear before the convention and show cause why he should not accept the honor that had been conferred upon him. He accepted hearty congratulations from his neighbors and friends in his quiet way and as he left the house three rousing cheers were given him.

Rev. H. D. Deetz of Atlantic started Wednesday for a visit to his home in Ohio.

The Ladies' Social Circle met at Mrs. C. H. Durgin's on Wednesday evening. They are now busy making preparations for the sale which they are to hold in the vestry of the Methodist church on Dec. 6th. Several of the gentlemen present were busy with the needle as well as the ladies. Ice cream and cake were served at the close of the work hour, and a short time was spent in social games.

The Municipal Election.

Editors of the Quincy Patriot:

The coming municipal election in Quincy bids fair to be of more than ordinary importance, and the outcome will be awaited with unusual interest by citizens throughout the city.

As far as the mayoralty is concerned, although Mayor Hodges is the regular Democratic nominee, it is to be a contest not so much between the Republican and Democratic parties as between those citizens who are satisfied with the clean, straightforward and honest administration of Mayor Hodges and those who desire to restore the old condition of things at City Hall.

I do not believe that the intelligent citizens of Quincy are by any means desirous of taking a step backward in respect to the management of our municipal affairs. On the contrary, I have no doubt that a large majority of them are content to let the affairs of the city remain as they are. It is evident, however, that various elements have been busily at work endeavoring to create a sentiment inimical to the present administration, but all discerning citizens can readily detect the motive which has prompted such tactics and will not be mislead thereby.

The result of the recent election has naturally tended to encourage the hope, in certain quarters, that the city election would likewise be carried in the same manner, but the fact should be borne in mind that in Quincy there is a large contingent of fair-minded citizens, who, however partisan they may be in national or state politics, in the matter of local government they are decidedly non-partisan and will vote for the candidates they consider best qualified for public office, regardless of party affiliation. Such citizens aided materially in the election of Mayor Hodges by the overwhelming majority of 361 in the last municipal contest, and there is hardly a doubt that these and other like-minded citizens will this year again unite and re-elect him by as large, if not a larger, majority than he received a year ago.

If ever a man deserved well of his fellow-citizens it is the present able and efficient mayor. Elected as he was by citizens of all shades of political opinion, he has endeavored to serve the whole people rather than a party or faction. This is creditable alike to him personally and to his administration.

It is unnecessary, perhaps, at this time to discuss at length municipal affairs in general, as almost every citizen that is interested in the welfare of the city is more or less familiar with such matters. But it is certainly quite necessary to call attention to the fact that when a public official has endeavored to perform the duties of the office to which he has been elected, ably and faithfully and in a manner satisfactory to the people, it is the duty of all good citizens to sustain him.

For this reason, if for no other, all who believe in efficiency and good government should see to it that Mayor Hodges is re-elected.

CIVIS.

Nov. 21, 1894.

Fire.

The alarm from Box 25 at 7 28 Saturday evening sent a large crowd of men and boys hastening in that direction regardless of quantities of mud through which they had to pass. The fire proved to be in the chimney of a house on Canal street owned by Michael Cook and occupied by Matilda Webber, and was extinguished with but little damage.

Professor Frank Parson's Lectures.

We wish to draw the attention of our readers to a course of lectures being given weekly in East Milton under the auspices of the Union for Practical Progress. They are given "without money and without price." The lecturer is Prof. Frank Parsons, counsellor-at-law, and lecturer in Boston University, one of the most popular authors and exponents of political economy of the present day.

The lectures are given in the Congregational church, East Milton, every Saturday, at 7.45 P. M., and are free from the control of any creed or political party as our schools and universities are. All ladies and gentlemen are invited to attend.

THE NO LICENSE majority last year was the largest with two exceptions in the thirteen elections, yet the "yes" vote made a larger gain than the "No." It is gratifying to know that the "No" vote of 1888 last year represented over one-half of the entire voters of the city. So long as this is a fact the "yes" voters have a hopeless case, but no-license people must not rest upon their oars. They must exert themselves a little at least once a year for the good of the cause.

DOWNS AND PARK.

Thomas Atkins has commenced work on the foundation of a new house on Davis street.

There will be a special meeting of the Squantum Yacht club, at the club house, on Monday evening.

The people of Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Park feel very grateful for the extension of the water mains into their district.

It is understood upon good authority that Mr. Samuel E. Blanchard, who was nominated as Councilman at the Ward Five Democratic caucus, has declined to be their candidate, and that his name was used without his knowledge.

The eighth annual meeting of the Quincy Point Magazine club was held with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Smith on Thursday evening. The club is still limited to twelve members, one vacancy was announced, and quickly filled from the waiting list. The magazines for 1894 were auctioned by Mr. Hiram Phillips, and a fair sum realized from the sale.

The board of officers for '94 were unanimously re-elected, viz: President, Mr. F. H. Smith; Secretary, Miss K. A. Raycroft; Treasurer, Mr. T. B. Pollard.

All enjoyed the evening thoroughly. The Magazine club seems likely to have quite a history, as the interest in the same continues as great as ever.

Timely Advice.

Impetuous people are reminded that a fellow can't warm his hands by burning his fingers.

Undesirable Clothing.

There's one sort of Clothing you ought not to buy. It's the kind that bankrupts the maker—made poorly, fits badly, and not worth the money you pay, no matter how low the price.

The last thing a wise man expects is cheap fine clothes.

Your Money's Worth.

If you have made any mistakes in choosing your place to get your clothes—men's or boys'—and not quite satisfied with the fit and make, we want to ask you now to try trading with us. You can always depend on our Clothing being thoroughly well made and reliable. We trust you will find out this season how much cheaper it is for you to buy good Clothing than the ordinary kind.

Hats, Furnishings and Shoes.

Whatever your needs are from head to foot, we can supply you. We are after the trade that wants honest goods and fair prices. We want yours. Try us and see if we don't give you your money's worth.

St. NICHOLAS
FOR YOUNG FOLKS
Edited by Mary Mapes Dodge. IN 1895.

The greatest year in the history of this magazine, now without a rival in its field, is the one just closing. Plans for the coming year assure even greater success than in the past.

RUDYARD KIPLING

wrote his famous "Jungle Stories" for ST. NICHOLAS, and it is a welcome announcement that these will be continued in 1895.

NAPOLEON
FOR YOUNG READERS.

While THE CENTURY will have for its leading feature the new life of the French Emperor by Prof. Sloane, one of the most popular of ST. NICHOLAS writers takes the same character for his inspiration.

A Boy of the First Empire
BY ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS,

is the story of a little lad from the streets of Paris (but of good family), who renders a service to Napoleon, and becomes one of his pages and finally an aide. He is with him at the most critical times of his life,—at the departure for Elba, in the glories of the life at Fontainebleau, and finally at Waterloo. The story glows with pageantry and is a truthful and accurate account, based upon the best authorities and verified by the latest information. of the life of "the man of destiny." It is really a delightful story-history of Napoleon.

WEST POINT
AND MAN-OF-WAR LIFE

will receive attention, Lieutenant Putnam writing of cadet life at the military academy, while Ensign Ellicott of the flag-ship "Chicago" will describe the experiences of our hardy seamen on the modern ships of war.

INSPIRING TALES
FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Theodore Roosevelt will write a series to be called "Hero-Tales from American History," recounting famous deeds of heroism about which young people ought to know. Prof. Brander Matthews will include in his entertaining papers on "The Great American Authors" accounts of the lives of Bryant, Emerson, Longfellow, Hawthorne, Whittier, Poe and Lowell. Stories of Famous Horses in history and mythology—Bucephalus, Napoleon's and Sheridan's horses, etc.—will be told by James Baldwin, author of "Stories from the Northern Myths." City Fire Departments will be treated, and there will be two or three papers on The Boys' Brigade. The Serial Stories are many. One called "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp," recounts the marvelous adventures of a modern boy who became the accidental purchaser of Aladdin's lamp and summoned the jinn while cleaning it. A delightful story of college girls, "The Three Freshmen," will appeal to every girl; and "Teddy and Carrots," James Otis' serial of newsboy life will be read by every boy. A serial story by Frances Courtenay Baylor is one of the features.

Price of ST. NICHOLAS is 25 cts. a number or $3.00 a year. New subscriptions should begin with November, the first issue of the year. Subscribe through dealers or remit by check, draft or money order to

THE DOCTORS disagree as to the advisability and necessity of closing the Coddington school. One maintains it was not necessary, and another says it should have been closed sooner. Commenting on the editorial of Thursday, one physician says the building needs something more than fumigating. It needs scrubbing from top to bottom. He would go further, and burn all the books, pencils, etc., in use. He thoroughly condemns the practice of using books and pencils in common, and believes it causes the spread of contageous diseases more than anything else. The free school book law works great injury as employed in Quincy. If books were given to pupils that would be one thing, but to own in common and distribute and collect daily or oftener, then pass them on to another building, they soon become breeders of disease. The use of pencils in common is fully as dangerous, when one knows how common is the practice of putting them in one's mouth.

Greater precaution should also be taken in loaning books from our public library. Particularly when one sees one of the books on the bed of a scarlet fever patient, and families with other contageous diseases exchanging books. Borrowers of books should also subscribe to the fact that there is no contagious disease in their house.

Democratic Convention.

The Democratic municipal convention was called to order by William F. Powers and organization was affected by the choice of W. F. Powers as chairman and Walter B. Wilson as secretary.

The chairman upon motion appointed this committee on credentials: W. P. Cherrington of Ward Six, Alex B. Smith of Ward Three, C. F. Adams, 2d, of Ward One.

The number of delegates present was 76.

Upon motion of Cornelius Moynihan of Ward Three, the delegation from Ward Six were empowered to fill a vacancy existing in the delegation of that ward.

Mr. Pattee of Ward One addressed the convention in support of the administration, and concluded by placing Hon. W. A. Hodges in nomination for Mayor.

The motion was seconded by W. P. Cherrington and made unanimous.

A committee consisting of Fred F. Green, John Griffin, James Dunn, William Kelley, Daniel Little, Watson Brasee and John Duggan were appointed to bring in a list of nominees for School Committee and Councilmen-at-large.

The committee reported the following list, which was accepted: John A. Avery of Ward Two, C. F. Adams, 2d, of Ward Three, C. C. Hearn of Ward Four, Charles T. Baker of Ward Five and Horatio Holbrook Ward Six.

For School Committee, Henry C Hallowell, M. D.

John Curtis, 2d, was the choice of the Ward Three delegation for councilman-at-large, but being an assessor was deemed ineligible for the office, and Mr. Adams chosen from that ward. Many of the delegates desired to present their favorites, despite the fact that this course would have lost them one of the strongest councilmen. The opinion was that Mr. Adams should not be sacrificed for ward pride, since at the last election he polled but a few votes less than Mayor Hodges.

Upon motion of Mr. Little of Ward Six a committee was appointed by the chair to acquaint Mayor Hodges of the action of the convention and to request his presence. Mr. Pattee announced that His Honor was indisposed and by advice of physician it was not thought safe for him to venture out last night. Orignal motion to appoint prevailed and Fred F. Green, D. J. Ford, Alex. Smith, W. B. Orcutt, Horatio Holbrook and Daniel C. Little appointed as the committee.

The officers of the convention were empowered to fill vacancies.

PARKS AND BOULEVARDS.

Unless the citizens of Quincy have carefully studied the Acts of 1893 and 1894 relative to the assessments to be levied by the commissioners upon the cities and towns in the Metropolitan District, few can be aware of the immense importance to Quincy of the amount to be paid by this city for the cost and maintenance of the new parks and boulevards. The tax upon Quincy for this purpose, presents every indication of being not only an immediate one, but also for many years in the future, and with our present high valuation and rate of taxation must inevitably prove a burden which will stagger if not crush us. The authority of the commissioners vests them with the power, (from which there's no appeal) to name the amount which each city and town in the district shall pay toward the cost and maintenance of this new system for many years to come. This being the case, no effort should be spared to have our city ably represented by competent council when the subject is heard before the commissioners of award. It is a matter of too much present and future importance to our very existence as a municipality, to suffer the slightest neglect. Struggling as we are under a heavy debt; with taxes and valuation both high; new school houses needed and many actual necessities claiming immediate attention, what shall be done if we are obliged to pay a large assessment for parks and boulevards in addition to losing the taxable property taken by the Metropolitan Park Commission? This problem is a most serious one for our city, especially in its present financial condition and deserves the careful attention of every citizen. It seems to me that all the prominent citizens of Quincy should hold a meeting and formulate some comprehensive plan having for its object the accumulation of evidence in behalf of the city and its proper arrangement for presentation at the appointed time. There is no manner of doubt but what the administration and legal officers of the city would welcome such a meeting and would feel encouraged to know that the citizens of Quincy took an interest in the matter and were ready and willing to aid them in every way. I trust the PATRIOT and LEDGER will both agitate this subject and impress upon the people its great importance. Certainly our representatives to the next Legislature should see that no further appropriations are made for parks and boulevards for which the people at present can ill afford to pay. Economy in public expenditure of money must be made to keep the same level which most of the people are at present obliged to keep in their private expenditures.

POLITICS.

Now that the caucuses and conventions have all been held, and only the election remains to determine who shall be our officers for the ensuing year, a resume of the situation may be of interest. From the start the political campaign has been an interesting and instructive one. On the Republican side, no sooner did Mr. Thompson appear to be the leading candidate, than came his letter of declination. It was a surprise to many, but not to June who knew long ago that Mr. Thomspon would not be allowed to receive the nomination. To his credit, be it said, he was not the pliable man wanted for the occasion, and he chose wisely when he withdrew from the scramble. Notwithstanding the many insinuations as to his probable weakness at the polls, he would have been the strongest candidate the party could have nominated. His long service in the City Council; his integrity and business ability, would have given him a much larger vote this year than he received last year, because he would not have had the old City hall ring to carry. That defeated him last year but would not have been a factor this. "Why did Mr. Thompson feel called upon to decline the nomination?" is a question often heard upon our streets ever since his open letter. Was he practically forced out by others interested in securing the nomination of a more pliable man? The contest between Messrs. Bass and Moxon for the position of President of the Council of 1894, was again renewed for the nomination for Mayor and resulted in the defeat of Mr. Bass who felt sure of being successful up to the moment of his defeat. The Democrats nominated Mr. Hodges by acclamation, which fact, considering all the circumstances, ought to alarm Mr. Hodges in the most positive way. What are the prospects of the two candidates for success and what elements will enter into the contest? So far as Mr. Moxon is concerned, I consider him to be the weakest candidate (except Mr. Holden) that the party could have selected. One act of his while a member of the City Council will not soon be forgotten by the citizens; I refer to his drawing from the city treasurer the sum of $600.00 for school house plans. Not only was this, in my opinion, contrary to all law, but what is of far more importance, it was entirely antagonistic to any sort of a sound public policy, and if Councilman Moxon could get his hand into the Treasury, what might be the opportunities of Mayor Moxon with the same estimate of his privileges as a public servant? Again, Mr. Moxon will meet with much opposition from those who think that from the date of his becoming a naturalized citizen to that of his receiving the nomination for mayor, embraces too short a period to entitle him to be chief executor of a city within whose borders are so many able men who have guided and guarded its interests for so many years. These facts together with the one that the city debt reached such large proportions while he was chairman of the finance committee, will militate against him. In his favor will be his long service in the City Council and his consistent support of anything bearing a Republican label.

Mr. Hodges in order to be elected, must receive from three hundred to four hundred Republican votes. He need not, unless he so wishes, be either flattered or deceived by the unanimous nomination he received. The outbursts in the Ward Three and Four caucuses are sure indications of discontent in his party.

Every politician knows there is quite a serious defection in the Democratic party which will be manifested at the polls. While it is true that many of the so-called Democrats who are opposing him have voted the Republican ticket in previous years and will therefore be no loss to his vote, still there are many more of the party who feel that, as Mayor, he has not given proper recognition to a certain class of Democrats, and these votes will be a loss which Mr. Hodges cannot afford this year. There is yet time for him to patch up party differences and upon his success in this line his election will in a manner depend. There is scarcely any criticism of his administration apart from two or three appointments and he will find his friends to be his greatest enemies. Next Saturday's PATRIOT will be time enough for predictions after carefully looking over the ground.

DIPHTHERIA.

It will be noticed with regret that it has been thought advisable to close the Coddington school on account of the dread disease. I have yet to learn that any of our physicians are using the new remedy which in other places has proved so successful. The newspapers have of late mentioned many authentic cases of the remarkable curative properties of the new discovery, and it would seem that our local doctors ought not to be behind the times.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

The Council has taken a step in the right direction in requesting the Mayor to petition the Legislature for the right to establish a city plant. Be careful that the petition shall be so drawn that we shall not be obliged to first purchase the plant and franchise of the present company.

PATRIOT AND LEDGER.

Everybody in Quincy will be pleased to know that these two papers are now in the hands of the Prescotts, for it is a guarantee that no efforts will be spared to maintain, and if possible, improve the standard of past years. Few people imagine how much they would miss their daily and weekly local papers if their issue should cease. There is something about the home journal which endears it to residents and gives it an attraction far in excess of that felt for any outside newspaper.

JUNE.

Churchill-Fay.

The marriage of Mr. John P. S. Churchhill, clerk of the East Norfolk District Court, and Miss Henrietta Adele Fay were united in marriage Wednesday evening at St. Paul's church, Boston; the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. Lindsey.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, en traine, high corsage, with large cape collar of duchess lace and high puffed sleeves. She wore a tulle veil, held with a crown of apple blossoms and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

A reception in the state parlors at the Vendome followed the ceremony.

The ushers were Mr. A. Churchill, Mr. George F. Tarbell, Mr. M. Churchill, Mr. E. K. Stevens, Mr. W. Tracey Tecel and Mr. C. E. Churchill.

I. O. O. F. Hall Dedicated.

Odd Fellows' hall, the home of John Hancock Lodge, No. 224, was dedicated Tuesday by Grandmaster Ruggles and the officers of the Grand lodge in the presence of about two hundred members of the order and their wives. Before the dedication ceremony Sprague's orchestra played several selections.

Next came the dedication, followed by singing by a quartette composed of Mr. E E. Bullock, Mr. Benj. Sargent, Mr. H. A. Corbett and Dr. A. J. Colgan.

Miss Clara Jennings, reader, was heartily received, as also was Mr. E. E Bullock in his solo.

The John Hancock lodge at first held its meetings in the Knights of Honor hall in the Brasee building. The lodge, after remaining there some time, in looking about for more commodious quarters was offered exceptionally favorable arrangements by Boynton & Russell for the use of the entire second floor of their large building on Newport avenue. Several weeks ago work was begun on the reconstruction of the interior.

The entrance to the hall is on Newport avenue. The stairway is reached by a long lobby. The stairs end in a small vestibule. At the right is the ladies' anteroom and at the left the gentlemen's coat room. The main hall, which is 27 feet by 43 feet, opens from either of these rooms. The hall has a high arched ceiling, painted a cream tint, striped with gold, and the walls are in buff. The floor is covered with a rich carpet. Opening from the lodge room is the long banquet room, 12 feet by 43 feet. At the rear of the banquet room there is a well appointed kitchen. Over the gentlemen's coat room, reached by a short flight of stairs, is the smoking and paraphernalia rooms. The furniture is of antique oak.

This is one of the best appointed lodge rooms in the city.

Speeches were next in order from the Grand Master, Past Grand Master Cook, Past Grand Master Pinkerton of Worcester and District Deputy Grand Master Joy, after which the lodge and guests repaired to the banquet hall. During the supper Sprague's orchestra rendered several choice selections for which they received hearty applause.

Grand Concert.

The grand concert at the Quincy Point Congregational church, Tuesday evening, by the Herbert Johnson concert company proved to be a rare treat to the large number who attended. Extra cars were run from Quincy Center and North and East Weymouth and many were in waiting when the doors were thrown open. The interior of the church about the platform was prettily decorated with ferns and palms.

The ushers for the occasion were Miss Grey, Miss Annie Hall, Miss Eva Hall and the Misses Lord. These young ladies were very prettily attired in costumes of light blue, pink, white and blue.

The audience was an appreciative one and encored nearly every number.

The concert opened with an organ prelude and overture by Mr. Hayden. Then came the concert proper which was a selection by the ladies' quartette. Mr. Joseph L. White followed with a baritone solo, "Only Waiting." Mr. White is a fine singer, but has a voice much too strong for a small church.

The next number was a reading, "The Famine," by Mr. Hoyt L. Conary, who captivated his hearers and was obliged to respond to two encores.

"The Star of Bethlehem," a tenor solo by Mr. Johnson was very fine and received a deserving encore.

As a whole the concert was good and Mr. Johnson may be sure of always receiving a warm welcome whenever his concert company appears in this city.

Another Victory for Q. H. S.

The Q. H. S. foot ball team went to Boston Saturday to play the Eliots of Boston and defeated them by a score of 18 to 0. Only six of the Q. H. S. showed up at the depot and so the team was rendered weak as the positions had to be changed; the center to full back and one end to quarter back. But the positions were well filled as they showed that they understood their positions. Three young men who came with the Q. H. S. were substituted in the places of those absent and they played a good game, not knowing the signals. Although the team consisted of only nine men they carried out a victory which was well fought by the other side.

Coddington School Closed.

Four new cases of diphtheria have appeared in Coddington school district and to prevent a further spread of the disease the Board of Health and School Committee held a conference and decided that it was best to close the building for an indefinite period.

The first appearance in the school of the disease was some weeks ago when one of the teachers was taken with it and left the school. Although at that time the attending physician stated that it had not developed enough to admit of its being communicated to the pupils under her charge.

However, since that time there have been several cases and one fatal, and it is now reported that several are sick with it.

It is not thought that the disease has assumed a magnitude to be called an epidemic, but it was thought advisable that the school should be closed.

Thieving Checked.

Last summer there were numerous breaks reported among the stone sheds and partially finished houses, and quantities of tools were stolen. After considerable hard and persistent work Chief of Police Hayden succeeded in running down July 18, an Italian who answered to the name of Antonio Musucci, and the recovery of much of the stolen property which reflected great credit upon Chief Hayden and his corps of officers. Musucci was held for the grand jury before whom he was convicted on six events and sentenced by two courts to two years in the House of Correction where he now is. It has been a notable fact that this kind of thievery ceased upon apprehension of Musucci.

Republican Convention.

Not only was there a full attendance of delegates at the Republican Mayoralty convention Tuesday evening but the capacity of the Republican headquarters was tested by interested citizens.

Ex-Mayor Fairbanks, the president of the City Committee, called the convention to order and was elected chairman. He spoke briefly of the encouraging outlook. The convention then selected Representative Charles L. Hammond as secretary.

A committee on credentials was appointed—Mr. Bryant of Ward Five, Mr. Field of Ward Three and Mr. Thomas of Ward Six, and they reported a full attendance of delegates, viz:—

Ward One, 13; Ward Two, 9; Ward Three, 12; Ward Four, 9; Ward Five, 12; Ward Six, 7; Total, 62.

The report was accepted and the temporary organization made permanent.

A committee of three on ballot was appointed, viz: Mr. Bryant of Ward Five, Mr. Ewell of Ward One and Mr. Burke of Ward Four.

At the suggestion of H. H. Faxon, names of candidates for nomination of Mayor were presented.

Henry T. Wason in a lengthy speech presented the name of John O. Hall, the present City Auditor.

Councilman L. S. Anderson, although personally for Councilman Moxon, presented by request the name of Councilman John O. Holden.

Ex-Councilman Read had the honor of presenting the successful nominee, Stephen O. Moxon, and he did it in good shape. He was a man well known throughout the city; a recognized leader of the Republican party; an able defender of the city's best interests; a candidate who will poll a large vote; respected and faithful; a large contractor who stood well with labor, and had never had a strike or allowed a weekly pay day to pass; a hard worker in the City Council for four years, for two as chairman of the Finance Committee; who was unsurpassed as a debater; a gentleman who is entitled to your consideration and support.

Councilman Johnson seconded the nomination of Councilman Moxon in a vigorous speech, which was his greatest effort. Mr. Moxon was a thorough Republican; a defender of Republican principles. I have no sympathy with Independents who affiliate with Democrats. A non-partisan government was established by the Republicans upon the change from a town to a city and was continued five years, but the Democrats had overthrown it, and we now have Democratic rule. It was important to have a man with experience in Council in the executive chair. Who defended Republican principles during the administration of Mayor Fairbanks but Councilman Moxon? He is entitled to the reward, and faithful service should be rewarded.

Henry H. Faxon also endorsed the name of Councilman Moxon, but wished it understood that he was an Independent Republican. I shall not vote for a Republican unless he is for the removal of the present Commissioner of Public Works. I have rode over bad roads enough this year. Mayor Hodges has done some things well, but men with "infloonce" had been put in office by him every time. I want a Commissioner at his office evenings, and attending to city business early in the morning.

E. W. Sheppard presented without a speech the name of Councilman E. W. H. Bass.

J. H. Burke also brought forward the name of Councilman Jonas Shackley.

The convention then proceeded to an informal ballot. The first was irregular because one more vote was thrown than delegate. On the fourth trial a majority was given Mr. Moxon as will be seen:

	Irregular	Informal	First	Second
Number cast,	63	62	62	62
Necessary choice,	—	32	32	32
S. O. Moxon had	—	25	31	34
E. W. H. Bass	—	17	24	27
J. O. Hall	—	9	6	1
Jonas Shackley	—	9	1	0
J. O. Holden	—	2	0	0

Upon motion of C. M. Bryant the nomination was made unanimous amid considerable enthusiasm.

Only five names were presented for Councilmen-at-large and they were nominated by acclamation, viz: John P. Bigelow of Ward Three, Luther S. Anderson of Ward One, Charles H. Johnson of Ward Two, Eugene H. Sprague of Ward Five, and Jonas Shackley of Ward Four.

A committee of three consisting of Luther S. Anderson, Harry W. Reed and Lester M. Pratt were appointed to escort Mr. Moxon into the hall.

At this point a recess was taken to await the arrival of Candidate Moxon. Upon his appearance he was greeted with cheers and the blasts of the old fog horn.

Mr. Moxon said he did not realize now the honor that had fallen to him, but he wished to thank the convention. He felt it the honor of his life to become the candidate of the Republicans for Mayor. It is not my purpose to make a speech. If elected it will be my endeavor to conduct affairs on business principles. (Applause.) It was the only right way. In 1888 a change was made from a town to a city. It was the first duty to administer affairs on line of charter. The charter was not regarded as it should be. We were now too much on town government lines. Again thanking the convention Candidate Moxon closed.

Auditor Hall had also entered and was called upon for a speech. He thanked all for the opportunity and heartily congratulated Candidate Moxon. He spoke of his confidence in his integrity, ability, wisdom and power, and hoped the people would leave him untrammelled. Support him by your votes. Support him by your power. Mr. Hall congratulated the city on the choice and the candidate. May the fulfilment of anticipation be realized. May it be full of promise, and result in a rousing election so that the Republicans will hug themselves with joy.

Councilman Holden also congratulated the convention and the candidate, and predicted the election of Mr. Moxon. He regretted more Councilmen had not been renominated.

Councilman Bigelow spoke enthusiastically. It was a great pleasure to him to be present and partake of the pleasure. Candidate Moxon was sincere, honest, with more than the average caliber, and had the legal acumen which City Hall now lacked.

H. H. Faxon was also very well satisfied with the choice. None who would take the office were so able as Moxon. We want a business Mayor, and Moxon has experience and is independent.

Councilman Johnson was pleased with the nomination and believed the delegates could work with a will for his election.

A collection of $86 was taken and convention adjourned.

Democratic Caucuses.

Ward One.

In Ward One the "faithful seven" of a few weeks ago increased to forty Monday evening, an unusual number for this ward. The caucus was scheduled for 7 30, but was not called until 7 50. Mr. Fred F. Green, chairman of the ward committee, called the meeting to order and read the call. On motion of Philip D. Cook, Luke J. Coyle was chosen secretary.

The first business was the choice of councilmen, and upon motion of Mr. Blackmur it was decided to nominate but one candidate. This motion caused considerable discussion, the opposition claiming that the usual policy of three be adhered to. Mr. Blackmur stated that he believed that by a concentration of effort upon one strong candidate the Democrats might be successful. This innovation was finally accepted by the caucus, and upon a motion of the gentlemen Mr. Fred B. Rice was placed in nomination and made unanimously. Mr. Rice was the candidate last year and lacked only a few votes of election.

The mayoralty delegates were nominated from the floor, a departure from the "star chamber committee," and the following chosen:

Wm. G. A. Pattee, Thomas J. McGrath, Walter B. Wilson, Fred F. Green, James E. Dunn, John Swithin, Philip D. Cook, Joseph Welch, Frank Garbarino, C. F. Adams, 2d, Harry L. Rice, R. P. Blackmur, Luke J. Coyle, W. E. Brown.

Mr. Zenas Arnold placed Dr. Hallowell in nomination for school committeeman and the nomination was made unanimous by the motion of John Swithin.

The ward committee chosen were Walter B. Wilson, James E Dunn, C. F. Adams, 2d, Thomas J. McGrath, Fred B. Rice, Philip D. Cook, Zenas Arnold, Joseph Welch and Frank Garbarino.

The chairman of the caucus, eulogized the present administration and hoped for full support in December, irrespective of personal feeling which he knew to be rampart, but which would in triumph dissipate for want of cause.

The delegates to the convention were instructed to present the name of C. F. Adams, 2d, as councilman-at-large.

The caucus was adjourned at 8 55.

Ward Two.

Herbert M. Federhen, Jr., presided at the caucus in Ward Two and Timothy J. Carey was secretary.

The ballot for Councilmen resulted in the nomination of Capt. Daniel Higgins, William H. Sullivan and Daniel J. Ford.

The delegates elected to the Mayoralty convention were: Herbert M. Federhen, Jr., Daniel J. Ford, James Collins, J. F. Foy, John Dolan, George Connor, James H. Griffin, W. A'Hearn, M. Donaher, J. J. Connor, Thomas Fihely, John A. Avery, Cornelius Wren.

Ward Three.

Ward Three Democrats held their caucus in Baxter's block which was hardly large enough to accommodate the crowd that attended. Timothy F. Ford called order and George D. Cahill read the call. William H. Warner was then elected chairman and George D. Cahill secretary.

An effort was made to nominate Edward J. Lennon by acclamation but did not prevail and a committee of five consisting of William Kelley, A. D. Smith, Richard Larkin, Michael Burns and Angus McNeil was appointed to retire and bring in a double list of candidates for councilmen.

The names presented by this committee were: Albion I. Dixon, John A. McDonnell, William J. Sullivan, Jonathan B. Foster, Edward J. Lennon and P. W. Driscoll.

The last mentioned declined to run.

A question then arose as to how they should be voted for and the motion by Mr. McCarthy that the check list be used and the three highest be declared the nominees prevailed.

The result of the ballot was:

A. I. Dixon,	77
Edward J. Lennon,	72
John A. McDonnell,	67
W. J. Sullivan,	31
Jonathan B. Foster,	25
Edward Powers,	1

A committee of ten then retired to bring in a list of delegates to the Mayoralty convention.

While this committee were out Mr. McDonnell made a few remarks urging the party to stand together.

Councilman Lennon was also called upon for a few remarks and he made them with a vengeance. After thanking the caucus for his nomination he said he wanted to set himself right. He then commenced on the removal of Mr. Collins from the fire department and the hiring of Mr. Weeks who knew nothing about a horse.

Mr. Lennon then went for Commissioner Eaton and Chief Engineer Williams. He told of his experience in trying to get a job although he did not expect to get $5 a day for riding into the yard and out again. The speaker then in a loud voice told in a graphic manner how he went to Quincy Point with his box of tools and was met by an alien who was getting $3.50 a day, who told him no more men were wanted. He left his tools there and when he went back after them Williams told him to leave them until Monday when he would get a job, but he did not get it. Mr. Lennon here applied names to some of the city officials that are suppressed. Continuing he said they did not want any help in the morning but at noon Williams hired a "down homer" like himself.

The speaker was called to order several times but kept on saying in a thundering tone, "He would have justice. That he wanted to place himself right and expose the man who got $1500 out of the city besides his salary."

But order was still insisted upon and the veteran sat down.

The committee had now returned and the following delegates were elected: Edward J. Parker, J. A. McDonnell, Angus McNeil, William A. Kelley, Michael Burns, J. S. McDonnell, Alex Souter, A. I. Dixon, J. A. Dasha, John Savage, P. W. Driscoll, Cornelius Moynihan, Dennis J. Ford, A. D. Smith and James H. Sullivan.

Ward Four.

Forester's hall was not large enough to hold the crowd that attended the Democratic caucus in West Quincy.

William F. Powers was chairman and Richard Foley was secretary.

A ballot was taken for Councilmen with the following result:

John M. O'Brien	111
Thomas J. Lamb	112
Michael B. Geary,	110
Peter T. Fallon	62

And the first three were declared the nominees.

The following list of delegates to the Mayoralty convention was presented and adopted: John H. Cooney, John Corcoran, John A. O'Brien, Andrew Kirwan, Edward Farrell, William D. Burns, William H. Callahan, James C. Fennessy, John McGilvary, James E. McDonald, Timothy Fitzgerald, Jeremiah J. Lyons, Peter T. Fallon, William H. Coughlin, Roderick McDonald, William T. Shea, John W. Burke, John B. Reinhalter, Stephen B. Little.

Ward Five.

The Ward Five Democratic caucus was held in the Brasee building on Monday evening.

In the absence of chairman Baker of the ward committee the caucus was called to order by Mr. Martin F Burns, the secretary of the committee. Mr. William B. Orcutt was elected chairman and Mr. Martin F. Burns secretary.

The first business to be transacted was the nomination of three candidates for the council. On a motion, from the floor the chair appointed Mr. W. H. Brasee, Mr. George Weston and Mr. F. J. Lavery, a committee to retire and bring in a list of names for candidates. The committee retired, and almost immediately returned with this list of names:—Samuel E. Blanchard, George W. Brown and Edward J. Cummings.

Mr. Sylvester Brown's nomination by the Republicans for member of the school committee for three years was confirmed.

The members of the ward and city committee are as follows:

Charles T. Baker, Watson H. Brasee, George W. Brown, William B. Orcutt, F. J. Lavery, John F. Neill, Martin F. Burns, W. B. Simmons, Benj Sargent.

Delegates to the Mayoralty Convention: David J. Roach, Martin F. Burns, William B. Orcutt, M. R. Sparrow, George W. Brown, Watson H. Brasee.

Ward Six.

The Democratic caucus in this ward was largely attended and was very harmonious. The following were elected by ballot as candidates for the council: Edward J. McKeon, John A. Duggan and William H. Owen.

Court in Quincy.

John Cronin of Weymouth was arraigned for disturbing the peace. He pleaded not guilty, and while his trial was progressing he got impertinent and the court committed him to the Quincy lockup until Monday morning for contempt. Later the court withdrew the sentence for contempt and found him guilty of disturbing the peace and sent him to the House of Correction for three months.

Michael Holden, Frank G. Sheppard and Dennis Shea were arraigned for keeping a common nuisance at Randolph. Sheppard and Shea pleaded guilty and Holden not guilty. The case against Holden and Shea was continued until Dec. 1, and the case against Sheppard until Nov. 28.

Thomas Moore, Jr., of Randolph was arraigned for discharging a gun at a car of the Brockton street railway. The evidence showed that the shooting was done by one John McGatty, and Moore was therefore discharged.

John Cassanagh was fined $60 for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor at Quincy. Appealed.

Alexander McDonnell was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy, not having the ten he was taken to Dedham.

Henry Sullivan of Quincy was arraigned for disturbing the peace. This case proved kind of a neighborly row that started among the children and the defendant was discharged.

David Anderson of Weymouth was fined $5 for drunkenness.

Lorenzo Cassine was arraigned for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk at West Quincy and was fined $4.

Frank E. Kennison of Weymouth was arraigned for the larceny of coal from David J. Pratt, but he was found not guilty and was discharged.

James Gill of Quincy was arraigned for drunkenness and had his case continued until Nov. 30.

William Flannigan of Milton was arraigned for non-support of his wife, Mary Flannigan, the case was continued for two weeks.

High School Debate.

President Northcott called the meeting to order. He called for the secretary's report. Mr. Wilder read the report. Under unfinished business the society voted for a secretary and a treasurer. Mr. Mudgett, '96 made up his debate and his declamation.

The entertainment included the following numbers:

1. Recitation, Miss Rothwell; a selection from Macaulay, clearly given.
2. Essay, "A ghost-story," Miss Bryant, '95; a well-written, interesting essay.
3. Recitation, "Arnold Winkelried," Miss Dora Mudgett, '96; a spirited martial selection, given with good effect.
4. Essay, "My Dreams," Miss Ellen M. Greany, '95; an unusually thoughtful essay.
5. Declamation, Mr. Marnock, '96; a standard selection.
6. Essay, "The story of an old apple tree," Miss Cashman, '95; an entertaining account of events connected with the life and growth of an old apple tree.

The debate followed: "Resolved, that the South had no Right to Secede."

Affirmative—Miss Bassett, Miss Bates, Miss Bemis, Miss Bryan, Miss Bryant, Miss Cashman, Miss Coyle, Miss Dinnie all of '95.

Negative—Miss Flood, Miss Greany, Miss Haley, Miss Jones, Miss Leary, Miss Lowe, Miss Keating, Miss McGovern all of '95.

The debate was an excellent one. Many strong arguments were advanced. When the debate was opened to the society, Miss Bates, Miss Greany and Miss Lowe spoke. Miss Greany spoke very effectively. From lack of time the debate was postponed.

Handsome Monument.

There are many pretty monuments in Mt. Wollaston cemetery but one would have to look far and wide to find a more handsome sarcophagus monument than that erected last week, to the memory of David B. Stetson, who was one of Quincy's pioneer business men, by his children. The monument was cut by Swithin Bros., which is in itself enough to warrant its being well done. The monument is located in the family lot and is of the best blue Quincy granite.

The bottom base is of 12 cut work and is 3-4x5-4.

The second base is polished on four sides and on the front is the name Stetson in raised polished letters over which is carved an oak branch. Upon the back of the base is the name Studley which is cut in the same manner as that upon the front.

The die is polished on four sides and at each corner is a carved column and capital highly polished. A continuous vine of ivy leaf also extends around the die. On the front and side are cut the inscriptions.

The cap is also polished on the four sides and on the front is the old English letter S with an ivy branch interwoven about it. An ivy branch is also carved on the sides.

The whole is surmounted by an urn with polished dentals and handles on each side.

On each corner of the lot is a post with a polished top on which is cut the old English letter S.

As noted above, the monument is very handsome and reflects great credit upon Swithin Bros. as well as upon the family of Mr. Stetson.

Polished Chips.

[From the Producer and Builder.]

The Braintree Red Granite Company is the style of a new corporation succeeding the Braintree Granite Company. The company is organized with an authorized capital of $50,000.

Thomas F. Burke & Bro., have recently shipped several large monuments among them a sarcophagus job with bottom base eight feet by five feet and four inches with ten inch polished columns, carved caps and polished die. The completed memorial weighed thirty-two tons. This firm have several winter orders on hand.

Alphonse Reinhalter intends selling or leasing his cutting shed and if successful will devote his entire attention to quarrying.

Biganess, LeClair & Co., have secured the granite work contract on the "refectory" building now in process of construction at Franklin Park, Boston. Their bid was about $4,000.

The Mitchell Granite Co. have considerable winter work on hand and report a larger volume of business than at the corresponding season last year.

E. F. Carr & Co. will finish work upon all except two of the Chicamauga battle field monuments by the first of December. The remaining memorials cannot be completed and ready for setting until spring. This firm have secured an order for the pedestal of Quincy granite on which the De Puyster statue is to stand. This job is to be all polished with a bottom base eight feet six inches by seven feet seven inches. It will weigh completed about twenty-five tons. This statue is to be located somewhere within the limits of New York city, the exact site has not been definitely determined.

Quincy Cycle Club.

The rooms have been newly papered and painted and with the new location which is very convenient for all, makes the rooms more attractive.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief, It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF
REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Louis D. Boisclair and Elizabeth Boisclair, wife of the said Louis D. Boisclair, in her own right, to Adoniram Burrell, dated March 18, A. D., 1891, and recorded with the Norfolk Deeds, libro 651, folio 242, will be sold at Public Auction for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, upon the premises set forth in said mortgage and hereinafter described, on MONDAY, the 17th day of December, A. D., 1894, at eleven-thirty o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:

A certain parcel of land situated in that part of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, called Atlantic, on the easterly side of Squantum street, being the southerly half of lot B, as shown on a plan of this and adjoining lands recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 527, folio 257, and said parcel is bounded and described as follows, viz: Westerly by said Squantum street, twenty-eight and 15-100 (28.15) feet; northerly by the northerly half of said lot B, by a line drawn from the middle point of the westerly boundary of said lot B to the middle point of the easterly boundary of said lot B, as shown on said plan, about one hundred and twelve (112) feet; easterly by lot C, as shown on said plan, twenty-nine and 15-100 (29.15) feet, and southerly by land now or formerly of heirs of George B. Billings, one hundred and eleven and 88-100 (111.88) feet. Said premises are subject to a prior mortgage of $[illegible], recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 580, folio 154.

Also another certain parcel of land in that part of said Quincy called Atlantic, comprising a part of lot numbered thirty-nine (39) on a plan entitled "Plan of House Lots at Atlantic Station, North Quincy," drawn by L. Briggs & Co., surveyors, April, 1871, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, No. 199. Said parcel is bounded and described as follows, viz.:

Beginning at a point on the easterly side of Squantum street, distant twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet, northerly from the southwesterly corner of said premises; thence running northerly on said Squantum street, twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet to land now or formerly of C. E. Swett; thence turning and running easterly by land now or formerly of said Swett, one hundred and ten (110) feet to land now or formerly of John Wakely; thence turning and running southerly on land now or formerly of said John Wakely, twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet to land now or formerly of said Burrell, about one hundred and eleven (111) feet to the point of beginning. Said premises are subject to a prior mortgage of $800, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 576, Fol. 103. Being the same premises conveyed to Elizabeth Boisclair by Adoniram Burrell, by deed dated March 18, 1891, and recorded in said deeds. Said premises will be sold subject to any and all unpaid taxes and assessments. $100 will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

ADONIRAM BURRELL, Mortgagee,
and present owner of said mortgage.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. Archer, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach."
Carlos Martyn, D. D.,
New York City.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Eructation, Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion,
Without injurious medication.

"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results."
Edwin F. Pardee, M. D.,
125th Street and 7th Ave., New York City.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, NOV. 24, 1894.

For the Patriot.

Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving! yes, that joyous day
  Comes once again to make us blest;
The world has changed its autumn gown,
  In winter's shroud it sinks to rest.

O sun! beam brightly o'er the earth!
  And wind, blow softly lest you should
Awake some half forgotten dream
  Of wayward son or womenhood.

O, let Thanksgiving day be blest
  With God's own wondrous love and care,
Let voices soften and rejoice
  As to the sky they drift in prayer.

Let families united be
  And happiness o'ercome their fears,
And sorrow flee from pleasure's cry,
  While welcomes take the place of tears.

As fathers look upon their sons,
  And mothers smile with secret pride
At daughter's grace and girlish charms,
  The mutual joy is hard to hide.

Then blessings on this day of thanks
  That dawned our father's fathers o'er,
And may it be a worthy one
  To bid good-by to ninety-four.

Ruth Bassett.

November's Feast Day.

Welcome, thou grand old feast day!
  Again the russet fields
Lie idle in the soft, gray light,
  Shorn of their splendid yields;
Again the lanes have glimmered
  With farewell Goldenrod,
And Gentian fringes closed above
  The tinted olive sod.

But thou, O grand old feast day,
  Thou hast no need of these
To draw us to thee. Though thou bring
  Gray skies and leafless trees—
A hundred welcomes to thee!
  Ye altar fires of home,
Shine out—and kindred gather
  From sea to mountain dome!

So hail thee, grand old feast day!
  The wind-swept orchard boughs
Have flung their ruddy gold and green
  Upon the earth; the mows
Are rich with grain: the furrows
  Sleep 'neath the sun's veiled ray—
And all the land is glad, and greets
  A new Thanksgiving day!

Helen Chase.

Notes and Comments.

—Portland, Me., is the winter port for all Canada, which sends out and receives over $50,000,000 worth of goods every winter.

—Chicagoans per capita are not as well policed as Londoners, the police in Chicago numbering only 2,726 for 1,600,000 people against London's 13,814 for 5,000,000 population.

—The New England Artists have issued unique invitations to the press generally to be present at a private view of paintings by the club Nov. 20-26 at Jordan's Art Gallery, Jordan, March & Co.'s, Boston.

—It is stated that a glass factory in Liverpool has glass journal boxes for all its machinery, glass shingles on the roof, a glass floor and a chimney 105 feet high, built entirely of bricks, each a foot square.

—East Weymouth is ambitious to become a township by itself. If it succeeds the Mansfield News hopes it will change its name. It is no wonder strangers get mentally mixed in trying to designate a Weymouth village. There are four or five of them.

—Charles Wilfred Mowbray, the English Anarchist, who came to this country last summer, and, after a few weeks departed suddenly and quietly, has returned to this country to stay. He will tour the country "lecturing."

—The new red postage stamp is a failure. The paper is thin, the color runs and the whole thing is so weak that it will scarcely adhere when affixed to a letter. There does not seem to be starch enough left in the Cleveland administration to make a postage stamp stick.—Wakefield Banner.

—The next great telescope, it is said, will be a reflector instead of a refractor, and will have a ten-foot mirror. This, it is expected, will bring Mars down where we we can shake hands with its inhabitants The plans are already drawn for the big machine, which will consume four years' time and $150,000 in construction.

—The famous New York Central locomotive 999, with Engineer Mink, drew the private car Traveller from Fonda to Amsterdam, a distance of eleven miles in nine minutes, and from Amsterdam to Schenectady, sixteen miles, in twelve minutes. By and by they'll get these things where bicycles will have to hustle to keep up with them!

—The Boston School Board has voted to allow a corporation the privilege of serving five and ten cent lunches at the High school buildings of that city. The New England Kitchen, where wholesome food of standard quality is prepared, is given the privilege. The school being in session from 9 o'clock until 2 o'clock, the committee recognize the need of a simple lunch near the noon hour.

—The court have done a good thing in jailing the officials of the Old Colony rail road who excited the riot at North Abington last summer. Their friends are beseiging the State House for a pardon, arguing that they were not to blame, as they were advised to make the fight by the counsel for the road. If that is the case, the counsel ought to be included in the lot now in jail. It has come to a pretty pass if men of education and standing suppose that they will be excused to commit crime if they are told by a lawyer to do it.—Somerville Citizen.

The City Council.

Thirteen Councilmen answered the roll call at the meeting of the Quincy City Council Monday evening. Councilman Adams came in later, but soon left and also Councilmen McKeon and Lennon. The only ones in attendance at the whole meeting were Councilmen Babcock, Baker, Bass, Bigelow, Clark, Holden, Johnson, Moxon, Shackley, Snow and Waterhouse.

Transfers.

Mayor Hodges asked for transfer of $200 from appropriation for enforcement of liquor laws to appropriation for special police.

Also $100 from same appropriation to Police Station.

Orders were subsequently introduced and referred.

Petition.

Mary Carty petitioned for increase of State aid. Referred.

Reports.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported an order appropriating $3,600 for land for school house at Norfolk Downs and $3,000 for land for school house at corner of Willard and Robertson streets. Read and referred.

The Committee on Lights reported an order authorizing the Mayor to petition the Legislature for authority to establish a gas and electric plant. Adopted.

The Committee on Streets recommended $300 for improvement of Copeland street, To Committee on Finance.

The same committee reported an order for the laying out of Goddard street, which took its first reading.

The same committee reported an order for a hearing on the relocation of a portion of Quarry street. Adopted.

The same committee reported an order laying out Clive street, which took its first reading.

The same committee reported an order for the extension of Walker street at Atlantic, and awarding damages to the amount of $2800. Read and referred.

The Committee on Finance reported an order for transfers in the school department as asked. Ordered to second reading.

The same committee reported an order for transfer of $200 from enforcement of liquor laws to removal of snow. Ordered to second reading.

A Clever Lawyer's Reply.

Twenty years ago Chief Justice Fuller was practising before Judge McArthur in Chicago. In his speech before the judge he pleaded his client's ignorance of the law in extenuation of an offense he had committed. The judge said, "Every man is presumed to know the law, Mr. Fuller."

"I am aware of that, your honor," responded Mr. Fuller. "Every shoemaker, tailor, mechanic and illiterate laborer is presumed to know the law. Yes, every man is presumed to know it, except judges of the supreme court, and we have a court of appeals to correct their mistakes."—New York Advertiser.

—The recent political landslide was widespread and overwhelming, but Iowa seems to have carried off the palm. In one township in that state the Republicans even elected a dead man to office. The candidate died after the ballots had been printed, but he came in on the tidal wave with the balance of the ticket. There would seem to be no doubt of Republican supremacy in Iowa, when such a result is possible.

J. R. Orcutt of North Weymouth filed his schedules in the insolvency court at Dedham on Wednesdaay. His liabilities are 4,283.70, and he offers 10 cents on a dollar, payable in ten days after the court confirms the offer.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

A parrot who lived on the Back Bay insisted upon talking the other day when her master, a rather choleric old gentleman, wanted to have a nap.

At last, very much out of temper, he took Polly out of her cage, and gave her a vigorous shaking, putting her back, saying, "Now, keep still, will you?

For a moment there was a silence; then Polly broke out in a shrill voice with, "Whew, how the wind blows!"

Social Problems.

The Quincy Literary Society held its weekly meeting in Doble's hall on the evening of Nov. 16, the president Dr. R. McLennan in the chair.

The regular business scheduled on the syllabus was of a reading nature, but as one of the important contributions to "the Magazine" had been crowded out the previous week, it was decided to make it the principal feature of the evening.

The paper, which was entitled "Social Problems" offered infinite scope for discussion. Without attempting to minutely consider any of the social questions touched upon, the writer condenses an enormous amount of material into small compass.

The effect of trade unionism upon labor difficulties, the relative merits of socialists and anarchistic tendencies, free trade or protection, the immigration outlook, the ethical tenets of political economy, were all more or less effectively treated.

The history of all labor troubles has proved, it said, that political economists have done nothing for the working class except through the formula of the heartless law of supply and demand. Before the passage of extreme protection, we had no idea that our neighbors were enemies but only a part of the present collective system. Witness however the petition sent around lately to prevent stone being taken from Braintree to decorate our High school, and the still more recent illustration in New York, where a law has been passed providing that all stone cutting destined for public buildings must be done within its own borders. In both cases the same pleas and arguments are used for the protection of home industries that are urged between nations, and yet from an industrial standpoint, the result is detrimental alike to the imposers and to those against whom the law is directed.

The art of making yourself rich in the ordinary mercantile economists sense, is the art of keeping your neighbor poor. The true meaning of political economy is the balance of justice. Labor has no right to demand more than a business can pay, neither is it right for an employer to pay less than what is just.

The doctrine of socialism is very plausible, and its exponents claim it to be the only solution to the labor problem. If it were possible to carry its theories into practice it might cure some of the present evils, but it would at the same time create entirely new ones. If the great labor problem is ever to be settled, it will have to be by methods that appeal to man's reason, and which are guided by moral principle and humanity.

In the discussion that succeeded the reading of the paper, the sentiment was almost general that the writer had opened up subjects of such a variety, that adequate treatment was impossible. Any single one of the themes touched, would have itself formed the text for a complete evening's discussion.

Notwithstanding its illimitable scope, however, the interest centred itself around one or two of the points suggested. Among the numerous "isms" commended and condemned in turn by the various speakers, there was a common position realized by all; that economical problems demand earnest and conscientious study. That no school of political philosophy or science has such a monopoly of virtue that its conclusions are self evident truisms. It was felt that out of the chaos of ideas now entertained, truth would eventually overcome error. That order would finally supercede disorder, and a reign of law be established wholly founded upon the eternal principles of justice and morality.

This Friday night an essay upon the "Lights and shadows of modern civilization," will be given by Mr. Archibald A. Grassick.

The Boston Stage.

Castle Square Theatre

An audience of unexpected numbers gathered at the Castle Square Threatre Monday night. The number was unexpected by the management, and the sidewalk was crowded till many minutes after the play had begun, the usual entrance being inadequate to admit the public promptly. The beauty and novelty of the house, the merits of the performance and the promised souvenir with floral accompaniment will serve to keep the house full eight times a week for some time to come.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Monday evening Nov. 26 promises to be a notable night at the Bowdoin Square Theatre for the performance on that date will be in the form of a testimonial to Jack Mason. Many times during the phenomenal run of "The Cotton King" have Managers Atkinson & Brady been in receipt of letters suggesting a testimonial to Mr. John Mason.

Boston Theatre.

Thousands and tens of thousands of delighted theatre goers who have witnessed "In Old Kentucky" at the Boston Theatre, have placed their stamp of approval upon the production, as the greatest and most effective melodrama of modern times. Notwithstanding that "In Old Kentucky" has entered on the second month of its run at the Boston Theatre, there is no indication of any diminution of patronage. Night after night the big play house is crowded to the doors, and late comers oftentimes find standing room only.

Sousa's Grand Concerts.

Sousa's great band is to be heard in Boston but three times more this season. He will outdo himself next Sunday at the Boston Theatre, when he will give concerts both in the afternoon and in the evening. The Sunday afternoon concert at 2 o'clock is given in response to a very general request from persons living outside of Boston, who want to hear the great band, but who are unable, many of them, to reach their homes after the evening concert. On Thanksgiving Eve, Wednesday Nov. 28, it will assist at the big concert and ball at the Mechanic's Building, Boston, which is to be the big event of the season.

Columbia Theatre.

The last week of "Sowing the Wind" will begin at the Columbia, November 26, and it will be a matter of deep regret to the Boston public that it has been impossible to extend the engagement of this remarkable play any longer. The history of its run in Boston has been one of uninterrupted success. There is no doubt but that "Sowing the Wind" might have remained here for the entire season, and, in fact, efforts were made to have this accomplished but contracts have been made for its appearance in other cities, and it was found impossible to induce the managers to give them up, so it was found absolutely necessary to fix the date of the withdrawal with the two performances that will occur on December 1.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The second and last week of Mr. E. H. Sothern's engagement at the Hollis will begin on November 26, and like the first and preceding week of his stay, will be signalized by the production of a new play entitled "A Way to Win a Woman." It will be recollected that last season, while Mr. Sothern was at the Hollis, on the last Saturday night of his engagement he gave this play its first production, and those who were fortunate enough to witness it enjoyed a rare treat. It is a strong play, and presents Mr. Sothern in a more serious part than any in which he had hitherto been seen. Its success was instantaneous, and it was given in other cities during the balance of his tour, as well as during his season that has recently closed at the Lyceum Theatre, New York, where the judgment of the critics of this city was indorsed.

Washington Monument.

The New England Magazine for November illustrates the grand equestrian monument to Washington which stands in the Boston Public Garden. The pedestal is of Quincy granite and was cut by the Granite Railway Company. The New England Magazine says of it:

We owe the Washington statue to the unselfish efforts of the artists of Boston, who, in 1859, started the movement and chose the committee and signed an appeal to the public for funds. Ball had already modeled a sketch of the work, half the size of life, and this the artists approved unanimously. The statute, which has a very favorable location in the Public Garden, was erected in 1869. It cost exactly $42,442.28. Of this sum a great fair held in 1859 supplied $10,984.03; the donations of friends came to a total of $12,875; a surplus of $5,000 was contributed by the committee on the Edward Everett statue; the city appropriated $10,000; and the accrued interest on the fund amounted to $3,583.25, making the grand total over $42,000.

The dimensions of the monument are as follows: The pedestal, of Quincy granite, designed by Hammat Billings, is fifteen feet long, seven feet six inches wide, and eighteen feet high. The ends are rounding. Of the statue itself, which is bronze and which weighs one thousand pounds, the extreme length is sixteen feet, height sixteen feet, height of the figure of Washington alone twelve feet, of the plinth thirteen and one half inches; the total height of the monument is therefore about thirty-five feet.

This is the only equestrian statue in Boston. It has a grand air, and the impression that it makes is gallant and romantic. In the pose there is life enough, but it escapes the imputation of violence. The apparent relation between the horse and the man is good, in scale, movement and balance. The conception is heroic, romantic and picturesque, rather than realistic. There are some weak spots in the modelling, "holes," such as are not seen in the works of the first masters; but the whole composition, as one walks around it and surveys it from different points of view, offers so much that is spirited and attractive—if somewhat conventional—that it may fairly be classed among the four best statues in Boston, the other three being the Franklin by Greenough, the Garrison by Warner, and the Farragut by Kitson.

Ball's equestrian Washington is a lively embodiment of the idealized Pater patriæ of the school histories and the reading books,—noble, grave, remote and a trifle stilted. The horse partakes of his master's characteristics. Fully aware that he bears no ordinary rider, he may be said to lift his foot with a visible sense of historic dignity.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back.

New England Magazine for 1895.

Some important illustrated articles which will appear in early numbers are, Old Milk street, by Hamilton A. Hill; Round About Monadnock, by Dr. Edward Emerson; Horace Mann, by Frank A. Hill, Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education; Harriet Beecher Stowe, by George Willis Cooke; Sir William Pepperell and the Capture of Louisburg, Old New England Songs, Dartmouth College, The Harvard Annex, Lowell Mason, Raleigh's Lost Colony, The Part of Massachusetts Men in the Ordinance of 1787, The Boston Public Library and New England in Chicago, by Edward Ishan. The series of articles on our towns will be continued with Boscawen, by Charles Carleton Coffin and Litchfield, Connecticut. Dr. Samuel A. Green of the Massachusetts Historical Society will contribute The Several Places Called Groton, telling of the old English Groton, the home of Winthrop, and the various American Grotons. The history and antiquities of Boston will not be neglected. Many strong articles on social, political and educational subjects will be published in the coming year; and poetry and fiction will be well represented.

In short, this excellent magazine will continue to improve along the lines which its subscribers and the press of the country agree in recognizing as so important and unique.

A Positive Preventive And Sure Cure For Colics, Cramps, Diarrhœa, Malaria, Sudden Colds, Rheumatism, &c.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, after 20 years' personal use, writes as follows:
TO THE PEOPLE:
I know by personal observation that Doctor H. A. Tucker's medicine, popularly known as "No. 59," is potent and safe. It ought to be on the shelf in every nursery, and in the satchel on every journey. Going from home I always carry some of it with me, and have administered it to many who in car and steamer have been taken sick. Better smash your brandy flask and the various styles of "Bitters," which are Rum put up under enticing nomenclature, and take with you a bottle of Doctor Tucker's 59 as a pocket pistol with which to shoot down physical disorders

Household Receipts.

Fig Cake. One and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-half of a cupful of butter, the whites of four eggs, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking-powder, one cupful of milk, two and one-half cupfuls of flour. For filling, cut one dozen figs into small pieces, barely cover with water and let them come to a boil, then remove from the stove immediately. Have ready the whites of four well-beaten eggs; add to these the figs and one cupful of sugar; mix well and spread between the layers.

Thanksgiving Cake. Use six pounds of flour, three and one-half pounds each of butter and sugar, three pints of milk, six eggs, four pounds of raisins, one-half pound of citron, one ounce of mace, four nutmegs. Stir butter and sugar to a froth. Boil the milk and turn in the wine, three gills; put the curds and whey warm, but not hot, into the flour; then add the eggs well beaten, one-half pint of yeast and one-third of the beaten butter and sugar. Let it rise until very light and then add the remainder of the butter and sugar and let it rise again. When light put in the spices and fruit. Bake in a not very hot oven. Save a plateful of flour for dredging the fruit. Begin it directly after dinner. For the yeast, dissolve a compressed yeast cake in the half-pint of milk. It will make seven loaves.

Feather Cake. One tablespoonful of butter, one cupful of sugar, one cupful and a half of flour, half a cupful of milk, two eggs and a teaspoonful of baking powder, stir butter, sugar and a very little milk together then add the flour and baking powder alternately, then the eggs beaten very well. Bake forty-five minutes in a hot oven.

Filling or Icing. Half cupful of granulated sugar, half cupful of milk, a piece of butter the size of a pea; boil ten minutes. Flavor with vanilla.

Chocolate Icing. Boil together for a few minutes three cupfuls of loaf sugar and one cupful of boiling water; pour this syrup to a quarter of a pound of grated chocolate; add the whites of three eggs, beaten stiff.

Thanksgiving.

Governor Greenhalge has issued his first Thanksgiving Proclamation, which reads as follows:

In all the trials and reverses of the past year, the hand of the Lord has uplifted us and the light of His countenance has always cheered our souls. Well may the Commonwealth say: "Praise the Lord, Oh my soul, and forget not all His benefits," and well may the voice of thanksgiving rise from all her altars. Therefore, by and with the advice and consent of the council, I appoint Thursday, the 29th day of November current, as a day of solemn thanksgiving to Almighty God, our Heavenly Father. On this day let the whole commonwealth become the holy temple of the living God, wherein shall be heard the prayers, praise and thanksgiving of the people, and on that day, also, let the noble traditions of the commonwealth glow with the new life and light—let the wandering children gather again in the old homestead, and the comfort and peace of every family shall be for a sign that the Lord has watched over and preserved us.

Internal Revenue.

This enemy of our people—strong drink, with its hydra heads, is strongly intrenched. How can we meet it and conquer? We pick up a few poor, worn-out victims, and help them, but it only makes the enemy laugh in scorn. He recruits his forces from our precious families, from our splendid schools and colleges, from our Sabbath teachings and church organizations; he gets behind all our pressing necessities, and binds us, as a people, hand and foot.

For example: Our public debt is enormous; we must pay it, and consequently tax the whiskey, the brandy and the wine—for the people will have these things at any price. The tax become the principal source of income. There is, in the United States license, a grand charter of respectability. We must as a government, encourage distilleries and gin mills of every description, for they increase the public revenue. I need only hint at it; we are making of the vicious appetites of our children—appetites which indulged, will cause their temporal, if not their eternal ruin—we are making of them "ways and means" to defray our honest debts. If this is true, what have you and I got to say to the poor bartender, who simply supports his family out of the bread and clothing of a few wives and children of drunkards in his neighborhood? "My business," he may well say, "has government sanction; my object is as high as that of Uncle Sam, for it is not that I like business, but it unables me to get a private revenue."

Timely Advice.

Impetuous people are reminded that a fellow can't warm his hands by burning his fingers.

Undesirable Clothing.

There's one sort of Clothing you ought not to buy. It's the kind that bankrupts the maker—made poorly, fits badly, and not worth the money you pay, no matter how low the price.

The last thing a wise man expects is cheap fine clothes.

Your Money's Worth.

If you have made any mistakes in choosing your place to get your clothes—men's or boys'—and not quite satisfied with the fit and make, we want to ask you now to try trading with us. You can always depend on our Clothing being thoroughly well made and reliable. We trust you will find out this season how much cheaper it is for you to buy good Clothing than the ordinary kind.

Hats, Furnishings and Shoes.

Whatever your needs are from head to foot, we can supply you. We are after the trade that wants honest goods and fair prices. We want yours. Try us and see if we don't give you your money's worth.

Poetry.

"Down to Sleep."

November woods are bare and still,
  November days are clear and bright,
Each noon burns up the morning's chill,
  The morning's snow is gone by nights,
  Each day my steps grow slow, grow light,
  As through the woods I reverent creep,
  Watching all things lie "down to sleep."

I never knew before what beds,
  Fragrant to smell and soft to to touch,
The forest sifts and shapes and spreads,
  I never knew before how much
  Of human sound there is, such
  Low tones as through the forest sweep,
  When all wild things lie "down to sleep."

Each day I find new coverlids
  Tucked in, and more sweet eyes shut tight:
Sometimes the viewless mother bids
  Her ferns kneel down full in my sight.
  I hear their chorus of "good night,"
  And half I smile and half I weep,
  Listening while they lie "down to sleep."

November woods are bare and still,
  November days are bright and good,
Life's neon burns up life's morning chill.
  Life's night rests feet that long have stood
  Some warm, soft bed in field or wood
  The mother will not fail to keep
  Where we can "lay us down to sleep."

HELEN HUNT JACKSON.

Miscellany.

Cupid in a Ginger Jar.

It was a very pretty ginger jar, and came from China, nobody knows how many years ago, for Kitty's aunt had owned it herself more than fifty years, and it was long before that that the ginger had gone to furnish forth some well-set table. It had wonderful blue rocks, and houses, and trees, done with a few lines apiece on a white ground, and there was a wild-looking fisherman bent as if the wind were blowing him, pulling hard at a pole.

"It is too, too beautiful!" exclaimed Kitty, clapping her hands, when she found it in a cupboard. Her tall, prim Aunt Lucretia smiled upon her; she was very lenient towards Kitty's girlish enthusiasms, for was she not her dead brother's only child, and had she not just graduated from that distant boarding-school and come home to her, to be the light of her life and the joy of her heart? She was ready to lay herself and everything in the little old house at the young girl's feet, if she would only be happy there.

"You see, Aunty," Kitty went on, "ever so many of the girls at Mrs. Granger's had old bits of china that their great-aunts or grandmothers had given them, and they were just as proud! When they knew I was coming here to you, they said I would be sure to find beautiful things in the garret and the closets. So won't you please give me the ginger jar? It will be a beginning."

"Of course I will," said Aunt Lucretia, with a pleased flutter of her gray curls, "and, if you see anything else you want, just take it."

And so it happened that when Hector Maynard came home from college, and among his earliest visits went as was his wont to inquire after the health of his mother's old friend, Miss Lucretia Holt, he saw, as he went up the steps, in the eastern window, a graceful head bent over a book. Was it a young girl or only a lovely, blushing vision! for before he let the knocker fall she had vanished, and when Miss Lucretia took him into the sitting-room it was as lonely as he had always known it, except that in the window seat lay "Lorna Doone" half open, and on the table was a blue and white ginger jar full of daisies.

"Have you company this summer, Miss Lucretia?" he asked, boldly.

"Not company," she answered with happy pride. "But my niece Kitty has finished her education and come to live with me."

And then she called Kitty, who presently came in, in a very proper little pink indeed, shook hands politely with young Mr. Maynard, and then sat down in the stiffest chair in the room, and glanced longingly at "Lorna Doone."

But Hector's bright, sympathetic glances and his most natural turning of the conversation upon croquet, boating, and picnics soon roused her to smiles and pretty eagerness, and when at last he took his leave they both felt that life in this little old-fashioned town was going to be unexpectedly pleasant this particular summer.

From that time on Kitty's ginger jar became a signal of whatever was transpiring in Mrs. Maynard's garden. At first the flowers came in as often by the window as the door, and some of the watchful neighbors began to interest themselves in the progress of the pretty drama going on before their eyes, the actors being wholly unconscious of such supervision; but one dreadful morning a little scamp of a boy ran by and shouted "Spoons!" just as Hector tapped on the window pane with a stem of white lilies. This was the beginning of a little consciousness and constraint between the two, and it did not help matters any when Miss Lucretia said uneasily to Kitty that she hoped folks wouldn't talk about Hector Maynard's calling so often. Perhaps Hector's mother dropped a word to him also, for after that he came less frequently, and when he did come there was a change, something of the old gaiety was gone.

Fanny Maynard was one of Kitty's girl-friends, and she now ran in quite often of a morning, bringing flowers, instead of Hector. She would lay them down quite simply, saying, "Hector gave me these for you," and then go on talking about worsted work or what not, as calmly as if Kitty's face were not in a sudden flame and her heart beating high, as she touched the flowers Hector had touched, and arranged them carefully in the blue and white jar.

But one day Fanny came in full of excitement.

"I have something to tell you!" she exclaimed. "A lady has come here to give painting lessons, and oh! you ought to see her beautiful pictures! She wants a class of ten, I am going to join, and you must too!"

Of course Kitty wanted to join. She was longing for something new to do. It was just the thing to take up this idle, lovely summer. Aunt Lucretia was more than willing, the two girls quickly gathered allies, and the lessons commenced.

The class was a zealous one. Unlimited orders were sent to the city for tubes of paint, brushes, palettes, plaques, panels, and canvases. The teacher, a patient, well-trained artist, had much to endure from unskilful fingers and misdirected energy, but at last all was in running order, and when Kitty after a few days brought home a plaque of pink apple blossoms against a delicate blue sky, Miss Lucretia felt that a genius had arisen in the family. This was followed by a branch of dogwood flowers on a panel, and after that Kitty grew strong and declared she would no longer make copies, she would paint from nature.

"How dare you think of such a thing?" exclaimed Fanny, who handled a brush with nervous timidity.

"Oh, I want to be gathering all the flowers I love on canvas," said Kitty, "I want them to bloom forever on my walls. I love their shapes, their colors their lights and shades. I want to paint them just as I see them!"

The teacher encouraged her, and Kitty decided that the ginger jar should go into her first study from nature. And now the question was with what flowers to fill it.

"I would take daffodils, if they were not gone by," said Kitty, or chrysanthemums, but they have not come yet. Perhaps I shall choose the scarlet poppies."

But the next morning when she carried her jar to the studio, Hector met her at the door with a basketful of nasturtiums, blossoms and buds in a riot of luxuriance, running through every tint and shade of yellow from the most delicate lemon to the richest, darkest brown.

"Oh, they are beautiful as a dream!" she exclaimed. "And I had never once thought of them! What a mistake it would have been to choose any other flower that grows."

"I will bring you fresh ones every day till your picture is done," said Hector.

"You are too generous. I think these will keep for several days." But Kitty blushed and smiled as she made her polite little protest.

Meanwhile the picture progressed, the jar stood there as natural as life, and the nasturtiums bloomed out above it one by one, in an exquisite grouping. But while it was more facinating to paint from nature it was also more difficult, and it was some days before Kitty could announce triumphantly:—

"My painting will be done tomorrow!"

She was late at the studio that last morning. A letter from a former schoolmate had delayed her, so in consequence she had to work a little later, and the other girls had all gone when she rose at last to clean her brushes, put away her paints and get ready to go home. Suddenly she heard Fanny's voice.

"Kitty, may Hector come in to see your work?"

"Why, certainly! Miss Moore can't object, for she is gone and left me to lock up."

So Hector came in, and looked and admired to the satisfaction of both girls. Then he said, laughingly:—

"I see why your picture is so perfect. You have transferred the flowers themselves to the canvas, for there is not one in the jar!"

"Oh!" said Kitty, "I hope you don't mind. I gave the last to Miss Moore, she likes them so much."

"That's right. Now, if you won't trust me with the painting, let me help you to the extent of carrying the jar."

Diplomatic youth! He was planning to get it in his hands, for, because he was twenty instead of thirty, he inclined to trust in its recesses a billet-doux he had written, instead of handing it openly to Kitty at once.

"But why were you so late today?" Fanny asked.

"Oh, I have not told you my news!" exclaimed Kitty. "Vivia is coming, coming this very afternoon at five. She was my room-mate at Mrs. Granger's school, you know. She promised me a visit, but she goes to so many gay places I did not think she would get here. I stopped to read the letter and tell Aunt Lucretia. You don't know how glad I am to think of seeing Vivia!"

And so all the way home she could talk of nothing but Vivia, till they reached the house, she saw the windows open and Miss Lucretia moving briskly about with her gray curls carefully hidden under an old silk veil.

"There, Aunty is dusting!" she said, "and I can't ask you to come in. But I am so much obliged to you, Mr. Maynard, for bringing my jar. I can take it now."

She managed to hold it while she nodded good-bye, and then as she entered the house was glad to let her aunt take it and set it up on a shelf in the closet away from the dust. After that they both went into the parlor, where Kitty set her canvas of nasturtiums on the low mantelpiece, and looked at it in happy triumph. As for Miss Lucretia, but for the second commandment, she would have bowed down before it and worshipped it. It was more than beautiful, it was a wonder, a perfection, and her own little Kitty had done it!

It was well that she took a few moments to admire it then, for she had no time to think of works of art again for the next three weeks, the length of Vivia March's visit.

"What a dear little dovecote of a house!" was Vivia's first exclamation, on her arrival; but it seemed more like an oriole's nest after she began to inhabit it, with her splendid young beauty, her gay voice of song, and her spirit of unrest. If she could not be at Saratoga or at Newport, then this quiet place must become her Saratoga and her Newport for the nonce. People called who never before had stepped into Miss Holt's house. The young scions of gay families, who had hitherto regarded her as a plain old gentlewoman "quite out of society," now came to her door, some of them bearing letters of introduction sent them from the city with instructions to call upon Miss March, and these in their turn introducing others, until the little house, as Miss Lucretia said, "hummed like a beehive."

Then came invitations to parties, picnics, to sail, to ride, and wherever Vivia chose to go, her little hostess Kitty drifted along with her like a rose leaf on the tide.

The second week of Vivia's visit, Fanny running in for a moment one day, explained that Hector had gone to spend some time with cousins in another state. He had called twice since Vivia came, but his manner was quiet and constrained. Hector missed the ginger jar, for the only words he said to Kitty in particular were:—

"Have you discarded, then, your blue and white jar forever?"

"I do not use it now," she answered softly, meaning him to understand that she kept that for his flowers only, and if he did not so understand her, how was she, a shy girl, to explain.

In very truth she had left the jar hidden away on its topmost shelf, because it was to her so associated with Hector's flowers. She loved Vivia, and everything else of hers Vivia might have and use, only not the blue and white jar. That should be untouched until Hector brought flowers again. Meanwhile she had very little time to think about it, living in such a whirl.

"You'll keep spinning as long as I am here," said Vivia, seizing her for a waltz around the room.

The third week Hector came back. He met them on the street with a grave pleasant greeting, and afterward called with his sister Fanny.

"Now there," said Vivia, when they had gone, "is a man whom I cannot move. He must be your true knight, Kitty."

Kitty blushed.

"I am sure of it," Vivia went on, "but there doesn't seem to be that happy understanding I like to see between two so plainly made for each other. What is the trouble, pet? Have you made a mistake and refused him?"

"No, indeed!" said Kitty, turning her face away.

Two days latter, when Vivia's letters were brought to her, there was one she laid apart to be read last of all, and when she came to it she read it twice, with a softened splendor in her dark eyes.

"I am going home tomorrow noon, Kitty," she said, "a friend of mine, Mr. Lawrence—you have heard me speak of him,—will arrive in the morning, and be my escort."

He came even earlier than was expected. The girls were standing in the little front porch, when turned the corner and walked rapidly towards them. When Kitty saw his stately, noble figure, and the glance of his kind, true eyes, she felt, as she said afterwards to Vivia upstairs, "He is the one in a thousand."

"So he is, dear, and too good for me!" said Vivia, kissing her. "I was like a butterfly that didn't want to be caught, but the net is over me now, and Kitty, I am perfectly happy. I hope you will be just as happy, too, before long, dear, and when you are you must write me all about it."

One day Hector Maynard plucked a handful of sweet peas and mignonette and sent them by his sister, who agreed to leave them at the door on the way to her music room. Ten minutes later he followed them. Kitty met him at the door and took him into the little sitting room. The closet door was open and a chair stood before it.

"I was just climbing up to get my ginger jar when you rang the bell," she exclaimed, with a flitting blush.

"Permit me," he said, reaching easily to the shelf and taking down the jar, into which he hastily glanced.

"Oh, thank you! Now I will bring some water and put the flowers in before they fade."

"Are you sure the jar is empty?" he asked, with a queer little smile.

She gave a startled look into its depths, took out the note which had lain there hidden for weeks, opened it in bewilderment, and when she had caught its meaning, turned toward him.

"Oh, Hector!" she exclaimed.

And in the happy explanation which followed, the sweet peas might have lain on the table until they perished, if Aunt Lucretia had not passed through the room and carried them off to put in water herself.—Mary L. B. Branch, in the Portland Transcript.

The Value of Mirth.

The apostle of comeliness should never forget that mirth is beautifying. No end of women possess what is termed "gas beauty"—that is, they are plain enough on ordinary occasions and at staid afternoon functions, but at midnight, under the blaze of candelabra and gas-jets, they become radiant, metamorphosed beings. It is not altogether the glitter of jewels, the cloudy tulles, the shimmer of silks, and the inundation of light that transform them. It is something more subtle. It is the idea of unalloyed gayety, suggested by the lively strains of music, the fragrance of flowers, and the festive air generally, that inspire these chameleonlike women with a lightheartedness that causes their faces to become enwreathed in smiles, and their very eyes to dance with high spirits. The demisemi smile that gives a twitch to the mouth but does not creep up to the eye is a poor affair by comparison.

Many women are very much like those betwitching modern lamps dressed in their pretty modish shades, that possess in the daytime a cold, unalluring, even insignificant beauty, but when the flame is kindled, when the unrestrained smile burst forth, a transformation takes place.

A spontaneous smile lifts every line of the face. It might almost be called the elixir of youth. The play of the facial muscles that comes from hearty, frequent laughter restores freshness and tone to the flesh of the face. It is, indeed, a sort of poetic massage. The laughter should be the laughter of artlessness, however; it should spring from the childlike side of one's nature. It is the happy laugh of animal content of little children rejoicing in the song of birds, fresh air, blue sky, and a sense of gladness in mere existence, this is all beautifying.—Harper's Bazar.

Night Air.

An extraordinary fallacy is the dread of night air. What air can we breathe at night but night air? The choice is between pure night air from without and foul air from within. Most people prefer the latter—an unaccountable choice. What will they say if it is proved to be true that fully one-half of all the diseases we suffer from are occasioned by people sleeping with windows shut? An open window, most nights in the year, can never hurt any one. In great cities night air is often the best and purest to be had in twenty-four hours. I could better understand shutting the windows in town during the day than during the night, for the sake of the sick. The absence of smoke, the quiet, all tend to make night the best time for airing the patient. One of our highest medical authorities on consumption and climate has told me that the air of London is never so good as after ten o'clock at night. Always air your room, then, from the outside air if possible. Windows are made to open, doors are made to shut—a truth which seems extremely difficult to apprehension. Every room must be aired from without, every passage from within.—Sanitary World.

Reminiscences of Milton.

We copy the following reminiscences of Milton from an interesting article in the Dedham Transcript, written by Milton M. Fisher of Medway: "The town of Milton, whose Indian name was "Unquety," had a white man's house as early as 1636, and a ferry over the Neponset, to get to it, via Dorchester, in 1638, but was not made a town until 1662, when thirty families were considered sufficient to maintain a separate career. Six other towns in the county had a previous corporate existence, and all show in their early roads the marks of the Indian trail, the footprints of the cows, and the sober tramp of Pilgrim feet. Pleasant street still shows the sharp angles of early travel to reach some settler's humble dwelling, or to avoid a rock, hill or other obstacle, too great to be overcome by slender means.

The county map discloses the fact that Milton has proportionally greater length of straight and broad highways leading to Boston, and in part constructed by private corporations, than any other town in the county.

Milton is also distinguished as the residence of men notable in its early and later history. It was the summer residence of Gov. Hutchinson, the author of the first history of Massachusetts Bay and the last Royal Governor, but one, of the Colony, being succeeded by Gov. Gage, who was also obnoxious to the Colony. The early patriotism of the town is shown in a series of declarations against British tyranny, surpassed only by the later declaration of Independence. The names of Vose, Tucke, Wadsworth and many others are still found in this ancient town.

Both natural and social attractions combined have drawn within 60 years many men of culture and wealth to the town, as may be seen in its records of citizens, and especially as taxpayers. In 1850 it was the 14th in population of the towns in the county, having 2656, and was the sixth in valuation,—$1,733,127; in 1890 the eighth in population, 4278, and in 1892 the second in valuation, $16,737,122, Brookline only exceeding it. The town, with such a valuation and a tax rate of $7.50 per $1000 must be a paradise for men of wealth and culture.

In natural scenery Milton surpasses any town in eastern Massachusetts, in having the highest elevation in the Blue Hills,—710 feet, with the grand outlook upon a city and suburban population of half a million, with the gilded dome of the State House, church spires without number, the harbors of ships, and the broad Atlantic, with whitened sails, as far as the eye or telescope can reach. It has been a marvel of wonder to the writer ever since he spent six months under the south declivity of the Great Hill, in early manhood, that improved access to its summit had not been secured at an earlier period. The town has long been distinguished for two great and very successful industries. Here paper making was first established in New England in 1728, and exclusive patent granted by the General Court, was given to protect the business to a corporation of five persons for 10 years for this purpose. Free trade doctrines were not as popular in Milton or New England then as now in this and some other localities. The cocoa and chocolate industry, established by Walter Baker & Co. in 1780, is the oldest and largest of its kind on the continent. It is situated on both sides of the Neponset river, in Milton and Boston. This industry has received the fostering care of the national government. Its products have brought cheer and comfort to the rich and poor alike, and to labor, capital and skill a fair compensation for more than a century."

Do Not Delay.

It has been preached to us, and we have heard it from the lips of sages, that all haste is vulgar, and this is undoubtedly true. And yet there is something that might be called taking time by the forelock, which is not haste, which allows one plenty time, and which really the essence of good sense. Most people do not begin to think of buying their Christmas gifts until the month of December is reached and the very air itself is full of the Christmas feeling, and it almost goes without saying the stores are full of eager Christmas buyers. If you had been wise most of your presents would have been bought during October and November, when the pretty things were all fresh, the crowd about them was not great, and you had ample time to choose just what you wanted without getting flurried. But if you have not been wise, then there only remains to you to make the best of the time before you.

The real secret of holiday shopping consists not only in knowing what and how to buy, but in buying with a generous heart. Do not lower yourself by buying Christmas gifts under compulsion, and do not be mean enough to buy for somebody else with the hope of getting something in return. Christmas is essentially the time of giving; with the little present there must be an outpour of love and good will, else it will prove of no worth whatever, and unless you can give this good will, unless your present speaks of the inspiration of love; it will be of no value. Give because you love the person to whom you are giving, give out the generosity of your heart and because eighteen hundred and ninety-two years ago there was given to all mankind a Glorious Gift of which yours is in remembrance.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Nothing is Wasted in Paris.

Even the smallest scrap of paper, that which everyone throws away, here becomes a source of profit. Old provision tins, for instance, are full of money; the lead soldering is removed and melted down into cakes, while the tin goes to make children's toys. Old boots, however bad, always contain in the arch of the foot at least one sound piece that will serve again, and generally there are two or three others in the sole, the heel, and at the back. Scraps of paper go to the cardboard factory, orange peel to the marmalade maker, and so on. The ideas suggested are not always agreeable, and to see a rag-picker fishing orange peel out of the basket is enough to make one forswear marmalade; but there is worse than that. The most valuable refuse—that which fetches two francs the kilo—is hair; the long goes to the hair dresser, while the short is used, among other things, for clarifying oils.—Scientific American.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, DEC. 1, 1894.

School Committee.

The school board held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening, Messrs Crane, Burns, Gordon, Gurney and Harlow being present.

The following unexpended balances were reported :

Salaries,	$5,850 83
Fuel,	3 29
Janitors,	402 72
Transportation,	107 50
Miscellaneous,	1,776 96
Evening Drawing School,	485 68
Evening Common School,	861 60
Sewing,	50 25
Cooking,	100 00

Messrs. Harlow, Gordon and Sheahan were appointed a committee to prepare the annual report of the board.

The matter of diphtheria then came up for consideration.

Dr. Gordon in speaking of the disease said : "If the board takes proper precaution to prevent the re-entering of pupils from houses where the disease has been, until all danger of contagion is passed there would be no need of closing the schools. The disease usually shows itself in three days after exposure and in a week the liability of the disease to spread and of our having an epidemic will be known."

The board then in view of the alarm that had been created, voted to close the schools this morning until Wednesday Dec. 5, unless otherwise ordered.

The board also voted that no scholar be permitted to take any book from the schools for the balance of the year.

The board then adjourned until next Tuesday evening, when if neccessary, further action will be taken to keep the schools closed.

Squantum Hearing.

A hearing was given in the Aldermanic Chamber, Tuesday by the joint special committee of the City Council on the annexation of Squantum to the city of Boston. Alderman Sanford presided. The committee was half an hour late in coming together. The first witness in opposition was A. T. Stearns of Dorchester, who said his main objection was that it would require the building of a bridge and streets, which would entail an enormous expense for the benefit of property speculators in Squantum, which would have to be paid for by the city of Boston. Witness said that he did not own property in Squantum, and he was not aware that the State would assume the expense of the bridge.

Representative Tuttle of Dorchester said that the scheme for the State to build a bridge was urged by a land improvement company, which secured its passage through the Legislature. The Money expended by Boston on streets in Squantum was made necessary by the sewerage system. The city of Quincy does not want to lose its property. The annexation would impose upon Boston the necessity for providing extra school room which is not near large enough now. A bridge will cost $300,000. If it was the question of annexing Quincy, that would be another thing ; but Squantum would be a detriment to Boston in every respect. Whenever a scheme of this kind comes up, it is pretty safe to assume that somebody wants to improve their property at the expense of the public.

Mr. Moxon of Quincy said he could see no good reason why this land should be taken from Quincy. It is valuable to Quincy because it is a part of its territory. It would be a detriment to Boston.

This closed the testimony of the remonstrants.

High School Reunion.

A meeting of the High School Alumni was held Friday Nov. 23, at the residence of Hon. Charles H. Porter. The attendance was the largest as yet, nearly one hundred members being present.

President Porter presided. The only business was to act upon the report of the board of government in regard to the first annual reunion.

This committee reported that the reunion take the form of a banquet and that it be limited to members of the alumni, and be held Dec. 31.

Miss Raycroft offered an amendment that each member be allowed two tickets that escorts, etc., might be taken. This amendment was lost.

Miss Adams also offered an amendment that members be allowed to take their husbands, wife or escorts. This was also lost and the original report of the board of government was adopted.

The board were given full powers to make all arrangements and the meeting adjourned until Friday evening, Dec. 21.

Bowling at Wollaston.

The first private party to use the Duck's Nest bowling alleys was the McClintock and Emery teams.

Bryant made the highest score 169, and also the lowest 98.

The excitement was intense. After a lively contest McClintock's team defeated Emery's 2104 to 1973.

A. O. H. Anniversary.

Division 5, A. O. H., celebrated its 12 h anniversary November 23, by entertaining their lady friends at Hancock hall. At 7.30 an impromptu entertainment was given consisting of vocal and instrumental music and readings. Brief remarks were also made by Edward T. White as master of ceremonies, Thomas H. McDonnell, J. B. Higgins of the Pilot, Wm. J. Flynn of the Republic, and others.

Following the entertainment a banquet was served by Caterer Nash.

A social dance until two o'clock wound up the entertainment.

Visitation at Wollaston.

On Tuesday evening, Nov. 27, Woodbine Lodge, K. and L. of H., entertained the Grand Officers and quite a large delegation from Unity Lodge. The Grand Secretary, Samuel Hathaway, spoke very encouragingly as to the future growth of the order and of the remarkable increase that has been made during the last three months. The Grand Guide and Grand Vice Proctor also made some very appropriate remarks.

The entertainment committee furnished a very pleasing part of the programme, Bros. Pierce, Simmons and Parker appearing in a trio which was very well received.

The sisters were not to be outdone, so Sisters Whitman, Baker and Bennett took the floor and rendered a trio that brought down the house. All seemed to have a good time and the visiting brothers and sisters very reluctantly took their departure on the 10.34 train.

Local Foot Ball.

At South Weymouth, Saturday, the Thayer Academy team defeated the Wessegussetts 20 to 0.

The Braintree High school boys also won from the Holbrook High by a score of 20 to 0.

CITY BRIEFS.

No meeting of the City Council this week.

Six death from diphtheria are reported this week.

There are several cases of typhoid fever as well as diphtheria in the city.

Eight no-license meetings will be held in various parts of the city on Sunday.

About fifty turkeys were distributed from the income of the Johnson fund Wednesday.

Mr. Walter E. Loud, violinist, played at the dedication of the new schoolhouse at East Braintreet his week.

Mrs. C. M. Lapham of Chestnut street, is still very sick with neuralgia fever and inflammation of the bowels.

Eddie, the second son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Taber of No. 6 Baxter street, is sick with the dread disease, diphtheria.

The full list of Republican candidates to be voted for at the coming municipal election appears in another column.

Ethel Parker is slowly recovering from a very severe attack of bronchitis, and not scarlet fever as has been reported.

Saturday night at 10 o'clock a hand organ was heard grinding out "Sweet Marie" in the vicinity of City Hall.

Mrs. James Tower and Miss Mary Kent of Newton, spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Justin Hardwick and family.

The many friends of Mrs. George Osborne will be sorry to learn that she is again confined to the house by sickness.

The Urbane Pleasure club of Neponset held its annual ball Wednesday evening at Guy's Coliseum. It was largely attended.

In five minutes after the great game between Harvard and Yale was finished Saturday the result was bulletined by the LEDGER.

Mr. William Loud, wife and two sons, of Waltham, spent Thanksgiving with his parents Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Loud, Washington street.

Business may be quiet and many may be out of work, yet ten couples found money enough this week to be joined in wedlock. Look at the list today.

Judge Hammond has appointed Judge Harriman as auditor in the case of the city against the Cushings, relative to the Willard school contract.

The proprietors of the night lunch wagon which has been located near the PATRIOT office pulled up stakes Monday morning and departed.

Mrs. Clara M. House, wife of Mr. Frank M. House of this city, died Tuesday at the residence of her parents at East Weymouth, after a lingering illness.

The prizes at the drive-whist tournament on Wednesday evening, by the members of the Granite City club, were taken by Mr. Horace E. Spear and Elbridge F. Porter.

Mrs. Sarah A. Burrell, eighty-eight years of age, has gone to North Weymouth, to spend Thanksgiving and Christmas with her daughter, Mrs. Solomon Lovell.

An enthusiastic meeting of our Swedish citizens was held Wednesday evening at Plumer's hall in the interest of Stephen O. Moxon for Mayor. Mr. Gustafson presided and brief addresses were made by Candidate Moxon, ex-Mayor Fairbanks and Auditor John O. Hall. There were also several addresses made in the Swedish language.

No important discussions took place at the meeting of the Young Men's Congress Tuesday evening, although several bills were introduced. The next meeting will be held Dec. 11, when the "Income Tax" will be considered. Mr. Delcenaire King and Mr. W. P. Bailey will lead the discussion.

A very pretty sunlight party was held Thursday afternoon at Faxon hall, which was attended by about fifty couple. Music for dancing was furnished by Prof. Holmes and Mrs. Rhines, and a thorough good time was enjoyed. During a brief intermission ice cream was served. Those in charge of the floor were Frank Souther, Geo. Westland and Arthur Metcalf.

Runaway Accident.

Mrs. Elizabeth Eldridge had a narrow escape from a serious accident Wednesday afternoon. She was driving down Hancock street and when opposite Tilton's hardware store one of the wheels came off, frightening the horse which dashed down the street dragging the carriage. When near the LEDGER office the horse fell and Mrs. Eldridge was thrown out. Striking on her head she received quite a bad cut. She was taken into Durgin's drug store and later to her home. It is thought she is not seriously injured.

A Nuisance.

The citizens of West Quincy are indignant that in these times, when diphtheria is so prevalent, that a nuisance should be allowed to exist in the very heart of the business section of this ward. The nuisance in question is in the Farnum building on Copeland street.

The cellar of this building is filled with sewage from houses near by and that an epidemic has not started in this section is a great wonder.

Notice has been sent to the Board of Health and their inspector has visited the premises but that is all. They have taken no further action and meanwhile the sewage is allowed to accumulate.

Fitzgerald—Booth.

Mr. Daniel Fitzgerald and Miss Nellie Keardon Booth of this city were united in marriage Wednesday morning at the St. John's church, by Rev. F. A. Friguglietti. The bride wore a gown of delicate brown trimmed with plush of a corn color, with a hat to match and a large bouquet of pinks.

The bridesmaid was Miss Bridget Rahily, a cousin of the bride, whose gown was similar to the bride, but whose bouquet was of roses. Mr. Cornelius Fitzgerald was best man.

A reception was held in the evening at the residence of the bride's parents, where Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald will reside.

WEST QUINCY.

The People's Party have filed nomination papers with the City Clerk for Bernard Donaher, Daniel Hanlan and Thomas J. Wallace as councilmen from Ward Four.

The dedication of the new hose house in Ward 4, which was to have taken place Tuesday evening, has been postponed until some evening next week, as the finish on the interior is not dry.

A coat of stone chips is being put on Quarry street.

Rev. E. W. Virgin and his family spent Thanksgiving in Dedham.

A very pretty sunlight party was given Thanksgiving afternoon at St. Mary's hall.

The young people of the West Quincy Methodist church are preparing for an entertainment to be given in the church next week, Thursday evening. It will be "An evening in Peking with the Chinese." A school of twenty-seven persons in costumes of various nations, in charge of Miss Clara M. Cushman, who resided in North China seven years. A rehearsal was held on Tuesday evening at the parsonage, and as the Chineses do their studying out loud there was a perfect Babel of sound.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Mrs. Quincy Tirrell has been confined to her bed the past week by illness.

S. F. Willard has a representation of the City Council of 1895 in his show window.

The concert to have been given Tuesday evening at the Adams school has been postponed a week.

At a meeting of the congregation of the Presbyterian church held November 23, a unanimous call was extended to Rev. Robert Westley Peach of Boston to become its pastor.

Mrs. W. A. Smith of South Quincy who was so seriously sick is now convalescent.

That portion of Liberty street approaching Depot at South Quincy is being treated to a much needed improvement.

A little child of Mr. Arthur Merritt was brought home from Scituate on Tuesday evening sick with diphtheria.

The friends of Mr. Stephen O. Moxon in Ward Three are to tender him a reception in Doble's hall, South Quincy, Saturday evening. It is expected that there will be a large gathering present and a good time is predicted.

The weekly meeting of the Quincy Literary Society was held in its room in Doble's building, Nov. 23, the president, Dr. R. McLennan, in the chair.

The theme chosen by the essayist of the evening Mr. Archibald A. Grassick, was a wide and attractive one. "The lights and shadows of modern civilization."

To ordinary minds, there is perhaps no subject so full of interest, or gives better scope for the exercise of mental faculties, than one which provides opportunities for comparative analysis.

ATLANTIC.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Clara Louise Hight of Neponset and Mr. Chas. A. Hall of Atlantic at All Saint's church, Ashmont, Wednesday, December 12, at 8 o'clock.

Rev. Mr. Hollington preached at the M. E. church, Atlantic, Sunday morning and evening, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. H. D. Deetz At 6.45 the Epworth League had their missionary service and took up their pledge collection, amounting to $6.70

DOWNS AND PARK.

Gustof Livendahl had a narrow escape from death while at work building a cellar at Wollaston Park, Tuesday afternoon. Livendahl was helping to lower a stone, when a guy rope broke allowing the derrick to fall.

Livendahl was struck on the right side and was seriously injured. He was removed to his home on "Fletcher's Field." He is 22 years of age and is unmarried.

The Squantum Yacht club held its regular meeting Monday evening. After the business of the evening a clam chowder was served.

There will be a no-license meeting Sunday at 3 P. M. in A O U. W. hall.

QUINCY POINT.

There has generally been a game of foot ball at Quincy Point every Thanksgiving and this year was no exception. A struggle between two teams, one from the Point and one from the Neck, took place on the Owl field, South street.

Although the Neck team was handicapped by not having quite their full number yet they put up a strong game, and as the score will show, were not beaten very badly.

The "Pointers" had the advantage in weight, but the team work of the "Neckers" made up for it. The latter's backs worked together beautifully. Eldridge dove at the centre, always for a good gain.

Score—Quincy Point, 6; Quincy Neck, 4. Touchdowns—Damon and Marnock. Safety goal—Quincy Neck, (counting 2 for opponents). Referee and umpire—Adams. Linesman—Sampson. Attendance—200.

MILTON.

The meeting of the Young People's Baptist union at East Milton, was well attended Sunday evening and was led by Miss Carrie M. Gardner. The general prayer meeting was conducted by the pastor ; subject : "Will a man rob God."

Galvin—Callahan Nuptials.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the St. John's church Wednesday, the contracting parties being Miss Margaret Callahan, a sister of William Callahan, the well known granite dealer, and Mr. Michal Galvin, a well known young man of West Quincy.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. F. A. Frigulietti in the presence of a large number of friends of the happy couple. After the marriage ceremony Fr. Friguglietti celebrated the nuptial mass.

After the mass a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's father on Quincy avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Galvin will reside on Quincy avenue.

Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Fox, residing at 46 Franklin street, South Quincy, observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, at their residence on Wednesday evening, entertaining friends from Everett, Jamaica Plain, Harrison Square and Quincy. Seldom is seen or heard a livelier or happier party than those present, after the usual hand shaking and congratulations. The evening was spent in social intercourse and card playing. During the evening some very fine music was listened to, the duet rendered by Mr. ——— and Miss——— was very amusing. At ten o'clock the party assembled in the dining-room where a fine collation was served, the march being played by Maple Lodge drum corp.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Fox in behalf of members of Paul Revere Woman's Relief Corp, No. 103, of which Mrs. Fox is a member, was presented with a marble clock and ornament, and in behalf of members of Maple Lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, No. 313, of which Mr. and Mrs. Fox are both members, were presented with an elegant oak parlor table and a silver service. Other gifts were numerous.

As the wee small hours arrived, all took their departure, feeling well pleased with their evening's pleasure, hoping that at the end of another five years, we shall all assemble again to see the

CATCHER.

WOLLASTON.

The drinking fountain at Wollaston is again out of order and a nuisance to pedestrians.

Mr. George L. Bigelow, a resident of Fayette street, Wollaston, died on Monday of consumption. Mr. Bigelow was a member of the G. A. R. and enlisted in the war in the 14th Maine Volunteers. He came to Wollaston from Taunton. A widow and son survive him.

The funeral took place Wednesday from his late home on Fayette street, Wollaston. Rev. Edward A. Robinson, pastor of the Congregational society and Rev. Charles W. Wilder, pastor of the M. E. society officiated. A delegation was present from the Paul Revere post, G. A. R. The body was interred at the Mt. Wollaston cemetary.

The W. C. T. U. of Wollaston will meet on Friday, Dec. 7th, in the Congregational church at 3 P. M

Bowling is getting to be quite the proper caper at Wollaston.

At the shooting contest for the gold badge at the Duck's Nest, Wollaston, Mr. Seymour Field broke the record on Thanksgiving day and scored 49 out of a possible, 50 points.

Three well known Wollaston sportsmen, Mr. A. G. Olney, Mr. Henry W. Marsden, and Mr. Q. A. Faunce, passed Thanksgiving in the Concord woods after foxes.

The annual union Thanksgiving service at Wollaston was held at 11 o'clock Thursday, at the Methodist Episcopal church. Rev. Stephen G. Abbott took the place of Rev. Preston Gurney and preached an able and instructive sermon from Eccl. 10: 16, 17.

Mr. Seymour Field of Wollaston, superintendent of the Merrick Sewing Machine company's works, Boston, was kindly remembered by the employes of that firm, who presented him with a very beautiful cane as a token of their deep regard. The gift is highly appreciated by Mr. Field.

The Ladies' Social circle will hold a sale of fancy articles, flowers, aprons and confectionery in the vestry of the Methodist Episcopal church, Wollaston, on the afternoon and evening of Thursday, Dec. 6. Ice cream and cake will be served in the evening, and a pleasing entertainment will be given.

The regular evening services of the Wollaston churches will be omitted next Sunday, and all will unite in a union No-License meeting at the Congregational church at 7 30. Rev. C. W. Wilder will preside, and the speakers will be from the Union Rescue Mission, Kneeland street, Boston. Mr. W. H. West, the superintendent, Rev. G. W. Coon, assistant, and others from the Mission, will give illustrations from their own observation and experience of the effects of licensing the sale of intoxicating drinks.

Miss Olney gave a brilliant musicale at her home on Grand View avenue, Wollaston, on Tuesday evening. A large number of prominent society people from Quincy, Boston and Wollaston were present. At the close of the programme a light lunch of chocolate and "afternoon teas" was served.

The programme was intensely interesting. The soloists were Miss Olney, on the piano; Mrs. F. A. Page, soprano; Mr. E. Walter Arnold, baritone; Miss Edith Olney, violin; and Mr. Arthur C. Sprague, piano.

"The Week of Self-Denial for Missions," observed by the Epworth League and their friends, closed with a very successful Missionary service last Sunday evening at the Methodist Episcopal church. The service was conducted by J. F. F. Grant, president of the League.

Clan McGregor Anniversary.

Clan McGregor, O. S. C., celebrated Nov. 27, by holding one of its annual gatherings at Hancock hall, and like other gatherings held by this order it proved very enjoyable.

The entertainment which preceded the dance was given by the Herbert Johnson Quintette Club, and it is unnecessary to add that the concert was of a high order and that each number was encored.

Following the concert came the dance which was participated in by a large number and as the order contained twenty-seven numbers it was early morning before the orchestra played auld lang syne for the closing Scotch reel.

Alex. Emslie had charge of the floor, and was assisted by an efficient corps of aids, and the chief and tanist officiated as the reception committee.

Thanksgiving Shoot.

The Wollaston Trap club held a Thanksgiving shoot. Prescott was high man as usual, breaking 18 birds.

Personal.

The following is from the Moorhead, Minn., Weekly News, and will be read with pleasure by the many friends of the young lady here:

Miss Isabel Farrington, teacher of reading and literature of the National school is a native of Boston, a graduate of Thayer Academy at South Braintree, Mass., and also of the Emerson College of Oratory. She brought to her work thorough preparation, enthusiasm and untiring energy, and enters upon her second year's work with thorough confidence of her students and associates. Miss Farrington's ability as a reader greatly increases her power in teaching literature.

Of the building the News says: The legislature of 1887 appropriated $60,000 for a building, and $5,000 for the running expenses. The building was begun in the summer of 1887 and completed in the early autumn of 1888. It is one of the most commodious and beautiful buildings in the northwest. It is a large, three-story massive structure built of Kasota stone and brick, and of remarkable architectural beauty. Its position commands a view of the cities of Moorehead and Fargo, North Dakota, and a most extensive view of the Red River Valley.

The Wollaston Shoot.

At he Wollaston Trap club shoot on Saturday afternoon, George Elcock came off with flying colors, scoring 22. This beats all of his previous scores. Kelley came next with 16, but it was made on the second string.

The next shoot will be held on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 1, at 3 o'clock.

—Official returns show that Councillor Savage, Republican, was elected in this district by a vote of 27,400 to 17,690, a plurality of 9,710. That Congressman-elect Atwood had 9,833 votes, to 8,868 for McEttrick and 7,113 for McNary. That Senator-elect Darling received 5,490 to 3,313 for Beck the Democrat.

Vote for Moxon and Reform.

To the Voters of Quincy:

Mr. Moxon is a naturalized citizen· This is the principal argument made by those who oppose his candidacy for the position of Mayor of this city. The facts are these: He first came to this country twenty-five years ago, has resided in Quincy eighteen years and became a citizen four years since. All honor to him, I say, for not seeking citizenship until he had passed the time which our native Americans are required to attain before they can become voters.

The Republican aspirants have always been active in urging the naturalization of those of foreign birth whose votes they could control, but if it happens that a man of this class is nominated for a responsible office, the politicians are immediately horror-stricken.

The average office-seeker does not hesitate to cater for the votes of naturalized citizens, and I do not believe that a most rabid A. P. A. candidate would be averse to receiving such support. There were half a dozen or more, who were itching for the mayoralty nomination, and I knew that when the matter was decided those who suffered defeat would be affected with political cholic. The men who are most unjust in their criticism of the present nominee are those who have always denounced me for not voting for unfit men whose names were upon the regular party ticket.

Sound Principles.

My American principles extend to corrupt and incompetent candidates wherever found, be they Irishmen, Yankees, Democrats or Republicans. I am in sympathy with the A. P. A., so far as that movement tends to strengthen our American institutions, to resist onslaughts from every source, but I do not intend to let bigotry override my honest convictions. I know Mr. Moxon to be a man of wide experience in a successful business career, with a large knowledge of city affairs and a desire to administer the same upon sound principles. I believe, if elected, his administration will convince you of the accuracy of this statement. Speedy action is necessary to save the city from bankruptcy. The situation demands the election of efficient men to positions of trust. Let the future policy of the city be to incur no additional debts. The borrowing system is a most disastrous one. The obligations for extravagant expenditures are not lessened by delays in meeting the same. A man may mortgage his property and spend the money thus obtained in riotous living. It may be fun for him, but his family will not enjoy the results of his depravity. Bequests in the shape of unpaid notes are not indications of prosperity.

I would suggest as a further remedy for our unfortunate financial condition, that the city charter be so amended as to provide that all councilmen shall be elected at large. In the wards where the most dangerous elements exist, councilmen are elected who will serve the rabble. Stringent measures must be adopted in order to place incompetency in a straight jacket. As the matter now stands, every political tramp desires to pose as the lion of his own ward, while he makes an ass of himself with the general public.

Official Incompetency.

The existing condition of our municipality fills one with regret that the good old town meeting system has been supplanted. In those days an attempt at political jobbery could be easily detected and suppressed, but now the City Council knows beforehand the attitude of all its members on important measures which will come up for action, so that they can trade votes in such a manner as to perpetuate themselves in office at the expense of their suffering constituents. I believe that a competent Council would not have foisted upon us the extravagant abortion called a brick schoolhouse at West Quincy. It is a monument of folly to all who have shared in the responsibility for its erection from the architect down to the hod carrier. What a comfort it would be to those who are compelled to gaze upon the structure daily, if, like the chameleon, it could change its spots. I cannot refrain from also alluding to our High school building, the granite trimmings of which provoked so great a controversy in the Council that the result of that sanguinary contest is apparent to all who view the edifice. If the tower, called a fire escape, had been placed in the rear, its utility would not have been lessened and the purposes of ornamentation greatly enhanced thereby. Most of our public buildings which have recently been erected are startling memorials of political blundering and extravagance, and some measures should be taken to relieve the city from a repetition of such nonsense.

A Blunder.

The most glaring mistake of Mr. Hodges administration was the displacement of Mr. Ewell, one of the most efficient commissioners of public works who ever served in that capacity, and appointing to the position a man who, having sufficient business of his own to engross his attention, should not have undertaken the management of city affairs. No man should be appointed to an office which commands a yearly salary of $2000 unless he can devote his whole time to its duties. The expenditures for our highways during the past year have been excessive, and I feel sure that you will agree with me that their present deplorable condition has not been equalled at this season. I have always been a cheerful taxpayer, but when I see how recklessly the city's income has been squandered, I must protest against the election of officials who are responsible for such wanton use of the taxpayer's money.

The above diagram is drawn to a scale and show at a glance the progress of the city debt. At the end of the town government it was nothing. During two years under Mayor Porter it went up, up ; during three years under Mayor Fairbanks it went up, up, UP. During the first year of Mayor Hodges' administration it went DOWN. For the first time in the history of the city a halt has been called.

Why should not the voters decide that Mayor Hodges have another year's trial ?

OUR CITY CHARTER.

Wherein the Present Executive Has Openly Disregarded It in Several Instances.

Mayor Hodges said in his inaugural message, "It has been said that one of the strong points of our charter is, that we can see where the responsibility lies if the business is not properly conducted and that the executive and the legislative branches are entirely independent of each other." Let us see how that opinion is carried out and the charter obeyed.

The City Council accepted certain plans for a Hose house in Ward Two and passed an order authorizing a loan, to have the Hose house built according to said plans. This order was approved by Mayor Fairbanks and so became a law, but Mayor Hodges when he commenced to build, disregarded the order and the plans and made many changes and alterations to suit himself. If he desired any changes, was it not his duty to go to the City Council and obtain permission of the legislative body that passed the order? Why should the Mayor assume the right to do as he pleases.

The same course was pursued in building the Hose house in Ward Four; the plans disregarded and changes made to suit himself.

The citizens knew full well, that the Mayor is the executive, and only carries out the orders of the City Council, and is it not a dangerous precedent to establish that the Mayor takes the right to do as he pleases. Where does the Mayor draw the line? What is there to hinder him in his own opinion judging from his actions with the Hose house and High school, to pursue the same course with school buildings or anything else the Council orders.

The Mayor has not any more right to change the plans of any building than any other citizen has, by our charter he must carry out the orders of the Council and specific appropriations, and after the legislative branch accepts the plans and authorizes the loan to carry their orders through, the Mayor must obey that order. He cannot by our charter assume the rights of both departments, and such actions should receive the condemnation of the citizens who believe in a business like administration according to our charter.

False Promises

One of the rallying cries used by Democratic leaders at the city election was "Extravagant running expenses, valuation of the city real estate exagerated, a too high tax rate, $15.60. Vote for a change and see what Mr. Hodges will do."

The citizens voted for a change, now see what the result has been.

The running expenses of the city largely ahead of last year by $10,000.

The valuation of the real estate of the city increased over a half million, taking into account the loss of the land taken for High school, hose house land, play ground and park reservation, and many citizens can testify to this increased valuation on their property.

The tax rate raised to $17.60.

Have not these Democratic promises come home to the voters, proving the false cries at the last election, and showing that a party who promises so much and fails to keep them is unworthy of support.

Vote for the Republican nominee, Stephen O. Moxon, whose experiences in the Councils for four years, shows that he is capable of administering the affairs of the city in a straightforward and economical manner.

EXPERIENCE.

The Six Hundred Dollar Scare.

The old saying that there are none so blind as those who will not see, applies with considerable force to those Democratic croakers and politicians, who seek to blind themselves and the public to the true reason for the payment of the six hundred dollars for the Lincoln school house plans to Mr. S. O. Moxon. The money was paid to Mr. Moxon because it was perfectly legal to do so and for the additional reason that it rightfully belonged to him.

No one conversant with all the facts in the case will deny that these plans were furnished by Mr Moxon with the knowledge and consent of the School Board and the Committee of the City Council.

The Lincoln school house was built in accordance with Mr. Moxon's plans and they were adopted and used by the city government, and today are the property of the city of Quincy.

It is conceded that the preparation of these plans required the expenditure of considerable money and time on the part of Mr. Moxon; that the price asked for them was a moderate and reasonable one, and finally that their adoption and use was the means of saving a large sum of money to the city.

No one, not even his bitterest political opponents, has ever dared to accuse Mr. Moxon of acting in an underhanded or deceitful manner. All, irrespective of political creed agreed that he conducted himself fairly and openly throughout the whole matter, but, it is urged, there was a legal objection to the payment for inasmuch as he was a councilman at the time, the law would not permit his receiving the money no matter how valuable the services.

Let us consider that for a moment:

First,—His duties as a councilman did not require him, to act as architect of the city. The furnishing of those plans was in no way remotely or appropriately connected with any duty he could be called on to perform by virtue of his office as councilman. It was an entirely distinct, separate and collatual matter, and when the city appropriated to its own use Mr. Moxon's labor and his property it became liable therefor.

Second,—At the time the matter was being considered by the City Council three lawyers were connected with the city government, the opinion of these attorneys as expressed to the Council at the time is worthy of not.

The then City Solicitor McAnarney rendered an opinion that after carefully considering all the facts and the law, he believed the payment to have been legally made and warranted.

Councilman C. F. Adams, 2d, a Democrat, stated in open Council that in so far as he an attorney was able to judge of the legality of the payment, aided by all the information he could get on the law and facts, he believed the payment to have been legally made, and he so voted. Councilman H. M. Federhen, Jr., who has always been an active partisan, and was at the time the Democratic leader against Mr. Moxon, claimed the payment was an illegal one.

It must be borne in mind that while this matter was being considered in the Council, although the Democratic machine was exerting every influence to down Mr. Moxon, his opponents did not dare to cite the name of an attorney of repute and standing who claimed that the action was illegal; if they had been able to do so it is safe to assume that it would have been done, but they preferred to claim that some mysterious, unknown individuals whose names were too sacred to mention, claimed that Mr. Moxon acted illegally.

At this late day when party strife is high, by making a partial statement or the facts it may be possible to buy an opinion against Mr. Moxon. But we believe that the opinions expressed by City Solicitor McAnarney and Councilman Adams were the correct ones, and the action of the Committee, Council and the City Council itself in fully exonerating Mr. Moxon was just and proper.

TRUTH.

Sewerage System Wanted.

The alarming spread of diphtheria followed by the preemptory closing of the Coddington and Adams schools again calls the attention of the citizens to the fact that there is one important question which affects the welfare and above all else the health of our rapidly growing city. From the different wards comes the call for some plan for a sewerage system, the lack of which is a menace to public health and which retards the growth of the city. Every physician in our city readily testifies to the great importance of the solving of this great problem, and every citizen knows the result of imperfect drainage.

Ten years ago, 1884, a committee of several of our most influential citizens stated in their report, "No subject can be of more importance to a community than the proper disposal of its sewerage." "The failure to provide proper drainage, places upon any thickly settled community the responsibility of a considerable number of needless deaths every year; and one of the first duties of the public to each citizen, when it becomes impossible for private resources to provide proper facilities for drainage is to construct a public sewer."

In the following year, by reference to the Town Reports, one will find that committees composed of prominent men studied the question, and all admitted that it was a necessity to have a system of sewerage, but the citizens are aware that this important question, like many others, was referred to the incoming city government to study.

In ex-Mayor Porter's first message to the City Council, in obedience to public sentiment and his own knowledge of the situation, he advised the City Council to pay attention to this important question, and the Council, after consideration, petitioned the Legislature for an act.

In '91 and '92 Mayor Fairbanks referred at length to this important matter saying "the first problem in any city is to furnish the citizens with a bountiful supply of good water, and the next problem is to adopt a plan to dispose of the impure and waste water for the protection of the public health."

The act given by the Legislature was not accepted by a two-thirds vote for various reasons, prominent among which was the opinion that in certain sections the demand for water was more important, and also that the State Board did not favor the plan. It is well known that since the city took the water works that the mains have been extended in many directions, and the need of a sewerage system is more imperative than ever.

What do we find the present year? Mayor Hodges, as every one knows, was against the purchase of the water works, and if his opinion had prevailed this matter would not have been settled for many years, and every year would have added to the value of the property, and no extensions could have been made in any section, for the Water Company was not in a financial condition to grant the demand for the extension of pipes. But by a very large majority of the citizens, the opinion of the present Mayor was not sustained. How many of the citizens today would vote to give back to the company the works for the price it paid, and resume the old state of affairs.

So in case of the sewerage question, the Council has not considered the question the present year. Why?

Because Mayor Hodges advised it not to do so. Does His Honor realize the fact, that the duty to the public requires him to study the interest of the whole city, as well as to his giving his time to the minor details. Does he not realize that if the City Council devised any plan, that it would have to go to the State Board of Health for advice and approval, then to the Legislature for an act, then to the people for their acceptance? Does not this take months and years before anything can be done?

In Mr. Moxon, the citizens have a candidate who heartily believes that the Council should take up their work immediately. His utterances have been to that effect and is it not the duty of the citizens to support at the polls one who will give time and thought to this public necessity, in place of saying "nothing should be done." The city needs a man alive to the interest of our growing city, one who studies the broad problems affecting our city, and would not be content to devote his energies simply to the mere routine of running himself every department. We need a man who can give some thought for the future welfare of our city, and that man is Stephen O. Moxon.

Three new cases of diphtheria were reported to the Board of Health this morning, all of which are in the Adams and Coddington school districts. Fortunately no deaths have been reported today thus far. The action of the School Committee in closing all of the school buildings throughout the city will be commended as this will serve to prevent further spread.

There is another precaution that should be taken and that is in some manner to restrict the borrowing of books from the Public Library. It is well known that when children are out of school the number of books borrowed from the library increases very rapidly and according to physicians the germs of the disease is frequently carried in this manner.

Just what action it is necessary to take to accomplish this result is in doubt but certain some action should be taken immediately.

Lincoln School House Plan.

So many misleading and false statements have been made in regard to the plans for the Lincoln school, that in justice to Mr. Moxon, the facts are placed before the citizens.

In 1891, the city council appropriated $35,000 for the purpose of erecting a brick building in Ward Three, according to the plans of Loring & Phipps.

The proposals received were so largely in excess of the appropriation, and finding after many attempts to modify the plans, that the building could not be built, the plans were returned to the council, who then passed another appropriation, which was vetoed by Mayor Fairbanks on the ground that the city could not afford so expensive a building.

The public sentiment was at that time that $25,000 ought to build a suitable school building. Mr. Moxon studied out a plan which would meet with this requirement, and also would meet with the desire of the school board in reference to light in the rooms.

Mr. Moxon consulted frequently with the school board, adopting some suggestions from them, and the plans received their approval and also members of the committee on public buildings were so well pleased that the plans were submitted to the council. During the examination of the plans, it was well known by members of the council and school board, that Mr. Moxon originated the plans, which contained many new features in the arrangement of rooms.

During the erection of the building, Mr. Moxon was asked to state the cost of plans but he replied that it was for his interest not to sell the plans, but have them copyrighted, and then permit other cities to use them at a rental, but this was opposed by the Mayor, who believes in the policy of owning the plans, so that they could be used again free of any expense.

The bill was presented by Mr. Moxon Dec. 1, and after receiving an opinion from the City Solicitor who carefully considered all the questions, for it was well known that a certain member of the Council intended to raise an issue; the bill went through the regular form and was paid, being a just and legal bill, as the city had used the plans.

Afterwards a committee on the part of Council investigated the proceedings and after they had reported in favor of Mr. Moxon, the council sustained Mr. Moxon. It was not decided on party lines for the two most prominent Democrats in the council, who enjoy the respect of the citizens for their work on all questions were in favor of Mr. Moxon, and one of them, a leading lawyer, and known for his independence and honorable action, said in open council, "After a careful consideration of all the facts, I believe that Mr. Moxon is entitled honestly and legally to his bill."

While the building was being erected, Mr. Moxon gave his time free of any expense, in going to the building, and by his advise and assistance in many ways, the work was done thoroughly and the building was completed for the fall term.

Mr. Moxon presented the bill in his own name, not resorting to any trickery by asking any other architect to do so, but took a straightforward course, and the bill is on file.

The plans are the property of the City, can be used again free of any expense. So Quincy has a model school building at the moderate cost of $24,782, and the city has had full value for every dollar expended.

THE FACTS.

Association Foot Ball.

At the recent annual meeting of the Quincy Foot Ball team the following officers were elected:

President,—William Taylor.
Vice President,—James Smith.
Secretary,—James McLeod.
Captain,—James McLeod.
Vice Captain,—Thomas Smith.

The personnel of the club is as follows: Goal, A. Black; backs, J. Brown, T. Smith; half backs, J. Smith, J. Mass, M. Walls; forwards, J. Storey, A. Russell, J. McLeod, W. Russell, J. Bisset; reserves, J. Thompson, W. Benzie, J. Matheson.

During the past season the club has played thirteen games and came off victorious in each.

New Cases of Diphtheria.

Three new cases of diphtheria were reported to the Board of Health Tuesday morning, two of which are in the Adams school district and one in the Coddington school district. These cases were immediately quarantined by the Board of Health. The board is of the opinion that the disease has reached its height and that further spread has been checked, although as a precaution they recommend that parents keep their children isolated as much as possible. The sick children are reported as doing well this morning.

New Commissioner Needed.

Judge Endicott, chairman of the commission appointed by the Supreme court to apportion the cost to cities and towns for charges and damages under the Metropolitan Park act, has resigned, owing to ill health, and has left for Europe. An extra hearing has been called in the Supreme Court room today for the purpose of appointing some one in his place.

Mr. Blackmur, the City Solicitor, informs us that in all probability Judge Edmund H. Bennett of Taunton will be the choice of the cities and towns for Judge Endicott's place. Judge Bennett was the chairman of the committee to determine the damages which Quincy paid for her water plant.

Dangerous Blasting.

The people who live on Kidder street and in that vicinity are in constant fear of being killed from flying rocks from a quarry owned by F. Hardwick & Son, and run by a Swedish firm. This firm evidently does not use precaution in blasting, for every time a blast is fired rocks fly about promiscuously. Nearly every day windows are broken, and Monday a rock landed on the roof of a barn near by and tore off a number of the shingles. Tuesday morning a rock 6x11 inches flew through the air and landed several hundred feet away, and when it came down it struck the sink spout of one of Mr. Faxon's houses and demolished it. The people claim that they have complained about it but it has done no good.

NO LICENSE. There will be a public meeting at the St. Paul's church on Sunday evening, on the subject of no-license. Ex-Mayor Fairbanks and other prominent speakers will address the audience. All interested in this important question are invited to be present.

Hancock Street.

There is considerable talk of the "awful condition of Hancock street," just now, from those who are always seeking some opportunity to slur Mayor Hodges and his administration.

This street as are a majority of the roads in the city is in a far better condition today than it was last spring when Commissioner Eaton took charge. Four years ago $40,000 was appropriated for the rebuilding of Hancock street from Linden street to Neponset bridge. We all can remember that at that time great stress was laid upon the fact that this was to be a permanent road; one that would last for twenty years at least, and one which, owing to the proposed method of construction, little or no repairs would be needed for several years.

But in less than one year the road had gone to pieces. The curbing spread, the road went with it and large gullies were formed in the center. The next year saw it in a still worse condition and when Commissioner Eaton took charge it was a disgrace to the city. With no money appropriated to repair it not even enough to quarry and cart the crushed stone from Quincy Point, he did the very wisest thing under the circumstances and put on the gravel from the High school lot, which the city was obliged to remove. Thus were the gullies filled up, the gravel rolled down and the road-bed greatly improved.

But not only on road construction were the grevious faults of previous years manifest. Four wooden culverts, two on Squantum street and two on Hancock street, were found crushed in by the weight of the steam roller that had been run over them the year before. New ones were put in and the drains opened up anew. Then again, the paving which had fallen in by the sinking of the road bed were covered over in some places with three feet of stone and gravel.

It was a bad condition of affairs that Commissioner Eaton had to contend with, and Hancock street, that part which was rebuilt, will ever be a stigma on our young city government. Compare it with that portion from Porter's corner to the park, which was built by our board of road commissioners. That has been subjected to as heavy if not heavier teaming, and it is the best part of Hancock street today, after 15 years' wear. There was no back-bone to the new road. The shallow cubing were lifted by the action of the frost the first winter they were put in and the whole road was necessarily weakened. The sooner that substantial repair can be made here the better it will be for the interest of the city, and the council should take some action before the whole road-bed is ruined.

Relief Corp Inspection.

The annual inspection of Paul Revere Woman's Relief Corp No. 103, of Quincy, took place at G. A. R. hall Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Mary L. Merritt of South Braintree was the inspecting officer.

All the officers and about fifty members were present. Also delegations from Thomas G. Stevenson Corp No. 63 of Roxbury; Boston Corp No. 157, and Sylvanus Thayer No. 94 of South Braintree. One candidate was admitted by transfer and two initiated; also two new applications received.

The corps are doing good work and looking out and helping the poor and needy ones of the soldiers. The inspecting officer found very little fault in the manner in which Corp No. 103 does its work.

Remarks were listened too from members of the visiting corps which were both interesting and entertaining. After the close of the meeting all sat down to a bake-bean supper which was greatly enjoyed by all. The corps now numbers eighty-five.

Pretty Souvenirs.

C. F. Pettengill, the jeweler, evidently knows what pleases the ladies, but he had little idea that the demand would be quite so large. Six months ago he filed an order for some china souvenirs with a firm in Germany, and the goods arrived a few days ago. There are plates of the various sizes, cups and saucers, dainty creamers, sugar bowls, spoon holders, bone dishes, pin trays, tooth pick holders and match safes. Also mugs, cute little pitchers, match safes, etc. Upon each piece is a picture of the birthplaces of the Presidents Adams or of the old First church. These souvenirs make very desirable presents to friends.

Death of Teamster.

Men passing along the turnpike road between Milton and Randolph early Tuesday morning found the body of a man who was afterwards identified as Patrick Clary of Randolph, aged about 40 years. Clary was employed as a teamster by Thomas Devine of Randolph, and it is supposed that while driving home from Boston he fell from his team, and his feet becoming tangled in the whiffletree, or part of the harness, he was dragged nearly a mile with his head upon the ground. As a result his head was mangled in a terrible manner. Medical Examiner Gilbert is investigating the case.

POLITICS.

Having confined my correspondence to the columns of the PATRIOT, except in one instance, I tender its editor an apology for having departed even for once from its columns, and for venturing into another field. I also tender the editor of the LEDGER my sincere thanks for his kindness in printing my article in the lively little daily, especially when I notice by his editorial that it was such a severe strain upon his sense of propriety so to do. As my style is so objectionable to him, I know he will gladly excuse me from troubling the LEDGER in the future with answers to questions addressed to me; but let silence on my part not be construed as any indication of inability to reply. Having agreed however, to show beyond doubt that Candidate Stephen O. Moxon was not entitled to receive $600 00 for schoolhouse plans, I do so through the columns of the PATRIOT, as I consider it a matter of serious importance. The amount involved in an illegal transaction has no bearing whatever upon the principal involved. Neither does the question as to whether or not the city made or lost money by Mr. Moxon furnishing the plans of the Lincoln schoolhouse, enter into the vital question at issue. The only point to be decided is, did or did not Mr. Moxon illegally draw from the city treasury the sum of $600 from an appropriation made by the City Council of which he was a member, for his services in drawing plans? If he did not he is clear of the charge; if he did, the charge holds against him. Let the people judge!

Now for the facts as shown by the records. June 22, 1891, the sum of $3500 was appropriated for land and plans for Lincoln schoolhouse, and March 7, 1892, $30,000 for erection of the building; Mr. Moxon was a member of the Council and voted for both appropriations. From the first named sum the city paid $660 to Loring & Phipps for plans which were not used. Mr. Moxon then appears, and either voluntarily or at the request of the Commissioner of Public Works, prepared a set of plans, which were approved by the School Committee and followed in the construction of the building. The structure was finished about Sept. 1, 1892, and no bill for the plans of Mr. Moxon was presented by him until Dec. 30, 1892, when one for $600 appeared, was audited and paid to him from the city treasury, notwithstanding the fact that after once paying for the Loring & Phipps plans, the City Council had not ordered any others to be prepared or made any appropriation to pay for any others. Relative to Mr. Moxon's bill, two curious facts appear; it was not presented until the last day but one of the year 1892 and it was not paid him until too late to appear in the city book of 1892, viz. Feb. 28, 1893, so that the Council of 1892 nor that of 1893 had any opportunity to inquire into its legality and either stop or provide for its payment.

By a most wise and salutary provision of the Public Statutes, (chapter 285, section 12), it is provided as follows: "If a member of either branch of a City Council * * * * is personally interested either directly or indirectly in a contract in which the city is interested, and which is made by the City Council or by either branch thereof * * * * or by authority derived therefrom respectively * * * * he shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than one thousand dollars, or by such fine and by imprisonment not exceeding one year."

Let us see where Mr. Moxon stands in this matter. His receipt for the $600 reads as follows: "Quincy, Mass, Dec. 30, 1892. City of Quincy, To S. Moxon, Dr., For plans and specifications for Lincoln School, 2 1-2 per cent. on $24,000—$600. Paid Feb. 28, 1893, and signed S. O. Moxon."

This cannot be construed in any other way than as an implied contract on the part of the city for him to prepare plans and specifications, and on his part to prepare them, for if there was no contract, he would have been obliged to ask the City Council to pay his bill as a matter of equity only, which he did not do, and the only other way for him to get his pay was for the Auditor and Treasurer to join with him in considering his bill as an implied contract between him and the Commissioner of Public Works to do this work for the city. As the Commissioner could derive his authority to engage the services of Mr. Moxon only from the City Council of which Mr. Moxon was a member, the latter, by presenting a bill for his services, came directly in conflict with, and I believe, made himself liable to the provisions of the Public Statutes above quoted.

For what purpose did the Legislature pass such a statute? There can be no doubt it was to prevent any member of the legislative branch of a city government from receiving so much as one penny in any way, shape or manner from any appropriation which he, as a member of the body, help by his vote to make. It was passed that every councilman in every city should be unbiased in his vote and be absolutely prohibited from having any pecuniary considerations influence his official action. Suppose a councilman were entitled to receive money for plans he might prepare for the city, might it not result about as follows; viz: an appropriation of $5,000 for plans for a public building is before the city council; the vote stands 10 yes to 10 no; one member who knows how to draw plans has not yet voted and holds the deciding vote; he knows he will get the work if appropriation passes; he accordingly votes "yes," and thereby directly votes himself a $5,000 job. Can any man be so dull of comprehension that he cannot see at once that the statute was framed on purpose to prevent this state of affairs?

Mr. Moxon was a member of the City Council; he voted for the school house appropriation; he drew the plans and specifications and he took $600 from the city treasury for so doing. Can any citizen of Quincy be either so excessively ignorant or so exceeding learned that he can perceive any difference between my suppositions case and that of Mr. Moxon?

Another piece of business in which Councilman Moxon was engaged, is very similar in nature and equally deserving of condemnation; I refer to his taking the contract to construct the Woodward schoolhouse. That the Woodward fund is the property of the city no one will deny; neither will it be denied that Mr. Moxon was a member of the City Council when he took the contract. These facts being indisputable, again Mr. Moxon is brought face to face with the statute, for the fund being the property of the city, the city was not only indirectly, but directly interested in this contract which he took when a member of the City Council. The excuse that this contract was made with the managers of the Woodward fund and not with the city, is too flimsy to draw the attention of the people away from the great principle involved, and will not be accepted by that large class of citizens who believe that a man, selected by the people to guard their interests, has no right to be pecuniarily interested in contracts which are paid for out of the city treasury. Except for the fact that Mr. Moxon is a candidate for the office of chief executive of the city, I should not bring this up against him, but I consider the precedent established by him, in taking money from the treasury for plans of the Lincoln schoolhouse and in contracting for the construction of the Woodward school building while he was a member of the City Council, to be so pernicious in principle; such a flagrant violation of law and such a menace to good government that I believe it ought to debar him from being elected Mayor of Quincy.

In the coming city election the question for the voters to decide is, which candidate for Mayor will, from past experience, conduct the business affairs of the city upon the most honorable and reliable basis.

During the week I have looked into the political situation as carefully as circumstances would permit, and as a result predict the election of William A. Hodges and sixteen Republican and seven Democratic councilmen. Investigation shows that there is but a small amount of disaffection among Democrats and that the citizens are going to vote more upon business than upon party lines. As to the charge in the LEDGER that Mr. Hodges has exceeded his authority in the matter of additional expenditures and change of plans for the High school house and the Hose houses in Wards two and four, it appeared so late and a holiday intervening, I have had no time to enquire into it. It is common knowledge however, that these contracts were a legacy from the previous administration; that there was a dispute between the city and state authorities in regard to the High school house construction; that the plans for the Hose houses were incomplete and insufficient, but there is no charge that one dollar of the city's money is to be found in the pocket of Mr. Hodges when the work was completed. He owes it to the people to explain this charge before election.

COUNSEL FEES.

The amounts paid by the city and that called for but not paid, for counsel fees, should receive the immediate attention of the City Council. Most everybody was astounded at the large sums paid from the treasury for this purpose in the Water purchase case, and many have been the surmises as to how the amount was divided and who shared in it. And now it appears there is another large bill of $4,500 claimed by Messrs. Cotter & McAnarney in the Woodward Fund case. I am informed that the counsel for Dartmouth College charged less than one-tenth of this amount, and Mayor Hodges ought to receive the thanks of the community for calling a halt in this line of expenditures. Let the City Council who have the people to guard, look thoroughly into this matter.

A POLITICAL TALE.

Once upon a time there was a Hose Company as part of the Fire Department. This company consisted of ten men who, by the vicissitudes of politics, were supplanted by ten others in May, 1894. The ten first named, then hired a club room, met almost nightly and discussed how to regain possession of the Hose house; how to again become members of the Fire Department and draw the salary attached thereto. After months of sharp discussion it was decided to bend all energies in one effort, which should be made manifest only at the Ward caucus. The caucus was held and to the astonishment of the rest of the Ward, the ten men removed in May, had so manipulated affairs that they succeeded in nominating three candidates for the City Council, all living at the extreme east end of the Ward and all within a circle of about six hundred feet. They also elected a majority of the Republican ward committee, and, what was of far more importance to them, and the main object of their desires, they chose a whole delegation to the mayorality convention. Now, as sometimes happens in politics, this delegation held the balance of power on account of a multiplicity of candidates. They therefore were in a position to dictate terms to the candidates, as they had but one object in view, which was the re-instatement of the "Old Hose Company," they proceeded to interview the candidates for Mayor, and see where they stood. These interviews were not based upon the fitness of the candidates to be Mayor of a growing city, their ability as business men, their knowledge of finance, or their grasp of public affairs so necessary to the proper conduct of public matters. Oh! No! They cared little for this side of the question. All they wanted to know, was, if you are elected Mayor will you appoint as Chief Engineer of the Fire Department the man who appointed us and who will get us back if he is again the chief? If I am correctly informed, this very question was put to our candidate, and when he declined to pledge himself, the delegation from the Ward cast their votes for another.

Thus we find that ten men, whose sole ambition is to get control of a hose company, have practically dictated to the citizens who the Republican party shall have as a candidate for Mayor. More than that, they have also named the three Republican candidates for the City Council and the members of the ward committee. Did the sublime idea of popular government ever before descend to such ridiculous depths? The question now is, to what extent will such conduct be indorsed by the citizens at the polls?

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach." CARLOS MARTYN, D. D., New York City.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Eructation, Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion. Without injurious medication.

"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results." EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., 125th Street and 7th Ave., New York City.

Mother's Posies.

Kind o' purty, don't yuh think ?
Green an' red an' yeller
Bloomin' in th' winder there
Sort o' makes a feller
Think't summer's back agin,
Even though he knows his
Eyes'v only caught th' shine
There uv mother's posies.

In th' ol' tomater cans
An' th' pots an' boxes,
There they bloom as big as life—
Pinks an' holyhockses
Creepin' things an' vi'lets, too,
Purty colors showin,'
Peekin' through the winder-pane
Out whur it's a-snowin.'

There's a great big fuzie there
Weth some ferns aside it,
An' a primrose weth some moss
Tryin' fer tuh hide it,
An' geraniums an' s'ch
Cluttered all together,
Bloomin' there like sixty an'
Laughin' at the weather.

Pots o' green an' pots o' red
Make up lights an' shadders,
Weth th' ivy an' th' vines
Climbin' up th' ladders
Whut I whittled out m'self
Jes fer them to grow on—
An' the'r banterin' th' snow
An' th' wind a-blowin'.

Yes, sirree, it's purty an'
Soothin' like, an' cheerin'
To set here on days like this
An' see mother clearin'
Out the dead leaves an' sich things
Frum th' vines an' phloxes
In th' ol' tomater cans
An' th' ol' pots an' boxes.

Notes and Comments.

—In the next congress there will be 21 states with no Democrat in their representation.

—The large new buildings, known as the Norwood Press Works, are to be dedicated Dec. 20, with a big time.

—Martin K. Pratt of Weymouth was 79 years of age last Tuesday. Mr. Pratt is the oldest newsdealer, we believe, in the country.

—The 12th annual report of the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea is an interesting pamphlet and proves that Massachusetts cares for its veterans.

—Western railroads have nerve. They asked the government to send troops to protect their property during the Chicago strike; now they ask the government to pay them for carrying troops to the seat of war.

—Tramps, or "gentlemen of leisure" are getting numerous and bold. It is said that several towns in this vicinity average sheltering twelve each night, and as they have to be fed and clothed by some one, it is equivalent to caring for twelve able-bodied men, for most of them are young and healthy. The law is all right. It says: "Any man found begging outside of his own town is a tramp and may be arrested by any officer on information and without a warrant."

How to Care for Food.

Every article of food should be covered until it appears on the table. Milk and butter should be kept in air-tight vessels and kept covered. They both take up every odor flying in the air, and are positively harmful to take into the stomach after standing uncovered for an hour or two, for not only odor, but the animalcuæ that fill the air, are attracted to milk and butter. Uncovered jelly is a menance to family health. It is in gelatine jelly that expert bacteriologists imprison germs of disease to watch them propagate. They seem to thrive better on that kind of food than any other, yet in two-thirds of the pantries in the city will be found half-used dishes or glasses of jelly standing uncovered.—Boston Budget.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

A. G. DURGIN, Quincy, Mass

The Pulpit and Congregation.

The No-License campaign at West Quincy was opened on Sunday by the pastor, preaching in the morning on the things to be put away:—boastful speech, lying, vanity, reckless haste for gain, intemperance, demagogues in office,—all these we may safely put away and dangerously retain. He had good words for the newspaper man, saying, long live the reporter, for he is more feared in Congress and in all places of corruption, than laws and courts and strings of conscience and thunders of Divine wrath. He will tell all he sees, tell it to a million people. By him every public man is followed and will be restrained if not converted. But the abuse of a free press is always to be condemned.

The music at the vesper services at the Wollaston Congregational church on Sunday evening was well rendered.

Bags from the New England Home for Little Wanderers were distributed among the attendants of the Wollaston Congregational Sunday School on Sunday. The vestry was opened Tuesday morning from 8 to 9, and contributions of fruit, vegetables or money will be received and duly forwarded to the Home.

The annual offering for the Foreign Missionery society was made at the Wollaston Congregational church on Sunday morning and $170 was collected. The amount will be made up to $200.

Mr. Jonas Shackley of the City Council, made a short speech in the temperance vesper service in the West Quincy Methodist church Sunday evening, and gave an account of two families wrecked by intemperance; and gave notice of a union temperance No-License meeting next Sunday evening at seven o'clock in St. Mary's hall. Rev. Mr. Virgin will speak at Quincy Point at the same hour, and there will be no evening service next Sunday at the West Quincy Methodist church.

Holy communion was celebrated at St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston, Sunday by the Rev. Prof. Kellerer of the Esiscopal Theological school, Cambridge, assisted by Mr. James B. Thomas, lay reader. Three little children were christened, Annie Adelaide, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Manuel Thompson of Atlantic and Victor Brooks and Lena Zoe, children of Mr. and Mrs Howard D. Fowler of Wollaston.

Rev. Robert Westly Peach, the pastor elect of the First Presbyterian church, preached to growing audiences Sunday morning and evening. In the morning his subject was "Preaching Christ," and took as his text—Act. 5: 42. In the evening he preached on "Riches: how to get them and what to do with them," basing his discourse on Luke 16: 9.

Mrs. Burbeck occupied the platform at Faxon hall Sunday evening. Her control gave a short address on God or good in all; that we should look for the best in ourselves and the world. She gave several psycrometric readings and gave many test most of which were recognized.

There were no services in the Methodist church West Quincy, on Thanksgiving Day.

Rev. Mr. Tenny was announced to deliver a temperance address in the vestry of West Quincy Methodist church last evening.

Rev. Preston Gurney of the Wollaston Baptist church took for his subject "The eye opening of the Soul." Luke 24: 31.

The music at the Wollaston Baptist Sunday School was especially good. Miss Mabel Parker of Malden rendered two solos from the "Cantata of Ruth."

On last Sunday the attendance at the Wollaston Baptist Sunday School was the largest with but one exception since its foundation, 174 being present.

At the First Unitarian church Sunday morning, Rev. Ellery Channing Butler preached an extremely interesting sermon from the text "Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given him." Another large increase in the attendance at vesper service in the afternoon again proved the wisdom of this undertaking. Mr. Nobbs sang the solo "Cojus Animan" from Stabat Mater magnificently.

The preacher of the morning at the Memorial Congregational church, Atlantic, was Rev. E. A. Jameson, supervisor of the Emerson College of Oratory. Topic, "Abundant Life." At the evening service Mrs. John Carver and Miss Susie Hall sang a duett, "Yes, we shall Remember."

The services of the Independent Presbyterian church, Sunday, in Wilson's hall, conducted by Rev. W. Steele, were attended by large, interesting and attentive audiences. Subjects discussed were: In the morning, "The Christian Sentinel," text, I Peter 1:13. In the evening, "Christian Science versus Christian Truths," text, II Peter 2:17. Sunday School and adult Bible class in the afternoon were well attended. These services are growing steadily in public favor as evidenced by the financial and other support given them. A cordial invitation to make this your church home where all are equally made welcome.

The services were all well attended at the Calvary Baptist church Sunday. The pastor preached on the "Holy Spirit." Mr. George Watt led the evening service.

Covering the Plants.

Plants should not be covered much before December, as we are likely to have warm spells quite late in the season, and too early covering often weakens the roots. Wait until you feel certain that settled cold weather is at hand, and then apply your covering. Do not simply heap it over the plant, but put it about it as well, because roots spread out from the crown, and are close beneath the surface of the soil on all sides, though unseen, and these require the same protection that is given those immediately beneath the crown. Cut away the old stalks before covering the plants. This enables you to do a neater job, and makes the garden more attractive in winter. Plants like the Pansy, whose tops do not die off, during the winter, should have a lighter covering than those whose tops die to the roots. A thin covering of leaves, with branches to hold them in place, is all that is required. Too many leaves, or too much litter has a tendency to smother the plants beneath. Cover the bulb-beds to the depth of six or eight inches. Coarse manure can be used. This can also be used about other plants, in the place of litter, and in spring it can be dug in about them, enriching the soil sufficiently to make it unnecessary to apply other fertilizers. If possible, get old manure, as that which has not lain long enough to become rotten will be pretty sure to contain great quantities of the seeds of weeds. If manure lies in the yard or pile long enough to decompose the vitality of these seeds is destroyed to a great extent. Fresh manure should never be used as a covering for plants, because of its tendency to ferment. Fermentation being a process involving a good deal of heat, the plants beneath are quite likely to be injured, because heat will excite action at a time when they should be in a dormant condition. A covering for the roots is advised for shrubs as well as berbaceous plants.

A Curious Document.

The following curious account for restoring a chapel was engraved in French, on a watch crystal in the Swiss department of the Vienna Exposition. The whole was placed on a scroll less than an inch square. The engraving itself is a curiosity, and the account goes to show the familiarity with which such subjects are treated in some countries. The copy, which I give below, was furnished by a friend, who took it himself from the watch crystal, which he saw during a recent visit to Europe. An account of a somewhat similar character has been heretofore published, but the present one has never been printed in English, and it will therefore prove an exceedingly quaint and interesting document to all who may see it:

A painter had been employed to repair a number of pictures in a convent. He did it, and presented a bill in full for fifty nine francs and eleven centimes, to the curate, who refused to pay it, saying, that the committee would require a complete detail. The painter produced it as follows:

	Francs.	Cen.
Corrected and renewed the Ten Commandments,	5	12
Embellished Pontius Pilate and put a ribbon in his bonnet,	3	06
Put a new tail on the rooster of St. Peter and mended his comb,	3	20
Replumed and gilded the left wing of Guardian Angel,	4	18
Washed the servant of the High Priest and put carmine on his cheeks,	5	12
Renewed Heaven, adjusted the stars, gilded the sun and cleaned the moon,	7	14
Reanimated the flames of Purgatory and restored some souls,	6	06
Revived the flames of Hell, put a new tail on the Devil, mended his left hoof, and did several jobs for the damned,	4	10
Rebordered the robes of Herod and readjusted his wig,	4	04
Put new spatter dashes on the son of Tobias and dressing on his sack,	2	00
Cleaned the eyes of Balaam's Ass, and shod him,	3	07
Put ear-rings in the ears of Sarah,	2	04
Put a new stone in David's sling enlarged the head of Goliah and extended his legs,	3	02
Decorated Noah's ark,	3	00
Mended the shirt of the Prodigal Son, and cleaned the pigs,	4	09

Carriage Drivers Dismissed.

Those who attended the District Court last Saturday expecting to obtain a look at Supt. Sanborn and Officer Bailey, two of the imprisoned railroad officials, were disappointed.

Constable Furnald visited Plymouth armed with a habeas and in the morning started for Quincy with the two men, but they only got a short distance when they turned about and went back. This action on the part of Mr. Sanborn and Mr. Bailey was on account of the fact that the decision that Judge Humphrey would probably decide against them on the legality of the appointment of Officer Bailey as a railroad police officer at the Quincy station.

When the cases were called in court on Saturday, Mr. Blackmur, counsel for the government, addressing the court, said: "These cases were brought Oct. 11, and the defence has required us to go into all technical matters which has occasioned several continuance. At the last hearing the court discussed what appeared to be an error in the filing of the appointment of Mr. Bailey as a railroad police at Quincy. Mr. Bailey was appointed by the selectmen of Mansfield and a notice of said appointment was sent to the City Clerk at Quincy, but the list of names was signed by the clerk of the board of selectmen while the defence claimed it should have been signed by the town clerk, and on this point the case was continued until this morning. When these cases were brought Mr. Sanborn and Mr. Bailey were enjoying freedom but since that time they have been placed in durance vile and in view of the keen feeling on the part of Mr. Sanborn, the railroad officials had instructed him to move that these cases be dismissed, for even if we sustain our positions here the case will go to Dedham, which will require the taking of these men there two or three times.

Mr. McAnarney had no objection to the men being found not guilty and discharged, but objected to the cases being dismissed, as his clients would still be under a ban.

The court said that he likened this case to a decision of the Supreme Court, 149 Massachusetts page 7, which was a liquor nuisance brought in the Newton court, where before the trial was finished the case was nol prossed and later a new complaint was issued which covered in part the original case.

The case was carried to the Supreme Court where a decision that a dismissal was a bar to any future complaint in the same case, and as the court had not gone into the merits of this case, the court ordered the case dismissed and the defendants discharged.

According to this decision no future complaint can be made on the same case, but complaints can be issued for an offence of the same kind in the future.

How to Open an Oyster.

Hold the mollusk firmly in a cloth, insert the point of a knife neatly just before the edge of the upper shell, give a quick, decided pressure till the point is felt to glide along the polished newer surface of the under shell; force it sharply to the hinge, give a smart wrench rather toward the right hand and off comes the shell. Then pass the knife quickly under the oyster, separate the attachment, let it fall into the lower shell, floating in its own juice, lift it quickly to the lips and eat it before the delicate aroma has been dissipated into the atmosphere. There is as much difference between an oyster thus opened and eaten as between champagne frothing and leaping out of the silver-necked bottle and the same wine after it has been allowed to stand for six hours with the cork removed.—Boston Herald.

As With One Accord.

A witty individual one morning wagered that he would ask the same question of fifty different persons and receive the same answer from each. The wit went first to one and then to the other, until he had reached the number of fifty. And this is how he won the bet. He whispered, half audibly to each:

"I say, have you heard that Smith has failed ?"

"What Smith?" queried the whole fifty, one after another; and it was decided that the bet had been fairly won.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

And one who has children will rejoice with K. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cent bottles

For the Patriot.

Stop and Think.

Why all this pretended opposition to the action of the Metropolitan Park Commission who have just preserved our sources of water supply in the Blue Hills? We have only begun to make a start in the right direction! But then, what can you expect of a city that appreciates open spaces so little as to allow two dwelling houses to be built in front of the Coddington yard.

This talk of the "great loss to the city" in taxable property by the Blue Hills takings for park purposes, is very childish. If we were an individual borough in the metropolitan city of Boston, joined together on the plan of the individaul States and the Union, these matters of Metropolitan Parks would settle themselves.

It is said that the desire to be a part of the imperial city of Boston, is a mere sentiment. Rather let us say that the imaginary line that the business men of Boston skip over every night to escape their share of the responsibility of governing their own business community, shows a very great sentiment of cowardice.

The Old Colony road is managed by New Haven officials; the Boston and Albany by N. Y. Central; the Boston and Maine by friends of Pullman, the American Express company and the New Hampshire brewers; the N. Y. and N. E. is not managed at all and the Fitchburg, although set up by the State, is not independent. How much better it would be to place all these prodigal sons of the people of Massachusetts, under a receiver for the Commonwealth, and have them owned by the State. Or have all the true sons of Massachusetts gone West or died out ?

Commonwealth of Massachusetts! Why do we continue to use the word "Commonwealth ?" When the Commonwealth was established, and for a century afterwards, the State was not honeycombed with foreign corporations; the highways, such as they were belonged to the people, so did the shipping that carried our commerce, so did the water-power that run our factories, so did the fuel supply and the oil supply. It was indeed, then, a commonwealth of little republics, but what can we call it now!

NORFOLK DOWNS.

The Boston Stage.

Boston Theatre.

"In Old Kentucky" still holds the boards at the Boston Theatre, and now, as in the earlier days of its presentation, it attracts a crowded audience at every performance. It is idle at this stage to enter into any detailed description of the sources of its popularity, beyond the mere statement of the fact that it contains all the elements of pathos and pleasure which through all the ages have appealed to the hearts and heads of humanity. The company is a strong one, the comedy work is especially attractive, and the pickanninny capers furnish a first rate entertainment of themselves.

Tremont Theatre.

For over 140 nights Mr. Spenser's "The Princess Bonnie has been presented to overflowing audiences at the Broad Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and it comes from there direct to Boston next week. The organization, which is under the personal direction of the author, is said to be the strongest and most expensive in America. Mr. Frank Daniels is the chief comedian in the cast, and it is said to have made the hit of his life. A principal figure in the cast, and one sure to excite marked attention here is a Boston girl, of ascribed radiant beauty and grace, Miss Elenore Mayo a daughter of the well known actor, Mr. Frank Mayo. Miss Mayo adds to her personal charms the possession of a beautiful voice, finely cultivated.

Columbia Theatre.

The first appearance of Miss Marie Burroughs as a star will occur in Boston at the Columbia Theatre, December 3, and on that occasion she will present "The Profligate," by A. W. Pinero. Miss Burroughs is one of the favorites among all the artistes, who visit this city, and her stellar intentions having been long heralded have aroused an unusual interest in her debut. Her excellent work with E. S. Willard has endeared her to many, and the arduous parts that she assumed with such ease and grace have long ago proven her ability to rank with the leading lights of the American stage. "The Profligate," which she has selected for her opening, is said to be one of the most powerful dramas that this talented author has yet written.

Mr. Ira P. Wetmore a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy in his family for several years as occasion requires, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home.

Salted Almonds.

Salted almonds are not difficult to make at home. After the nuts are shelled pour boiling water over them and let them stand two or three minutes, when they blanch very easily; then place them on flat tins or dishes and put into the oven until they are light brown, stirring them frequently, so that they may brown evenly, and taking great care not to let them get too dark. When they are sufficiently brown remove them from the oven and let them get thoroughly cooled; then take the white of an egg, without beating, put it into a large dish and turn the almonds into it. Stir until the almonds are covered with the egg, then spread once more upon the plates, and, with a fine wire strainer, sprinkle the salt over them evenly on both sides. Use the finest table salt. Return the almonds to the oven and stir them frequently.

The Kind That Cures

Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Female Complaints, Nervous Prostration, La Grippe. Blood, Nerve, Kidney, or Skin Troubles.

Dyspepsia Cured.

MRS. CHAS. VILLIERS, of SOUTH BRAINTREE, MASS., suffered with acute Dyspepsia, constant Sick Headache and Vomiting. Nothing brought her relief. She finally tried DANA'S; it CURED her. Her words are, "I felt a great deal better before I finished one bottle. DANA'S CURED me, for I can now eat anything without distress; no more vomiting; no more Sick Headache."

Great Faith in Dana's.

MRS. MARY E. FREEMAN, of SOUTH FOXBORO, MASS., had great faith in DANA'S, and it was justified. She suffered greatly from Sores and Ulcers, from Impure Blood. DANA'S CURED her.

Tells his Friends to "Try DANA'S."

MR. WM. F. HUTCHINSON, of WOLLASTON, MASS., says that DANA'S is just what is claimed for it, and he has no hesitation in advising the afflicted to "Try DANA'S."

Household Receipts.

COFFEE JELLY. Soak one-half box of gelatine in one-half cupful of cold water. Make a quart of strong, clear coffee and strain it. Sweeten to taste with sugar, making it a little sweeter than would be desired if the coffee were to drink. Set it on the fire until it is boiling hot, then pour it at once on the gelatine. Put into wet moulds. This is nice served with ice-cream or with cream alone.

SQUASH PIE. One-half of a cupful of stewed squash, one-half of a tablespoonful of smooth corn-starch, one-half of a teaspoonful of vanilla, one pint of milk, one egg, one-half of a saltspoonful of salt, three tablespoonfuls sugar. Bake in open shell of pastry.

PUMPKIN PIE. One and one-half cupfuls of stewed and sifted pumpkin, one cupful of boiling milk, half of a cupful of sugar, half of a teaspoonful of salt, one saltspoonful of cinnamon, one egg.

HARRISON CAKE. One cupful of sugar, one half of a cupful of butter, three eggs well-beaten, half a teaspoonful of soda stirred in half a cupful of sour milk, two small cupfuls of flour. Flavor. Bake half an hour.

CORN MEAL CAKE. Two coffee cups of corn meal, one of flour, one teaspoonful of soda, two of cream of tartar, one tablespoonful (scant) of salt and two tablespoonfuls of sugar; mix these thoroughly through a sifter, and make into a thin batter with sweet milk, or milk and water; bake in a pan that will give you a cake about two inches thick in a very hot oven.

POTATO CROQUETTES. Take a pint of mashed boiled potatoes, add the beaten yolks of two eggs, half a teacup of thick cream, a teaspoonful of butter, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne, and a little grated nutmeg. Mix, and turn into a frying-pan, stir over the fire until thick and smooth, take off, spread on a dish to cool. When firm form into croquettes, roll first in beaten egg, then in grated bread crumbs, and fry in boiling fat.

Literary Notes.

The Arena with its big Christmas number of 200 pages opens the eleventh volume, and its increasing bulk as well as the repute of its contributors and the standard and character of its literature, indicate its extending influence and prosperity. In the December issue there are contributions from some of the greatest writers of our day, and some of the most delightful and entertaining of the younger American essayists and fictionists.

The question is an important one as to whether the Mormons will control the new State of Utah after its admission into the Union and at some future time revive polygamy. The question whether the polygamists will control this new State will be discussed in the December Forum by Mr. Glen Miller, a well-in-formed resident of Salt Lake City.

The Christmas number of Scribner's Magazine presents a remarkable list of popular writers, including Rudyard Kipling, Robert Grant, H. C. Bunner, Brander Matthew and George W. Cable. In illustration it shows a number of novel features. There are twenty pictures representing the most characteristic phases of Watt's art, both the wood engravings and the process plates showing a delicacy that is seldom seen.

Soiled Wall Paper.

When a wall paper is soiled by any but a grease spot, which always comes through, it is enough to put over it a spare piece of the paper, kept for the purpose. But this paper, which has been preserved rolled up in a dark closet, will have faded much less than that upon the wall; it is, therefore, necessary to expose it in sunlight until it becomes of the same general tone. If the pattern is a simple one it is well to follow its outlines in cutting the new piece. In all cases the edges of the piece to be applied should be scraped down with fine sandpaper, so that the outline of the patch shall not show too plainly. Nail holes can be covered in this manner so that the repair shall be quite invisible.—Boston Budget.

How to Make Money.

I suppose you have heard some whispers about how much money our drinking habits cost us every year. Some say it is as much as ten hundred millions of dollars and they tell us that with this amount we could give two and one-half barrels of flour to every man, woman and child in the country, or build a church in every town, a schoolhouse in every school district, and support teachers and ministers for them all. But then you know that if the money was not wasted in alcoholic liquors, we could not get hold of it directly to do any of these things. Still it is an easy matter to find out what would become of it if men should quit drinking. A very large share of it would go just where it is most needed, to the wives and children of the drunkards. Instead of starvation and and rags, and grinding poverty, it would bring them food and clothing, and comfort in the place of squalor and disease, and misery.

There would be health, and sunshine, and happiness in the place of ignorance, crime, and uncleanness. There would be education, and innocence, and purity, and immediately the influence would begin to flow out into all the avenues of society and business. First it would shut up the prisons, as it has done in many places where it has been fairly tried. An immense number of men who now spend their time in drinking and drunkenness, would be making something useful or beautiful. We should have better and more reliable servants and more efficient workmen. We should save money and anxiety by having fewer accidents. We should not fear for ourselves nor for our friends, that some engineer would drive us all to ruin, nor that some tipsy man would misplace a switch. Even the sea would lose its terrors, and the families of seafaring men would look serenely over the stormy waters, confidently expecting the return of their loved ones.—MISS JULIA COLMAN.

—There were 1073 desertions from the United States Army during the year ending June 30 last, as compared with 3672 in the year ending June 30, 1884. This improvement is attributed to better rations, better barracks and better chances of promotion.

☞ It is the opinion of connoisseurs that during the year 1894, the best magazine—the entire twelve months through—has been "Harper's." This opinion covers not only the illustrations, but the literary features. Our readers who want the best will not ignore this fact.

Mortgagee's Sale
— OF —
REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Louis D. Boisclair and Elizabeth Boisclair, wife of the said Louis D. Boisclair, in her own right, to Adoniram Burrell, dated March 18, A. D., 1891, and recorded with the Norfolk Deeds, libro 651, folio 242, will be sold at Public Auction for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, upon the premises set forth in said mortgage and hereinafter described, on MONDAY, the 17th day of December, A. D., 1894, at eleven-thirty o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:

A certain parcel of land situated in that part of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, called Atlantic, on the easterly side of Squantum street, being the southerly half of lot B, as shown on a plan of this and adjoining lands recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 527, folio 257, and said parcel is bounded and described as follows, viz: Westerly by said Squantum street, twenty-eight and 15-100 (28.15) feet; northerly by the northerly half of said lot B, by a line drawn from the middle point of the westerly boundary of said lot B to the middle point of the easterly boundary of said lot B, as shown on said plan, about one hundred and twelve (112) feet; easterly by lot C, as shown on said plan, twenty-nine and 15-100 (29.15) feet, and southerly by land now or formerly of heirs of George B. Billings, one hundred and eleven and 88-100 (111.88) feet. Said premises are subject to a prior mortgage of $900, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 580, folio 154.

Also another certain parcel of land in that part of said Quincy called Atlantic, comprising a part of lot numbered thirty-nine (39) on a plan entitled "Plan of House Lots at Atlantic Station, North Quincy," drawn by L. Biggs & Co., surveyors, April, 1871, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds. No. 199. Said parcel is bounded and described as follows, viz.:

Beginning at a point on the easterly side of Squantum street, distant twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet, northerly from the southwesterly corner of said premises; thence running northerly on said Squantum street, twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet to land now or formerly of C. E. Swett; thence turning and running easterly by land now or formerly of said Swett, one hundred and ten (110) feet to land now or formerly of John Wakely; thence turning and running southerly on land now or formerly of said John Wakely, twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet to land now or formerly of said Burrell; thence turning and running westerly by said land now or formerly of said Burrell, about one hundred and eleven (111) feet to the point of beginning. Said premises are subject to a prior mortgage of $800, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 576, Fol. 103. Being the same premises conveyed to Elizabeth Boisclair by Adoniram Burrell, by deed dated March 18, 1891, and recorded in said deeds. Said premises will be sold subject to any and all unpaid taxes and assessments. $100 will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

Poetry.

Under the Holly Bough.

Ye who have scorned each other,
Or injured friend or brother,
  In this fast-fading year;
Ye who, by word or deed,
Have made a kind heart bleed,
  Come gather here.
Let sinned against and sinning
Forget their strife's beginning,
  And join in friendship now;
Be links no longer broken,
Be sweet forgiveness spoken
  Under the holly-bough.

Ye who have loved each other,
Sister and friend and brother,
  In this fast fading year;
Mother and sire and child,
Young man and maiden mild,
  Come gather here;
And let your hearts grow fonder
As memory shall ponder
  Each past unbroken vow;
Old loves and younger wooing
Are sweet in the renewing
  Under the holly-bough.

Ye who have nourished sadness,
Estranged from hope and gladness,
  In this fast-fading year;
Ye with o'erburdened mind,
Made aliens from your kind—
  Come gather here.
Let not the useless sorrow
Pursue you night and morrow,
  If e'er you hope, hope now—
Take heart, uncloud your faces,
And join in our embraces
  Under the holly-bough.

CHARLES MACKAY.

Miscellany.

A Bohemian Love-Story.

Mrs. Smith's opposition to the grading of D street, San Diego, had not rescued her from the necessity of parting with some eight hundred dollars at the suggestion of those in authority. She might build a wall in front of her house, or have it raised to the level of the street and her lot filled eight or ten feet—or she might expect an avalanche of mud to accompany the first rain, followed by a bill of damages representing the majesty of the powers.

Mrs Smith was not a gifted woman. She had not fathomed the mysteries of trade and speculation; she was unable to make two dollars do the work of four. Therefore she decided in favor of the wall.

Thus a pleasant and well-lighted first floor was converted into something resembling a basement, and Mrs. Smith's income from rents was reduced at least one-third.

All the former tenants had moved out prior to the building of the wall, excepting Dr. Mary Dodwell, an electrician. She enlarged the boundaries of her dominion from two rooms to the whole of the second floor and persuaded Mrs. Smith to connect her front porch with the street by means of an elevated walk.

The lower rooms were soon taken. One sheltered Miss Nelson, a dressmaker of timid temper, who sewed by the day when her eyes were strong enough, and, when they were not, aggravated the difficulty by ceaseless weeping. Another housed Mr. Stanley, an aged bookkeeper who had no regular employment. Miss Helen Gerald bustled into another. She was a typesetter who had not yet finished her apprenticeship.

Then Clayton Gibbs engaged two rooms. He was very pale, and, if anyone knocked on his door, there was always the creaking of a bed before he appeared to open it. So it was conjectured that he was an invalid, also that he had a limited income.

Last of all came Miss Savannah Moore, who settled her effects with such dexterous utilization of limited facilities, such easy swinging of the sightly into prominence and the offensive into hiding, as at once declared her an experienced Bohemian. A few weeks of benevolent-intentioned spying sufficed to fix her status as a person "without visible means of support."

Perhaps she was unable to find employment. Certainly she had strength to work; she must lack either desire or opportunity. She was not old, although her hair was quite gray. Her face had roundness and freshness, and her eyes dwelt on all objects with the fascinated interest and scrutiny seldom observed apart from youth. Miss Dodwell said that she was probably twenty-five years of age, Miss Nelson advanced the claims of twenty-three as a limit, Miss Gerald named twenty-eight, and Mr. Stanley laughed at all figurers beyond twenty-one.

It was with extreme diffidence that Miss Nelson approached Miss Moore with her plan of relief. She knew that Miss Moore never entered the rooms of other tenants, nor invited them to visit her, nor lingered chatting, in her doorway.

But the gray-haired tenant put the good little sewing-woman at her ease, even while, holding the needle-pricked fingers between her own soft palms, she acknowledged her ignorance of "seam and gusset and band."

Mr. Stanley was a true philanthropist; had he been less, he would not have volunteered to lengthen the already long list of his competitors for employment.

Miss Moore assured him, with grateful recognition of his generosity, that she never expected to be a book-keeper.

Clayton Gibbs, lying on his bed near his open thinly-curtained back window, overheard perforce the four good-tempered conspirators deploring that Miss Moore—such a sweet thing, too!—had no faculty for making herself comfortable. He smiled, glanced about his shabbily furnished apartment, and wrote a marginal note in the book he had been reading:

"Another?"

The next morning, after Miss Moore had taken a letter from the postman's hand, he crossed the hall and delivered a large parcel to Clayton Gibbs, over whose pale face a flush passed as he received it and closed the door.

"Another?" Miss Moore whispered, in profoundest sympathy, as she closed her own.

She had recognized, or thought she had, the anguish of an author not yet accustomed to the sight of rejected manuscripts.

Clayton went out soon with the package in his hands. He returned without it.

Miss Moore, become suddenly observant of her neighbor's movements, understood that he had already mailed his manuscript to another publisher.

* * * *

Again the postman knocked, first on Miss Moore's door, and next crossed the hall to Clayton's room.

The two Bohemians stood still in their respective doorways. Clayton was a little paler than usual. Miss Moore looked in his face, blushed, held forth suggestively that which she had just received, and said:

"We will seek other publishers."

Then misery's recognition of misery passed from eye to eye, its seal of good-fellowship with itself from hand to hand.

Once initiated, their acquaintanceship progressed with marvelous rapidity. In less than a week, they had exchanged views on isms and ologies, and had each learned the history of the other's struggles, failures, and successes.

After the second refusal of his manuscript, Clayton gave up one of his rooms; two weeks later, he forswore restaurant fare and prayed Miss Moore to teach him true Bohemianism. After that, they often ate together.

Clayton Gibb had only ventured upon authorship a short time before taking rooms in Mrs. Smith's house. He had been a school-master. Partial failure of health had warned him to give up teaching.

Miss Moore confessed that she was not a novice. Her first publisher had never forsaken her. She supplied him with one short story each month, for which she received five dollars. That was her only certainty. Her other manuscripts were rejected again and again. An exceptionally fortunate month's work brought her twenty dollars; she sometimes had only the five.

Clayton remained indoors less and his physical condition improved, week by week, until a glad hope of fleshly wholeness grew up within him. He sought light employment without success. Too many feeble-bodied persons without income, were before him on the same errand. Had he been a stout day-laborer, he might have found a shovel awaiting the strength of his arms.

One morning, Miss Moore presented herself at his door, and, with a laughing courtesy, announced:

"Breakfast is served."

"I have decided to discontinue the practice of taking my meals with you," he said.

"Ah, fortune must have smiled yesterday, if you are able to desert true Bohemia today."

"May not true Bohemia be found in my own room?"

"Doubtless; and starvation also, perhaps. Pardon me! There are circumstances under which the gods themselves would pardon meddling. Does not your decision mean that your purse is empty, and that you are unwilling to let me pay for the bread you eat?"

"The gods that pardon your question may also pardon me for not replying to it."

"Which is equivalent to admitting the truth of my conjecture. But have we not over and over declared ourselves comrades? If neither of us had a penny, and you had a loaf, I would except half of it; then why should you not accept half of mine?"

"You are altogether lovely in my eyes—a most glorious woman, a most delightful companion. I would gladly make your life easier; I cannot endure to make it harder."

"You make it harder when you refuse to be my guest."

Still he hesitated.

"Come," she urged, "I am unusually rich today because of a letter I received yesterday; you will not spoil my happiness by refusing to share it?"

"That makes a difference," he said, as he followed obediently to her room.

She had contrived to brown toast nicely in a smooth pan heated over the one burner of her tiny oil-stove; then, covering the toast tightly in the pan, had set it aside while she boiled a pot of water for cocoa.

Seeing that she had only toast, and cocoa without cream, Clayton looked at Miss Moore with his first doubt of her in his eyes.

Had she sold a manuscript? If the good news had come to her while he was out walking the day before, why had not the avalanche of happiness overflowed into his room in the usual way? Why had she kept the good intelligence from him over-night?

His doubts were confirmed by the slight flush on her face and the downcast avoidance of her usually frank eyes.

He swallowed one thin slice of the bread and refused another.

"Alas," she said, "I have been guilty of great extravagance: I have browned toast for Miss Dodwell's dog, already fat from overfeeding."

Clayton looked into her pan It was true; she had three more slices. He accepted a second.

During the forenoon, Clayton's faith was partly re-established by seeing Miss Moore purchase from a huckster a box of strawberries, for which she paid twenty-five cents.

For lunch, they had one-fourth of a loaf of brown bread and a small saucer of the berries each.

One morning, a few days later, they had neither cocoa nor berries. There was one thin slice of bread each, not toast; there was no longer oil for the tiny stove.

"This is the end of your resources?"

"Yes."

"Then you deceived me for the happiness of sharing your last penny with me?"

She cast her eyes down for a moment, lifted them again boldly, and replied:

"Yes, I deceived you; I do not regret it."

He studied her face.

"You did it very bunglingly, after all," he said. "It was quite absurd of me to believe you. I fear that my reason fell into rank behind my desires, when I did so. Now I may see your eyes again, I suppose; you have hidden them of late. You are a child—a mere baby—in simulation. Yet I have eaten your bread."

"Oh, you shall sell your next tale, I'll wager a basketful of rejected essays. You shall write a Thanksgiving story, frightful with delineations of starvation verified by experience of it."

"I have eaten your bread and condemned you to starvation."

"Nonsense, foolish boy; as if there were no alternatives. I have been nearer to suffering without pitying myself a tear' worth."

"Your pardon! But why do you patronize me with such titles as 'young friend and 'boy'! Am I in a fault-finding mood, or are you endeavoring to create artificial barriers between yourself and me?"

The pink of her cheeks deepened to rosiest red, and her eyes smiled briefly without the help of her lips. But the glow in them faded as she replied:

"Is it an artificial barrier? You have said that you are twenty-seven years of age; I am thirty-six."

"Surely you jest! Thirty-six," with that face? I thought myself at least three years your senior."

"And that hair, she added, smiling faintly. She was beginning to find humor of a grim sort in the situation.

"Gray hairs have no bearing; girls of eighteen parade them nowadays."

Miss Moore sprung to her feet.

"The postman," she whispered.

A little later, Clayton retired to his room with two letters in his hands.

Perhaps a half-hour had elapsed when he tapped on Miss Moor's door.

Her look of interest and inquiry elicited no response from him. He seated himself without speaking, and contemplated the matting on the floor. turning the two letters over and over in his hands.

At last, Miss Moore drew her chair nearer to him and said softly:

"Do not feel downcast; if the news is bad today, something better may come to—"

"Oh," he said, with a start as from dreaming, "it is not bad, I dare say. I concealed from you my latest undertaking. I condensed my book-manuscript into long essays suitable for publication in three installments in a magazine to which I offered it. I have received thirty dollars for it. Two years of labor for thirty dollars; isn't that gratifying to ambition? Not that I expected more, I am very glad to have sold it all all. My gloom is partly retrospective and partly contemplative. Read this."

He tossed a letter upon her knees.

After reading it, she looked up with a bright congratulatory smile and said:

You should be singing and shouting. This does not mean the abandonment of pure literature; then why be melancholy? 'Edit a non-partisan weekly newspaper'—why not? This company of men who have bought their printing outfit and charged you with the conduct of their venture have shown, in my opinion, rare insight in their selection of an editor. I can only wonder how they learned of your existence."

"The letter comes from a town in which I taught school for four years. I already know a little of type-setting; I do not shrink from learning more, nor from working up a subscription-list and soliciting advertisements, and the editorial labors will be in harmony with my convictions. But there is a difficulty, though, if you fail to discover it; I must—I will—overcome it!"

"As if you must see with my eyes!" She laughed nervously, beginning to understand that he dreaded separation from her.

"In this matter, I must at least try to do so. Of course, you would not—will not—go with me?"

"Again I repeat, why not? I can learn to set type, and I think I can be useful in many ways. Not that I should work less faithfully for you, but I should be so much happier working in your company."

"You are willing to go as a fellow-laborer? I shall be glad of your society in any capacity; but I will admit the truth now; I would like also to take you into my arms sometimes. I love you with such love as that. If you could be my wife, as well as my friend and comrade—if you could forget, as I do, the few years that lie between us—could you?"

Bewilderment touched her face—distinct surprise; then a great warm glow of happiness transfigured it, answered him, and, as they clasped hands, she said again softly:

"Why not?"

Placing the Plants Position.

Most persons imagine that it is necessary to have a large number of plants in order to produce much of an effect with them. Such is not the case, however; it is with these as with many other things—good taste and good judgment accomplish wonders with a small amount of material In order to produce a massive effect in banking plants it is not necessary that there should be a thick and solid mass of foliage. Place tall plants in the rear; use smaller ones among them by mounting them on tables or small stands in such a manner as to make them seem to be larger than they are; that is, by raising them from the low position they would occupy were the pots to stand on the floor. If this part of the work is done carefully, the gaps between large plants can be filled in so well that there will seem to be no "gaps." and the effect will be one of a solid mass of folliage. In this way small plants work in effectively. Many little pots of trailing plants can be disposed among the larger ones in such a way as to conceal the pots containing the large plants, Aim to cover up tubs and pottery with greenery; this not only hides unsightliness, but helps to furnish that background of green which gives the idea of solid masses of foliage, and makes it easy to display the few flowers you may have to use among them in the most effective manner. I would not advise using cut flowers here. I would have only such flowers as were borne on the plants used. Keep the cut flowers for use on the mantles and also on the tables.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Advice for Old People.

The London Lancet says: Old people make a great mistake when they give up work. Many men who have made a competency in business and feel entitled to retire from active work find themselves declining in health and becoming prematurely old for want of occupation. In most aged persons the vital functions continue in active exercise under normal conditions, but if the regularity and moderation of business life are departed from, trouble will surely follow. On the other hand, the Lancet held that "if in any direction it is allowable for competitors in the race of life to dispense with self control it would appear that they may, to a great extent, use this liberty with respect to physical and mental exertion." In other words, we must not eat too much or drink too much, but we may study hard and take plenty of exercise not only without harm, but with the best results, and if old people wish to live out all the days they should find plenty to do for both mind and body.

Our moon weighs one-eightieth as much as the earth. No other satellite in the solar system exceeds one one-thousandth the weight of its planet.

To Conquer Diphtheria.

Less subtle, but more violent and as deadly as consumption, and not controlled by the seasons or frosts, like some malarias or fevers, diphtheria has oftentimes become a pestilence. Of course the ravages of the disease have not equaled that of uncontrolled small-pox. Yet the discovery by Profs. Behrens of Berlin and Roux of Paris of the magic serum, that will cure the dread throat disease, seems only less beneficial to the human race than the earlier finding of Dr. Jenner.

In our great cities the annual list of deaths from diphtheria is appaling. In New York they amount to some 800. According to the estimate of Dr. Cyrus Edson of New York, they amount to about 40,000 in the country at large. The term as applied to the disease was first noticed in Massachusetts in 1858. In 1863 the deaths from diphtheria and croup, which is always classed with it in the reports, were 1420. In 1867 there were but 251 deaths from these causes. In 1876 the number rose to 2610, and to 2734 in 1877. During 20 years from 1871 to 1890, the number of registered deaths from croup and diphtheria was 36,553, or 5.1 per cent. of the total mortality from all causes. It was equivalent to an annual mortality rate of ten in 10,000 of the living population. In 1891 there were 591 deaths in Massachusetts.

The immense good that some reliable preventive of or cure for this disease might do may be seen from the above figures. The claim of the discoverer of the diphtheria cure is that any case if taken within 24 hours of the beginning of the attack may be cured. The disease has long been well understood. Indeed it has been known that a person having once had a genuine attack of the malady seldom suffered a second time. This was the starting point for the investigators. What is the secret action of diphtheria on the human system that prevents the success of its own second attack? they inquired of each other. And can a similar result be brought about artificially?

The process of cure is very simple. Indeed, it is so simple that many reputable physicians have been inclined to question it. The theory is this. The human system naturally resists disease. Some property hostile to it is at once generated. In the case of diphtheria, it is "anti-toxine," and when enough of it is present the patient recovers. It then remained to produce this artificially. It is a costly process, as one animal is only capable of producing a a small amount, and it takes several months to do it.

Horses are the best animals for the production of the serum, but a great many of them die, as the doses of the poison given them to produce the serum rapidly are necessarily large. And one horse will not yield over 150 doses in a month at best.

France has started a department for the Pasteur Institute, with a subscription of more than $51,000. The Budget Committee have voted 100,000 francs for a similar work. The Board of Health of New York has asked an appropriation, and the Boston board has taken the preliminary steps toward a trial of the remedy. The modern scientist has been accused of following the example "Aunt Deborah," who cut holes in her best table cloths for the sake of showing her skill in darning. But if the scientist finds many new and unknown microbes, he at least finds, oftentimes, an anti-toxine for them.—Boston Journal.

The Influence of Trifles.

Jefferson was fond of telling a story which illustrates in a forcible manner the importance that absurdly insignificant matters may sometimes assume. When the deliberative body that gave the world the Declaration of Independence was in session, its procceedings were conducted in a hall close to which was situated a livery stable. The weather was warm, and from the stable came swarms of flies that lighted on the legs of the honorable members, and, biting through the thin silk stockings then in fashion, gave infinite annoyance. It was no uncommon sight, said Jefferson, to see a member making a speech with a large handkerchief in hand, and pausing at every moment to thrash the flies from his thinly protected calves. The opinion of the body was not unanimous in favor of the document, and under other circumstances, discussion might have been protracted for days, if not weeks; but the flies were intolerable. Efforts were made to find another hall, free from the pests, but in vain. As the weather became warmer the flies grew worse, and the flapping of handkerchiefs was heard all over the hall as an accompaniment to the voices of the speakers. In despair, at last some one suggested that matters be hurried so that the body might adjourn and get away from the flies. There were a few mild protests, but no one heeded them, the immortal declaration was hurriedly copied, and, with handkerchiefs in hand fighting flies as they came, the members hastened up to the table to sign the authentic copy and leave the flies in the lurch. Had it not been for the livery stable and its inmates, there is no telling when the document would have been completed, but it certainly would not have been signed on the Fourth of July.—New York Sun.

A Word for Bananas.

The banana has a high recommendation as an article of food because of its nutritious character. One authority announces that one pound of this fruit has more nutriment than three pounds of meal or as many pounds of potatoes, while as a food it is said to be in every sense superior to wheat bread. The natives of the West Indies and other tropical countries subsist largely upon them and find them, as chemists do, a food containing a large amount and variety of nutriment. A friend of the writer's makes them a special and exclusive article of food when he has work requiring considerable and particular attention and accuracy at a time when a regular meal and other food would weaken the action of the mind. He finds that the banana in such case digests easily and makes no diminution or mental concentration, while, at the same time, the required sustenance of mind and body is obtained.—Good Houskeeping.

—At this season of the year, advertisements become news matter. In every household there are those who are looking for holiday bargains. The spirit of Christmas presentations broods over the land, and the eyes of kindliness and forethought scan the merchants' columns with keener vision than that with which they read the important city locals, the general telegraphic dispatches, or even the fashion notes.—Printer's Ink.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, DEC. 8, 1894.

Metropolitan District.

The Metropolitan District Commission Thursday advertised a hearing on the "Greater Boston" scheme, as it is familiarly known. But the commission has found that the greater Boston plan is very unpopular—that the suburban cities and towns with scarcely an exception, are opposed to it—and they have modified their notice quite materially as a reading will show. The Act, Chap. 446 of 1894, provides that the board shall investigate the following subjects:

First. The advisability of establishing a general government, with limited powers, for the city of Boston and the surrounding cities and towns, generally denominated as the metropolitan district, allowing each municipality independence in local affairs but conferring upon the general government authority in matters which can be administered to better advantage by a general government.

Second. The advisability of uniting such cities and towns into one municipality by annexing the same, or any of them, to the city of Boston.

Third. The advisability of any other system of entire or partial union of such municipalities for purposes of municipal administration.

Chap. 446 is "An Act to provide for an investigation of the subject of a general municipal administration for the city of Boston and adjoining municipalities." The main idea of annexation is reported to have been abandoned but this should be understood at the hearing, as Quincy is against annexation first and last.

As to metropolitan parks, we seem to have all we want and more too. They promise to be a burden for the next 50 years and the big assessments were saddled upon the district with little regard for the taxpayers.

Quincy wants a sewerage system and the State should help the cities and towns south of Boston as well as on the north. A metropolitan sewer would be a good thing, but a commission is all that is necessary; in fact there is probably a commission now.

At the present time we see no need of placing other departments under expensive commissions which give the people and taxpayers little voice in public affairs, but we trust there will be a full expression pro and con at the hearing next Monday evening.

Our Kindergarten.

At last a kindergarten school is successfully going in Quincy. One has been started a number of times, but until now, has not got fairly in motion. This is a private kindergarten started in connection with our favorite old Greenleaf street school, and Miss Arnold, of Braintree, assisted by Miss Mayhew, is teaching it. A visit there was a pleasant surprise. There are only fifteen pupils, but there is room for a few more little ones. Their ages ranges from three to five years.

The baby minds are awakened by most pleasant ways, and eyes, brains, feet and hands respond to many different exercises which follow, so the little heads are not allowed to get tired. For one session these tiny ones are happy while beginning to learn what will give them a good start in the ordinary primary grade of school.

Pictures, blocks, balls and other things are used in their exercises at an age when the naughty little wills residing beneath each jacket or apron usually is lively, only the gentlier feelings are excited so these schools are very healthful.

This school room in Adams block is very light, adorned with plants and pretty things, and there are very low arm chairs and tables to work by.

Braintree, where Miss Arnold taught, has three Kindergarden schools, supported by the town. Quincy that has such an army of children needs one, but until we can afford it, only a favored few can have its advantages. If mothers will visit this one, we think a larger room will soon be needed, it is such a charming place for the children to commence education in.

Swedes to Celebrate.

On Sunday evening the Swedes who have been faithful to the religion of their old fatherland will celebrate the 300th birthday of Gustavus Adolphus, the Swedish king, who gave his life for Lutheranism and the religious freedom. He was the greatest of all Lutherans, and the Swedish Lutherans of this city do only justice to his memory, in celebrating his birthday in the Swedish stone church on Granite street, on Sunday evening, at 7.30.

Gustavus Adolphus was born in the royal palace at Stockholm on the 9th day of December, 1594. The young lion of the North (as he grew to be called) received an excellent education by Johan Skytte, a man who had travelled for ten years over the known world and seen every place worth seeing.

There are two stories told of him when he was quite a little boy that serve to show how fearless he was. Once his father took him down to Kalmar to see a fleet of warships.

"Which of the ships does Your Highness like best?" an officer asked the boy. "That one," he answered, "because she has more guns on board than the others."

His nurse said to him one day when they were out walking: "You must not go into that wood, there are great big serpents there."

The prince without becoming the least disturbed, said: "Well, give me a big stick then; I'll soon kill them," and he walked right into the wood. Afterward he treated all enemies in such a manner.

When the young lion was seventeen he could speak seven languages. He used to write the funniest letters. Knowing languages so perfectly, he would mix into one letter Latin, German, French and Swedish, using the shortest and readiest word in each language that expreseed his thought. To decipher one of his letters now is worse than the fifteen puzzle to a good linquist. He was taught all kinds of athletics naturally, for that race was the most vigorous and muscular in the world.

When his father was dying, he gave his son this wise bit of advice, which is worth repeating, for it can do as much good if carried out by every boy and girl as by the King of Sweden: "Honor thy father and mother; be tender to thy sisters, gracious to thy inferiors, trust all men fairly, but not entirely, when thou hast learned to know them."

When at seventeen he was made King. In the great thirty years war he was the central figure. He died with his boots on, shot to death on the battlefield when a glorious victory was in sight. So died the great lion of the north, who lived and fought and died—all gloriously that his faith in God and right should become the faith of all men.

Organ Recital.

It was a large andience that assembled in Christ's church, Thursday evening, to listen to the organ recital at the opening of the new organ by Mr. Frank Wrigley, assisted by Walter Anderton, the boy soprano of the choir of the Church of the Advent, Boston.

The organ, which was built by Cole & Woodberry of Boston, is a magnificent instrument, and as Mr. Wrigley is a master at his art, the recital proved to be a rare treat. The numbers given were so selected that the the full powers of the instrument were brought out, from the heaviest to the low, sweet minor notes.

At times the instrument seemed to talk and some of the pathetic chords so appealed to the hearts of hearers that the dropping of a pin could be heard.

The selections by Walter Anderton were excellent and the only regret was that he could not have been heard in more numbers.

CITY BRIEFS.

Delightful weather we are having just now.

Sleighing since Monday but its most gone.

Mr. Ralph E. Crane is quite sick with diphtheria.

All should attend the "Greater Boston" hearing next Monday.

Now that election is over, settle down to business once more.

Will there be any change in the heads of departments next year?

Frank F. Crane sharpens scissors free of charge. He will be a busy man next week.

Judge Bumpus and wife attended the Newton-Kingman nuptials at Bridgewater on Thursday evening.

The many rumors that other children of Mr. W. E. Brown are sick with diphtheria is without foundation.

The Quincy High School foot ball team defeated the A. A's. of Boston at the park Nov. 29, by a score of 28 to 0.

Miss Floretta Vining has been spending two weeks in New York City. She went on to attend a large reception.

D. D. G. M. Franklin Jacobs, and suite made an official visit to Bethesda lodge at South Boston Monday evening.

There is a prospect that there will be requests for a recount for Mayor, Councilmen-at-Large and Councilmen from Ward Three.

A fourth vesper service will be held Sunday afternoon in the Unitarian church at 4 o'clock. Singing by a quartet of male voices.

The engagement is announced of Miss Sadie Wild, daughter of Mr. W. I. Tuckerman to Mr. Charles L. Harlow all of Dorchester.

Invitations will be issued this week for a private masquerade by the Ladies' Social club, to be given Christmas evening in Faxon hall.

R. G. Curtis, who has done considerable electric work in this city, has accepted a position with Brigham Electric Company of Boston.

An inquest was held Thursday before Judge Humphrey on the death of Sylvester Brown who was killed by the cars at Wollaston last Friday.

W. M. Marden, Herald correspondent, has moved from East Weymouth to the house recently vacated by Mr. Burrell on Washington street.

The bright light on Hancock street, Wednesday night was due to the burning of a barrel of shavings at the reception given Mr. Horace F. Spear.

Wednesday night's Record gaves as aldermen elected in Quincy the entire list of candidates for councilmen-at-large. They don't get onto the Quincy idea.

A gentleman living in Weymouth who has a married daughter living in Quincy, became father and grandfather within ten minutes on Sunday afternoon last.

At an adjourned meeting of the School Committee held Tuesday evening, it was decided to keep all of the schools, both day and evening, closed until next Monday.

With the exception of Mayor Cook, who was re-elected in Gloucester Tuesday, Mayor Hodges was the oldest Mayor elected in the twenty cities voting. He was 60 last May.

The officers of Rural lodge for the ensuing year were installed at the regular communication by Rt. Wor. Herbert I. Mitchell, District Deputy Grand Master of the 24th Masonic district.

While Mr. W. H. North and family of West Medford, were enjoying themselves in Quincy on Wednesday, last week, their house was entered by burglars and goods to the value of fifty dollars taken.

In justice to the Board of Health, it is only fair to say that the delay in posting cards on houses where contagious disease exists is caused solely by the delay of the physicians in giving notice to them.

Herbert W. Beattie has just completed models for the interior decoration of Christ's church, Ansonia, Conn. Also the mounted cavalry-man to be placed on the Chickamaugua Battlefield by 3d Ohio cavalry.

Dr. J. H. Gilbert left Monday for Florida. He will stop over a few days in Baltimore where he will be joined by Mr. John C. Randall of this city. We hope the doctor will return much improved in health.

As a further precaution against the spread of diphtheria, the Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library have passed a formal vote to burn all books returned from homes where contageous diseases have existed.

At the rooms of the Granite City club, on Wednesday evening, the whist prizes were given to Miss Abbie Curtis and Mr. Arthur W. Ryder, the champions of the evening.

The trustees of the Thomas Crane Public library, the board of health, the librarian, and others connected with the library are taking every precaution to prevent any spreading of that dread disease diphtheria, by the taking of books from the library.

James L. Edwards of this city, son of James Edwards of School street, was among the successful law students to pass the Suffolk County bar examiners and will be admitted to practice next Wednesday. It is the more creditable as it was accomplished after a two years' course.

Judge Flint rendered his decision Tuesday in the case of James Dunn against Charles H. Penniman. This was a suit brought by Dunn for $300 against Penniman for slander. The court gave a verdict against Penniman for $1 without costs.

Elections like that of Tuesday are rather uncertain things to figure out until after the vote is counted. The ward committees may make a thorough canvass but that is as far as it goes, for when a voter is once inside of the rail he votes as he chooses regardless of how the committee have figured.

All persons having business with the treasurer of the Hospital Aid association, Mrs. Simmons, will find her at her home 14 Central avenue, Wollaston, Tuesday and Friday mornings, from eight to twelve, for the rest of this month. Parties wishing to pay their fees for 1894 can send them directly to the treasurer of the Hospital Aid association.

The concert at the Universalist church Wednesday evening by the well known Spaulding Bell Ringers and local talent was of excellent character and highly appreciated by a large audience. The readings by Miss Essie Sturgess were very pleasing; also Mrs. Spaulding's selections on the harp introducing "The Fisher's Hornpipe" and "Yankee Doodle" and singing "Tramp, tramp, tramp," all at the same time.

What might have under some conditions been a serious accident, happened in Fountain Square Friday morning. A daughter of Thomas Cannon was driving, with her horse at a walk, near the fountain when she ran into a hydrant which she did not see. This frightened the horse which jumped and cleared himself, and threw the girl out. She was carried into Hearns' drug store but otherwise from being shaken up was uninjured. The sleigh was smashed.

WOLLASTON.

The Unity club met on Friday evening in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church. The subject discussed was "A Great Composer." Mrs. Chandler W. Smith was the director.

A very enjoyable social was held in the Baptist church, Wollaston, on Thursday evening at seven o'clock. Supper was served to a large number of guests. During the evening piano solos were rendered by Mr. Arthur Sprague and Miss Olney, and recitations by Miss Fannie Beckwith and Mr. Fred Beckwith. The ladies in charge were Mrs. A. D. Albee, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Brownville, Mrs. Drew and Mrs. G. A. Litchfield.

The Ladies' Social Circle held a successful sale of fancy articles, flowers, aprons and confectionery in the Methodist Episcopal church, on Thursday afternoon and evening. In the evening ice cream and cake were served and a very pleasant entertainment was given as follows:

Organ solo,—Miss Bertha Nichols.
Song,—Misses Fenton and Emery.
Reading,—Miss Emery.
Solo,—Dr. A. J. Colgan.
Reading,—Miss Emery.
Piano solo,—Miss Bertha Nichols.

A parlor musicale will be held at the house of Mrs. S. J. Higgins, Lincoln avenue, on Wednesday Dec. 12, at 7.45 o'clock. Music and readings will be furnished by first class artists from Boston, from among the former neighbors of Mrs. Higgins. The proceeds will be devoted to benevolent objects.

The monthly meeting of the Epworth League will be held in the vestry of the Methodist Episcopal church on Thursday evening, Dec. 13, at 7 45 o'clock.

At a special meeting of Wollaston Lodge, K. of H, held on Saturday evening, resolutions were adopted asking the railroad commissioners to request the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Co. to place electric gongs on the Wollaston station to warn people of the approach of trains and to also appoint an efficient basgage-master who shall also act as a guard to warn people of approaching trains, whether local, express or freight. The parsimonious policy adopted by the road in its management of the Wollaston station was unsparingly criticised, it having always employed inexperienced boys as baggage-masters.

The Rev. Preston Gurney preached a very able sermon Sunday at the First Baptist church, Wollaston. Subject: "New Realization of Divine Things."—Eccl. 16:15.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sanborn of Wollaston are spending the winter in the South.

The Ladies' Reading circle met with Mrs. R. S. Hewitson of Wollaston on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Samuel M. King of Wollaston was one of the singers at the Church of the Advent's semi-centennial, last Saturday evening.

Mr. DeWitt G. Ray and family of Wollaston have taken up their residence at Denver, Col., where Mr. Ray assumes charge of the Boot & Shoe Recorder's new office.

There is no foundation for the report that Mr. M. R Sparrow of Wollaston has a little child that is sick with the diphtheria. The child was confined to the house for a few days with nothing more than a sore throat, but she is now convalescent.

A man has been found in Ward 5, Wollaston, who actually didn't know that there was an election Tuesday. He has lived there for over twenty years and is very well known. This confirms the views of many that the Ward Committees did not do their duty. The Republican Ward Committee is being severely criticised for its apparent inactivity.

The Tuesday evening prayer meeting of the Wollaston Baptists will be held at the house of Mr. L F. Patterson on Farrington street.

At the regular meeting of Wollaston lodge, No. 926, K. of H., held Monday, the following officers were elected:—

Past Dictator,—George W. Brown.
Dictator,—W. J. Batterson.

Chaplain,—J. C. Bates.
Guardian,—Thos. H. Adams.
Sentinal,—A. G. Williams.
Representative to Grand Lodge,—S. J. Cummings.
Alternate,—J. H. Roberts.
Trustees,—W. H. Brasee, J. C. Bates, and C. T. Baker.

The tournament which has been taking place at the Duck's Nest, Wollaston, was finished the latter part of last week.

The prize cue for the highest run on the billiard table was won by Mr. George Barker; the prize cue for the greatest number of balls pocketed on the pool table was tied between Mr. George F. Briggs and Mr. Fred G. Ingraham, each pocketing 15; the regulation nine inch bowling ball was won by Mr. C. L. McClintock, whose score was 207, and the candle pin ball by Mr. George Barker, who knocked over 113 pins.

The highest score made this month on the alleys for the regulation ball was made by Mellen N. Bray, 202 pins, and for the candle pin balls, George Barker, 94 pins.

The tie between Mr. Fred D. Ingraham and Mr. George F. Briggs for the pool cue was played off Wednesday evening before a large crowd, Ingraham winning over Briggs 75 to 63.

The last entertainment in the course held under the auspices of the Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Wollaston Congregational church was given at the church on Wednesday evening before a crowded house. The entertainment consisted of a representation of a Syrian wedding, illustrating every phase of Syrian life, given by Mr. and Mrs. Nidshim D. Mirhish of Tiberias, assisted by several well known Wollaston young ladies and gentlemen dressed in the picturesque costumes of that country.

Mr. Alfred Shaw of Beach street is quite ill at present.

One complimentary vote was cast at Wollaston on Tuesday for Mr. E. W. Henry Bass for mayor. Mayor Bass looks well, reads well and sounds well.

G. A. R. Officers.

Paul Revere post at its annual meeting Thursday evening elected these officers:

Commander,—J. H. Webb.
Senior Vice,—W. H. Warner.
Junior Vice,—S. D. DeForrest.
Surgeon,—H. C. Hallowell, M. D.
Quartermaster,—A. W. Gardner.
Officer of Day,—W. B. Munroe.
Chaplain,—Henry Chubbuck.
Officer of Guard,—C. T. Dyer.

Alternates,—Franklin Jacobs and James F. Merrill.

A grand pigeon show will be held in Boston, Dec. 12, 13 and 14, at which over 1000 birds have been entered. Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic is president, and A. M. Ingram of Quincy on the executive comcommittee.

—Twelve of the twenty cities elected Republican Mayors on Tuesday. Six went Democratic, one elected a Prohibitionist, and one a Republican and Citizens' candidate.

—A Democrat paid his election bet by rolling a peanut a mile with a toothpick, says the Taunton Gazette. That was peanut politics with a vengeance.

—It is claimed that the famous sacred fig tree at Kandy is 22 centuries old, being the oldest tree in existence.

WEST QUINCY.

The street railway has notified Mayor Hodges that it will not accept the location granted on Willard street.

Quincy has good workmen in stone. There is a massive statue of "Peace" in Fuller's stone shed at West Quincy, cut by E. W. Fuller, who has been at work for four months on the statue and has produced something worth a visit and study. It is a female figure in a sitting posture, with an olive branch resting on one of the arms, the drapery is flowing and easy, and the expression of the face and eyes is beyond what we thought could be expressed in granite. It is six feet, six inches high, and will weigh three thousand pounds. The stone is from Westerly, R. I., and was ordered by the New England Monument Association. It has recently been finished and is awaiting shipment to New York.

On Friday evening of last week, Rev. W. N. Tenney of Swampscott, Mass., gave an interesting Gospel Temperance talk at the Methodist vestry, West Quincy. The talk was illustrated by pictures and blackboard designs.

At the Methodist church, West Quincy, Sunday morning, after his usual short sermon to boys and girls, the pastor, Rev. E. W. Virgin spoke to his congregation on Thanksgiving; the celebration of the Lord's supper followed the sermon.

Miss Gertrude A. Boyd entertained the Ideal Whist Club at her home last week. Mr. Richard J. Foley was the fortunate winner of the first prize, while Miss Kitty Walsh was made happy with the booby prize. A collation was served and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

The new hose house at West Quincy was dedicated Thursday evening in grand style. After an opportunity to inspect the house, Commissioner Eaton turned the keys over to Mayor Hodges, who in turn passed them to Chief Engineer Williams.

Seats were then taken at the tables where a banquet was served by Caterer Nash.

Ex-Councilman William T. Shea officiated as toast master and remarks were made by Mayor Hodges, Commissioner Eaton, Chief Engineer Williams, Councilmen Moxon, Shackley, Bigelow, Anderson and Lamb, ex-Councilmen Federhen, Green and Powers, Chief Whitmarsh of Braintree, Assistant Engineer Watson of Milton, ex-Chief Ripley of Quincy, Principal Assessor John Federhen, 3d, Dr. John H. Ash, Water Commissioner John T. Cavanagh and Thomas F. Burke.

At the State Convention held in Boston, Dec. 4, Miss Emma J. Fuller of West Quincy, was unanimously elected State Secretary of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons of Massachusetts. She held the position as Secretary of Norfolk County for three years, and was faithful and successful in her work, as was shown by the honor conferred upon her at the convention.

Miss Ella Mahoney of Reardon field is sick with the grippe.

Miss Emma F. Kimball entertained a few of her friends Saturday evening, the occasion being her birthday anniversary.

ATLANTIC.

Mr. Sanford Small, of the firm of Timberlake & Small, who recently took unto himself a bride, has taken up his residence on Faxon road.

A large party of young people were entertained Friday, Nov. 30, by Dr. Maria E. Drew at the residence of her father, J. E. Drew. The main feature of the evening was a stereopticon entertainment with explanations by the doctor.

Mr. Charles F. Merrick had charge of the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting, at the Memorial church, Sunday.

Mrs. Ellen Slaven of Madison street is moving into her new house on Charles street, on the Atlantic Land Co.'s property.

Mr. Cunningham, Inspector of the Board of Health, has been quite sick with a severe cold, and barely escaped having the pneumonia.

At the Memorial Congregational church, Sunday, the sermon in the morning was by Rev. William I. Cole of the Andover House University settlement, Boston.

Rev. Mr. Williams preached at the Atlantic M. E. Church, Sunday morning.

Rev. Mr. Deetz returned Saturday from Ohio.

The Ladies of the Atlantic M. E. church, held their annual fair in Music hall, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The entertainment Tuesday evening consisted of a cantata by the Junior League, which was very well rendered. The children seemed perfectly at ease and all without any friction. The quartette of two boys and two girls was particularly well rendered.

Wednesday evening the programme was as follows: Piano solo, Miss Daisy Bemis. Solo, Mr. Seaman. Reading, Mr. Hollington. Solo, Miss Mabel Burr. Reading, Mrs. Blanchard. Solo, Mr. Seaman.

The Junior League had a cake and cocoa table and twelve girls, dressed in blue aprons, served the refreshments for the small sum of five cents. The other tables were very prettily decorated, and well filled with various articles.

Mr. Abear and family have moved into the red house on Faxon road, on Atlantic Land company's property.

Stephen O. Moxon, the Republican candidate for Mayor, was given a rousing reception in his home ward on the eve of election. Music hall was crowded, and the Atlantic band was at its best.

Ex-Councilman H. W. Read presided and stirring speeches were made by ex-Mayor Fairbanks, Auditor Hall, Senator Merrill, ex-representative Graham, and Candidates Shackley, Bigelow, Anderson, Johnson, Sprague, Barker and Moxon. Much enthusiasm was manifest.

QUINCY POINT.

John R. Graham left on Tuesday for New York on a brief business trip.

Rev. Herbert A. Youtz, who recently accepted a call to the pastorate of the Washington Street Congregational church, and his wife were tendered a reception by the members of the parish, on Wednesday evening.

All arrangements were in charge of the Ladies' Aid Society, and as usual were carried out with much success.

Deacon and Mrs. Charles H. Sherburne assisted Rev. and Mrs. Youtz in receiving the members of the parish. Many availed themselves of meeting the pastor and his wife in this social manner.

Mr. George A. Sidelinger was master of ceremonies, Messrs. Wm. T. Sidelinger and T. B. Pollard, ushers.

Mrs. Frederick E. Drake and Misses Amy F. Newcomb and Lillie Carter poured coffee and tea. Misses Bessie Carter, Lillian Harlow, Bertha F. Hayden, Mildred Sampson, Edith Chute, Eleanor Chute and Leona Hayden served the refreshments.

The evening passed in an agreeable manner.

Young Men's Christian Asso.

The young men's meeting will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 30 in the Association rooms. All men invited.

Next Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, Dr. E. R. Johnson will speak on the "Glandular System." This lecture will be especially interesting to young men. A valuable manikin will be used to illustrate this talk. Remember the date, Dec. 12 Do not fail to hear him. Admission free.

CARD OF THANKS. We wish to extend our sincere thanks to the kind people of Wollaston who in so many ways assisted us through the sickness and death of our beloved one.

New Granite Bill.

Numerous rumors have been reported in the daily papers of recent date of a proposed reduction in Quincy in the bill of prices now existing between the Granite Manufacturers' Association and the stone cutters, and considerable uneasiness has existed on the part of the latter as to just what the reduction would be.

By the agreement now in force three months' notice must be given previous to March, 1895, of any proposed change in the bill, which would mean that the notice must be given this month.

Such a notice has been given the workmen by the manufacturers, and while the proposed bill provides a reduction in some lines of work, it is not the sweeping reduction that was reported, as the average reduction is 10 per cent.

The ground taken by the manufacturers for the proposed change is that really its greatest competitor is Barre, Vt., where the bill of prices that is in force today, and has been for the past two years, is considerable lower than that of Quincy, and in order for Quincy to compete with Barre, the two bills, should, as far as possible, be alike. The proposed change is in this line, and aims to place the Quincy manufacturers on the same footing as Barre, although the price paid on some classes of work still remains higher in Quincy than Barre.

The local manufacturers claim that in this matter the New England association has nothing whatever to do with the local association which makes its own agreement with the workmen. They claim, furthermore, that at the meeting of the New England association held in Boston, Nov. 14, no vote was taken to reduce the bill of prices 15 per cent., and that practically all that was done was to adopt the nine-hour clause, and "that the standard rate of wages shall be 29 1-2 cents per hour, but this shall not be so construed as to prevent any man who cannot earn the standard wages from working at a lower rate, or those who can earn more from obtaining it." But even this the Quincy association claims is not arbitrary with them.

The Changes Proposed

By the manufacturers in detail are as follows:

BOTTOM BASE.

10 cut sides, 10 cut washes, 4 sides and 1 bed fine per super ft. from 57 to 55 cents.

Cut for polishing from 55 to 45. When over 7 ft. add .05. Formerly when over 6 foot.

SECOND BASES, PLINTHS OR FRIEZES.

Polished second bases under 1-10 square per super, ft., from 65 to 55.

Same over 1-10 square, 50.

Polished 10 cut bases, from 70 to 65.

DIES.

Plain 10 cut, 4 sides and bottom fine per super ft., from 70 to 65.

Plain for polishing to be good straight 6 cut work, free from holes, stuns or starts, per super ft., from 55 to 50.

Plain raised dies, raised 1 inch or under 4, per super ft., from $1.10 to $1.00.

Same paneled top and sides only 4 sides, from $1.00 to $ 90

Same bottom joint per super ft., from 65 to 60 cents.

Concave raised panel dies, 4 sides, from $1.30 to $1.20.

Same, bottom joint, from 75 to 65 cents.

CAPS.

With apex, 2 beds, pay same as sides, 50.

Rustic cap pay 1 1-2 fine full square of stone, is changed to read 60 cents per foot.

SHAFTS.

Plain for polishing, 15 ft. in length or under, per ft., from 50 to 45.

MOULDINGS.

V grooves one inch deep or under, 25 cents. Formerly 1-2 inch deep.

V grooves over one inch deep or under, 35 cents. Formerly 1-2 inch deep.

V grooves running to a sharp edge to count 1-2 extra. Formerly 1 1-2.

10-cut, over 2 members, 4 inches either way and under when not otherwise specified, each per linear ft., 30.

MARKERS AND HEADSTONES.

Under this head the item: "Six inches thick or under," and "No fractional part of an inch over 6 inches thick, to be construed as altering price on above item" are eliminated. The other changes under this head are:

Polished work on headstones per ft., from 60 to 50.

Slabs one face, per ft., 45.

Headstones, circling, bevelled or Gothic top, top counted twice, 6 inches thick or under, per super ft., from 70 to 65.

Over 6 inches thick per super ft., from 65 to 60.

Headstones with plain cross on top, 6 6x2-0x6 inches to 1 foot thick from $28.00 to $25.00.

Curbing with circling, bevelled or roof top, 8 cut work measuring full height of stone, top and return, per super ft., from 60 to 55.

Curbing and circling, bevelled or roof top, for polishing, measuring full height of top and return, per super ft., from 55 to 50.

POSTS

The greatest cut is in posts, which is as follows:

Posts, 8x8 inches, 3 feet hammered, each from $3.63 to $3.00.

Posts, 8x8 inches, 2 feet hammered, each $2.54 to $2.50.

Posts, 9x9 inches, 3-2 inches hammered, each from $5.08 to 4.00.

Octagon posts, 10x10 inches, 3 6 hammered each from $5.94 to $5.00.

Octagon posts 9x9 inches, 3 6 hammered, each from $4.95 to $4 00.

MARGIN LINES ON ROCK FACEWORK.

Bottom joints on rustic panel dies polished work per super ft., from 65 to 60.

The standard rate of wages shall be 29 1-2 cents per hour but this shall not be construed as to prevent any man who cannot earn the standard wages from working at a lower rate or those who can earn more from obtaining it.

Under the present bill the maximum rate is 30 cents per hour and the minimum rate 27 cents per hour.

The changes purposed in the blacksmith's list is that "Twelve men shall constitute a gang at 27 7-9 cents per hour or $2.50 for nine hours, instead of 30 5-9 cents per hour, or $2.75 for nine hours.

All extra men shall be 22 cents extra, instead of 25 cents.

Piece work shall be 22 cents per day per man, summer and winter, instead of 25 cents.

As Viewed by Granite Cutters.

Mr. James McAdam, secretary of the Quincy Branch of the Granite Cutters' International Union, in an interview with a LEDGER reporter Friday morning, said:

"Rumors which have been freely circulated of late, prepared the granite cutters of Quincy for a proposal to reduce the scale of prices, but the changes desired are more radical than was anticpated. The proposed reduction is, generally speaking, fully ten per cent. except one or two items, on which it is considerably more. The standard rate of wages is slightly cut, and most objectionable of all the minimum is entirely abolished without which Quincy might as well have no price list at all.

We consider the proposed changes uncalled for because:

1st,—The Quincy price list is as low as any in New England, and the average rate of wages does not exceed $2.00 per day, which in all conscience is not munificent.

2d,—Even if a reduction was made, manufacturers would be no better off, nor would trade be likely to be improved; because those who are figuring low at present would then figure lower still, and thus no advantage would be gained by dealers, while workmen would be immeasurably worse situated than they have been for years past.

It is contended by Quincy manufacturers that they cannot compete with dealers in Barre, Vt., but as a matter of fact, work cut for polishing, is the only item of any account upon which there is a difference in favor of Barre; and comparatively speaking the bill of prices in operation there, is higher than that of Quincy.

The cheapness of Barre monuments is due to certain natural advantages possessed by the granite section of the country. It is easier quarried and much easier cut than Quincy, and under the almost general system of day work which prevails there, monuments can be manufactured at much less cost than they can in Quincy.

But although Barre dealers have this advantage, the superiority of Quincy granite for polishing purposes, more than offsets the difference in cost; and a buyer who wishes a Quincy monument will not be deterred from gratifying his taste by a trifling increase in the matter of price.

The unsatisfactory industrial conditions which exist in Quincy, however, are not due, we believe, to the competition of Barre dealers, or to the scale of prices here being too high; but rather to the fact that existing agreements have not been lived up to by either manufacturers or workmen; and in considering new agreements the first matter to be attended to should be to adopt some method whereby this evil can be abolished, or at least minimized.

The granite cutters association of Quincy is satisfied with the existing price list; only some changes are desired in the agreements regarding the apprentice question, the working of overtime, and one or two minor matters, almost all of which are in the line of agreements already existing in Barre, and approved by manufacturers there.

Although the bill of prices as revised by the Quincy manufacturers cannot be accepted as it stands, we do not anticipate any trouble here over this matter. The time has now well-nigh arrived when such barbarous methods of settling industrial disputes, as strikes and lockouts, shall be relegated to the oblivion of the past, and more just and reasonable measures adopted. We are hopeful that when committees of the two associations meet in conference, the differences will be adjusted in a manner satisfactory to all parties concerned.

MILTON.

The ladies' sewing circle met Wednesday with Mrs. C. S. Whittimore. The annual fair, given under the auspices of the circle, will be held Thursday.

Mr. Hooper, proprietor of the grocery store in Rugby block, and his family, have suddenly departed from East Milton.

The Village Improvement society resumed its meetings, which have been suspended the past six months, Thursday evening at the Band hall.

Rev. Nathan Hunt, pastor of the Baptist church, read his letter of resignation last Sabbath, to his congregation. A meeting was held Wednesday night to take action in the matter.

Dudley Talbot has opened a real estate office in the new block. Mr. Wm. Pierce is in charge.

Rev. Mr. Beers has taken Rev. Harry Vrooman's place at the Congregational church during the latter's absence in the south. Mr. Beers confines his sermons to the topic of Christian healing, and invites all who are interested along this line to be present.

Miss Orissa B. Beals gave a very pleasant whist party, introducing her friend, Miss Shepherd of Quincy, at her home Tuesday evening.

Rev. Nathan Hunt resigned on Sunday as pastor of the East Milton Baptist church, to take effect Jan. 1. It was accepted at a business meeting on Wednesday evening, when a committee was appointed to supply the pulpit after Jan. 1.

On Saturday, December 8, Professor Parsons will resume his lectures in East Milton Congregational church, at 7.45 P. M., subject, "Street Railroads." In his last lecture on the "Public Ownership of Railroads" he proved beyond dispute that a passenger can be carried at a profit, eight miles for one cent. Just think of it, ye that have friends at a distance! All who are disengaged on Saturday nights cannot be more profitably employed than in taking advantage of these lectures.

Liquor at Election.

Editors of the Patriot:

In LEDGER of 5th, you call attention to certain rumors which have been circulated throughout the city as to the use of intoxicating liquor in our city election. Although no person has intimated to me that I have even been suspected of any connection with the matter, I feel that I owe it to the party, which I had the honor to represent at the late city election, to publicly state, that I have never during my entire life, bought or authorized to be bought, used or authorized to be used for election or any similar purpose, a glass, pint, quart, gallon, barrel or any other quantity whatever, of any kind or description of intoxicating liquor. To my Quincy friends of every party I desire to say, that the only liquor of any kind which I have ever personally used has been for my own family purposes and under the orders of a physician, and at 48 years of age I am able to say that I have never bought or drank at any public bar a glass or any other quantity of intoxicating drink.

Yours truly,
STEPHEN O. MOXON.
Atlantic, Dec. 6, 1894.

An Ernest Preacher.

BOSTON, DEC. 5, 1894.

To the Editor of the Patriot:

Please allow the many friends, especially the ladies in the church in Boston, where Rev. Mr. Peach so acceptably ministered, to add their testimony to his worth, both as preacher and pastor.

He endeared himself to us in so many ways; was always the earnest preacher in the pulpit; the most kindly friend and pastor in the home.

We parted with him with regret, shall sadly miss him from among us, and feel glad to know that his lot is cast where we may still meet him, and would gladly bespeak for Mr. Peach and his estimable wife the sympathy and appreciation they so richly deserve. A FRIEND.

Former Residents Remembered.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner S. Coffin, former well known residents of Quincy, were surprised at their residence in Newton, Wednesday, by a number of their many friends from Quincy, Wollaston, Chelsea and Winthrop, the occasion being the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. The ladies in the surprisers made their appearance in the afternoon, and as the day wore on the gentlemen came, and the evening was made one of enjoyment to all. After the wedding supper had been served, Mrs. John W. Moore of Chelsea read an original poem, and Miss Lizzie Coffin of Quincy, a granddaughter, read a brief address of a congratulatory nature, and brief remarks were made in behalf of Quincy friends by Mrs. Fred. Hardwick. Mr. and Mrs. Coffin received a number of anniversary presents. Mrs. Coffin was a Quincy girl and resided for many years on Mechanic street.

Meeting of the Doctors.

The Norfolk South District Medical Society held its monthly meeting at the Greenleaf on Thursday.

Dr. J. A. Gordon was one of the essayists and took for his subject "Asphyxia." In connection with the subject Dr. Gordon exhibited and explained the working organ of an apparatus designed by Dr. Fell of Buffalo, N. Y., for performing artificial forced respiration. This is the same apparatus recently presented to the Quincy Hospital by Mr. E. S. Litchfield of Wollaston.

The number of cities voting No was the same as last year, but Pittsfield went for license and Haverhill become temperate.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Dr. Roderick McLennan is reported sick with typhoid fever.

The reception tendered to Stephen O. Moxon, Republican candidate for mayor, by the citizens of Ward three, Saturday evening at Doble's hall, proved to be an enjoyable occasion, and many of the voters of that ward who had never met Mr. Moxon had an opportunity to be presented.

Everybody was afforded that pleasure, and the hearty handshake given by Mr. Moxon must have, and certainly did, if appearances count for anything, impress all with his earnestness and with lack of anything pompous.

In the Presbyterian church Sunday at 10.30 A. M. the Rev. R. W. Peach preached on "Heaven as revealed by the Spirit" and read as his text 1 Cor. 2:9 "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." In the evening his address was devoted to the No-license problem. His text was: Prov. 19:17, "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will be pay him again." His discourse would delight all the champions of this reform and it is not too much to hope that every voter who listened to it did cast his ballot on Tuesday for No-license and morality.

The Ideal whist club meet at Miss Eleanor Roche's home on Franklin street Wednesday evening. A very sociable time was enjoyed. The prize was taken by Mr. Thomas Dumphey of West Quincy and the solitary booby by Mr. John Gill of Quincy. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Granite Work.

Mrs. John Howard has contracted with Adolph Heuss for a large and elaborate Quincy granite monument and railing to be erected in her plot in St. Augustine's Cemetery, in memory of her late husband.—Sing Sing (N. Y.) Register.

Some years ago Congress delegated the Secretary of State the duty of selecting the most appropriate means of marking Washington's birthplace at Wakefield, Va, seventy-five miles below this city, on the Potomac river, and $11,000 was appropriated for the purpose. The movement has been delayed owing to the absence of facilities for the transportation of material, but the completion of a wharf by the Government near the site supplies this want, and proposals will be opened on Dec. 15. Secretary Gresham had decided that a shaft of American granite, high enough to be plainly visible from passing vessels, a distance of about five miles, would be the most suitable structure, but its exact design and inscriptions have not yet been determined on.—New York Tribune.

No License Rallies.

Those who failed to attend the no-license meeting at Hancock hall Sunday evening missed an intellectual treat. It has often been said that the temperance question has been worn thread bare and that nothing new could be said in its favor yet those who attended Sunday evening's meeting at Hancock hall had the question presented to them in an entirely new light, and in a manner that carried the convictions that the speakers were sincere and knew whereof they spoke.

Mr. Theophilus King presided and he is always entertaining.

Rev. Ellery C. Butler made his first appearance outside of the pulpit in this city at this meeting and the manner in which he showed the evils resulting to young men from the use of strong drink before his hearers was strong and right to the point.

Rev. Walter Russell Breed was the last speaker and like those that preceded him he was earnest in his appeal for no-license.

The meeting opened with singing by a large chorus accompanied by an orchestra and prayer by Mr. King, and between the remarks of the speakers selections were also given by the chorus. The meeting which was the most successful held in the centre for a long time closed with the singing of America by the audience.

Notwithstanding the severe storm and bad walking the Wollaston Congregational church was crowded on Sunday evening. The union temperance meeting was gracefully presided over by the Rev. Charles W. Wilder, pastor of the M. E. society. The principal speakers was Mr. West, a brother of Mr. W. H. West, the superintendent of the Union Rescue Mission of Boston, and Rev. J. W. Coon, the assistant superintendent. Addresses were also made by several reformed drunkards brought from the mission.

Councilman J. Shackley presided at the no-license campaign meeting in West Quincy, Sunday evening. Speeches were made by Edward Southworth, Esq., of Quincy, and O. C. Colton, secretary of the Quincy, Y. M. C. A. The singing was by a delegation from the Methodist Sunday School under charge of Mr. Charles Goucher.

Father and Son Reunited.

There was a happy meeting Saturday between a father and son who had been separated for 21 years, and the meeting was doubly pleasant as each had supposed the other dead.

Twenty-one years ago Michael Higgins left the old country and has been in Brooklyn, N. Y., ever since. Nothing was ever heard from him, and ten years later his son Thomas came over and settled in Quincy where he has since resided.

Recently a Quincy man while in New York met the elder Higgins and being struck by the resemblance between him and the Thomas Higgins of Quincy, suggested that the two might be related, and after hearing the elder's story, became convinced that the two were related and acting upon this the father came here Saturday and the two were soon talking over old times.

New Officers.

At a meeting held at Doble's hall, the society St. Jean Baptiste of Quincy elected these officers:

President,—Jean Arseneault.

1st Vice President,—Auguste Bouleau.

2d Vice President,—Onesine Bouleau.

Secretary,—Emile Badot.

Assistant Secretary,—Eugene Marchant.

Treasurer,—Narsisse Leclair.

Cor. Secretary,—Charles D. Leclair.

Commissery,—Isaac Bager and George Lemiena.

Directors,—William Bouleau, Louis Bouchard, Pierre Prevost, Alfred Bivard, Clement Gevin.

Finance Committee,—Charles D Leclair, Pierre Larando, Adofphe Jacque.

Inquest Committee,—Edward Caron, Pierre Savoi and Alphonse Dryardin.

A Pleasant Party.

Miss Edna Bowles, who for the last year has been visiting her brother Howard, at Norfolk Downs, was very agreeably surprised, on Saturday evening, Dec. 1st, by a large number of friends from Atlantic, Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Park. The evening was very pleasantly passed, the young folks engaged in games and the older couples played whist. During the evening a delicious repast was served and all departed at twelve, having spent an exceedingly pleasant evening. Miss Bowles is very popular with her young friends and it is with regret that they heard of her intended departure for her home in N. S.

New Councilman Serenaded.

Councilman-elect Horace F. Spear was given a little serenade Wednesday evening at his residence on Hancock street. Shortly before 8 o'clock about twenty-five of his many friends gathered in front of his residence and after a serenade Mr. Spear invited all hands in, and as he had received an inkling that something of the kind was in the wind, they found refreshments awaiting them. Osborne Rogers officiated as master of ceremonies and made a few congratulatory remarks, as did also Councilman Bass, City Treasurer Burgin and others.

Mr. Brown's Death.

Mr. Sylvester Brown of Wollaston was struck and instantly killed by the inward Newport express at 5.23 o'clock Friday evening, Nov. 30, as he was crossing the track at the Wollaston station.

Mr. Brown had been attending a school convention at Boston and came out on the 4.50 P. M. train which reaches Wollaston at 5 15. He alighted from the train, and, as was his wont, crossed the tracks and called at the post-office for his mail. Getting his mail he met a friend at the office and stopped for a short chat. He then started for home and had just reached the depot when the outward South Duxbury express, No. 793, due at Wollaston at 5.22 passed. Not stopping to think whether there was an inward train due then he stepped upon the track to cross. The Newport express, No. 732, due at Wollaston at 5.22 came suddenly upon him, and, before he could realize what had happened he was struck by the locomotive and instantly killed.

Dr. Gilbert, the Medical Examiner, was notified and the body was removed to Fay's undertaking rooms.

The anouncement of Mr. Brown's death fell like a pall over the entire city. His death comes as a public bereavement. The various high offices which he held brought him in contact with a vast number of people, who learned to esteem him for his rare personal qualities of mind and heart.

He was courteous and faithful in the discharge of every trust committed to his charge. He was a man of quick and tender sympathies and strong friendships. He loved his neighbor as himself, and was prompt and generous in promoting the welfare and happiness of his pupils and his fellow-men of what ever rank and station. In this capacity he won for himself a personal popularity that was as wide as it was deep and lasting.

In public life he was intelligent, earnest and unselfish in his efforts for the general good. He was a man of strong feelings and had an intense hatred of anything like corruption in public affairs. He detested sham and was in the strictest sense a plain, blunt man. His indefatigable industry was a marked trait in his character and it was well matched by an indomitable persistence. But above all things he was a MAN.

A BRIEF SKETCH.

Mr. Brown was born in Bow, N. H., in 1848. From the country district schools he entered Colby academy at New London, and graduated in 1871. The same year he became principal of the Dunbarton, N. H., high school. In 1872 he was appointed master in Manchester, N. H., and in 1876 became principal of the Quincy school at Atlantic. Two years later he was transferred to the Willard school. In 1879 he went to a Brookline school, but in April, 1880, on the retirement of Col. Parker, he became the second superintendent of the Quincy schools.

This position he filled to the entire satisfaction of the School Committee, and his resignation in 1883 to accept a position in the Prince school, Boston, Mass., was regretted. In December of the same year he was elected master of the Martin school of Boston. From 1884 to 1891 he was a member of the Quincy School Committee, being chairman the last three years. At the Wollaston Republican and Democratic caucuses held recently, he was nominated to serve again on the School Committee for three years. The past summer he was the instructor of language and grammar at the New Hampshire Summer Institute.

Mr. Brown was a member of the Rural lodge, F. & A. M. of Quincy; a member of Wollaston lodge, K. of H., a member of John Adams Council, R. A., president of the Wollaston Unitarian society; president of the Unitarian Sunday School association of Norfolk County and in 1893 represented Ward Five in the City Council. He was also actively inerested in land improvement companies at Lawrence, Worcester and Springfield.

A widow and three little children survive him.

TRIBUTES OF RESPECT.

The Sunday morning service at the Wollaston Unitarian church, of which the late Sylvester Brown was an active member, was beautified in its simplicity.

The pastor, the Rev. James E. Bagley, omitted the sermon and in its place paid a touching tribute to the deceased's life and character.

At the Friday evening prayer meeting of the Wollaston Congregational society, the Rev. Edward A. Robinson and others spoke on the life and good works of Mr. Brown.

Wollaston Lodge, K. of H., held a special meeting on Saturday evening to take action regarding the funeral services over the remains of Mr. Brown.

The concluding session of the 50th annual meeting of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association was held Saturday morning in the exhibition hall of the English high school.

There was very general regret expressed over the startling death of Sylvester Brown, who was killed Friday afternoon in Wollaston on the tracks of the Old Colony road. He had been chosen by the nominating committee to be one of the vice presidents for the coming year.

After the devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. Edward A. Horton, President Bruce announced the death of Mr. Brown, speaking of his ability and worth, and appointed the following committee to draft suitable resolutions: H. W. Lull of Quincy, G. I. Aldrich of Newton and Charles W. Hill of Boston.

Mr. Lull later reported for the special committee appointed to prepare resolutions on the death of Sylvester Brown. Mr. Lull spoke briefly of Mr. Brown's work as a teacher, in social life, in business, politics and religion. He announced that the funeral would be on Monday at 2 P. M.

The association adopted at Mr. Lull's suggestion, resolutions expressive of high opinion of Mr. Brown and of deep regret at his sudden death.

MEMORIAL SERVICES AT CHURCH.

The greatest evidence of the universal sorrow of Mr. Brown's death was to be found in the large concourse of people that gathered at the Unitarian church to listen to the memorial service on Tuesday.

After the singing by the quartette the Rev. Mr. Bagley offered prayer. He then made a short address and read another of Mr. Brown's favorite poems from Whittier, "Abraham Davenport." Addresses eulogistic of his character were also made by the Rev. Edward A. Horton; Mr. Edwin P. Seaver, superintendent of the Boston schools; Mr. Richard C. Humphrey of the Boston school committee; Mr. E. Bentley Young, master of the Prince school, Boston; Gen. A. P. Martin, chairman of the Boston Police Commission and from whom the Martin school was named; and the Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson.

Among the prominent educators present were Mr. Robert C. Metcalf, Mr. George H. Martin, Mr. Ellis Peterson and Mr. W. S. Parker, supervisors of the Boston schools; Mr. Augustus H. Kelley, master of the Lyman school; Mr. T. Henry Wason, master of the Brimmer school.

Mr. Larkin Dunton, head master of the Normal school; Mr. Lincoln Owen, master of the Rice training school; Mr. Frank F. Preble, master of the Adams school, (Boston); Mr. T. A. Mead, master of the Chapman school; Mr. Edwin T. Horn, master of the Prescott school; Mr. Edward Stickney, master of the Warren school; Mr. Lewis H. Dutton, master of the Hancock school; Mr. Maurice P. White, master Lincoln school; Mr. Fred O. Ellis, master Norcross school; Mr. Alonzo G. Ham, master Hart school; Mr. Quincy E. Dickerman.

Mr. Alfred Bunker, master Quincy school; Mr. E. Bentley Young, master Prince school; Mr. Granville V. Putman, master Franklin school; Mr. Albert G. Boyden; master of State Normal school, Bridgewater; Mr. Frank A. Morse, master Sherwin school; Mr. Silas C. Stone, master Hyde school; Mr. Thomas H. Barnes, master Bigelow school; Mr. Joshua M. Dill, master Andrew school; Mr. Leverett M. Chase, master Dudley school; Mr. Wm. L. P. Boardman, master Lewis school; Mr. Charles W. Hill, master Bowditch school.

Mr. E. P. Sherburne, master Lowell school; Mr. H. B. Miner, master Everett school; and Mr. Jos. T. Ward, Jr., master Minot school.

The Wollaston Lodge, K. of H. was present in a body. The teachers and a large number of the pupils of the Martin school were present, as well as representatives of the city government and the school committee.

THE FUNERAL SERVICES.

To but few mortals as they pass from the busy scenes of life are given the many tokens of genuine love and sorrow which were manifested at the obsequies of Sylvester Brown at Wollaston, Monday afternoon. From far and near the place was thronged with those who gathered to pay the last tribute of respect and love to the honored master. One poor little girl, not a dozen years of age, came out from Boston, and, sobbing as though her heart would break, placed a handful of flowers upon the casket of the one whom she loved.

Attended by a concourse of affectionate relatives and friends, many of whom are distinguished in the educational and political circle of the State, and replete with every evidence of the deep honor in which he was held, both by private friends and the public at large, the final act in the long career of the well-loved master was an appropriate and a noteworthy conclusion to the life so nobly and honorably spent.

At two o'clock the funeral services were held at the house. There was a large attendence.

The remains were encased in a casket covered with black broadcloth. Upon the silver plate was the inscription:

SYLVESTER BROWN

1848—1894.

Loving hands tenderly arranged the flowers he so deeply loved and grouped them around the bier. They included a large bouquet of roses and lilies, and a large crescent and crown from the pupils of the Martin school; a large floral open book from the classes of '90 and '91, a cross and crown from the class of '92, a mound from the class of '93, a pillow from the class of '94, Martin school, and an open book from the teachers of the Martin school; a wreath of ivy and roses, from Mr. and Mrs. Houghton of the Martin school; a bouquet of roses from the Prince school; broken column, Wollaston Unitarian Parish committee; wreath of ivy, Mr. Brown's Bible class; wreath of roses from Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Fay; mound of chrysanthemums and roses from the Board of Managers of the Academy, of which Mr. Brown was a member; wreath of roses from Wollaston lodge, Knights of Honor; crescent, crown and sickle, from the Norfolk Sunday School union, of which he was president; roses from Mrs. Brown's Sunday School class; mound of ferns from Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Morse; roses and ferns from Mr. and Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, ferns and ivy from Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Durgin; chrysanthemums from "The Teacups;" roses and ferns from Mr. Mason and Miss Langmaid; bouquet of roses and violets, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Holmes; palms and violets, Mr. William Reed; bouquet from a little girl; roses, palms and violets from different friends.

The service at the house was brief. The quartette, Mrs. F. A. Page, Dr. and Mrs. George B. Rice and Mr. L. M. Bartlett, sang several beautiful selections; Rev. James E. Bagley read from the Psalms, and also Mr. Brown's favorite poem from Whittier, "Eternal Goodness"; Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson spoke of Mr. Brown's noble life; the service was concluded by a prayer by the Rev. Edward A. Horton.

The cortege was then formed and the remains were conveyed to the Mount Wollaston cemetery where they were met by the master and wardens and Rev. E. C. Butler, chaplain of Rural lodge, who, as the sun was beginning to sink behind the hills, performed the last sad rites of the Masonic burial.

The pall-bearers were Mr. Chandler W. Smith, Mr. H. W. Lull, Mr. E. H. Sprague, Mr. George I. Aldrich, Mr. Frank A. Page and Mr. R. F. Claflin.

It Was Hat Night.

The Quincy Literary society held its regular meeting in Doble's building on Friday evening, Nov. 30, the vice president, Mr. Traynor, in the chair.

The subject for the evening was to be a lecture by the President, Dr. McLennan, upon "The use and abuse of alcohol, opiates and chloral," but unfortunately, at the last moment it was made known that the genial doctor was prevented from being present by sickness.

Although the manuscript he had prepared on the topic was considerately sent to the meeting, it was deemed advisable in view of the techincal character of the subject to postpone its reading and discussion until the writer could personally submit his views.

In order to occupy the evening in an interesting, and at the same time profitable manner, it was decided to resort to that never failing standby of well regulated literary societies—a hat night. A variety of discussive themes were deposited in the hat and every member in turn withdrew a slip, and spoke upon the subject indicated thereon.

The matters discussed were of an extremely varied character, and he was indeed destitute of ideas who failed to abstract some mental benefit from the restricted verbal exchanges.

Final arrangements were made for the lecture Monday, Dec. 3, by Prof. F. Parsons upon "Political Corruption." The lecturer is connected with the Boston University law school and is one of the most popular exponents of political economy in this locality.

The subject for the regular meeting of the society last evening was an essay by Mr. William Taylor, upon "Some Works of Fiction."

WEYMOUTH.

Rev. and Mrs. Allan B. Hudson were given a reception Wednesday evening at the Pilgrim church, by the members of the church. Rev. and Mrs. Hudson received in the church parlors and after all present had been presented to Mrs. Hudson a banquet was held and an hour or two spent in social chat. Brown's orchestra of Brockton furnished music.

Bad Silver.

Joseph Silva, 45 years of age, a Portuguese, well known to many of our readers, who has frequently appeared in the United States Courts during the past year, was arrested Monday evening by Inspector Whitman, while in the act of trying to pass a counterfeit coin upon I. Berkowith of 315 Federal street, Boston. Silva was taken on Tuesday before Commissioner Fiske of the United States Court and his case was continued until Wednesday, bail being fixed at $2500. Wednesday the case was sent to the grand jury, and Silva committed.

And one who has children will rejoice with K. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

The City Election.

Candidate Moxon put up a good fight, and the Republicans succeeded on Tuesday in reducing the majority of 361 for Mayor Hodges last year to 30 this year. Mr. Moxon was probably the strongest man the party could have nominated, and the victory is therefore very creditable to Mr. Hodges. The vote of Wards One and Three, or Ward Three alone saved His Honor. Had either of these reduced the majority given him last year, he would have been laid low.

A study of the following summary giving the majorities in 1893 and 1894 will be of interest. It shows Mayor Hodges to have lost in Wards Two, Three, Five and Six, and gained in Wards One and Three.

	1893.		1894.
Ward One,	Hodges	31	Hodges	44
Ward Two,	"	114	"	75
Ward Three,	"	43	"	78
Ward Four,	"	245	"	125
Ward Five,	Thompson	137	Moxon	175
Ward Six,	Hodges	65	"	117
	Hodges	361	Hodges	30

The great change will be in the City Council of 1895, however. Not only will it be more strongly Republican, but it will be made up with a majority of new members. Only seven of the present members are re-elected. Messrs. Holden, Waterhouse, Babcock, Federhen, Rooney, Snow, Robbins, Litchfield and Moxon, were not candidates; and these were defeated at the polls: Baker, Anderson, Sullivan, Clark, Lennon, Holbrook, and McKeon.

There are, however, three ex-Councilmen elected, Messrs. Grindell, Bryant and Rinn, which will make 10 of the 23 with experience.

The vote on the No-License question is very gratifying to temperance people. The No vote was larger and the Yes vote smaller, and the majority is larger than last year. All the wards are in the temperance column, and Wards Three and Four were the only ones close.

The Ward Councilmen.

For the second time in the history of the city, Ward One has elected a Democrat to the council, Fred B. Rice, who led Horace F. Spear but one vote and Mr. Sears but 38, and all this in the face of the fact that an effort was made to have Republican as well as Democrats vote for Mr. Rice alone.

In Ware Two the three Republican councilmen elected are all new men. Mr. Sullivan of the present council ran 85 behind his ticket, Mr. Ford, 93, and Mr. Higgins, 57.

In Ward Three one new Republican is elected to the Council, one ex-Republican member and a new Democrat, Mr. Dixon. Mr. Dixon ran last year but was defeated. Mr. Lennon, who served this ward in 1893 and in the present Council was defeated by Mr. Falconer, but by 2 votes.

Ward Four returns two of its present Councilmen and one new one Mr. Geary. The strength of the People's Party was received by Daniel Hanlan whose vote was 146.

Ward Five elects two new Republican councilmen and one Republican ex-councilman, Mr. Bryant. Mr. Brown received the largest vote of any Democrat for ward councilman, falling but eight behind the head of the ticket.

Ward Six out-did itself in electing three Republican councilmen. To be sure, two of them are new men, but as Mr. Rinn has had experience in this line before they will be all right. All of the Democratic candidates led the head of the ticket.

The figures have been revised by the official returns and the number of blanks added, and will be found in full on the fourth page.

The Daily Ledger Returns.

The DAILY LEDGER adopted a metropolitan idea this year, giving the returns upon a blackboard. The revolving blackboard was however an improvement and the large crowd which assembled was very much pleased with the service given.

At 5 30 the first returns were received and bulletined. Precinct 2 of Ward Four had given Hodges 178 and Moxon 164.

The other precinct of Ward Four came next. At first wrong, but right a little later: Hodges, 220; Moxon, 108.

Ward Four had thus given 126 majority for Hodges, a loss of 119.

Then came the Quincy Point ward with only 110 for Hodges and 287 for Moxon, a further loss of 40 for Hodges.

Ward Six followed closely and gave Mr. Moxon a handsome vote, changing the adverse majority of 65 to 107 for their fellow citizen; vote Hodges, 131; Moxon, 238.

The total now was 810 for Hodges and 716 for Moxon with Wards One, Three and and Five to hear from.

Ward Five came first and gave Hodges 110; Moxon, 287, which put the latter in the lead by 83.

Before this could be announced, however, Wards One and Three came together, both with increased majorities for Mayor Hodges, and at 7.35 the DAILY LEDGER declared Hodges elected by 39 votes, but the revised figures are 30.

Then there were cheers and cheers for Hodges and others.

The LEDGER continued to give the news announcing the Councilmen elected, etc.

Wednesday morning the LEDGER printed and sold an edition of over 1000, and the afternoon edition was nearly 2000.

At City Hall.

As usual in the case of a municipal election in Quincy the one point of attraction for Republicans and Democrats was City Hall, for here it was that the official returns were received, and from 7 o'clock until after the last ward had been heard from, the several rooms in the lower floor were thronged. During the early evening many rumors were flying about as to how the several wards had gone, and if the reports had been true, Mr. Hodges' majority would have been way up in the hundreds instead of thirty.

At Wollaston.

The vote of Ward Five was declared at 8:07, just 27 minutes behind last year's declaration.

The total number of ballots cast this year, was 401, last year 401 and the year before 400. Although the registration in this ward has increased amazingly the past four years the total vote at the city election remains the same from year to year. The ward committees are evidently not doing their duty. They need bracing up.

Hodges lost 22 and Moxon gained 16 votes over last year's result.

The highest vote received by any candidate was the one cast for Eugene H. Sprague, for Councilman-at-large, 310. It was a fitting compliment to a worthy man. Mr. Bryant came in a good second with 301, and he was closely followed by Mr. Nickerson with 299, and Mr. Pinkham with 291.

Dr. Hallowell lost 20 votes for School Committee-at-large by having 20 of Dr. Record's stickers pasted over his name.

For School Committee from the ward for three years, blank spaces were left for the voters to fill in. Two sets of stickers were distributed, one having the name of Mrs. Blanche P. Bagley and the other Wellington Record.

Some of the stickers were placed at the top of the ballots, others upside down some 20 for School Committee-at-large, while others were pasted on correctly, but not crossed as the law requires.

The women voters cast 19 ballots for School Committee, but nearly all were invalidated because they were not crossed where stickers were used.

Election Echoes.

The returns at the Republican head-quarters were received and tabulated by Mr. Warren W. Adams and Mr. Wilson Marsh, secretary of the City Committee. Although Mr. Moxon's defeat was keenly felt, the happiness of the crowd at the overwhelming defeat of the Democratic candidates for councilmen, was unbounded. Candidate Moxon received the returns as serenely as though he had been elected by a rousing majority. Better luck the next time.

Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Moxon both attribute the defeat to the malicious falsehoods that were circulated in Ward 2 on Tuesday that the Republican ward and city committee were supplying some of the voters of that ward with beer. They state most emphatically that the story was a contemptible falsehood circulated to catch Democratic votes. If that yarn had not been sprung when it was too late for the Republican ward and city committee to deny it, Mr. Moxon would have been elected by a handsome majority.

Councilman Lennon will be obliged to stay at home next year. If he had saved the powder he exploded at the Ward Three caucus until after the election he might have been reelected. If he had exploded it before the caucus he would not have been nominated.

It was quite a change that came over the faces of some of the department officials when it was ascertained beyond a doubt that Mr. Hodges had been reelected.

The rumors afloat as to the use of liquor in the election should be investigated. No party deserves to succeed which countenances or encourages its use.

The Corn Cake club were out in full force Tuesday night.

Considerable talk has been made of the free use of beer in Ward Two, and Councilman Johnson wishes it understood that it was without the sanction of the City Committee.

The LEDGER bulletin was a feature much appreciated by citizens who did not care to face the smoke of the battle inside the walls of City Hall.

Quite a falling off in the old reliable Democratic majority of Ward Four.

It will be President Bass another year.

The Republican headquarters were kept open Tuesday evening and several of the aspirants for office received their notice of election or defeat there.

The picture of Mayor Hodges at City Hall, decorated as it now is, with flowers and bunting, has been photographed.

The vote for School Committee from Ward Five is quite a study, and shows what the result might have been were women allowed to vote for all offices. Here is the vote: Wellington Record, 239; B. P. Bagley, 37; W. G. Corthell, 4; G. B. Bates, 1; William Orcutt, 1; C. W. Wilder, 1; Mrs. J. E. Bagley, 1; Mrs. Bagley, 1; Blanks, 135.

THE ELECTION.

The annual election having passed, a resume of its results and their causes may not prove uninteresting. How closely the final result was predicted by "June" in your issues of last week and the week previous, is worthy of notice. In the PATRIOT of two weeks ago I stated that "Mayor Hodges would find his friends to be his greatest enemies;" the figures from Wards 4 and 6 clearly show this to have proved true. Also that "Mr. Hodges would need between three hundred and four hundred Republican votes to elect him;" the total vote shows as nearly as can be estimated, that he received about three hundred and twenty-five such votes. In the PATRIOT of last Saturday, I stated that Mr. Hodges would be elected, also sixteen Republican and seven Democratic councilmen. The official returns from the whole city show this to be true except as to one councilman, and a change of but two votes from Falconer to Lennon in Ward 3 would have made the 16 to 7 prediction absolutely correct. To the PATRIOT then, belongs the credit of having predicted, within two votes, the practical result of the election of twenty-four city officers, voted for in six wards and selected from forty-nine candidates on the ballots.

Nobody will controvert the statement that this election was the most exciting that has ever taken place in Quincy. It was, too, in many respects the most vicious and demoralizing. All lovers of good government (and they comprise the bulk of our citizens) may well pause and consider some of the features of last Tuesday's contest. It is the common talk of the city that money and beer were freely used to influence votes in favor of the political party not usually charged with these methods, and not withstanding certain denials which have appeared, there is good reason for believing that the charge has some foundation. Sincerely believing that it cannot be possible that the party leaders would countenance or encourage such proceedings, I trust they will consider it to be their positive duty to thoroughly investigate the charges, so freely circulated about the city, that disreputable means were used to get Democratic voters to forget their party allegiance and support the Republican nominee. No man who has the interests of the city at heart, will do otherwise than condemn such a state of affairs, and the leading men of both parties should take this matter in hand and sift it to the bottom. As ought to be the case, the successful candidate was elected by a majority of the wards of the city. The main factors in Mr. Hodges' election were, his being a citizen for so many years; his well known business ability; his successful administration under many difficulties, and the kind of opposition he met in his own party. Mr. Moxon is to be congratulated upon the large vote he received, especially in his own ward, if the current rumors prove to be groundless. It is safe to say, that in the future, no Republican candidate for Mayor, will welcome an alliance which will be almost certain to insure his defeat. The article in the Monitor which was intended to, and undoubtedly did, make some votes for Mr. Moxon, in reality made a great many for Mr. Hodges. Now that the election is settled, all good citizens will unite in wishing Mr. Hodges a successful conduct of public affairs, and will expect the city council to aid him in giving to the citizens a wise, economical and businesslike administration.

PARKS AND BOULEVARDS.

The postponement of the hearing on this subject before the Commissioners of Award, until April, 1895, was a wise conclusion to reach. The cities and towns so vitally interested, will now have time to appreciate the situation and prepare themselves accordingly. It is too great a subject to be trifled with.

GREATER BOSTON.

It is very desirable that there should be a large attendance at the hearing to be given at the City Hall next Monday night by the commissioners. As the PATRIOT and LEDGER have both brought this subject to the attention of the people, and as the testimony of other hearings has been given considerable space in the Boston papers, it is to be presumed that many of our citizens are prepared to express their opinions as to what they believe will be for the best interests of Quincy. The disposal of the sewage and the water supply ought to be the most prominent factors in the discussion of the business aspect of the scheme. The proposition to set off Squantum to Boston will not be favorably entertained by the citizens; either the whole or none of Quincy will be annexed.

N. Y. N. H. AND H. R. R.

It is high time that some definite protest was made to the many petty annoyances we are subjected to by this new corporation? The five and ten cents contributions exacted from the patrons of this road, are nothing but mean and petty tributes required by a greedy monopoly. Verily Quincy people are patient and long suffering.

JUNE.

The City Council.

All the members of the City Council were present at the regular meeting held Monday evening, and it looked at one time as though the city debt would jump up $25,000. But Republicans checked the passage of the orders.

Jurors Drawn.

Three jurors were drawn as follows: Eben H. Sanborn, John H. Newcomb and William Winlock.

Greater Boston.

Upon request of the Metropolitan District Commission the use of the Council chamber was granted for a hearing Dec. 10.

Health Matters.

Mayor Hodges forwarded a request of the Board of Health, for an additional appropriation of $100 for emergencies.

Also one relative to salary of inspector of plumbing and assistant. Both referred.

Petitions.

Petitions were presented for the acceptance of Nightingale and California avenues, by Ellen A. Murphy and another party for abatement of taxes. All referred.

Reports.

The Committee on Salaries reported inexpedient to legislate on the Mayor's recommendation to increase salary of City Clerk. Accepted.

The Committee on Finance reported favorably on the order appropriating $300 for Copeland street. Passed.

The same committee favored the transfer of $100 to police station. Took second reading.

The same committee favored the order appropriating $3,600 for school lot at Norfolk Downs and $3,000 for school lot at "the Rail" and both were advanced a stage.

Several licenses were granted, and an unfavorable report on amending the ordinance; accepted.

Leave to withdraw was reported on the petition for arc light on Buckley street, and acceptance of Nelson street; accepted.

The petition for arc light on Washington and Appleton streets, were upon report referred to the executive department.

At eight o'clock a hearing was to have been given on the relocation of Quarry street, but sickness preventing the appearance of Peter T. Fallon, the hearing was postponed to Dec. 13.

Fahey & Milford were granted leave to run guy across Bates avenue.

Ought not to pass was reported on order to pave portion of Granite street, and to straighten Quarry street; accepted.

The Committee on Streets reported no legislation necessary on petition for poles on a certain street, as poles had been erected. Referred back.

There was also a report relative to the claim of Mr. Bryant for damages on Old Colony street.

The order appropriating $14,568 for Coddington street came up for passage, but upon motion of Councilman Anderson was postponed.

The $4000 order for Adams street was also postponed. This action was favored by Anderson and Holden and opposed by Lamb and Rooney. The vote was by yea and nay 15 to 7.

YEAS—Adams, Anderson, Babcock, Baker, Bigelow, Clark, Holbrook, Holden, Johnson, Litchfield, Moxon, Robbins, Shackley, Snow and Waterhouse—15.

NAYS—Federhen, Lamb, Lennon, McKeon, O'Brien, Rooney, and Sullivan—7.

Councilman Moxon offered an order, at request of Mayor, for transfer of $200 to removal of snow. Passed.

The Committee on Elections was instructed to meet Dec. 4 to receive election returns.

At 8.20 the Council adjourned to meet Dec. 13.

Joseph F. Silva of Cohasset was fined $15 for keeping an unlicensed dog.

Success of Former Rector.

Chicago also has a St. Chrysostom Episcopal church, and it has also a former Quincy rector, Rev. Thaddeus Snively. The first service was held in the Chicago church Nov. 25.

The people of St. Chrysostom's have been worshipping at the little church on North Clark street near Menominee for several years. A year ago they purchased a lot on Dearborn avenue and since then have erected a new building, which is an important addition to the churches of the North Side. Its auditorium has a seating capacity of 600, besides which there are commodious choir and guild rooms and a large Sunday School hall in the rear under the chancel. The rooms are large, well-lighted and furnished with quarter-sawed oaken pews and desks. The chancel is temporary and is so constructed that it can be enlarged when necessary. In the near future the structure will be remodeled and a still more handsome structure made for the growing congregation.

Rev. Thaddeus Snively came to St. Chrysostom's in 1893 and has done much to strengthen the society during his brief pastorate. The Chicago Post printed a good engraving of the rector.

Weymouth Collector Missing.

Where is J. B. Denbroeder? This is the question that one hears on every side. According to his wife, who is understood to be greatly worried and troubled over the matter, her husband left South Weymouth for Boston on Saturday, Nov. 24, to be gone for a short time only, but has not been seen since.

As Denbroeder is the Town Collector of Weymouth, the village's leading insurance agent, and a prominent young man in many ways, his apparent disappearance has been received with the utmost surprise.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria is the Children's Panacea —the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach."
CARLOS MARTYN, D. D., New York City.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Eructation, Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion,
Without injurious medication.

"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

A Winter Resort.

"Arn't you going South?" said the bluebird to the Sparrow.
"Winter's almost here, and we're clearing up to go.
Not a seed is left on the goldenrod or yarrow,
And I heard the farmer say, 'It feels like snow!'
I can recommend it, the place to which we're going;
There's a rainy season, to be sure, but what of that?
Not a bit of ice, and it never thinks of snowing,
And the fruit so plentiful one can't help getting fat!"

"Yes, I heard about it," to the bluebird said
the sparrow;
"And it's quite the fashion to go traveling,
I know;
People who don't do it are looked upon as 'narrow.'
Bless you! I don't care! And I'm not afraid of snow.
When it comes the first time, I so enjoy my feathers;
After that I'm used to it, and do not mind at all.
One can fly about and keep warm in all weathers;
I've a snuggery, too, in the ivy on the wall.

"When the seeds are gone—and they're not before December—
I can still find spiders and flies on sunny days;
And I've all the lovely summer to remember;
My old friends are here and they know my little ways.
Just as soon as ever the ground is frozen tightly,
All those, nice, kind creatures in the houses
throw us crumbs.
One forgets it's winter when the sun is shining brightly;
I'm content to stay here and take it as it comes."

Notes and Comments.

—Holiday goods are already being put into the stores.

—It is claimed that the famous sacred fig tree at Kandy is 22 centuries old, being the oldest tree in existence.

—A Democrat paid his election bet by rolling a peanut a mile with a toothpick, says the Taunton Gazette. That was peanut politics with a vengeance.

—At a recent meeting of the aldermen in Brockton, it was voted to authorize an additional sewerage loan of $250,000, which, if made, is to be repaid within 30 years.

—The Rockland and Abington road heated seven of its cars by electricity last winter. The total cost of this was $550, or about $2 per day per car. The company regards this method as too expensive, and therefore will heat this winter with stoves.

—It seems that women will vote, if they are given full opportunity to do so. Not less than 70,000 of them, or 90 per cent. of the number registered, did it out in Colorado. Can men show a better record, and if so, where?

—A tax upon income is not popular with those who have it to pay. Taxes are not usually popular. It is no hardship, however, for the prosperous man to pay liberally for the protection and privileges which he enjoys under the government. The rich men of our day do not, as a rule, pay taxes according to their wealth.—New England Farmer.

—And now they've got counterfeit eggs on the market, and are being largely used by hotels and bakeries. What cannot the ingenuity of man accomplish? Why, it's more than likely that another century will see the denizens of earth and the planet Mars making each other afternoon calls, waltzing back and forth on a tight rope of electricity.—Milford Journal.

—The recent decision in the case of Alton M. Thayer vs. Brockton, a suit to recover damages for land taken for the Brockton sewer, tried in the superior court at Plymouth, is an important one for the city. The claimant's figures range from $4,000 to $7,000, and the city at one time would have paid rising $2,000 for a settlement. In the light of these facts it will be seen that a verdict of $826 was a handsome and substantial victory for the city.

—Said an observing shoemaker recently: "It is a positive fact that women's feet are decidedly larger than a few years ago. I can recall when a woman who asked for size four in her shoes almost invariably apologized in manner or words; now fives are almost the average size, and sixes are in great demand. The physical culture craze is responsible for this. Young women who tramp, play tennis, and now golf, simply cannot do it in narrow, tight boots any longer. As to the French heel, only actresses and women who ape their modes wear them in the street any more. The really fashionable women use them still for dress shoes, but never for walking boots.

☞ If you move into a new house in cold winter weather the best disinfectant and destroyer of germs you can use is the cold frosty air. Dr. Felix Oswald is the authority for the statement that open windows and a night frost of anything more than five degrees below the freezing point will destroy the atmosphetic disease germs of the veriest lazaretto without the employment of disinfecting drugs. In warmer weather, when it is necessary to use drug disinfectants, Dr. Oswald favors "chloralum" (chloride of aluminum), or common chloride of lime, to the usual carbolic acid, as being more effective and not nearly as disagreeable.

HAVE ASSUMED CONTROL. The owners of the QUINCY DAILY LEDGER and weekly PATRIOT, after many years of joint ownership and remarkable prosperity, have dissolved partnership, Mrs. M. Elizabeth Green selling her interest to George W. Prescott, her partner, who will be assisted by his son, Frank F. Prescott, under the firm name of George W. Prescott & Son.

The PATRIOT has been an excellent paper and rewarded with a liberal patronage, which was no more than its deserts; and when the time came that one or the other of the partners must control the plant, Mr. Prescott was the highest bidder, and accordingly secured the prize.

The future is bright for the new proprietors of the staunch PATRIOT, which has breasted the waves of public opinion so long and so successfully. May its light still shine with a lustre that ages will not dim, nor any newspaper rival will dispel.—Randolph Register.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

*Elected.

Be Cheerful.

Don't sit in the corner and mope because things are not going just as you would like. A disagreeable face will not alter a disagreeable fact. Try to extract some grain of comfort out of your adversities. Never despair. Under whatever circumstances be cheerful and hope on. There is nothing so philosophical as a smile. A merry heart is the height of wisdom.

The greater part of our griefs will disappear when viewed through the lenses of cheerfulness. Let the dark past sink out of sight. Look toward the sunrise. Shout with merriment as if you saw the dawn kissing the hills. Fill your soul with the visions of morning and song of the lark. Then all will become suffused with daylight—all the gloomy places will pulse with sunshine, the clammy rocks will glisten with dew.

Would you like to know the key to unlock the doorway to a happy life? It is cheerfulness.

Invented the Plough.

It appears that Thomas Jefferson invented the modern plough. There were ploughs, of course, thousands of years before the time of the Sage of Montecello, but he first laid down the mathematical principles that underlie the construction of the plough, and so enable any blacksmith to make one. A plough consists of two wedges, a cutting and lifting wedge, and Jefferson discovered and enunciated the proportions of each, and the relation each bore to the other. Before his day no two smiths made ploughs alike; now they are all made in accordance with the mathematical formula.

☞ Diphtheria is a disease as much to be dreaded as small pox. Its contagious character is hardly less plainly evident. All cases should be isolated, and great precautions taken. The disease will, we fear, make sorry work in many places before the winter is over unless the authorities are unusually active and efficient.—Healthy Home.

The Boston Stage.

Columbia Theatre.

The instantaneous and undeniable success achieved by Miss Marie Burroughs in her presentation of "The Profligate" last Monday evening at the Columbia, was so marked as to render all discussion regarding what play she should produce next entirely unnecessary, and "The Profligate" will be continued throughout the coming week. Miss Burrough's audiences during the past week have been of the most brilliant and fashionable description, and have at each performance completely filled the theatre. The auditors have taken a deep interest in the fortunes of the heroine, and no wonder at the pride they take in Miss Burroughs as a representative young American actress, a perfect picture of health and beauty, glowing with sincerity and dramatic art.

Castle Square Theatre.

The fourth week of "Capt. Paul," at the new Castle Square theatre, opened Monday night to an audience that filled the latest addition to Boston playhouses. It was one of those friendly gatherings, that, after showing approval by nods and murmers on everything from proscenium arch to gallery, awaits the play. In all justice it can be said that from the rise of the curtain at 8 until its final descent at 10.45, applause was lavishly bestowed. There is no abatement in the interest which all New England is taking in the realistic production at the Castle Square theatre and the second month of the successful run of "Capt. Paul" will begin Monday next.

Boston Theatre.

The long and brilliant engagement of "In Old Kentucky" at the Boston Theatre is gradually drawing to a close, but the audiences apparently are as large as ever, and the great melodrama shows no signs whatever of having worn out its welcome. Indeed the audiences of the past fortnight, those of Thanksgiving and souvenir night especially, smashed all records, and established the prestige of the largest business of the season.

During the three weeks which yet remain for the engagement of this remarkable production there is every reason to predict that crowded houses will be the rule, and that the sign, "Standing Room only," which has so often characterized the attendance at the Boston Theatre during the run of "In Old Kentucky" will prevail.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The remarkable success achieved by "Paul Kauvar" was the incentive which prompted the late Steel Mackaye in rewriting this remarkable play, which has been for eight years presented to the American public, always leaving reminiscences of the most thrilling climaxes, startling situations and impressive dialogue and noteworthy for its grand literary merits. There is no question but Mr. Mackay was one of the greatest of American authors, each of his productions being masterpieces in their diferent line. Eugene Robinson, under whose management the play has been produced for the past five seasons, promises an entire new production, mechanically, scenically, and otherwise, even to the slightest detail, and takes pleasure in announcing it for one week at the Bowdoin Square theatre in Boston. Mr. John W. Rose of Quincy is in the cast.

Hollis Street Theatre.

"The Gaiety Girl" came, saw and conquered at the Hollis last Monday. She coquetted with her audience, flirted her skirts, poised her dainty toes on a level with the big chandelier, received huge baskets of roses in which she buried her English nose, bowed and smiled her acknowledgments and retired, only to be recalled again and again. Everyone who is anybody was there at the Hollis on Monday, and they saw an entertainment with the flavor of London strong upon it. The atmosphere was English, the people were English and everything was appreciated to the highest degree. That familiar and distressing form of English humor which is indicated by a series of the coarsest puns was entirely lacking, and in its place was a crisp dialogue, full of good things, and as sparkling as champagne.

How to Fumigate a Room.

The proper way to fumigate a room is to close the doors, windows, fireplace, etc., paste strips of paper over all the cracks. Fumigation by burning sulphur is most easily accomplished.

Two pounds of sulphur should be allowed for every room from ten to twelve feet square.

It is better to divide it up and put it in several pans, rather than burn the entire quantity of sulphur used in one pan. To avoid the danger of fire, these pans should be set on bricks, or in other and larger pans filled with water or with sand.

After pouring a little alcohol on the sulphur, and properly placing the pans about the room, the furthest from the door of exit should be lighted first; the others in order.

The operator will need to move quickly, for no one can breathe sulphurous fumes with safety.

After closing the door, the cracks around it should be pasted up, as was done within the room.

Six hours, at least, are generally necessary to fumigate a room properly; at the end of that time it may be entered and the windows opened; and they should be left open as long as convenient, even for a week if possible.

After fumigation, a thorough process of cleansing should be instituted. At least, the walls and ceiling should be rubbed dry; much the better way is to whitewash and repaper.

The floor and the woodwork and the furniture should be scrubbed with a solution of carbolic acid, or some other disinfectant.—Journal of Health.

For Sale by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

Outside of China, paper was first made at Samarcand, in Turkestan, A D 750.

Household Receipts.

CELERY A LA CREME. Take six heads of celery, cut them in pieces about two inches long, wash them very clean and boil them in water until tender. Take half a pint of cream, mix with a piece of butter rolled in flour and a little salt and grated nutmeg; boil it up until it is thick and smooth, put in the celery, warm up and serve with the sauce poured over it.

CREAM PIE. Beat one egg light without separating, add two-thirds of a cup of sugar and mix well. Pour into the egg and sugar a cup and a half of good, rich cream; mix, and season with a pinch of salt and a little nutmeg. Line a deep pie plate with good paste and pour in the mixture. Bake slowly, and the moment it puffs and a knife blade comes out clean it is done.

SPICED OYSTERS. To one-half gallon of oysters, add one ounce of whole peppers, three blades of mace, and a small quantity of vinegar. First put the oysters in a kettle with their own liquor and salt, let them cook until the edges curl, then drain them, and cover with cold vinegar; throw in the peppers and the mace, broken into small bits.

LEMON APPLE PUDDING. One-half of a pound of bread crumbs, one-fourth of a pound of suet, one-fourth of a pound of sugar, juice of one lemon, one grated apple, two tablespoonfuls of flour, two eggs beaten stiff. Boil in a mould.

Cheese as Food.

Much difference of opinion has prevailed in regard to the value of cheese as food, but we are beginning to get at real facts with a better understanding of the relations of the digestive functions to food elements. Cheese has been much lauded by many because of the great amount of nutritive food elements it contains, and people have been urged indiscriminately to eat it freely, some enthusiasts making the most extravagant claims for it as a health diet. But many people who have sought to follow this counsel find themselves speedily the victims of indigestion and dyspepsia. They would consider it little short of treason to charge their disordered digestion to the cheese, but the truth is the cheese is the most probable cause in any such case. Although, so far as its constituents are concerned, cheese is fairly entitled to its fame as a model food, yet in raw cheese these constituents are very difficult of solution by the digestive juices—that is, raw cheese is indigestible to a degree that makes it unavailable as food except to the strongest and healthiest stomachs, and should not be eaten by any one who finds on trial that it gives his stomach the least discomfort. It is found, however, that cooking the cheese removes this difficulty and makes cheese easy of digestion, and as nutritious as tender meat or more so. Various methods have been adopted for this purpose, from plain broiling, frying or toasting to the most elaborate compound dishes. The main point is to get the cheese cooked so that the stomach can digest it.—Good Housekeeping.

Care of the Teeth.

A dentist advises that acids are even worse than sweets upon the teeth, and inveighs against the eating of oranges and apples at night without carefully rinsing the mouth afterward. Persons, too, with sensitive teeth, who dread the hour in a dentist's chair, will find their suffering somewhat relieved by being careful what is eaten before the appointment. Acids that set the teeth on edge are a poor preparation. The same authority recommends a small rubber band as the best toothpick. These are really better than the dental floss often advertised, or certainly quite as good, and much more apt to be at hand.—New York Times.

Paskola
TRADE MARK

A Flesh Forming Food
Artificially Digested.

Assimilated without any digestive effort. If you want to grow fat, strong, robust and plump, use this food. It will stop the wasting and add new healthy tissue to the emaciated form. PASKOLA is far superior to Cod Liver Oil in consumptive cases, without its repulsive taste. Thin, pale people gain from five to ten pounds a month. You can buy it at any drug store. Send your name to the Pre-Digested Food Co, 30 Reade St., New York, and get their interesting pamphlet.

Managing the Liquor Business.

Do you say, yes, we will regulate this business, we will take it under control and hold it within proper bound by license! Then we say we are not seeking that kind of alliance. We invoke the aid of the law against this traffic as a criminal and a law breaker, and as an enemy and a destroyer, and your proposition to license does not meet that demand. Licensing does not diminish the results of intemperance, and that is the end we are seeking. Licensing legalizes and makes respectable in the eye of the law, a business that is illegal and disreputable. Consenting to license makes the consentors measureably responsible for the traffic and its horrible effects.

Lord Chesterfield said in the English House of Lords more than one hundred years ago: "Luxury, my lords, is to be taxed, but vice prohibited, let the law be what it will. Would you lay a tax on a breach of the Ten Commandments? Would not such a tax be wicked and scandalous? Would it not imply an indulgence to all those who could pay the tax? Vice, my lords, is not properly to be taxed, but to be suppressed. Luxury, or that which is only pernicious by success, though not strictly unlawful, may be made more difficult. But the use of those things which are simply hurtful in their own nature, and in every degree is to be prohibited. None, my lords, ever heard, in any nation, of a tax upon adultery, because a tax implies a license granted for the use of that which is taxed, to all who are willing to pay for it. Drunkenness is universally and in all circumstances an evil, and therefore ought not to be taxed, but prohibited.

That was the sentiment of an English statesman uttered one hundred years ago, and we repeat it today. We ask that this iniquity shall be supposed by law. It is not only the right, but the duty of the government to interdict the manufacture and sale of this great crime producer, for the protection of its own life, and to protect the life and property of its subjects.

suffer alike from General Debility. It is a common disease and results from a variety of causes. It should not be confounded with fatigue, which is transitory. In General Debility the weakness, unless arrested, will become permanent. The lost energy must be renewed, ambition stimulated, and the system built up. This can be accomplished by the use of Dyspepsia Cured.

MRS. CHAS. VILLIERS, of SOUTH BRAINTREE, MASS., suffered with acute Dyspepsia, constant Sick Headache and Vomiting. Nothing brought her relief. She finally tried DANA'S; it CURED her. Her words are, "I felt a great deal better before I finished one bottle. DANA'S CURED me, for I can now eat anything without distress; no more vomiting; no more Sick Headache."

Great Faith in Dana's.

MRS. MARY E. FREEMAN, of SOUTH FOXBORO, MASS., had great faith in DANA'S, and it was justified. She suffered greatly from Sores and Ulcers, from Impure Blood. DANA'S CURED her.

Mortgagee's Sale
—OF—
REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Louis D. Boisclair and Elizabeth Boisclair, wife of the said Louis D. Boisclair, in her own right, to Adoniram Burrell, dated March 18, A. D., 1891, and recorded with the Norfolk Deeds, libro 651, folio 242, will be sold at Public Auction for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, upon the premises set forth in said mortgage and hereinafter described, on MONDAY, the 17th day of December, A. D., 1894, at eleven-thirty o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:

A certain parcel of land situated in that part of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, called Atlantic, on the easterly side of Squantum street, being the southerly half of lot B, as shown on a plan of this and adjoining lands recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 527, folio 257, and said parcel is bounded and described as follows, viz: Westerly by said Squantum street, twenty-eight and 15-100 (28.15) feet; northerly by the northerly half of said lot B, by a line drawn from the middle point of the westerly boundary of said lot B to the middle point of the easterly boundary of said lot B, as shown on said plan, about one hundred and twelve (112) feet; easterly by lot C, as shown on said plan, twenty-nine and 15-100 (29.15) feet, and southerly by land now or formerly of heirs of George B. Billings, one hundred and eleven and 88-100 (111.88) feet. Said premises are subject to a prior mortgage of $900, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 580, folio 154.

Also another certain parcel of land in that part of said Quincy called Atlantic, comprising a part of lot numbered thirty-nine (39) on a plan entitled "Plan of House Lots at Atlantic Station, North Quincy," drawn by L. Briggs & Co., surveyors, April, 1871, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, No. 199. Said parcel is bounded and described as follows, viz.:

Beginning at a point on the easterly side of Squantum street, distant twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet, northerly from the southwesterly corner of said premises; thence running northerly on said Squantum street, twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet to land now or formerly of C. E Swett; thence turning and running easterly by land now or formerly of said Swett, one hundred and ten (110) feet to land now or formerly of John Wakely; thence turning and running southerly on land now or formerly of said John Wakely, twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet to land now or formerly of said Burrell; thence turning and running westerly by said land now or formerly of said Burrell, about one hundred and eleven (111) feet to the point of beginning. Said premises are subject to a prior mortgage of $800, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 576, Fol. 103 Being the same premises conveyed to Elizabeth Boisclair by Adoniram Burrell, by deed dated March 18, 1891, and recorded in said deeds. Said premises will be sold subject to any and all unpaid taxes and assessments. $100 will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

The Best Food For Children? is worthy every parent's study; not only what they can eat, but what gives the most nourishment. No children are better, and most are worse, for eating lard-cooked food. If, however, their food 's prepared with the healthful new vegetable shortening, COTTOLENE instead of lard, they can eat freely of the best food without danger to the digestive organs. You can easily verify this by a fair trial of Cottolene. Sold in 3 and 5 lb. pails by all grocers.

The Falling Snow.

The flickering firelight shadows
On the ceiling come and go,
While I sit by the darkening casement
And dreamily watch the snow,

From measureless realm of ether
It floats to this barren sphere,
Down on the leafless forests,
Down on the meadows drear;

Drifting among the hedges;
Hiding the garden walks,
The tangle of rain bleached grasses
And the flower pots' frozen stalks.

Falling, still steadily falling,
Like some river's ceaseless flow
Which holds its source in the heavens—
And the whole world seems but snow.

And I wish that some magic mantle
Might drop o'er our lives tonight,
Hiding our disappointments
And wearings from our sight;

Hiding our vain ambitions
And our heart-aches, long and slow,
As this great world's frozen bareness
Is hid by the falling snow.

Miscellany.

THE UNEXPECTED.

Rachel Hunt had lingered over the evening paper longer than usual. Why she turned to the column of new advertisements could not be answered by the conditions of her home. She did her own housework and was not looking for a girl. She did not keep a team and was not in need of a coachman. Her small garden she cultivated herself with what aid could be rendered by her husband, who had been a semi-invalid for ten years. She was not in the habit of looking at the advertising columns. Rachel believed she was directed by that guiding power which had opened the way more than once when it was dark.

For a moment she was silent, not daring to trust her heart to cry out. There might be some mistake. Her maiden name was Rachel Miller, and she was the daughter of Alonzo and Hannah. Then she wanted to tell dear Charles who sat opposite reading the other half of the paper. But instantly a bright thought came. She would keep it to herself, and find out if the advertisement really meant anything "to her advantage," and if there were concealed rainbows in it she would have a delightful surprise for her husband who had need of cheer, for he had grown not a little depressed by his long invalidism.

Charles and Rachel Hunt were not in the deeps of poverty. They owned the modest home which sheltered them, and had certain investments which afforded them a frugal living. But it was by close calculation that they made the months come out even. There was nothing over to pay for repairs or replace the worn out furniture. Only that day Rachel had swept and dusted the parlor and placed little patches of ribbon and lace over the frayed chair-arms. The chairs were new a good lifetime ago, and so was the carpet.

Rachel was not much of a singer, but when she became sure that the advertisement meant herself, she leaned back in her rocking chair and sang, "Thus far the Lord hath led me on." It was a favorite hymn. It had been one of the lullaby hymns of her childhood. Her mother was a singer. From morning until night, on happy and on troubled days, she found relief in her voice.

When the hymn was ended Rachel Hunt went to her room. It was early to retire, but she wished to talk this new hope over with her soul and her God.

The advertisement asked for communication with a name she had not heard since childhood. She would write the letter in the morning. This name brought a host of memories and unrolled visions of the long past. A youth of eighteen perhaps, across whose home a shadow had fallen, asked shelter and protection in her father's home. He was taken in and for several years treated as a child of the house. He rendered service in various ways in the house and about the farm, but the master of the house served him in larger and finer ways than he was able to return. He taught him to think, to study, to have new and nobler ambitions. All the long evenings they passed together over books. The master's children helped the young man too, for though they were only children, they were bright scholars.

He left this providential house to seek his fortune in the far west, and from that day Rachel and never known whether success crowned him or whether he had failed with the multitude.

On the following day Rachel was up betimes, for Charles was going on a journey. He was summoned to the sick bed of his mother, and would probably be absent for several days. After his departure she set herself to the task of writing the letter in answer to the advertisement. She was well under way when the clang of the bell arrested her. It was not the hour for the postman, but the ring was like his. As she opened the door a tall man stood before her. His hair and beard were gray, but his face was not old. His appearance was that of a man who had known prosperity.

The stranger was first to speak. "You will not know me, Rachel, but I should have known you in any crowd in any part of the world. I am Jack Nelson whom your father took in and taught and helped, as he knew so well how to help."

"O, Jack!" exclaimed Rachel, "I was just writing you a letter. I read your advertisement in last night's paper."

"I thought you might see it, but I was uncertain, and when I found you I could not wait."

"How did you find me, Jack?"

"I went a week ago for a minister to bury the dead wife of my son. While I waited her appearance I took up a photograph album that lay on the table. Yours was the first face I saw. To be doubly sure, I asked the minister."

"Yes, that is Rachel Hunt—Rachel Miller Hunt, one of my dearest friends."

"She told me all about you—the invalidism of your husband, your own brave battle. I had been trying to find you Some still small voice kept repeating your name. After the busy rush of life I had time to reflect. It was easy to see I could never have been the great business manager which I am but for the training of your home. I wish to confess my appreciation and my gratitude.

Rachel felt a little shame at giving this fine gentleman one of her frayed chairs, but she talked her best, and so did he, and and the chairs were apparently not thought of by her guest.

Presently there was a pause and he looked about the room remarking, "This room is full of suggestions. It is a capable room. Are you willing to trust it to me for a time?"

"I am very glad to entertain you, and the whole house is at your service," said Mrs. Hunt.

"Very well, let me look it over, please."

Rachel led the way and showed him her home—her home into which she had poured so much of toil and self-denial.

Jack Nelson, after seeing the house and its suggestions, passed toward the door.

"Are you not going to let me entertain you?" exclaimed Rachel.

"I shall be here every day, but I am staying at the Arkwright. It is work to take care of a guest. I will not add to your present tasks."

After he had gone Rachel found herself in a flurry quite inconsistent with tasks of any sort. She wondered what Jack meant by some of his remarks. Before he had time to reach the Arkwright, as it seemed to Rachel, two men called, "Sent by Mr. Nelson," as they said. They had rules and measures of one sort and another, and asked to see the different rooms. Rachel followed them about, wondering.

Two or three days later a half dozen men came quite early in the morning. Loaded teams stood before the door. Mr. Nelson drove up in his carriage.

"I feared you might be frightened," he said, "and came to supervise matters and keep you company."

How this stranger overflowed with good humor! He sang and whistled as he directed the men in their work. The teams bringing the new took away the old.

For days the house was in the hands of Mr. Nelson and his helpers. It grew into a bower of beauty. Rachel had never dreamed it could become so tranformed. There was great hurry in these reforms, for Mr. Hunt might return at any time. His mother was better, and he was not the man to stay longer from home than the need demanded.

"He starts tomorrow!" said Rachel, on reading his latest letter.

"Let him come. We shall be ready for him tomorrow night—everthing in order," said Jack.

"He will think Aladdin has been here."

"You just tell him a man has been here who knew the girl he married when he was a winsome child, and who is the happiest man on earth that he is able to make her way a trifle pleasanter."

"I do like beautiful things!" exclaimed Rachel, "but I never allowed myself to covet them."

"They come as the reward of merit, Rachel. That is what our school tickets were called. You took in the poor, broken-hearted boy who came to you crying, and sent him out an educated and thoughtful man, equal to the responsibilities which the years brought. A pity if he cannot spare some of his needless shekels to beautify the way of his benefactor's last representative and relieve her from anxiety. You had better keep this package in the bank. But enjoy the house; live in it; fill it with life and warmth. And Rachel, you can afford now to spare your strength. Let up a little on yourself. You have been rather severe to the little girl I knew. It is no longer necessary. Now I will return to my western castle. No, I will not stay longer. My purpose is fulfilled. The surprise will be finer if I am away."

After Jack Nelson was gone, Rachel had a good cry. She felt herself the reaper where another had done the sowing. Oh, if this comfort could have come to her father instead of herself!

She summoned her mother's cheerful philosophy, dried her tears, and set about making the surprise complete. Dinah, who did the heavy work in the house, would be almost as glad as she was to come and stay. She would send for her at once and spare her own strength. The package to be left in the bank for safe keeping made it possible.

The new table with new silver and china fairly sparkled under the new chandelier as Charles turned first toward the dining-room—hungry, as travellers are likely to be. He did not seem to notice the change. Dinah's appearance as she passed in and out did not arrest his thought. He was accustomed to Dinah's look. At length a flash of light fell on his silver fork.

"Is Lucile coming? You have been scouring the silver, I see."

There was a joke between Charles and Rachel that a certain young lady always made her appearance, whether expected or not, immediately after the scouring of the silver.

"Look again," said Rachel. "Is it scoured silver?"

"Why!" exclaimed Charles. "Have you been borrowing finery in honor of my return?"

Rachel answered with a laugh, and just then the door-bell rang. Dinah announced Mr. Flint, who wished to see the returned traveller just a minute. "Keep him just a minute—couldn't wait."

Charles Hunt entered his re-furnished parlor. When he returned to the table he was somewhat dazed, but he had not lost his speech.

"I know the parlor needed furnishing, Rachel, but how could you do this when we are in debt so heavily now?"

Rachel answered again with her cheery yet mystical laugh.

"Don't laugh, Rachel! I feel like crying at this added burden."

"Come upstairs, Charley, and see how you like it up there."

"More of it upstairs?"

"Yes, dear; we are new from top to bottom."

"Good heavens, Rachel! What are you thinking of? Don't laugh! Tell me what possessed you!"

Mr. Hunt reached the upper landing. A glittering mosaic covered the floor. The door of his "den" was open. The same clean carpet, a trifle different in pattern, hid the shellac and splinters so long familiar. He pushed on to his chamber. Everything was new except the pictures on the walls.

"How warm this house is, Rachel!" he exclaimed. "I'm all of a heat. Wish I could divide this comfort with my mother. No furnace in her house!"

"I wish you could Charles. The hot water attached is a great improvement. The heat is even all over the house now."

"Hot water attachment! Have you set out to ruin me, Rachel?" And Charles Hunt, limp with amazement, sank into an easy-chair. He sat there dumb. Rachel had always been prudent, extremely prudent. Perhaps he better wait for explanations. It might not be quite fair to upbraid her.

Rachel led the way from room to room, calling her husband to follow. Faultless elegance everywhere increased his amazement. In pleading tones he cried:

"You must explain yourself, Rachel! This sudden change will bring on one of my spells."

"There is little to explain, Charley, dear. An old fellow whom I supposed in heaven long ago came here one day, and with his aids wrought this transformation, all because my father took him in when he was a boy and in trouble—took him in and taught him."

"Well, well! Gratitude does not often materialize in this way. Was it Jack, whom you have told me so much about?"

"It was Jack, and he has fared so well he looks younger than you do, and he must be many years older."

"I am surprised!"

"Are you not delighted? I am. Beauty is very attractive to me."

"This is the day of wonder!" said Charles Hunt; and so excited had he become over the great good fortune that he could not sleep, though tired out by the long journey.—Christian Leader.

Don't Give Handkerchiefs.

"I'm always sorry," commented a woman the other day, "to see the crowds around the handkerchief counters at Christmas time. I'm reminded of a dear old aunt of mine, whom I once asked, as I was saying good-bye before going on a journey, what I should bring her.

"'Anything, my dear,' she replied, with a twinkle of her shrewd blue eyes; 'anything but handkerchiefs. I have all of those I shall ever need.' And she opened a bureau drawer to show piles of neatly-stacked squares growing yellow with disuse.

"People in a quandary for a small gift fall back on the handkerchief prop, to the disappointment, I am sure, of nine-tenths of the recipients. I'm a staunch believer myself in the frivolity of Christmas.

"I try to make my gifts bits of incongruous extravagance to those who receive them. I once sent a box of expensive toilet soap in a lovely satin-finished box to a poor, plain old maid who lived alone and made boys' trousers for a living.

"The notion was suggested to me by a chance use at my house of a perfumed cake whose fragrance, clinging to her hands, she commented on in a pleased way. Months afterward she told me nothing had ever done her more good than that box of soap.

"I believed her. She couldn't express it; but its use conserved a certain aroma of dainty living about her that probably helped her through tedious days.

"The true spirit and dignity of Christmas to me are the uplifting, for one glad hour of the year, of these grovelling souls of ours; in pursuance of which belief, I am going to buy a copy of Tennyson in the daintiest binding I can find for a romantic young woman of my acquaintance, who, I am sure, needs stockings."—New York Times.

Inexpensive Pleasures.

The comparatively cheap pleasures seem to be the best, not only for this Christmas, but in life generally. There is so little that the very rich can buy for themselves that need stir envy in people who are just comfortably off. Warmth is such a delightful thing in winter, but you and I can get as much as we want of it, and a millionaire can have no more. And then there are so many cheap ordinary things to eat that are just as good or better than the expensive things. An epicure who lives somewhere in the western part of this State was saying the other day that, having a particular dinner in view, he sent to a judicious man in New York for the best fish that the market offered. They sent him a fresh cod, and he admitted that no fish could be better, and moralized (those are his remarks above) on the comparative cheapness of the fleshly gratifications that were really best, such as potatoes and chickens and fresh air, and tea and water (warm and cold), and soap, and sleep. When one considers how good a big five-cent sandwich tastes when he is really hungry, and what a poor thing a five-dollar dinner is when he is not, and how little difference there is between good wine and good water when it has once passed one's gullet, and how much of that difference is in favor of the water, it really lends a dangerous charm to economy and simple living, and makes one wonder that thrift is not more catching, and that the delights of avarice should be so generally monopolized by the aged.

One of the cases where a cheap article is often at least as good as a dear one is in the matter of sons-in-law. How often it happens that the plain cheap son-in-law who exacts no bonus, and even in some cases contributes to his wife's support, turns out in the end to be really more valuable and satisfactory than the bankrupt loafer-prince who costs a million or two at the start, and all that he can lay his hands on afterwards!—Harper's Weekly.

BELLS.

Once in Switzerland I stopped at the little village of Burglen; right on the very spot where William Tell lived, for I am one to believe his story with all my heart, and keep the spirit of it in the world, just as I would keep the spirit of Santa Claus for the children, in spite of all that is said against it. Well, every morning and evening, right by my window, rang the "matin" and "vesper" bells, calling the villagers to their simple service, and they came, many with tools in their hands to leave them at the door, barefooted, to enter and kneel in prayer before going to their daily labor. The bell is called the "Angelus" in that country, and if you once heard it as I have, you would love and cherish all its associations. Let me tell you one little story of the curfew.

In an English village a bride stole forth, Ginevra-like, on her wedding day, to hide in the furze, but, becoming frightened, tried to find her way back, and took the wrong path; she was soon lost, and a heavy snowstorm coming with the darkness, the girl became terrified with visions of robbers and danger in every form, when suddenly through the dismal gloom came the sound of the dear old curfew, sweet and low. Guided by it to her home, she fell upon her knees in gratitude. When she died she bequeathed not only a chime of bells to the church of her little village, but money to keep up the custom always of ringing the curfew.—Home and Country.

A Picture.

A curious picture rises before my mind. Is it rrom memory or imagination?

Two women sit in a room talking. One is old—a self contained, dignified, reserved woman. She has seen hope after hope go down, dear one after dear one go out, and she still presented the calm changeless front of one whom nothing could daunt or surprise. People knew her as "that cold heartless, Mrs. C——."

The girl who was talking was full of a recent grief—of a baby brother's death. It overflowed in her voice and eyes. With little sobs and gasps and much use of her white handkerchief she told the story of his sufferings. In the exuberance of her girlish emotion she dwelt on each detail, while in her heart there was a half-angry protest against the unmoved listener, who put in a few steady words now and then, seeking to turn the girl's thoughts and teach her self-control.

"But—Oh! how can you know? how can you understand?" With a burst came the selfish ignorance of youth. "He was so lovely! And we loved him so! But you do not know how that is. We loved him!"

Then a strange thing happened. Through the half-darkened room a hoarse cry rang out, and the bitterness of it was something the girl had never heard before. It was the moan, the irrepresible outbreak of a heart pushed too far. Startled, the girl stopped in her flow of talk, and stared at her companion in affright. But she saw—nothing. There sat the same stately, quiet woman, with the same composed manner, which had never left her throughout a whole lifetime of buffetings from fate.

The girl's talk was checked. Something—a glimpse of the possibilities lying hidden in the human heart, far beyond the depths of her own petty line and plummet, restrained her. The noisy volubility of her sorrow suddenly became common and shallow. She said no more of her own bereavement. With a few hurried, embarrased words she came away. The older woman did not change her manner of courteous consideration for her young guest, and the little episode was never mentioned between them.

Often the girl wondered if her own feelings had not played her a trick. But advancing years gave her a truer solution, and taught a valuable lesson. Repression, contentment, are lessons to be learned, graces to be acquired. And the perfection of attainements is in direct proportion to the greatness of the soul's conflicts, and the number of the soul's sacrifices we have passed through to obtain them.—Harper's Bazar.

Populism.

Populism is the expression of the discontent of the unthrifty. It does not matter what it demands, whether free coinage, or paper money, or government loans to the farmers on their crops, or government ownership of railroads, the cause of Populism is the feeling of those who have little money that the government ought to help them to more. This feeling has been intensified and embittered by certain acts of the Federal government which have seemed to the discontented to evince an undue care for those already rich. Even when the acts of the government were dictated by wisdom and patriotism, as in the exemption of bonds from taxation, they have nevertheless aroused the anger of those who have been compelled to pay taxes and who have had very little to pay them with. The chief cause of Populism in its present phase has been that fruitful breeder of trusts and monopolies, the protective tariff. More than anything else, it has been an object-lesson of evil import to those who are forced to contend with arduous circumstances for a slender living. It has bred the habit of mind which looks to the government as a distributer of bounties. It has made paternalism popular. It has been the source of much of the socialism of those who do not realize that protection itself is the fruit and flower of socialism. Finally it has culminated in a widespread movement, which is strongest in those parts of the country which, consciously or unconsciously, have suffered most from high tariff taxes. The condition which it illustrated by the recent election in Georgia is essentially a struggle of the communism of poverty against the communism of wealth.—Harper's Weekly.

Christmas in "De Ate."

"Chris'mus. Dat's wot I sed. It onlee comes round wonc't er year. Youse can't stop it if yer tries, and w'en it does come, gee! how everybody gets rattled and dey goes round husslin fer Chris'mus gifts.

"Dat remin's me w'en I wuz a little bit uv a goirl der blokies jused to tel me 'bout hangin' up der stockin', and den some big stuff wid long whiskers all over his'n mug wood be round wisitin' down der houses' chim'lees.

"Dat w'iskers' name wuz Sandie Claus. He wood be loaded full of good t'ings, and dey wood be put inter der stockin's of der kids.

"Well—say! I went ter bed dat nite and hanged up me stockin'. Yer see I'm tellin' 'bout w'en I wuz a kid, not now—I nose better—and I slept away, dreamed uv der good t'ings I wuz goin' ter get in der morning.

"W'en I woked up I looks at der stockin', and wot do yer t'ink der wuz in it? Narthin'. I felt sore. So I puts on me stockin's and goes out on der streets, meets der whole gang; den I asked dem wot dey got fer Chris'mus. Der kids all sed 'Narthin'.'

Pretty Table Manners.

It is good form to break off morsels of breads toast, biscuits and cake; it is vulgar to bite into a slice. It is good form to train the left hand to use the fork; a gentleman does not lay down his knife and take the folk in his right hand when the course cousists of meat and a salad. It is good form to eat slowly and quietly; only vulgar people are noisy. It is good form to sit erect, to keep the arms off the table, to look pleasant, and to keep room in the mouth for a laugh. People who eat like cattle should be induced to take meals in sheds or vacant lots. Babies and men and women, in their second childhood, can be excused for slobbering at table.

—It is said that there is no case on record in Massachusetts where a verdict having been set aside in a capital case and a second trial granted, a conviction was secured.

Remedial Uses of Apples.

In all temperate climates the apple grows freely, and might be obtained in practically unlimited quantities. That it is not more used than it is is probably due to the fact that being so plenty, it is undervalued. Yet almost every one likes the fruit in some fashion, and it should form a part of at least two meals out of every three during the year round; for even when the fresh fruit is not in season, canned, dried, or "evaporated" apples may always be had.

"Chemically," says a writer in the North American Practitioner," the apple is composed of vegetable fibre, albumen, sugar, gum, chlorophorus, malic acid, galic acid, lime and water. Furthermore, the German analysis say that the apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. The phosphorus is admirably adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter—lecithin—of the brain and spinal cord. It is perhaps for this reason—though but rudely understood—that the old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves to be growing feeble and infirm, resorted to this fruit to renew their powers of mind and body."

Not only the phosphorus, but the acids of the apple are of singular use for persons of sedentary habits, whose livers are apt to be too slow of action. These acids aid the liver in its work of eliminating from the body the noxious matters, which, if retained, would make the brain heavy and dull, or, in time, would cause rheumatism, jaundice, or skin eruptions, and other allied troubles.

The malic acid of apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat.

Ripe apples are probably the least fermentable of all fruits, except possibly the banana. For this reason ripe and sound apples may be eaten by most persons in even the hottest weather; but even the apple is safest when cooked.

We have the support of eminent medical authority in saying that the most healthful way to cook apples is to pare and core them, and bake in a moderate oven. If the apple is of a quite sour variety it may be necessary to add a little sugar, putting about saltspoonful in the hollow whence the core was extracted. The next best way to cook them is stewing. Contrary to common belief, apples baked in their skins are the least healthful of cooked apples. Another erroneous belief is that raw apples are best if eaten with their skins. We give it on the authority of the distinguished professor of materir medica of the New York College of Medicine that the skins of apples, whether raw or cooked, are very deleterious in their effects, there being in the skin an astringent quality which counteracts the effects of the beneficent acids of the fleshy parts of the fruits. "Constipation," says the same Authority, "is sure to be the result or eating apples with the skins. The were not made to be eaten, only to protect the fruit from the attacks of insects."

Dried or "evaporated" apples are the most healthful of all, for they have retained the best qualities of the fruit, while showing still less tendency to rapid fermentation than the fresh fruit. Before cooking they should be soaked until tender and filled out to their natural proportions, which may require from eight to twelve hours, and then allowed to cook gently until done, with or without the addition of other flavoring to taste. No sugar should be added to stewed apples, whether dried or fresh, until the last few moments before removing from the fire. Or the sugar need not be added until the fruit is cold.—Harper's Bazar.

The Necessity of Composure.

One thing that, if not a necessity, is a least conducive to comfortable living, is hardly appreciated even by those who most need it. This is the need of having some time each day entirely alone. It is impossible to live comfortably without composure of mind and there is no way of securing it so surely as to spend a short time each day (and a long time is even better) in silence, and free from interruptions. It is soothing to tired nerves and strengthening to a tired mind. The person who does not like to be alone, who does not even strongly desire to be alone once in a while, is already on the highroad towards ill-health. It is the only way to have relief from the confusion of always being in some one's presence, which will, sooner or later, either effect the nerves or weaken the mind.

Wherever or however you live, then, see to it that you have at least one hour out of every twenty-four that you can call your own. Some busy people may at first think this is impossible; but we rarely find anyone who does not waste more than this every day, and who is not the worse off for the waste. The very act of taking this hour strengthens the will and adds that much to the comfort of living, since a weak-willed person is at the mercy of every thing and every person that encroach upon his rights; and not the least of these is the right to live a healthy, comfortable life.—Demorest's Magazine.

Cutting and Pruning.

A good deal can be done now that many leave until spring. As soon as leaves fall, such shrubs as have not been pruned during the growing season can be put into satisfactory shape. In doing this be careful to discriminate as to the character of the shrub. Some kinds bloom early in the spring from buds which are formed this season. The lilac is an illustration. If you were to trim it in fall you would be destroying its spring crop of flowers. But the rose makes a growth of branch in spring from which its flowers are produced. Such plants it is safe to trim in fall. Many plants in the border will require attention. Some need division of the roots, and the formation of new plants from the healthiest portion of the younger growth. Others have become so matted from years of growth that it will be found advisable to remove a portion of them if no new plants are cared for. All should be dug about and manured. Old flowering stalks should be cut off, and all rubbish removed and buried or burned. By attention of this kind neatness can be made to prevail at all times of the year, and this in a measure makes up for lack of flowers in the garden. Gather up the sticks and trellises which have been used as supports for plants, and store them away for future use. Rake up dead leaves from the lawn and put them away in some corner where they will rot and furnish material for potting plants in a coming season.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Recount.

The recount of the votes for Mayor, Councilmen at-large and Councilmen from Ward Three is complete, and except in Ward Three there is no change in the grand result.

The recount, however, changed the vote of 14 of the 18 candidates for the offices.

For Mayor, Hon. William A. Hodges lost one and Stephen O. Moxon gained one, and the majority for Mr. Hodges is 28.

Only two of the ten councilmen-at-large have the same vote given them by the election count, Messrs. Sprague and Hearn. Gains were made by Messrs. Bigelow, Shackley, Anderson, Avery and Holbrook. Loses by Messrs. Adams, Johnson, and Baker.

The greatest gains were 5 each for Bigelow, Shackley and Anderson. Councilman Adams lost 7 and Councilman Baker 5.

The two counts:

* Elected.

† Tie vote.

In Ward Five there was one disputed ballot. On this ballot there was a faint cross against the name of Mr. Moxon. At the first look the ballot would be counted blank but a second look showed the cross. The election officers called it a blank. With the Registrars the two Democratic members called it a blank, while the two Republican members called it for Moxon. It was finally decided to call it a blank.

The recount of the vote for Councilmen from Ward Three resulted in some changes. Grindell and Clark each gained one vote and Lennon lost a vote. This makes a tie between Messrs. Clark and Falconer and another election will be necessary.

The vote gained by Mr. Clark was a peculiar one and there is a difference of opinion as to whether it should be counted or not. The voter had a method of his own for marking the ballot and as it was the first one of the kind ever noted he should have it patented. The voter instead of making the required X to designate who he desired to vote for, made five straight marks, IIIII, against five Councilmen at large and against the name of Mr. Clark for Ward Councilman and these were all he voted for.

The election officers called it a defective ballot and threw it out but the Registrars counted it which made the tie.

Lawyer Powers who looked after Mr. Moxon's interest, and is an authority on the Australian system, says that the ballot should not have been counted, but the Registrars argued that the intent of the voter was evident and it was counted.

Abusive.

One of the lowest, most contemptible articles that we have seen in print for years, appeared last week. It not only greatly injured the good standing of our city, but the good name of our best citizens. No doubt the writer and the publisher have both cursed themselves since the article appeared in print, as it did not benefit them, nor any political party, or individual. Some thought it was published to help His Honor, Mayor Hodges, but he is too much of a gentleman to seek aid of that stamp; and certainly it could not help his party.

Calling attention to the free distribution of liquor to secure votes is commendable; but trying to injure the character of honest upright citizens in connection therewith, is libellous; and will injure any newspaper that stoops to so contemptible a trick.

Editor Surprised.

A quiet little game of whist on Coddington street had scarcely got underway Thursday evening, when there was a descent upon the house, and this was surprise No 1 for Mr. and Mrs. George W. Prescott and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall P. Nye.

The former couple were summoned home to meet some relatives from out of town, and were ushered into the presence of a house full of neighbors, business associates of Mr. Prescott and many of his brother editors, who were pleased to assemble and congratulate Mr. Prescott upon his 60th birthday. Boston, Revere, Dedham, Randolph, Braintree and other towns were represented.

Surprise No. 3 followed a few minutes later when the employes of the PATRIOT and LEDGER, some twelve or fifteen entered in a body, bringing with them a comfortable Morris chair. The presentation speech came later and was made by Editor M'Ewan of the Braintree Observer, which paper is also published by George W. Prescott & Son. Attached to the chair was a souvenir ribbon badge with the names of the employes.

The Boston paper firm of A. Storrs & Bement Co. had also forwarded a beautiful piano lamp with a brass and onyx stand and a little later came another Morris chair, a gift of the Granite City Club. Miss Maria J. Turner, a neighbor and schoolmate of Mr. Prescott, sent a beautiful birthday cake, handsomely frosted, having the dates in the corner and the years, 60, in the centre. There were other tokens, including some choice flowers from Mrs. Col. Packard and others.

The daughters of Mr. Prescott had planned the surprise and the guests found abundance of refreshments in the dining room, and were entertained by music, etc.

Mr. Wales was caterer and his ices and creams, salads and escalloped oysters, were unusually good. He personally superintended the table, and the appeal of the inner man was well supplied.

The music by Rossi's orchestra of three pieces, was mostly new selections and rich in quality, and can be highly recommended for such occasions.

Four generations in the family were represented on this pleasant occasion: Mrs. Joshua Fisher, the mother of Mrs. Prescott,—a lady of 84 of remarkable vitality—the five children of Mr. and Mrs. Prescott, and their oldest grandson, Carl Fisher Prescott.

Mr. Prescott received regrets from all over New England, from editors who were unable to be present, and he will always prize highly the congratulations and kind wishes extended.

It was a social gathering where all seemed to enjoy themselves and Mr. and Mrs. Prescott were pleased to see them all.

The QUINCY PATRIOT, with which Editor Prescott has been associated almost all his life is but three years younger than its proprietor, and few citizens of Quincy can keep house without it. The LEDGER is the daily edition of the PATRIOT, and a vigorous infant in its sixth year, while the firm publish a weekly for Braintree known as the OBSERVER.

Hon. Josiah Quincy has been spending a few days with friends at the capital. There is a report current there that Mr. Quincy is to be a benedict in the near future, having lost his heart to a Washington lady. As Mr. Quincy is a dyed-in-the-wool kind of a bachelor, it serves to enchance the popular interest in his little romance, and further developments are looked for at any moment.—Globe.

The Sunday Globe commented upon the neckwear of noted men, and Henry H. Faxon of this city was in the list. It commented thus: "The venerable apostle of temperance, Henry Faxon, wears a four-in-hand of modern style, but his collar is a bit old-fashioned. It is a straight stand-up collar, and is becoming to the wearer, although lots of people have reason to believe that Henry is entirely in the front line in the push."

Rogers Bros. have on exhibition in their show window some string beans measuring 1 inch in width and 14 in length. The card with the exhibit states that these beans were raised on a ranch at Fullerton, Orange Co., California, by Edward S. Brown, formerly of this city. The City Council.

The only absent member at the meeting of the Council Thursday evening was Councilman Sullivan.

Coddington and Adams Street.

The order widening Coddington street came up for its final passage.

Councilman Anderson thought this an important matter. It never could be widened any cheaper than now and thought order should pass.

Councilman Federhen, Jr., asked if there was no way to widen without taking the whole of Mr. Furnald's lot.

Councilman Holden replying said the matter was gone over thoroughly and all argued it was better to take the whole of it, as the part left would be but a small piece. Of the appropriation now called for one third or one quarter would come back in betterments.

Councilman Adams, thought with our tax rate at $17 and other heavy burdens upon us we have got to economize. There was no pressing need of widening these streets. No accident had ever happened and it is probable within the next five years the tracks will have to be relocated. We ought to limit ourselves to the necessary expenditures that are upon us. He saw no reason why we should select Coddington and Adams streets.

The Council refused to pass the order by the following vote:

YEAS — Anderson, Babcock, Holden, Litchfield, Moxon, Robbins—6.

NAYS—Adams, Baker, Bigelow, Federhen, Jr., Holbrook, Johnson, Lamb Lennon, McKeon, O'Brien, Rooney, Shackley, Snow, Waterhouse—14.

ABSENT—Clark, Sullivan.

The order rebuilding a part of Adams, street, the Council also refused to pass by the following vote:

YEAS,—Anderson, Babcock, Federhen, Sr., Lamb, Lennon, Litchfield, McKeon, O'Brien, Robbins, Rooney—10.

NAYS,—Adams, Baker, Bigelow, Holbrook, Holden, Johnson, Moxon, Shackley, Snow, Waterhouse—10.

Absent,—Clark, Sullivan.

Petitions were received from the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co., to locate 3 poles on Spear street and from Mrs. C. F. Carlson to keep an intelligence office. Referred.

Report of Committes.

The Committee on Elections reported the result of the election of Dec 4. (This did not include report of recount.) Report accepted.

Public Hearing.

At 8 o'clock the public hearing on discontinuing a part of Quarry street, and relocating the same was called.

J. W. McAnarney appeared for Mr. Dell. The entrance to Mr. Dell's quarry was from this street. He owned part of the way to his quarry but was obliged to now go over a small strip of land owned by the Adams Temple and School Fund. The proposed change removed Quarry street some 200 feet north, but Mr. Dell would not object if the Council before passing the order would see to it that he had a right of way over this 200 feet which belonged to another party.

Councilman Holden asked if Mr. Dell had anything in his deed to show his right to Quarry street.

Mr. McAnarney replied that they did all but a small piece which they claimed a right to cross by adverse use.

Peter T. Fallon did not care about saying much about the matter. He was unfortunate enough to do business in Quincy and his quarry was on Quarry street. He then went into the history of Quarry street. A blast had thrown part of the street into his quarry. He promised that he would relocate the street and this was the plan. The street its entire length was in a dangerous condition. He was not a lawyer, jeweler or dry goods merchant, who could move their desk anywhere. Other places helped business men but here they did not.

Councilman Holbrook asked if there were any other business men that would be benefitted by the relocation, to which Mr. Fallon replied yes.

Upon questions by Mr. McAnarney, however, it came out that Mr. Fallon would be about the only party aided.

Mr. Fallon promised to see to it that Mr. Dell had a right to the street if relocated.

W. G. A. Pattee, Esq, argued early action in this matter. Mr. Fallon had left him in such a way that he could not let his property. The city had been liable to an indictment for the past three years. He either wanted the old way restored as it was, so he could reach his quarry, or this new way built.

Councilman Holden said the committee had done all that was possible to push this matter through.

At 8.45 the hearing closed.

A motion was made by Councilman Moxon that the matter be recommitted with instructions that they request Mr. Fallon procure rights to abuttors.

Councilman Federhen, Jr., objected, and classed Mr. Fallon's remarks as nickle plated nerve. When a man comes here and admits he has taken two-thirds of the road we should consider the matter as a committee of the whole. He did not consider it a part of the Council's duty but the executive who should with the City Solicitor proceed to sue Mr. Fallon.

Councilman Moxon said there was an agreement made with Mr. Fallon on such a plan as this and action was withheld. We should not delay this matter any longer

Councilman Johnson objected to the latter part of the motion.

Councilman Moxon withdrew the latter part of the motion, after which the matter was recommitted.

Permanent Men and Horses.

The Committee on Fire Department, reported an order changing ordinance No. 1, so that it should read for Hose companies 3 and 4, ten men to each, two of whom shall be permanent at a salary of $14 each per week.

Councilman Federhen, Jr., offered an amendment changing it to one permanent man each.

Councilman Lennon was not in favor of putting horses in Wards 2 and 4.

Councilman Moxon believed their should be two permanent men and two horses in each station. The horses to be for fire service, but to be used by the city within a certain distance of the station.

Councilman Holbrook believed Ward Six should have horses and permanent men. He also thought men could be hired for $12 per week.

Councilman McKeon did not believe in reducing salary.

Councilman Baker thought Wards Five and Six should have permanent men and horses.

Councilman Lennon said the councilmen had pledged themselves at the dedication of new hose houses, but he did not pledge himself for a plate of beans.

Councilman Federhen, Jr., moved the order be laid on the table until the next meeting of the Council.

Councilman Moxon amended that it be referred to Committee on Salaries.

The order was referred to the Committee on Salaries.

The Committee on Fire Department reported an order appropriating $250 for a horse for Hose 2, and that the horse used at West Quincy be transferred to the Fire Department. To Committee on Finance.

The Committee on Finance reported, ought to pass, an order transferring $200 from enforcement of liquor law to special police. Under suspension of the rules the order was passed to be ordained.

The same committee reported an order appropriating $100 for use of Board of Health. All rules were suspended and the order passed to be ordained.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Electric Light and Power Company permission to erect five poles on Sumner street. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Streets recommended leave to withdraw on a petition of Manet street railway to cross Sea street, and relocating and regrading School street. Adopted.

The Committee on Streets recommended that the following orders be referred to the incoming council: Extension of Glencoe place; laying out and accepting Holmes and Moscow streets, Faxon road, portion of Broadway, Billings road, Madison street, Glover, Nightingale and California avenues; regarding portion of West near Centre streets; paving gutters on Walnut street; and enlarging culvert on Washington street near its juncture with Canal street.

Councilman Holbrook moved that part relating to Broadway be referred back to Committee on Streets with instructions to report order at next meeting accepting the street.

After some discussion Councilman Holbrook's motion was lost and the report was then adopted.

The order transferring $100 from enforcement of liquor law to the police station, was passed to be ordained. Councilman Holbrook voting no.

The orders appropriating $3,600, and $3,000 for schoolhouse lots at West Quincy and Norfolk Downs came up for final passage.

Upon motion of Councilman Moxon they were laid on the table.

Upon motion of Councilman Moxon, the Committee on Public Buildings were instructed to ascertain if a suitable lot could be obtained on the south west corner of Willard and Robertson street.

Councilman Holbrook moved to adjourn. Lost.

Councilman Moxon moved the suspension of rule one which prevailed, and it was then voted that the Council adjourn until next Thursday evening.

Adjourned at 10.50.

WEST QUINCY.

The West Quincy branch of the Thomas Crane Public library has been moved from Doble's store to the post office.

The apron sale and oyster supper by the Ladies union will take place next Wednesday evening, in the vestry of the Methodist church.

The Ladies' Social Circle of the West Quincy Methodist church hold an oyster supper and apron sale next Wednesday evening.

QUINCY POINT.

The old hose house in Ward Two is to be sold at auction next week.

McIntyre & Kirk have the knockabout for A. E. Schaaf ready for launching at their Quincy paint shops. Another knockabout of the improved spinster type is also under way for a Boston yachtsman. Some more new work is expected by Jan. 1.—Globe.

It is said the Quincy Electric Light Co. would furnish an arc light free if any more light could be shed on that beer episode in Ward Two.

Mrs. Thos. W. Carter met with a serious accident on Monday evening. While walking along the sidewalk in front of Whall's apothecary store, she fell on the ice and broke her arm. Dr. J. A. Gordon set the bone.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Dr R. McLennan is very sick with typhoid fever.

J. L. Miller, of the firm of Thomas & Miller, returned on Wednesday from an extended trip on business and pleasure, having traveled about six thousand miles, and visiting twenty states, including all the south. He has made up his mind that Quincy is good enough for him; that we do not know what deprivations are in the North, among the laboring people, as compared with the South.

Rev. Nathan Hunt resigned his position last Sunday as pastor of the Calvary church at South Quincy. He has also resigned his pastorate at East Milton.

"Some remarks on works of fiction" were made by Mr. William Taylor at the meeting of the Quincy Literary Society Friday Dec. 7. In the continued absence through sickness of the president, Dr. R. McLennan, the chair was occupied by the vice-president, Mr. Wm. Traynor.

A Christmas Dime Sale.

The Sunny Hour Lend a Hand Club will hold a Christmas dime sale and entertainment at the house of Mrs. W. E. Simmons, 14 Central avenue, Wollaston, on Friday, the 21st, from 4 to 9 o'clock.

The chief attraction will be that the club which is composed of young boys, is to have entire charge of the sale and the articles for sale have been made by these boys. The president, Avery Bennett, and the vice president, Freddie Thayer, will pour the chocolate. As there are no Rebekahs in the club the lemonade will be presided over by Horace Thomas. Tickets of admission can be had of members of the club.

Bowling Club Formed.

The first bowling club to be formed in this city was organized at the Duck's Nest, Wollaston, on Wednesday evening, with twenty-two members. The teams will be formed on Saturday evening and on Tuesday evening two teams will bowl.

These officers were elected:

President,—Edmund S. Taylor.

Secretary and Treasurer,—V. J. Emery.

Directors, the president and secretary, ex-officio, and Chester L. McClintock.

The members of the Wollaston Bowling club are as follows: H. B. Sanborn, George Barker, Benj S. Beale, Howard Gannett, Jr., Victor J. Emery, Edgar A. King, Howard W. Battison, C. L. McClintock, George F. Briggs, Fredrick McIntire, Chas. M. Bryant, Wm. I Dewson, Edward A. Lyman, Richard R. Freeman, Albert H. Brock, Edmund F. Taylor, Jas. Casey, Edmund S. Taylor, Martin F. Burns, Hon. Henry O. Fairbanks, Mellen N. Bray, Charles T. Baker.

The Pigeon Show.

The mammoth pigeon show held in Horticultural hall, Boston, this week is the most successful affair of its nature ever held in this country, there being on exhibition 1250 of the finest high class pigeons in existence.

Many of these birds are valued at very high figures, there being several instances during the show when more than one hundred dollars was refused for a single specimen and that not a first prize winner.

The exhibitors did much to educate the public concerning the fancy and to teach it that there is something in the term pigeon beyond the ordinary "duffers" that fly about the streets.

Dr. W. G. Kendall, of Atlantic, exhibited 37 specimens on which he was awarded 7 first prizes, 11 seconds, 7 thirds, 7 fourths; 32 prizes in all, which will give an idea of the quality of his stock.

The exhibition will remain open until 10 o'clock Saturday night, this last day having been added for the accomodation of school children, who can learn more from an hour spent looking at these beautiful pets than in days reading of them. Also for the benefit of children the admission fee to them has been placed at but fifteen cents.

☞Before you purchase your wife or husband a Christmas present, call at the furniture warerooms of C. W. Guy and W. G. Shaw at the Quincy Coliseum, and see the many useful and handsome presents there displayed. 1polt.

THANKS. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Guy wish to express sincere thanks to their friends and neighbors for their many kind remembrances during the recent sickness and death of their neice, Miss Mabel Perkins.

DOWNS AND PARK.

The song service at Norfolk Downs, Sunday afternoon, was very well attended although the weather was bad. The Young People's orchestra of Wollaston played several selections. The Carnation male quartette sang two selections which were well rendered. The address was by Rev. Mr. Deetz of Atlantic, and his words were very encouraging to those who were about to form a Sunday School.

After the song service at A. O. U. W. hall, Norfolk Downs, Sunday, a union Sunday School was organized. Councilmen-elect Herbert S. Barker was elected temporary chairman and the following officers were elected: Superintendent, Henry S. Weymouth. Assistant Superintendent, Frank Rogers. Secretary and Treasurer, Levi Nichols. The officers together with Walter J. Coombs and Herbert J. Polk were elected a committee of management.

Arrested on Suspicion.

Officer Ferguson arrested two Jews Friday noon upon suspicion that they were doing a swindling business.

The two men were going from house to house in the Centre soliciting photographs to enlarge. If the party at the house where they called had none to enlarge, they would produce a pair of gold bowed (?) spectacles which they claimed they had found and offer them at an extremely low price.

When searched at the police station, eleven pairs of these same gold bowed (?) spectacles were found on one of the men and eight pair upon the other. There was also a book containing a number of names with $1 paid marked against them, and a lot of old photographs.

The spectacle game is an old one and has undoubtedly been worked this time upon some of our citizens.

The men will appear in court this morning.

Reform Club Still Lives.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Reform club was held on Monday evening and the following officers were re-elected:

President,—John D. Nutting.

Vice Presidents,—Henry H. Faxon and Charles H. Hersey.

Directors,—Theophilus King, Nathaniel Nightingale and Elmer W. Baker.

Secretary and Treasurer,—Henry Chubbuck.

Sergeant at Arms,—Thomas Kelly.

Catholics Generous.

The contributions from the Catholic churches of Quincy amounted this year, to $242 00, of which $127.00, came from St. John's church, $97.00 from West Quincy, and the rest from Atlantic.

The Secretary of the Hospital trustees acknowledges the receipt of the above in the following note to the Rev. Pastor.

QUINCY, Dec. 3, 1894.

Rev. F. A. Friguglietti,

MY DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of Nov. 28th enclosing check for $242, amount of Hospital Sunday Collection for the benefit of the City Hospital.

The Trustees desire me to express their thanks for the same.

Respectfully yours,
TIMO. REED.
Secretary.

A Corner in Wind.

It's almost a tie race between some of the stores to see which one can produce the most windy advertisements. Even when they have only the meanest shoddy to show you, they shout trumpet loud their "Mark Downs and Bankrupt Sales," and take your money for Clothing that looks better than it is.

It is in the face of such difficulties that we have to push our superior make of ALL WOOL CLOTHING. Of course when a clothing store makes an offer day after day to sell you goods at 50 cts. on the dollar, there is a great temptation to accept such a philanthropic trade. They want you to buy at that rate and make money (for them). We think it proper to say that we shall keep on selling the best of Clothing. We're in business to make a little money if we can. We want a profit on our goods. Small, it's true, and yet maybe you would save money, real dollars and cents, by buying your Clothing—Men's or Boys'—and paying US a profit.

Besides having everything in CLOTHING, we carry HATS, FURNISHINGS and SHOES—in fact, everything that Man or Boy wears, from his Hat to his Shoes—and sell them at fairest prices. Come and see.

Harper's Magazine

IN 1895.

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy, will be begun in the December Number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists, it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degree to that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc, by the Sieur Louis De Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January Number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern Papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empires. The next volume of HARPER'S MAGAZINE will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the MAGAZINE a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories, there will begin in the January Number the first chapters of A Three-Part Novelette by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the MAGAZINE.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus.

The Volumes of the MAGAZINE begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order. Cloth cases, for binding 50 cents each—by mail, postpaid. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Harper's Bazar

IN 1895.

Elegant and exclusive designs for Outdoor and In-door Toilettes, drawn from Worth models by Sandoz and Chapuis, are an important feature. These appear every week accompanied by minute descriptions and details. Our Paris Letter by Katharine de Forest is a weekly transcript of the latest styles and caprices in the mode. Under the head of New York Fashions, plain directions and full particulars are given as to shapes, fabrics, trimmings and accessories of the costumes of well dressed women. Children's Clothing receives practical attention. A fortnightly Pattern-sheet Supplement enables readers to cut and make their own gowns. The woman who takes HARPER'S BAZAR is prepared for every occasion in life, ceremonious or informal, where beautiful dress is requisite. An American serial, Doctor Warwick's Daughters by Rebecca Harding Davis, a strong novel of American life, partly laid in Pennsylvania and partly in the far South, will occupy the last half of the year.

My Lady Nobody, an intensely exciting novel by Maartens Maartens, author of "God's Fool," "The Greater Glory," etc., will begin the year.

Essays and Social Chats. To this department Spectator will contribute her charming papers on "What We are Doing" in New York society.

Answers to Correspondents. Questions receive the personal attention of the editor and are answered at the earliest possible date after their receipt.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus.

The Volumes of the BAZAR begin with the first number of January of each year. When no time is mentioned subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.

Cloth Cases for each volume, suitable for binding, will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $1.00 each. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Harper's Weekly

IN 1895.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a pictorial history of the times. It presents every important event promptly, accurately, and exhaustively in illustration and descriptive text of the highest order.

The manner in which, during 1894, it has treated the Chicago Railway Strikes and the China-Japanese War, and the amount of light it was able throw on Korea the instant attention was directed to that little-known country, are examples of its almost boundless resources. Julian Ralph, the distinguished writer and correspondent, has been sent to the seat of war, and there joined by C. D. Weldon, the well-known American Artist now for many years resident in Japan, who has been engaged to co-operate with Mr. Ralph in sending to HARPER'S WEEKLY exclusive information and illustrations.

During 1895 every vital question will be discussed without prejudice in the editorial columns, and also in special articles by the highest authorities in each department Portraits of the men and women who are making history, and powerful and caustic political cartoons, will continue to be characteristic features. This Busy World, with its keen and kindly comment on the lesser doings of the day, will remain a regular department.

FICTION. There will be two powerful serials, both handsomely illustrated—The Red Cockade, a stirring romance of olden days by Stanley J. Weymen, and a novel of New York entitled, The Son of His Father, by Brander Matthews—several novelettes, and many short stories by popular writers.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus.

The Volumes of the WEEKLY begin with the first number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the number current at time of receipt of order.

Cloth Cases for each volume, suitable for binding, will be sent by mail, postpaid on receipt of one dollar each. Title-page and Index sent on application.

St. NICHOLAS FOR YOUNG FOLKS IN 1895.

Edited by Mary Mapes Dodge.

The greatest year in the history of this magazine, now without a rival in its field, is the one just closing. Plans for the coming year assure even greater success than in the past.

RUDYARD KIPLING

wrote his famous "Jungle Stories" for ST. NICHOLAS, and it is a welcome announcement that these will be continued in 1895.

NAPOLEON

FOR YOUNG READERS.

While THE CENTURY will have for its leading feature the new life of the French Emperor by Prof. Sloane, one of the most popular of ST. NICHOLAS writers takes the same character for his inspiration.

A Boy of the First Empire

BY ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS,

is the story of a little lad from the streets of Paris (but of good family), who renders a service to Napoleon, and becomes one of his pages and finally an aide. He is with him at the most critical times of his life,—at the departure for Elba, in the glories of the life at Fontainebleau, and finally at Waterloo. The story glows with pageantry and is a truthful and accurate account, based upon the best authorities and verified by the latest information of the life of "the man of destiny." It is really a delightful story-history of Napoleon.

WEST POINT

AND MAN-OF-WAR LIFE

will receive attention, Lieutenant Putnam writing of cadet life at the military academy, while Ensign Ellicott of the flag-ship "Chicago" will describe the experiences of our hardy seamen on the modern ships of war.

INSPIRING TALES

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Theodore Roosevelt will write a series to be called "Hero-Tales from American History," recounting famous deeds of heroism about which young people ought to know. Prof. Brander Matthews will include in his entertaining papers on "The Great American Authors" accounts of the lives of Bryant, Emerson, Longfellow, Hawthorne, Whittier, Poe and Lowell. Stories of Famous Horses in history and mythology—Bucephalus, Napoleon's and Sheridan's horses, etc.—will be told by James Baldwin, author of "Stories from the Northern Myths." City Fire Departments will be treated, and there will be two or three papers on The Boys' Brigade. The Serial Stories are many. One called "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp," recounts the marvelous adventures of a modern boy who became the accidental purchaser of Aladdin's lamp and summoned the jinn while cleaning it. A delightful story of college girls, "The Three Freshmen," will appeal to every girl; and "Teddy and Carrots," James Otis' serial of newsboy life will be read by every boy. A serial story by Frances Courtenay Baylor is one of the features.

Price of ST. NICHOLAS is 25 cts. a number or $3.00 a year. New subscriptions should begin with November, the first issue of the year. Subscribe through dealers or remit by check, draft or money order to Greater Boston Hearing.

It was a largely attended representative gathering which assembled at the hearing of the Metropolitan District Commission given in the Council Chamber, City Hall, Monday evening. A list of those present would include the Mayor and most of the Councilmen and department officials, the ex-Mayors, ex-Councilmen and many who have been prominent in the town and city government; our prominent citizens and our business men.

Chairman Rice of Quincy in opening said the commission had arrived at the conclusion that a general plan of annexation was not desirable. That only two or three places wanted it and these Boston would not take. Annexation therefore would not be considered this evening but the scheme of federation. Information was wanted as to government of a federation; how chosen, etc. It was the custom of the commission to have names suggested whose views were wanted. In response to this request these names were suggested: Mayor Hodges, H. H. Faxon, C. M. Bryant, ex-Mayor Porter, Councilman Moxon, R. F. Claflin, N. V. Titus, H. M. Federhen, ex-Mayor Fairbanks and J. O. Holden.

Mayor Hodges

Came to hear not to speak. Had not had time to give the subject study. Some things would be favorable. Sewers and and perhaps water. We should grapple with the sewer question, and may have to have more water.

Would not favor annexation. It possibly might be a good scheme if thoroughfares came under a federation. On general principles people should elect metropolitan government.

Councilman-elect Bryant was excused from presenting his views.

Ex-Mayor Porter

Was opposed to annexation but did favor metropolitan parks and metropolitan sewers under present system. Also favored a metropolitan water system. Police and fire department should remain in hands of people of the cities.

It was a question with him if the old Hancock turnpike should not come under metropolitan control. Also thoroughfares like Washington street, Quincy avenue, School and Franklin streets. During the past eight years Quincy had expended $80,000 on Hancock street.

Under federation our city might secure one contagious ward at its hospital, where another city obtained another and thus all be benefitted.

A board for government of district should consist of 5 or 7 appointed by the Governor so that each member should serve 5 or 7 years. He would have the money apportioned and levied by a separate commission appointed by the Supreme court.

In reply to a question he said that he recognized that a State commission would be irresponsible.

He would have one board for all—parks, sewers, water, etc.

Ex-Mayor Fairbanks

Was strongly in favor of federation to consider the great qustions. City councils do not give time to these matters. During his administration he had worked to secure a board of survey but it had been passed over.

Sewers was a great issue and a metropolitan board would give it attention and do the work cheaper. Would include water and parks.

Would not include highways, police or fire department. Would not have a board of government of Mayors.

Henry H. Faxon

Did not agree with the last speaker on the police question. Would remove police as far as possible from people to secure good service. Would have Governor appoint any board created. Five or seven members would be enough. They should have no other employment and receive $3500 each for service.

Would favor a separate sewerage commission.

Chairman Rice read a letter from the present sewerage commission to the effect that Quincy and adjoining towns had not been considered in a metropolitan system.

Mr. Faxon would have Legislature act first on all work.

Councilman Moxon

Hardly thought federation of benefit to Quincy except for trunk sewers and highways. Quincy was all right for water. Parks should continue under metropolitan government.

Government of district should somehow be elected by people and every city and town should have some representation.

Would certainly take metropolitan water if cheaper.

Rupert F. Claflin

Thought a small commission appointed by Governor would give better results than a body elected. Believed Legislature should pass upon appropriations for district.

Herbert M. Federhen

Was not in favor of one commission. Work would be too arduous. Would have parks and highways under one commission, and water and sewers under another. Commissioners should be appointed by Governor with authority to carry out.

With honest men commission would do good work. Would give full power to legislate as well as execute.

N. V. Titus said the best talent for commissioners would be the cheapest.

John O. Holden favored some head. A board of survey and sewerage commission desirable.

Councilman Adams

Would treat the question as a district rather than locally, and also 10 or 25 years hence.

We will then want close federation. Towns throw away much money on road building by incompetent men. Commissions would be inadequate and irresponsible, the Dedham court house for example. Some head was wanted. Favored the idea of putting district all in one county.

Senator Merrill

Was the first one out-spoken for annexation. Our interests were with Boston and the sooner annexation was effected the better for Quincy and the better for Boston.

Something should be done to give Quincy a sewerage system. Parks and highways would be improved by annexation.

Would not have appropriations dependent on Legislature. Was not partial to commissions, and thought there were too many now.

Councilman Shackley

Would be sorry to see government further removed from people. Did not favor commissions but thought them sometimes necessary. Federation was often an advantage. A metropolitan board could build the thoroughfares better.

H. T. Whitman was called for, but was not present.

W. H. Glennon spoke on sewers and water and favored annexation as the only way to get improvements.

Councilman Holbrook

Endorsed the views of Senator Merrill in favor of annexation, believing the taxpayers would be benefitted by less taxes and more improvement. Favored a small executive body, perhaps one person, and a legislative body elected by the different cities.

The hearing came to an abrupt end about 9 P. M. as the commissioners desired to return to Boston.

THE ELECTION SCANDAL.

The political reputation of Quincy was badly smirched at the last election and prominent men of both parties are disgusted with the method said to have been employed to influence the action of voters. While it may be true that in years past similar means have been used on a small scale, yet this is the first time such charges of wholesale attempts to corrupt the voters have ever been made. When before in our history, has it been found necessary for the local papers to be filled with affidavits from prominent citizens, claiming themselves to be innocent of corrupt political practices and methods? When before, either in the town, or city of Quincy, has there ever been such a deep impression of something wrong permeating the public mind?

The people are now thoroughly aroused on the question of clean politics for this city. They are indignant that there should be grounds for such wide-spread suspicion, and there is a general and well defined demand that the scandal of the last election shall be thoroughly investigated by a competent tribunal, and if wrong and corruption be found, that the responsibilty therefor, be placed where it belongs.

The article which appeared in the local Democratic paper last Saturday, contained statements that were either true or false; they were either justified by the facts, or else a great wrong to innocent men, and the only reasonable place to expect to ascertain the truth, is before the courts where the penalty for perjury will tend to make witnesses tell the truth.

The proposition to leave the decision of the question to any one citizen, is not a proper one; the charges are of too serious a nature to be disposed of in such a manner. While every word in our affidavit may, in a certain sense, be true, yet it may evade meeting the charges made against the signer of it. No one expects that a political leader would take a sum of money to a bar-tender and say to him "invest this money in rum or beer and take it to certain wards in the city and use it in demoralizing the voters." Neither would anyone expect money to be given out with instructions to buy votes. The citizens are not so supremely ignorant as to suppose that money was used by anyone in so direct a manner for illegitimate puposes, and affidavits that it was not so used, are not to the point and; do not reach the depth of the charges made. What the advocates of good government desire to know is: Who furnished the money which bought the beer said to have been so freely dispensed? Who advocated the election of Mr. Moxon in an address delivered to the men who drank the beer? Why the intimacy between two Boston bar-tenders and a leading Republican politician? Who were the three prominent men who consulted together repeatedly and laid out the campaign? What was the connection between these three men and a Boston bar-tender? Through what agents and by what means was enthusiasm for the Republican candidate sought to be created among Democrats?

These are pertinent questions, and it is along this line that must come the testimony that will satisfy the public; it is the circumstantial and not the direct evidence of corrupt methods that needs to be examined and upon which the light of truth should be obtained.

I was glad to see in the Ledger that the representatives of the Republican party have commenced to appreciate the situation and are to engage counsel. I hope for the good of the public as well as for that of the party, they will exhaust every means to reach the true inwardness of this whole affair, for no half-way measure will allay or satisfy the present state of public opinion.

GREATER BOSTON.

While Senator Merrill was the only one to speak in favor of annexing Quincy to Boston, at the hearing Monday, it was because the chairman announced that annexation was to be eliminated from the discussion. There is quite a feeling in favor of the project, and while it is doubtful if a majority now agree to it, it is only a question of a few years before Quincy will join Boston; they are too closely connected in interests to be long kept apart. The question has now reached a point where we must decide whether we must lost a part of our fine water front or seriously consider annexing the whole to Boston. I believe the latter to be preferable and not far distant.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

It must be very gratifying to the department and to the citizens that there has been such management of fires during the year that nothing but commendation is heard. The proposal to place Hose Companies 3 and 4 in shape to be of practical use, is a wise one, and will meet with general approval. The city needs a first-class chemical engine, with two permanent men and a pair of horses, to be located just on the rising ground north of the Butler estate, and to answer to most all the boxes. With its great water presure, Quincy does not need another steam fire engine. Hose 4 should have a new hose wagon to replace the antiquated reel which has done service for so many years.

MR. GREEN CHALLENGED.

But He Fails to Produce Evidence Which Would Have Won Him $500.

Monday, Mr. Moxon, the Republican candidate for Mayor at the recent municipal election, deposited in the hands of Henry H. Faxon $200 in accordance with a proposition which he that day made to the editor of the Quincy Advertiser and which is published below.

The time therefore expired Friday at noon and up to that time the Advertiser had not accepted the proposition. Mr. Faxon, however, says he has received some confidential information about the liquor used but will make no statement at present.

The Republican Ward and City Committee also resents the charges against Republicans, of the use of liquor in the recent election, and is willing to swear to its statement.

Resolutions.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican Ward and City Committee held Friday evening, the following resolution was unanimously adopted.

The Executive Committee of the Republican Ward and City Committee hereby declare the rumor that this committee, any member of this committee, or any representative of this committee was either directly or indirectly concerned in the importation or distribution of liquor for campaign purposes to the city, is unqualifiedly false.

HENRY O. FAIRBANKS, Pres.
WILSON MARSH, Sec'y.
Quincy, Dec. 7, 1894.

NORFOLK, SS.
QUINCY, Mass., Dec. 7, 1894.

There personally appeared Henry O. Fairbanks and Wilson Marsh and made oath to the above statement.

HENRY H. FAXON,
Justice of the Peace.

Moran Under Oath.

I hereby take this opportunity with your kind permission to give public circulation to the following affidavit, viz:

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, SS. December 7, 1894.

I, Peter Moran, of Quincy, in said County, do on oath declare that neither Hon. H. O. Fairbanks or J. W. McAnarney, Esq., directly or indirectly gave to me any money during the late Mayoralty contest, or directly or indirectly authorized to my knowledge the expending by anyone of any money for intoxicating liquors to be used for political or other purposes during said campaign.

PETER MORAN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me on the above date.

EDWARD J. PARKER,
Justice of the Peace.

McAnarney's Affidavit.

Please publish the following affidavit, viz:—

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, SS. December 8, 1894.

I, John W. McAnarney of Quincy, in said county, on oath declare that during the late Mayoralty campaign I did not purchase or cause to be purchased, any beer or other intoxicating liquors for political or other purposes. That I did not directly or indirectly authorize the expending of any money for any such purpose, or know that any person was distributing or causing beer to be distributed in Mr. Moxon's interests.

I further certify that I did not know that Mr. Moynihan or any other bar-tender was working in Quincy in Mr. Moxon's behalf and I further certify that I have information in my possession to the effect that the beer used in the Ward 2 episode was furnished in the name of a member of the Ward 2 Democratic committee.

[Signed,] JOHN W. MCANARNEY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me on the above date.

JOHN H. DINEGAN,
Justice of the peace.

Challenge from Moxon.

To the Editor of the Daily Ledger:

Below is a copy of letter sent by me this day to Henry H. Faxon and which you are at liberty to publish:

Henry H. Faxon, Esq., Quincy, Mass.

DEAR SIR: Believing that you will be willing to assist in an honest endeavor to place responsibility where it belongs, I take the liberty of asking you to accept a part in the proposition which I have made in a letter of this date, addressed to the editor of the Quincy Advertiser and of which the following is a copy:

F. F. Green, Editor Quincy Advertiser:

DEAR SIR: I have this day deposited with H. H. Faxon of Quincy two hundred ($200) dollars to be paid by him to any person or persons who will prove to his satisfaction.

That I have in any way authorized or directed to be used or distributed in Quincy or elsewhere, for election or any other purposes, any quantity large or small of any kind of intoxicating liquor.

I make no stipulation or reserve whatever, and if the sum named is not attractive enough, will increase it to $500. This proposition to remain open until noon Friday, Dec. 14.

Now, Mr. Editor, a word for you personally, in order that you may be induced to furnish any information which you may possess (and you certainly should have something substantial before publishing the matter credited to you by the Boston papers of Saturday.) I shall make an appeal to your patriotism, in this proposition.

That if through you or any person, the necessary information and proofs are furnished to H. H. Faxon so that he shall pay over to any person the above named $200, I will immediately pay to the Trustees of the Quincy City Hospita the further sum of five hundred dollars.

I presume that I do not need to remind you that this institution is one of great interest to all the people of Quincy and is greatly in need of funds. If Mr. Faxon should decline to serve in this matter I shall be willing to substitute any one of our well known citizens to act in the same capacity.

I send a copy of this letter to the Quincy DAILY LEDGER.

STEPHEN O. MOXON
Atlantic, Dec. 10, 1894.

My object in this matter is to reduce this controversy to a business basis, and when this opportunity has been afforded those who have caused our fair city to be slandered, and the Republican party of Quincy to be maligned, to prove their allegations so freely made, I will then furnish to you some real facts in connection with this matter, which, for the credit of the city of Quincy should never be published, and so far as I am personally concerned never will be published, but which remain absolute facts, and while they disclose proceedings which are in themselves extremely discreditable, that discredit cannot be placed upon the Republican party or any member thereof. Trusting that you will see your way clear to look after this matter in the interests of all good citizens of Quincy. I am very truly yours,

STEPHEN O. MOXON.
Atlantic, Dec. 10, 1894.

P. S. I am ready to exhibit to you or any other proper citizen of Quincy, my entire money transactions for the period between Nov. 20th and this date, and thereby prove that the assertions made as to the large expenditures of money by me, are absolutely untrue.

STEPHEN O. MOXON.

Mr. Faxon Accepts.

QUINCY, December 11, 1894.

Stephen O. Moxon, Esq.,

DEAR SIR—Yours of the 10th inst. at hand with check for $200 enclosed. While I hesitate to add new burdens to my busy life I shall gladly do all in my power to assist you in unearthing anything that tends to political rascality. I am not particular which party is hurt if the responsibility of this crooked work can be placed where it belongs.

I presume, however, you are well aware how difficult it is to obtain facts from those who took part in the disgraceful scenes, reported to have been enacted, where intoxicating liquors were dispensed for the purpose of influencing votes.

Experience has convinced me that unless some of the participants get mad, reliable information cannot be obtained. Whiskey and ale inside the average politician will generate more lies than all the other agencies of sin combined. Trusting that we may be able to expose Satan and his political co-workers. I am

Very truly yours,
HENRY H. FAXON.

John Dolan's Story.

Monday evening John Dolan was over anxious to contradict Moynihan's story about Ward Two beer, and prepared a statement for the LEDGER. Tuesday, however, he caused it to be suppressed.

To Employ Counsel.

The Republican Committee are determined to probe the charges that have been laid at their door, that they were responsible for the beer that was furnished in several of the wards of the city at the recent municipal election. At a meeting held Wednesday evening, the matter was discussed at length, after which the committee instructed President Fairbanks to proceed in the matter and employ the necessary counsel.

Quincy Teachers' Associations.

Under the leadership of Mr. Merrick the teachers of Quincy have recently organized the Quincy Teachers' Association. The following officers were elected for one year: President, Mr. C. F. Merrick, Principal of the Willard. Vice President, Mr. W. A. Reed, Principal of the Lincoln. Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. H. Kingman, Principal of the Wollaston, and an executive committee consisting of twelve members; one teacher from each school in the city.

The purpose of the association is to study educational subjects and become better acquainted, thus aiding in the edifying and improving of our already excellent schools.

The first meeting was held last month in Faxon hall. The programme rendered was of a literary and musical character, the purpose being to provide a social evening. Supt. Lull was present and in a short address bade the association God-speed. Ex-Mayor Porter also spoke an encouraging word.

The next meeting is to be held in the High School hall, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 18, the subject for the evening being Pestalozzi. The committee in charge, Mr. T. B. Pollard, Miss Carrie E. Small and Miss Nellie Fegan, has provided the following programme.

Life of Pectalozzi, Miss Ferguson of the Washington.

Pestalozzi as a Teacher, Miss Simonton of the Willard.

The Philospohy of Pestalozzi as Illustrated in Leonard and Gertrude, Miss Lane of the Woodward.

Sunday School Officers.

The Congregational Sunday School has elected these officers under the new constitution, the school year hereafter to correspond with the calendar year.

Mr. W. H. Fay, who is completing his third year, announced some weeks ago that he desired to relinquist the office, much to the regret of many. He was kindly remembered with a vote of thanks, on motion of Mr. King. It is a favorable time for a change as the Sunday school move into its new chapel about January 1.

Superintendent,—E. W. Branch.
Assistants,—Miss M. E. Fish (two others are to be elected.)
Secretary,—Charles Sampson.
Treasurer,—James S. Baxter.
Librarian,—Miss Jillson.
Assistant,—Miss Dunn.
Executive Committee,—the pastor, the above officers and Miss Cora Young, and Theophilus King.

It was voted to inscribe on the records a testimonial of the appreciation of the gift of the late Deacon Smalley, the income from which goes to the library of the school.

It is expected that the Sunday school will reopen a week from Sunday.

Almost A Riot.

There came near being a riot on Liberty street Friday morning. Just before noon a taxpayer of Ward Three approached Foreman Lowe and asked for work but was told he could have none. A windy war followed, and as the indignant citizen had sympathizers near by, it looked as though a riot was about to break out, for it needed only one blow to set the two crowds to fighting. Some of the men stepped in between Foreman Lowe and the angry citizen, when the foreman evidently believeing that he who fights and runs away, lives to fight another dog, made his retreat. He returned a little later and pulled off all the men and carts at work.

The Ward Three citizen who started the trouble claimed that he paid taxes amounting to $40 a year and that partiallity was show, as he could not get work, while men who only paid a $2 tax had work all the time.

Bigelow Street Fire.

The alarm from Box 35 at 8.15 Tuesday evening was rung in for a lively little blaze in a closet on the second floor of the house of W. W. Osborne on Bigelow street.

The fire was probably caused by an electric wire and as it was between the walls it was a stubborn one. It was however extinguished without the use of water by the department, although Mr. Osborne used some. He calls the damage about $200.

In responding to the alarm the leading horse on the steamer fell and that piece of apparatus was delayed somewhat.

Knights and Ladies.

At the regular meeting of Woodbine Lodge, K. & L. of H., held at Wollaston on Tuesday, these officers were elected for the ensuing term:

Past Protector,—Geo. W. Brown.
Protector,—Geo. W. Bennett.
Vice Protector,—Mrs. H. Record.
Chaplain,—Mrs. E. E. Neill.
Secretary,—Wm. P. Chase, Jr.
Financial Secretary—Wm. J Battison.
Treasurer,—Chas. R. Sherman.
Guide,—Miss F. I Lord.
Guardian,—Wm. P. Gould.
Sentinel,—Jas. C. Bates.
Trustees,—H. T. Whitman, Mrs. A. A. Brasee and Wm. C. Pierce.

Royal Arcanum Officers.

At the regular meeting of the John Adams Council, No. 1210, R. A., held Dec. 10, the following officers were elected:

Past Regent, W. C. Pierce.
Regent, J. A. Emerson.
Vice Regent, F. W. White.
Orator, R. F. Ross.
Sect., L. W. Nash.
Chap., E. G. Cleaves.
Guide, George W. Brown.
Collector, Chas. W. Tucker.
Treas., W. H. Brasee.
Warden, D. C. Burrell.
Sentry, C. J. Cummings.
Rep. to Grand Council, C. F. Wilde.
Alternate, W. C. Pierce.
Trustee for three years, G. M. Stokes.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The City Council.

The only absent member at the special meeting of the City Council held Tuesday was Councilman Litchfield.

A communication from the City Clerk was received stating that petitions had been filed for a recount in all the wards for Mayor and Councilmen-at-large and for Councilmen from Ward Three.

Councilman Robbins offered an order that the board of Registrars of Voters open the envelopes containing the ballots cast at the election held in the City of Quincy, Dec. 4, 1894, and determine the number of ballots for each of the candidates for Mayor and Councilmen-at-large in each ward, and for ward Councilmen in Ward Three.

Councilman Moxon said he felt that the Council was exceeding its duties in adopting the order, but upon advice of the City Solicitor he would move its adoption.

The order was then adopted, and at 7.43 the meeting adjourned.

A RECOUNT in Chicopee made a change of 46 votes for Mayor, and Andrew Gale, the Republican, is elected in place of Mr. Mellen, who by the election count had a plurality of 10. The error was all in one block of fifty votes; 35 votes counted for Mellen were cast for Gale, and 11 counted for Gale were cast for Mellen.

A Memory of Mistletoe.

I remember, I remember,
In the years of long ago,
On a night in drear December,
In the season of the snow;
I remember, I remember,
When the lights were burning low,
That I kissed a little maiden
In the years of long ago!

I remember, I remember,
On that drear and darksome night,
When the blasts of dull December
Swept o'er valley and o'er height;
I remember, I remember,
In her eyes a lover's light
When I kissed that little maiden,
On that drear and darksome night.

I remember, I remember,
Though the years will come no more.
When in many a dull December
Winter beat upon the door;
I remember, I remember,
That I kissed them by the score,
Every loving, blushing maiden,
Though the years will come no more,

I remember, I remember,
In the night of all the year,
When the tears of dull December
Fall on snow-lit heath and mere;
I remember, I remember,
That the dream I hold most dear
Is the kiss of children lovers
In the night of all the year.

Notes and Comments.

—Fifteen squashes of the winter Crookneck variety were raised from a single vine by Joseph Holmes of Milton, Mass.

—Many New England pastures contain chestnut trees of which the crop sells for as much as that of an apple tree. Isn't that a hint?

—The big gorilla which died recently at Austin & Stone's musuem, was insured for $8,000. The companies compromised for $6,000, which sum was paid.

—Gov. Greenhalge has promised to attend Dedham's celebration on January 1, 1894, of the 250th anniversary of the first free public school in America.

—The citizens of Ellsworth, Maine, are sick of the city government and want to change back to a town form, and will petition the next State Legislature.

—The South Shore Press changed hands last week and is now published by H. W. Bates and W. P. Dailey. It was a cheap newspaper, but was published so low that the owners lost money; and some persons are obliged to suffer in consequence.

—"There are New York public school teachers who say that if they can be assured of protection they are ready to testify that they have kept their positions or been promoted only by paying blackmail to the Tammany leeches who bled everybody in that city."

—In cleaning the Goddess of Liberty poised on the highest pinnacle of the Texas State capital, at Austin, it was discovered that a swam of bees had made their home in the hollow head of the goddess, using the nostrils as an entrance, and had filled it half full of honey.

—The addition of $100,000,000 to the national debt within ten months is a fair sample of a Free-Trade "object lesson." It is "condition" that confronts the people, not "a theory." This addition of debt during ten months of a Free-Trade Administration is at the rate of $10,000,000 a month.

—Dr. Wm. O. Faxon of Stoughton, who has been appointed by Gov. Greenhalge as medical examiner of District No. 5, comprising the towns of Stoughton, Canton, Sharon and Walpole, to fill the place made vacant by the death of Dr. Alexander R. Holmes of Canton, has accepted the office and filed his bond of $5000.

—Max Rosenfeld, proprietor of a restaurant in New York, sued a daily newspaper for libel. It had published a story in which it was said that he had broken off his prospective marriage with a young woman because he thought she was too friendly with another man. He lost the libel suit and failed to pay the costs, $95.12. Now he's in Ludlow street jail.

Barn Warming.

Dr. W. O. Faxon of Stoughton has just completed one of the handsomest barns in Norfolk County, says the Sentinel, and last week 135 friends from Stoughton and adjoining towns gathered to have a barn warming.

The surprisers took possession of the stable and soon transformed it into a thing of beauty.

Merry jokes were arranged. Stalls were labeled with the names of celebrated horses fast and slow, placards proclaimed the best remedies for spavin and other horse ills, etc.

When all were ready the doctor was summoned from the house and when he entered the barn his surprise was complete. After numerous speeches and the presentation of a fur carriage robe, a handsome driving whip, etc., Hewett's orchestra struck up a march and the fun began with "dancing in the barn." It was a jolly dance too, with reels, waltzes, polkas and quadrilles, and the floors were well covered with the merry dancers. At eleven o'clock tables were set down stairs and Caterer Blunt served a most elegant menu of salads, scalloped oysters, cake, creams, sherbets, frozen pudding, coffee, etc. Dancing was kept up till 12.30 and the company disbanded well pleased with the success of the affair and full of kindly wishes for the future happiness of Dr. and Mrs. Faxon.

—The last month of 1894 is with us, and it will soon be time to balance accounts and get ready for 1895. If you want to be happy all through the year that is approaching, send in your subscription to this paper. It brings sunshine into the house, and cheer to all who read it. In no other way can money be more wisely spent.

—Senator Morgan of Alabama made a strong speech for the Nicaragua canal in the Senate, Monday, predicting that its construction and control by the United States would redound to the commercial and naval advantage of this country, as the Suez canal had done for Great Britain, and that the outside expense would not exceed $70,000,000.

—Here's a pretty good one from the Boston Traveller: A Scotch elder was asked how the kirk was getting along. He answered: "Aweel, we had 400 members, then we had a division and there were only 200 left; then a disruption, and only 10 of us were left, then we had a heresy trial, and now only me and Brother Duncan are left, and I have great doubts of Duncan's orthodoxy.

—The work of enlarging the terminal stations of the Brooklyn Bridge is being rapidly advanced, and something of their ultimate design is already apparent. With the new system of tracks and platforms, trains may be run across the bridge every 45 seconds, instead of every 90 seconds, as at present. The present carrying capacity of the cars is 16,000 per hour, and this will be increased to 32,000 persons per hour.

—The Michigan board of health is moving energetically in the matter of preventing the propagation of consumption. It has prepared a bill for submission to the Legislature which prohibits, under severe penalties, the sale of milk from cows affected with tuberculosis. It is also proposed to require all school teachers and professional nurses to have certificates from a reputable physician stating that they are free from pulmonary diseases of every sort, or tuberculosis, that may be communicable to pupils or patients.

—Fall River, one of the poorest and most poverty stricken cities in the state, went strong for license at its recent election. It has a large foreign element, work has been scarce and wages low for the past year, and charity has had to do its utmost to keep the poor from suffering. And yet, in the face of this, these miserable, half-fed, poorly housed people vote for rum and beer, and support two or three hundred saloons and beer shops. Thousands and thousands of dollars will go for drink that ought to be spent for bread, meat, shoes and clothing. —Norwood Review.

—The finding of the Connecticut State Board of Health, that the prevalence of typhoid fever among the students of Wesleyan College is caused by the carriage of typhoid germs in the oysters supplied to that educational establishment, is likely not only to prove an interesting stimulant to thorough investigation and inquiry everywhere in New England, but also to lead to further discoveries and conclusions concerning sanitary conditions along the seaboard, as connected with the disposition of sewage matter and like questions. It seems that the oysters eaten by the students were poisoned in their beds by the discharge of sewerage in places where the foul matter was conveyed directly over and among them. There is a little doubt that shell fish, and especially clams, in some sections of the Massachusetts coasts, are seriously affected by the same processes. The outcome of the inquiries thus raised will be looked for with interest. —Old Colony Memorial.

—The most wonderful village of the cliff dwellers extant has just been discovered in the Bradshaw mountains, Arizona. The village is in one of the most inaccessible canyons of the range, and has never before been seen by white men. The canyon was stumbled on by accident by two prospectors. There is no doubt that this is the largest village of the kind ever discovered. It is located along the high banks of Willow canyon, and the houses are estimated to number 260. There are three natural terraces in the canyon wall, and the dwellings open back from them. Narrow steps in the rock, now almost worn away, seem to indicate that this was the method employed in ascent and descent. Several of the houses were explored, and large quantities of pottery and some instruments, evidently used for cultivating the soil, were found. A party is being organized to thoroughly explore the newly found village.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach."
CARLOS MARTYN, D. D.,
New York City.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation,
Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Eructation,
Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion,
Without injurious medication.

"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Anecdotes.

Mother—Don't you think that a boy of your size could take the tacks out of this carpet if he wanted to?

Small Son—I guess so. Shall I take my sled and go out and see if I can find one who wants to?—Good News.

Young wife (fondly)—"What were you doing a year ago tonight, Ronald?"

Young husband—"Giving my farewell dinner to bachelerhood; how I wish you had been there to hear my speech!"

Young wife (flattered)—"What did you say?"

Young husband—"It was after the wine, and I never could remember. Perhaps you would have cherished my words."—Once a Week.

Agent—Can I supply you with a piano, organ, harmonium, or a musical instrument of any kind?

Crusty old spinster—No, sir, I hear plenty of that noise from next door. Miss Flighty has bought a new organ.

Agent—Ah, indeed; do you know how many stops it has got?

C. O. S.—Yes, four. Breakfast, dinner, tea and supper.—Chips.

"Why are photographers the best advisers in these dull times?" asks Tom.

"Give it up," says Joe. "Because they advise everybody to look cheerful."

"So he praised my singing, did he?"

"Yes, he said it was heavenly."

"Did he really say that?"

"Well, not exactly, but he probably meant that. He said it was unearthly."

STREET COSTUMES.

Smart jackets are made of black velvet, tight fitting and more or less trimmed with passementerie, while nothing is more stylish for dressy wear, than entire suits of velvet with jacket in keeping and here, bright green may be said to lead, bright green cloth costumes for the street, being also in high esteem. Controlled exclusively by a leading wholesale house, "silver silks" thirty inches wide are a recent and delightful introduction in dress goods, having the effect of black brocade silks in choice patterns, to which a soft glow is imparted by the printing thereon of handsome designs, in silver gold or bronze. Printed in shower like groups, they serve to lighten prettily with complete avoidance of anything loud, but apart from unique attractiveness, a distinguishing merit of these goods, lies in the fact that by means of a patent process, they can be washed and ironed without the slightest injury to the printed metals. Grounds are always black, because better adapted to show off the glittering additions of gold and silver.

FASHIONS IN FLOWERS

Are now interesting, because the ball season if at hand and whether natural or artificial, violets are in great favor, as likewise forget-me-nots, roses of medium size, orchids or chrysanthemums. The latter have been seen to perfection at the Flower show which in connection with an Industrial exhibition, has attracted much interest. Both recent and established improvement are noticeable and it can be added that a society belle wore a variegated chrysanthemum on her cerise corsage, as with a party of friends, she criticised approvingly, the fine exhibition of S. H. and M. skirt bindings. First nights at

ITALIAN OPERA,

Are a prelude as to what will be fashionable for evening. Perforated mousseline is in great favor, either for entire gowns or waists and their use has brought about greater simplicity in the arrangement of drapery, that is often now placed in gathers from neck to waist. Chiffon waists are still a rage and entire dresses of it, are seen, but charming gowns are of silk crepon. There are lovely sprigged or floral striped silks and imported skirts of Liberty satin laid in accordion plaits, are worn with velvet, chiffon or mousseline waists. At the opera, in passing the boxes occupied by leaders of society, the sweet ordor peculiar to Murray and Lanman's Florida water, is plainly distinguishable and again this season, this delightful and popular perfume is a noticeable feature among the attractive display of

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

On the counters of leading dealers. With or without an atomizer or toilet bottle, no more acceptable gift could be found and it may be added that either sterling silver or quadruple plate are still most popular for bureau or washstand articles. There are silver or gilt photograph frames; silver mounted emories or spool racks as well and in jewelry, little "Brownie" pins simulate elfs.

LUCY CARTER.

State Roads.

The commission has received eighty-five petitions for State highways, and so far has ordered surveys made on about forty pieces or sections of road. Among those that petitioned were Weymouth, Holbrook, Norwood, Walpole and Wrentham, and the board has acted favorably upon those of Weymouth and Holbrook, to be followed by consideration on the others.

The appropriation was $300,000 and Norfolk County's share was about $20,000, and if spent among the towns each year would wonderfully improve the highways; but it must be remembered that the towns must pay a certain proportion in addition that the greatest amount of money and the best results may follow the work.

Randolph wants a State road between that town and Boston, going directly through Milton.

The road commissioners say that all towns must ask, if they want a portion of the appropriation, or else they won't get it; and if they don't ask, they must not complain should they not receive anything.

Advertising Church Services.

One of the most striking contrasts between the way in which religious work is done in England and America is in the advertising of church services. Where the sentiment of reverence is more generally cultivated than in the United States, all denominations freely advertise, not only in newspapers, but still more by huge placards and posters placed where they are sure to attract attention of passers. Perhaps the most aristocratic Presbyterian congregation in England is that which worships in the Sefton Park church in Liverpool. In front of the church is a large bulletin-board, on which are the name of the church, pastor and details of all the services. The plan keeps the public informed in regard to the work of the churches; it attracts many who would not otherwise attend; and it is a recognition of the duty of the churches to reach the people. Why should places of amusement do more to win the people than the Church?—Outlook.

That Gold Loan.

If there is one fact more conclusive than another as showing incapacity of the Democratic party to run this government, it is the gold loan which has just been made, in a time of profound peace, with no danger or special expenditure on any hand, this administration feels compelled to borrow fifty millions of dollars in gold. Its first two years ends there, the only two years out of thirty-four when the party has had full charge of the government. When it started, the country was in the high tide of prosperity, the treasury was full, and the nation was the richest on the earth; and before two years are gone it has to borrow this vast sum. Such incapacity,—no wonder the people did all in their power last month to put it out of office.—The Public.

Mrs. Green has sold her interest in the Quincy PATRIOT to George W. Prescott and Son, and it will be issued under their management hereafter. Since 1837 the paper has followed the pathway of success. We extend our good wishes to Editors Prescott and the PATRIOT.—Dedham Transcript.

A Flesh Forming Food

Artificially Digested.

For pale, thin people. The tired and weary feeling which accompanies all WASTING diseases will be relieved at once, the wasting will be arrested and new healthy tissues will be formed so that they will become plump and strong. An increase in weight will be noticed at once. It is stimulating although it contains no alcohol. It is assimilated without digestive effort. PASCOLA supersedes Cod Liver Oil, but has not its repulsive taste. You can buy it at any drug store. Christmas Candies.

The candy season has set in and perhaps a few receipts for making good wholesome candies at home will not be amiss at the present time. The following receipts will be found useful for Christmas, church fairs, and for candy parties.

There are several ways of making fondant says the Ladies' Home Journal. The easier way is to add a teaspoonful of vanilla to the white of one egg, and an equal quantity of ice water, and beat until the mixture froths. Then add gradually a pound, or more if it is necessary, of confectioner's XX or XXX sugar. Ordinary pulverized sugar will not do, and the confectioner's sugar in either of these grades can be secured from any large grocery establishment. The sugar should be added until the mixture forms a stiff paste, when it should be worked very smooth with a spoon, then put it in a cool place, as it is ready for use.

CHOCOLATE CREAMS. Chocolate creams are made by dipping from the end of a long pin, small balls of the fondant into melted chocolate.

COCOANUT SNOW-BALLS. Knead some desiccated cocoanut into the fondant. Make into balls and when cool brush with beaten white of egg and sprinkle with grated cocoanut.

DELICIOUS NUT LOAF. Chop all kinds of nut into small pieces and work into the fondant. Make into a roll and serve in small square slices.

FRUIT BONBONS. Candied cherries may be stoned and refilled with small rolls of the fondant. White grapes may be coated in similar fashion.

CHOCOLATE PEPPERMINT CREAMS. Make like the above, and when the drops are almost cooled dip into a pan of melted and sweetened chocolate. These are particularly delicious.

HICKORY-NUT CREAMS. Boil sugar and water as for peppermint creams. Cool, beat and when the mixture is white stir in one cup of hickory-nut meats. Turn into a flat, warm tin and cut into squares.

PEANUT CANDY. To make peanut candy, shell and break into small pieces with a rolling-pin one quart of peanuts. Boil for ten minutes, stirring constantly, one pound of light brown sugar and six ounces of butter. Just before taking from the fire add the peanuts. Pour into flat, buttered tins and set away to cool.

COFFEE CREAMED NUT CANDY. Boil together without stirring half a cup of strong coffee and two cups of sugar until thick enough to spin a thread. Remove the pan to a dish of cold water, and beat the mixture rapidly until it creams. Stir in a cup of chopped nut meats, pour into a warm, flat tin and cut into squares.

The Boston Stage.

Columbia Theatre.

During the last week of Miss Marie Burroughs's engagement at the Columbia, which will begin on December 17, the bill will be changed and she will by special request give five performances of "Judah," which will be well remembered as one of the most successful plays in the repertoire of Mr. E. S. Willard, whom Miss Burroughs supported last season. So many demands have been made to see her again in the excellent role that the management has definitely decided to give it at the Columbia on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday evenings and the Wednesday and Saturday matinees. Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, "The Profligate" will be the bill. It must not be forgotten that this repertoire is for the week of December 17.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Beginning Monday, December 17, the Hollis Street Theatre will put out its holiday attraction in one of the strongest cards of the season. This will be the Della Fox comic opera company, and the occasion will be the first appearance in Boston as a star of Miss Fox, who is one of the best known and most popular of the comic opera lights, and is well known as a prominent member of the De Wolf Hopper company. Her hosts of admirers will undoubtedly turn out in full force to see her in her new stella role. The opera to be presented is "The Little Trooper," which was first produced at the New York Casino early in the season, and which enjoyed a long metropolitan run.

Castle Square Theatre.

Last Monday evening at the Castle Square Theatre Mr. A. S. Lipman assumed the title role of Captain Paul and will play the part for the remainder of the engagement. Mr. Lipman is well and favorably known in Boston for the excellent work he has performed in the past and at present he is more than verifying the expectations of his friends. The character of Captain Paul is singularly fitted to Mr. Lipman's abilities.

Commencing last Monday evening, the scheme of running cars from various points specially for Castle Square theatre patrons, without expense to the patrons and without transfer was successfully begun, and the result was highly gratifying to the management. Quincy patrons can take a car at 7.36 at the Kneeland street depot and ride direct to theatre.

Clothes-Pins.

Where do all the clothes-pins go? Innumerable dozens of them are flowing out into the world continuously from the factories, and a single expert packer handles 72,000 of them in a day, packing 100 boxes at a cent a box. They are made of ash, beech, birch and maple. The logs are cut into lengths of 31 inches, these are sawed into blocks, the blocks into sticks and the sticks into shorter ones, the length of the cloths-pin, about 5 1-2 inches. These are fed into a lathe by an endless belt. The lathe turns them into shape and passes them along by a turn-table to a saw which cuts out the slot. When the machine is through with them it drops them into a box or barrel. The pins are then dried in in a drying-house and then put, 20 to 40 bushels at once, into a slowly revolving cylinder, and the friction caused by their tumbling about in this cylinder polishes them. A single plant for making clothes-pins costs from $7,000 to $12,000. But what becomes of the pins?—Good Housekeeping.

A better number of the New England Magazine than the present Christmas number has never been published. It is an extra large number, with thirty more pages than usual; and there is not a page of all the hundred and sixty which is not interesting. It has a special Christmas cover, bright and warm with evergreen and holly; and it is full from beginning to end with the Christmas spirit and the New England spirit. The article which will attract the most attention is Edward Everett Hale's "If Jesus Came to Boston." It is, of course, an article suggested and provoked by Mr. Stead's book, "If Christ Came to Chicago." A second edition is in press.

And one who has children will rejoice with K. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

A Hearing.

A hearing was held on the case of Theodore Weld of Hyde Park, which was to determine the question as to his sanity, and whether he should be committed to an asylum.

Dis. Partrige and Holmes testified they had examined Mr. Weld on Nov, 10th and found an inability of Mr. Weld to carry on a connected conversation. There was also a lapse of memory in regard to things he should have remembered. They had previous to this examination noticed a peculiar gait of Mr Weld and his hesitancy of speech. Dr. Alvin V. Holme's testimony agreed with that of Dr. Partridge.

David Higgins, the petitioner in the case, testified as to Weld's eccentricities which led to the filing of the petition.

The hearing was then continued.

The New York Law.

A New York dispatch to the Globe says, Judge Truax in the chambers of the supreme court gave a decision Saturday upholding the constitutionality of the law passed by the legislature last April, providing that all stone of any description, used in state or municipal works within this state, or which is to be worked, dressed or carved for such use, shall be so worked dressed or carved upon the grounds where such works are being carried on, or within the boundaries of the state or within the boundaries of the municipality.

He also upholds as valid another law passed by the last legislature that none but citizens of the United States shall be employed by the state or any municipal corporations or by persons contracting with the state or municipality, and that every contract made by the state or municipality corporation for the performance of public works must comply with the requirements of this law.

A Big Business.

Some idea of the hold which the Pillsbury flour has gained on the people may be learned from the following facts. At the Pillsbury mills in Minneapolis in one week recently, 97,510 barrels of flour were milled in six days and now they are making at the rate of 130,000 barrels. The A mill of the same company turned out 9,551 barrels in its usual run without preparation, which was a record breaker. One day 243 cars were loaded and billed out from 8.30 A. M., to 6 P. M, which would make a train of flour 1 3 4 miles long. F. W. Crane & Sons are local agents for Quincy.

A Two Months's Record.

When E. A. Sproul, who was in charge of the Boston Traveller during the two months preceding the last change in its management, turned it over to Col. Hasbrook Dec. 1., the editorial, business and mechanical departments presented him with a written testimonial of their regard for him and their appreciation of his upright dealings with them.—Fourth Estate, New York.

ARTIFICALLY RED ORANGES. Blood oranges are now prepared artificially. They are even richer in flavor than the regulation red orange of nature. An ordinary orange is punctured, and a small quantity of California claret is injected by means of a powerful syringe. The wine is drawn up into the pulp of the fruit by means of the capillary attraction and gives the orange the deep red so admired by connoisieurs.—New York Herald.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. Va. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure.

Household Receipts.

CHRISTMAS PLUM PUDDING. Pick and seed very carefully one pound and a quarter of raisins, one pound of currants, well washed, dried and picked; one pound of kidney suet, chopped not too fine; two ounces each of candied lemon, orange and citron peel, six ounces of the best flour, half a pound of fine bread crumbs, half a pound of brown sugar, the grated rind of a lemon, a saltspoon of salt and a grated nutmeg. Moisten the whole with eight eggs, the yolks and whites beaten separately, and enough milk to form a very stiff batter. When all these ingredients are thoroughly mixed, an operation which will take the time and patience of several persons, pour into a cloth, which should be well buttered and floured. The best pudding cloths are those made out of thin unbleached muslin; they should always be scalded with boiling water and wrung dry as possible before using. It is always well to lay the cloth, after it has been prepared, in a large bowl, and pouring the pudding batter into the cloth, and, holding the corners tightly together, tie firmly with a piece of strong, white cord. If desired, this pudding may be boiled in a plain or ornamental pudding mould; well butter the interior, pour the mixture into it, cover with a sheet of good white note paper, tie the mould in a cloth, plunge it in a kettle of boiling water and let it boil quite fast for four hours and a half. Of course, some allowance must be made for the pudding to swell. If boiled in a cloth have on the range a large pot, three-quarters full of briskly boiling water, into which put your pudding, move it about in the water for a second or two; this may easily be done by keeping the corners of the cloth free of the boiling water for the time required, then cover the pot closely, and allow your pudding to boil steadily for four or five hours, being careful not to allow it to stop boiling even for a moment, else will your labor have been in vain. It is well to keep your tea kettle boiling, that you may have water to add to the pot in which the pudding is boiling, as under no consideration must it be allowed to boil dry When you are ready to serve the pudding, remove it carefully into a large collander, untie the cloth, and turn the pudding out on a hot dish. It should be perfect in shape, and rich and dark in color. Sprinkle with a little powdered sugar, stick a sprig of holly in the centre, and send it to the table with either a hard or a soft sauce.

A GOOD SOFT SAUCE is made by creaming together a teacupful of pulverized sugar and half a cupful of fresh butter, add a well-beaten egg and the juice and grated peel of a lemon. Have ready in a double saucepan some boiling water which has been thickened with a scant teaspoonful of cornstarch; when thoroughly boiled add to this your other ingredients, and stir slowly until the sauce is very hot, being very careful not to allow it to boil. Add a little nutmeg.

A DELICIOUS HARD SAUCE can be made by stirring to a cream one cup of fresh butter, two cups of pulverized sugar, and add the juice of a lemon, or a couple of teaspoonfuls of vanilla, and a little grated nutmeg. Smooth into a mould with a broad-bladed knife, and set away to keep cool until the pudding is ready to serve.

SUGAR CAKES. One-half pound of pulverized sugar, whites of two eggs, the juice of half a lemon. Stir sugar and eggs very frothy, then add, on the bread board, so much sugar to it that it can be rolled out. Cut in any shape you wish,—stars, half-moons, rings, etc.,—after you have it rolled one-fourth of an inch thick. Bake in cool oven to gold color.

MANCHESTER PUDDING. Grease a pudding-dish and put two cupfuls of strawberry jam in, covering with one quart of boiling milk, three fourths of a pint of bread crumbs, six tablespoonfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, three stiff eggs one teaspoonful of vanilla.

GERMAN TOAST. Soak slices of stale bread in one pint of milk, the yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Fry in hot butter.

Down With the Saloon.

Down with the saloon! Let that be the slogan and every voice a trumpet to proclaim it. Down with the saloon! It is God's relentless enemy, the nation's and yours. Down with the saloon! It has no respect for home, for church, the Sabbath. It curses the one, blasphemes the other, and tramples upon the third.

Down with the saloon! It breeds violence and ruin. Twenty anarchists were dragged from an apartment of a Chicago groggery the other day. It was a fitting place for them. The two bad things mix. Down with the saloon! It multiplies madhouses and prisons and crowds their cells with brutalized, raving, cursing human wrecks.—The Epworth Herald.

Holmes Biography.

With a commendable enterprise, in view of the universal interest aroused by the death of one of America's brightest intellects, the Lothrop Publishing Company of Boston has brought out a new edition of Emma E. Brown's "Life of Oliver Wendell Holmes. The chatty volume has always been a popular one, and, Miss Brown has revised it so as to cover the whole pleasant story of the helpful life of the "Autocrat." Miss Brown has done her work well. We catch glimpses of the man in all his phases—as poet, humorist, philosopher, physician, novelist, man of letters and man of the world. Admirers of his writings, lovers of his personality, will welcome this volume, which presents the life of one of the best-known, the best-liked and the best-loved of American men of letters.

TRADE
CELLULOID
MARK.

Waterproof collars and cuffs that you can clean yourself by simply wiping off with a wet sponge. The genuine look exactly like linen and every piece is marked this way:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

They are made by covering a linen collar or cuff with "celluloid," and are the only waterproof goods made with an interlining, and the only goods that can stand the wear and give perfect satisfaction. Never wilt and not effected by moisture. Try them and you will never regret it. Ask for those with above trade mark and refuse any imitations. If your dealer does not have them we will mail you a sample direct on receipt of price. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs 50c. pair. State whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

Mortgagee's Sale

— OF —

REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Louis D. Boisclair and Elizabeth Boisclair, wife of the said Louis D. Boisclair, in her own right, to Adoniram Burrell, dated March 18, A. D., 1891, and recorded with the Norfolk Deeds, libro 651, folio 242, will be sold at Public Auction for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, upon the premises set forth in said mortgage and hereinafter described, on MONDAY, the 17th day of December, A. D., 1894, at eleven-thirty o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:

A certain parcel of land situated in that part of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, called Atlantic, on the easterly side of Squantum street, being the southerly half of lot B, as shown on a plan of this and adjoining lands recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 527, folio 257, and said parcel is bounded and described as follows, viz: Westerly by said Squantum street, twenty-eight and 15-100 (28.15) feet; northerly by the northerly half of said lot B, by a line drawn from the middle point of the westerly boundary of said lot B to the middle point of the easterly boundary of said lot B, as shown on said plan, about one hundred and twelve (112) feet; easterly by lot C, as shown on said plan, twenty-nine and 15-100 (29.15) feet, and southerly by land now or formerly of heirs of George B. Billings, one hundred and eleven and 88-100 (111.88) feet. Said premises are subject to a prior mortgage of $900, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 580, folio 154.

Also another certain parcel of land in that part of said Quincy called Atlantic, comprising a part of lot numbered thirty-nine (39) on a plan entitled "Plan of House Lots at Atlantic Station, North Quincy," drawn by L. Briggs & Co., surveyors, April, 1871, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, No. 199. Said parcel is bounded and described as follows, viz.:

Beginning at a point on the easterly side of Squantum street, distant twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet, northerly from the southwesterly corner of said premises; thence running northerly on said Squantum street, twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet to land now or formerly of C. E Swett; thence turning and running easterly by land now or formerly of said Swett, one hundred and ten (110) feet to land now or formerly of John Wakely; thence turning and running southerly on land now or formerly of said John Wakely, twenty-seven and one-half (27.5) feet to land now or formerly of said Burrell; thence turning and running westerly by said land now or formerly of said Burrell, about one hundred and eleven (111) feet to the point of beginning. Said premises are subject to a prior mortgage of $800, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 576, Fol. 103. Being the same premises conveyed to Elizabeth Boisclair by Adoniram Burrell, by deed dated March 18, 1891, and recorded in said deeds. Said premises will be sold subject to any and all unpaid taxes and assessments. $100 will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

ADONIRAM BURRELL, Mortgagee,
and present owner of said mortgage.

TO the Heirs-at-Law, and all other persons interested in the Estate of late of Quincy, in said County, deceased,

JONATHAN HAYDEN,

Whereas, William J. Hambleton, administrator of the estate of said deceased, has presented to said Court his petition for license to sell at public auction the whole of a parcel of the real estate of said decease for the payment of debts and charges of administration, and for other reasons set forth in said petition.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said County, on the nineteenth day of December, A. D. 1894, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is ordered to serve this citation by delivering a copy thereof to each person interested in the estate, fourteen days at least before said Court, or by publishing the same once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the QUINCY PATRIOT, a newspaper published in Quincy, the last publication to be one day, at least before said Court.

Witness, George White, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fourteenth day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

Songs of Christmas.

Sound over all waters, reach out from all lands
The chorus of voices, the clasping of hands;
Sing hymns that were sung by the stars of the morn,
Sing songs of the angels when Jesus was born.
With glad jubilations
Bring hope to the nations!
The dark night is ending and dawn has begun;
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

Sing the bridal of nations with chorals of love,
Sing out the war vulture and sing in the dove,
Till the hearts of the people keep time in accord,
And the voice of the world is the voice of the Lord!
Clasp hands of the nations
In strong congratulations;
The dark night is ending and morn has begun;
Rise, hope of ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

Blow, bugles of battle, the marches of peace,
East, West, North and South let the long quarrel cease!
Sing the song of great joy that the angels began,
Sing of glory to God and good will to man.
Hark! joining in chorus
The heavens bend o'er us;
The dark night is ending and day has begun;
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Miscellany.

CHRISTMAS IN A GARRET.

"Then it is 'yes,' father dear?" said Angela, looking across the breakfast-table with a smile. It was her mother's smile, and the girl had filled her mother's vacant chair for more than a year.

"I hate to see you, at your age, beginning to worry over these things," Ephraim Frazier said, regretfully. Let the old women take care of the charities, dear. You keep on dancing in the sunshine a while longer, daughter.

Angela's smile grew graver, but not less sweet. "I am twenty dear," she said. "Too old to dance all the time, and I cannot help thinking you know. And—it's no use, papa dear! I must do something!

"And what does Robert John's say about it?"

A glow kindled in Angela's face.

"Robert is in perfect sympathy with me," she said softly. Then again, this time having risen and gone around to his side, to speak with her face against the old banker's smoothly shaven cheek, "It is 'yes,' isn't it, daddy dear?"

"Well, yes! Only you must go slow, dear. You are not over strong, you know."

And so it came to pass that on a vacant lot, hitherto given over to refuse heaps, haunted by stray cats, ragpickers, and vagrant children, in one of the vilest quarters of the metropolis, there sprang up, with magic swiftness, a commodious frame building, surrounded by smooth green sod, known in lower circles as the Locust Street Home; in upper circles, laughingly denominated "Angela's Experiment."

It was wonderful how the news spread through the city that here was a sanctuary into which cold, hunger, and fatigue dared not intrude; a place which the lowest might enter and be made welcome, and go unquestioned.

That was Angela's theory. No man, woman, or child should be compelled to do anything. First make their bodies comfortable, then surround them with ennobling influences and examples, entertain them, arouse them, stimulate them, hold out the helping hand, and leave the rest to God. "They shall not even be compelled to be clean!" she said, laughing. "If the beautiful clean bathrooms and clean clothing do not tempt them to cleanliness, then so be it! I will have no rules; only influences.

Sometimes, on warm, pleasant evenings, the spacious, cheerful hall, with its tables and chairs, would be almost empty; but on nights like that on which this story opens, a dark, cold December night, the seats were apt to be well-filled, mostly with slatternly, hard-featured women, and dull-faced children.

Outside, a dismal sleet was falling, but from the open door of the vestibule a great sheet of light fell upon the wet pavement, and above it glowed a transparency bearing the words:

"A Merry Christmas to all! Come in!"

It was while the singing was going on, led by a high, sweet girl's voice, that a human figure came hobbling out from a side street, and stopped shot at the very edge of the lighted space.

A woman by her dress, an old, old woman, with a seamed, blotched face; an ugly, human wreck, all torn and battered and discolored by the storms of life. Such was old Marg—"Luny Marg," as she was called in the haunts that knew her best.

For some time this forlorn creature continued to hover on the edge of the lighted space. The sleet had become snow, and already a thin white film covered the pavement, promising "a white Christmas," and the cold increased from moment to moment.

The woman drew her filthy shawl closer; her jaws chattered, yet she seemed unable to tear herself from the spot. Her eyes, alert under their gray brows, as a rat's, were fixed now upon the open door, now upon the transparency, yet she made no motion toward the proffered shelter. But finally, as a bitter blast swept the snow stingingly against her face, she uttered a hoarse snarl, and glancing about to see that no jeering eye was upon her, the poor creature crept across the pavement, clambered up the stone steps, and, pushing open the door, slipped into the nearest vacant seat.

Old Marg, after the embarrassment of the first moment, took everything in with one hawk-like glance—the Christmas greens upon the clean, white walls, the curtained space in the rear which hid some pleasant mystery, the men and women on the platform.

At the organ sat a young girl, leaning upon the now silent keys, her face toward the young man who was speaking. Old Marg could not take her eyes from this face—white, serious, sweet, set in a halo of pale golden hair. The sight of it aroused strange feelings in the bosom of the old outcast. Fascinated, tortured, bewildered, she sat and gazed. It was long since she thought of her youth. This girl reminded her of that forgotten time. Like a violet flung upon a refuse-heap, the thought of her own innocent girlhood lay for an instant upon the foul mass of memories accumulated by sixty miserable years. "I was light-haired, too!" ran old Marg's thoughts. "Light-haired, an' light-complected, like her!"

The perfume of that thought breathed across her soul, and was gone. Still she gazed from under her shaggy brows, and, without meaning to listen, found herself hearing what the speaker was saying. He was telling without rhetoric or cant the story of Christ, and with simplicity and tact presenting the lesson of His life.

"This joy of giving, of sacrificing for others," the young man was saying in his earnest, musical voice, "so far beyond the joy of receiving, is within the reach of every human being. Think of that! The poorest man or woman or child who breathes on earth tonight may know this joy, may give some pleasure, some help, some comfort, to some fellow-creature. Whether it be a human creature or a dumb beast, matters not. It is all one in God's sight, being an act of love and kindness and sacrifice."

Old Marg looked down upon her squalid rags; her rough features writhed with a scornful smile. "That's a lie!" she muttered. "What could the likes of me do for anybody, I'd like to know!"

Still she listened; but at last, as the warmth stole through her sodden garmemts, and into her chilled veins, and the peace of the place penetrated the turbulent recesses of her soul, the man's voice became like a voice heard in a dream, and the old outcast slept.

A confused sound greeted her awakening. Some one was playing the organ jubilantly; people were moving about,—girls with trays loaded with steaming dishes; children were talking and laughing excitedly. The curtain had been drawn, and a great Christmas-tree almost blinded her with its splendor. She stared about in bewilderment. She looked at the tree, at the people, at her own foul rags. A fierce revulsion of feeling swept over her. Rage, shame, a desire to get out of sight, to be swallowed up in the darkeness and misery which were her proper element, seized and mastered her. She staggered to her feet.

A hand was laid upon her arm. The girl with the sweet, white face was looking at her with a friendly smile.

"Won't you stay and have something warm to eat before going into the cold?" the girl asked gently.

Old Marg shook the hand from her arm. "No!" she snarled. "I don't want nothin'! Let me go!"

With a patient smile Angela opened the door.

"I am sorry you will not stay," she said softly. "It would give me great pleasure. There is a gift for you on the tree, too. It is Christmas Eve, you know!"

A hoarse, choking sound came from the woman's lips. She pushed by into the vestibule. Angela followed.

"If you should feel differently tomorrow," she said, in her kind, gentle voice, "come here again, about eleven o'clock. I shall be here." Without waiting for a reply, she re-entered the hall. A young man, the same who had been speaking, met her at the door.

"Angela!" he exclaimed. "You should not be out there in the cold!"

She smiled absently. "Did you see her Robert?"

"That terrible old woman." Yes, I saw her. A hopeless case, I fear."

Meantime old Marg was facing the storm with rage and pain in her face and in her heart. The streets were deserted, and lighted only by such beams as found their way through the dirty windows of shops and saloons. She staggered on until the swarming tenement was reached, stumbled up the five flights of unillumined stairs, and almost fell headlong into the dismal garret which she called her home.

There was no fire, nor any means of producing one, but upon the box was spread a piece of paper containing a slice of bread and a soup-bone, whereto clung some fragments of meat—the gift of a neighbor hardly less wretched than herself.

The old woman's eyes glittered at the sight, and, seizing the food, she sank weakly upon the box and began gnawing at it; but her toothless jaws, stiff with cold, made no impression upon the tough meat and hard crust, and letting them drop to the floor, the poor creature fell to rocking to and fro. Strangely enough, within the withered bosom of this most wretched creature there had welled up, from some hidden source of womanly feeling, a passionate self-pity, a no less passionate self-loathing. That fair young girl—tall, pale, sweet as an Easter lily—stood before her like an incarnate memory, pointing toward the past, the far-distant past, when she, too, was young, and pretty.

The cold increased. It had ceased snowing, and a keen wind had arisen, tearing the clouds into shreds through which the stars gleamed. And presently the moon climbed up behind the belfry of the old church across the square, and sent one broad white ray through the dingy window and across the floor. All at once the great bell began to strike the midnight hour, its mingled vibrations filling the garret with tumultuous sound. The vision of the fair girl faded, and old Marg was herself again, a hard, bitter, rebellious old woman, with only one thought left in her desperate mind—the thought of death!

Her eyes glittered as she cast a look about the silent room. Bare, even of the means to this end? Ah, the window!

With at inarticulate cry the woman arose and hobbled along the shining moon-ray to the window, and threw open the sash. Far below lay the deserted square, its white bosom traced with the sharp shadow of the tower.

One movement, a swift fall, and that white surface would be broken by a black shapeless heap. A policeman would find it on his next round; or some drunken reveller would stumble over it! or the good people on their way to early mass—ah! The seamed countenance lit up suddenly with a malignant joy.

Why not wait until they began to pass—those pious, respectable people in their comfortable furs and wools—and cast herself into their midst, a ghastly Christmas offering from Poverty to Riches, from Sin to Virtue? This suggestion commended itself highly to her sense of humor. With a hoarse chuckle she was about to close the window when a portion of the shadow that lay alongside the chimney showed signs of life and, rising on four long and skinny legs, became a cat—a lean, black cat, which crept meekly toward the window. Startled, old Marg drew back for an instant; then the cruel, cunning, old face softened suddenly. "Lord!" muttered old Marg, "if she ain't a-trying' to purr! Wall, that beats me!"

With an impulse new to her misery-hardened heart, old Marg drew the animal in and closed the window. Far from resisting, the cat nestled against her with every sign of pleasure.

"She's been somebody's pet," said the old woman, placing her on the floor. "She ain't always been like this."

The divine emotion of pity, so new to this forlorn creature, grew and swelled in her bosom. The man at the hall had not lied, after all. Here was another of God's creatures as miserable as herself—nay, more so, for she had a roof to shelter her! And she could share it with this homeless one.

Hobbling to the stove, she examined the battered tin can, letting the moonlight shine into its rusty depths. A little water or tea remained in it, and with this she moistened some of the bread and placed it before the cat, which devoured it now eagerly. Then she took the animal in her arms and laid herself down on the mattress, drawing the ragged covers over them. The cat nestled against her side; the warmth of the two poor bodies mingled, and both slept.

* * * *

Angela stood near the door, receiving her Christmas guests. They came straggling in, in twos and threes, some boldly and impudently, some shamefaced and shy, some indifferent, but all poverty-pinched. Each one was pleasantly welcomed, and passed on to the feast. Angela watched and waited, and at last the door opened slowly, to admit old Marg, who stopped short on the threshold, with a look at once stubborn, appealing, suspicious, ashamed. But Angela only smiled.

"A Merry Christmas!" she said brightly.

"I was ugly to ye last night," said old Marg huskily.

"Never mind!" Angela answered sweetly. "You were tired."

"I am a bad old woman!" said old Marg, mistrustfully.

"Never mind that, either!" said Angela. "Let me be your friend. If you will, you shall never be cold or hungry again."

A profound wonder came into the old face—then it began to writhe, and from each eye oozed scant tears, seeking a channel amid the seams and wrinkles of the sunken cheeks.

"You shall have a pleasant home and—"

A swift, suspicious glance darted from the wet eyes.

"Not a 'sylum, miss, please!" said the old woman.

"No," said Angela quietly. "Not an asylum. A home—a bright, clean, comfortable home—"

Still old Marg looked doubtful. Wiping her cheeks with the corner of the shawl, she half turned toward the door.

"Have you a family, or any one belonging to you?" asked Angela, thinking to have reached the root of the difficulty.

"Yes," said the old woman stoutly. "I have a cat. Where I go, she must go, too!"

Angela patted the grimy hand with a laugh which was good to hear. "I understand you perfectly," she said. "I have a cat of my own. You and your cat shall not be separated."

A half-hour later entered the young man, Robert. Angela pointed silently to old Marg, sitting in a warm corner, contentedly munching her Christmas dinner. "What have you done to her?" he asked. "She looks more human already."

Angela laughed again, that same laugh which goes to one's heart so. "I have adopted her—and her cat!" she answered. "That's all!"—Romance.

A Change Needed.

The laws of this state in regard to libel are in a disgraceful condition. They were well enough years ago in the days of tallow candles and stage coaches but are not adapted to the changed conditions. The Milford Journal has recently been called to defend a libel suit which involves the presumption that the editor of the paper was actuated by malice. The paragraph came through the associated press from some obscure town in a obscure state stating that some obscure man had been guilty of embezzlement. The paragraph was published in the ordinary course of business by many papers, and now sharp attorneys are going around the country bringing libel suits against all the papers which published the paragraph, while it is said that their client brags that he can make money in that way easier than he can in any other. We do not believe in increasing the license of the press in the least, but some change has got to be made in these days of a newspaper enterprise, which has circled the globe with telegraph wires and gives us every day the progress of history in every known land. All that the newspaper man asks is that any retraction which a paper may publish shall have an official standing in court and that the jury shall be obliged to take cognizance of it and appraise it at its worth as an offset for damages. Could anything be more reasonable or more just? New England Farmer.

The World a School.

Every man in this world is at school; and he ought to be learning something and making some progress with each year.

Some men's houses are all basements. They forget to build the upper stories. They never get higher than eating and sleeping and certain physical sensations. Others put on one story more, which they devote entirely to sitting and drawing rooms. They have a family and social life. But, because they go no higher, they never find the deepest and truest meaning of these. Others add another story, and turn it into a library. They read and study, tracing the history of the world and of human thought, and so find out those higher satisfactions that have their springs in the brain. But the complete man does not stop even here. He domes his house of life, and turns all this upper story into an observatory that looks out on the stars. Here he sits and communes with the infinite.

We must all begin at the bottom; and well is it for those the earthly foundations of whose life are broad and strong. But each year should see something added to mark the fact of our ascent toward higher and nobler things.—M. J. Savage.

Letter from California.

Mr. Thomas Talbot, for many years a citizen of this town, and also a worthy member of Mount Wollaston Lodge of Odd Fellows, writes us the following excellent letter:

ROCKLIN, CAL., DEC. 10, 1894.

Bro. Prescott: Enclosed you will find express money order for two dollars and fifty cents, and also my thanks for the regular and prompt manner in which I receive my paper.

Your correspondent who signs himself "June," and who is such an able and interesting writer, comes near being right when he reminded us by saying that few imagine how much they would miss their daily and weekly local papers if their issue should cease.

I suppose there are a good many copies of the PATRIOT sent to neighboring towns and cities, and to distant lands; and I assure you sir, that if I may judge others by myself who are far from home, the PATRIOT is received and opened as if it was the only newspaper in existence; and I heartily agree with "June," and hope that the local papers, as he calls them, will keep right along publishing the news and truth, without fear or favor, and as long as they do that their issue will never cease.

It has been raining here for a week, but the sun is shining once more, bright and warm, and the grass is looking fresh and green.

Fraternally yours,
THOMAS TALBOT.

Causes of Corns and Bunions.

Many persons think because the feet are hidden that there is no need to give them especial care, and neglect and abuse of these useful members are almost universal.

Elasticity is imperative to grace of motion, and a foot crowded into a too narrow shoe with toes cramped and turned out of their natural angles cannot possibly afford spring and elasticity to the walk. For a graceful walk the toe must have free play. A small foot is not necessarily a beautiful foot.

To keep one's feet in good condition the skin and nails need careful attention. The feet must be frequently washed with soft warm water and good soap. Wherever there are hard growths of skin, soften by pressing a soapy cloth against the part and then peel off as many layers of the skin as possible. Repeat this operation until the parts have been cured or at least checked in the formation of permanent corns and bunions and hardened joints. Where the feet have a tendency to copious perspiration the stockings must be changed daily, and two pairs of walking shoes ought to be alternated each day. The feet must be lightly washed in a quart of warm water having a teaspoonful of listerine in it. This will, if continued, purify and correct the tendency and do away with disagreeable and fetid odors. Tender feet are often caused by perspiration that amounts to disease, and the first symptoms of odor and damp stockings should be the signal for attention to corrective measures.

The nails should be attended to carefully. Health demands carefully pushing back the clinging skin from the root of the nail with the towel in wiping the feet, and to save ingrowing and painful nails it is imperative that the nails should be kept carefully pared and free at the corners from all tendency to press upon and become fixed in the nail bed.

For the tendency to inflamed and swollen conditions of the feet all pressure must be removed, and hot water should be poured slowly over the feet for ten minutes at a time at night and in the morning, after which the feet should be bathed for a few minutes with witch hazel and then carefully dried.

The best remedy for corns and bunions is a common and simple one. After washing the feet at night and drying carefully, paint over the part to be removed with a solution composed of one ounce collodion, one dram borate of sodium, one scruple extract of cannabis. Continue this application each night for five days, at the end of which time layer after layer of the diseased tissue can be removed without difficulty and the trouble may be permanently cured if the cause be removed. —Jenness Miller Monthly.

A Model Tenement House.

Plans are being discussed by a number of philanthropic people in New York for providing healthful and comfortable tenement houses for the poor at reasonable rates of rent. It is proposed to build on a plot of ground in Brooklyn, 75 by 208 feet, a huge structure six stories high, to contain 408 rooms. Several of the provisions for the comfort of these people will doubtless prove of great value. A central open court, 20 feet wide, will run from the front to the rear of the building, thus providing plenty of light and air. No rooms are to communicate, but all will be easily accessible. Frame of the building is to be constructed of iron or steel, and the covering will consist of sheets of corrugated iron. The whole is to be absolutely fire-proof. The building will also be supplied throughout with the most approved sanitary arrangements. The estimated cost of the building is $125,000. The rooms will be rented in suites of 2, 3 or 4, at the rate of $3 a month for each room. The stock company who expect to supply the capital for this undertaking argue that the tenement houses are a necessary evil, and that charity should be expended to the end of making them as wholesome as possible. A novel feature of this establishment will be the distinct divisions into which the house is to be divided, in order to provide separate apartments for German, Jews and Italians. —Scientific American.

Too Much Haste.

In prescribing for a patient the other day a physician, who is a specialist in nervous difficulties, declared that a young woman under his charge was literally killing herself by too rapid movements.

"She is not satisfied," he said, "with going about and doing things in a quiet, ordinary way, but actually rushes through with her work and continually overtaxes herself. She cannot be convinced that a little more deliberation might accomplish just as much and save her strength. So firmly is this habit of haste fixed upon her that she will run up and down stairs when there is no need for hurry, and indeed when there is no possible pretext for doing it."

The doctor's prescription was: A good deal more deliberation, a large amount of rest and pleasant occupation. The world is full of people who are rushing themselves to ruin of health as fast as they can go. They not only rush, but worry, and, between these two, subject their nervous system to more wear and tear than anything short of wrought steel would endure. —Ledger.

The Use of Soaps.

Even in perfect health, the skin may be said to be one of the most sensitive of the bodily tissues, and when it is naturally irritable and harsh it is liable to be seriously affected by the simplest of external influences.

The skin is roughly divided into two layers; the deeper one, or the true skin, being the vital portion, and for the most part responsible for the health of the whole structure; while the external layer is more of the nature of horn, and serves as a protection for the tissues underneath.

The natural function of the true skin, which is to excrete the perspiration, tends, in normal conditions, to lubricate this horny epidermis, as it is called, and to keep it always soft and somewhat moist.

The perspiration is, in the main, composed of watery and fatty sweat, and in determining the suitability of any cleansing medium, it is its relation to these substances more than anything else that we have to study,

Soap, as we all know, is made by the action of alkalies, like potash and soda, upon fats. There is generally, even in the best of soap, a greater or less amount of alkali above that required to transform the fat into soap. It is this free alkali that becomes prejudicial to the skin, as it not only acts as an irritant, but combines with and removes the fatty sweat. By its continued action the skin is rendered harsh and dry.

We may guard against the danger which may attend, in some cases at least, the free use of soap in either of two ways: By limiting ourselves to articles made by reputable firms, or by using a soap which has an excess of fatty matter in its composition, like that known as "castile."

Cheap soaps, while they may appear all right to the sense of sight and smell, are generally perfumed highly to hide the presence of free alkali, and their use is always to be discouraged.—Youths' Companion.

The Camphor Tree.

While camphor was formerly produced in Sumatra, Borneo, and other parts of the East Indies, all now known to the trade comes from Japan and Formosa. The camphor tree is a large evergreen of symmetrical proportions, somewhat resembling a linden. It bears a white flower, which ripens into a red berry. Some of the trees are fifteen feet in diameter and live to a great age. A group of trees in the province of Toosa, about a century old, are estimated to be equivalent to about forty thousand pounds of crude camphor. The camphor is extracted from chips taken from the roots or from the stem near the root, the wood yielding about 5 per cent of camphor, and the root a larger proportion. The annual export of Japan camphor averages about 5,000,000 pounds. The forests in Japan owned by the people are now almost denuded of timber, but the government still possesses large woods of camphor trees, which, it is estimated, will maintain a full average supply of the gum for the next twenty-five years. Plantations of young trees are also making and are well taken care of, and, although camphor has not hitherto been extracted from trees less than seventy or eighty years old, it is expected that under the present intelligent management equally good results may be realized in twenty-five or thirty years. The Japanese Department of Forests, which has the control of these woods, is under good management.—Scientific American.

Why Some Women Grow Old.

One reason why the average woman wears out, grows old and plain before her husband, is that, though a mistaken idea of duty, she lays out for herself at the beginning of her married life a scheme or plan of duty and employment for her time, every hour filled with work, with rare and short periods of relaxation.

This she follows religiously for years, feeling that she has done her duty, because every household event occurs regularly and on time, while she soon becomes merely a machine, a thing without life of itself or volition. She settles into her rut and goes round and round on the same track everlastingly.

Can any woman keep brightness, originality of thought and speech, or even mere prettiness with such a life, and without those things how can she keep her husband and growing children full of loving admiration, which is the strongest chain by which she can bind them to her? How bright and jolly the neighbor's wife seems when she calls. It nine cases out of ten it is because the surroundings and talk of your home are variety to her and rouse her to originality and brightness of speech. In her own rut she may be as dull as dishwater.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Air Navigation.

The experiments in air navigation now going on are of a decidedly promising character. A week or two ago Mr. Hiram Maxim delivered an address before a large meeting of a scientific society in London, in which he asserted that as the result of experiments that he had made there was not the shadow of a doubt in his mind that successful air navigation, certainly by machines to be employed for military purposes, was a result to be expected in the near future. And now we have the experiments made by Prof. Langley of the Smithsonian Institute which also go to show, as Mr. Maxim's work has done, that a flying machine can be developed which can carry its own power with it, and can readily sail through the air. Prof. Langley's experiments have been carried on with the assistance and under the personal direction of Dr. Carl Barns, who until a year ago was connected with the United States geological survey as its physicist.

The work of these two men has been of an intensely scientific and yet practical character.

Another Strike.

A story which drifts over from Maine recalls that pathetically delightfull story—delightful because it ends so triumphantly for the rebel—of Miss Wilkins, "The revolt of mother."

Nearly 50 years ago the Maine "mother" hung up her dishcloth one morning after washing the breakfast dishes and announced: "There; I'm not going to do any more work." Up to that time her days had been full as only the days of the wife of a poor farmer and the mother of a large family of children can be, but from that morning she rested.

Her daughters, and afterwards her sons' wives took up the burden of house and farm work which she thus suddenly laid down, while she has lived on among them, always idle and usually cheerful. She is now nearly ninety years old, and is apparently, as she has been throughout this strange vacation, perfectly well.

SATURDAY, DEC. 22, 1894.

Forefathers' Day at Wollaston.

Forefathers' day, although falling on Dec. 21, was fittingly observed by the Wollaston Congregational society on Thursday evening, Dec. 20. The vestry of the church was crowded, a large number of those present being dressed in old style, the men wearing jerkins, small clothes, ruffles around their necks, showing belts with silver buckles, short cloaks and steeple crowned hats. The women wore dresses in imitation of homespun goods, with slashed sleeves and embroidered caps. nearly everybody represented some historical personage.

Elder Brewster was represented by Mr. Charles G. Farrell.

Goodwife Brewster by Mrs. John Thompson.

Capt. Miles Standish, "Clad in doublets and hose and boots of Cordoran leather," by Mr. John A. Barbour.

Priscilla Mullins, "the Puritan maiden," by Miss Dickey.

Mary Chilton. she who first stepped on Plymouth rock, by Miss Thompson.

Goodwife Carver by Mrs. H. T. Whitman.

Goodwife Bradford, by Mrs. George A. Dickey.

Goodman Allerton, by Mr. Herbert A. Thompson.

John Alden, "the fair-haired, taciturn stripling," by Mr. Robert B. Witham.

Governor Bradford, by Mr. Charles P. Hutchins.

John Howland, who lived to the ripe old age of 80, by Mr. Harry C. Osgood.

John Billington, of Billington sea fame, by Mr. John Whall.

Dame Hopkins, wife of Stephen Hopkins, by Mrs. A. L. Baker.

Samoset, the Indian Sagamore, "a man free in speech and of a seemly carriage," by Mr. A. L. Delano.

Squanto, an Indian sachem, Mr. John L. Munger.

Hobomok,—"silent with folded arms stood Hobomok, friend of the white man," by Mr. William S. Washburne.

The make-up of the three sachems was a clever bit of work. Their faces were painted a copper color with the usual dashes of war paint and the totem upon their chests. They were dressed in buckskin breeches and shirts. Over this was thrown a gaudy blanket decorated with feathers and wampum, and upon their feet were moccasins. They were armed with bows and arrows and tomahawks.

Preceding the tableaux, a lunch of Indian pudding and other old fashioned dishes was served.

The tableaux consisted of realistic scenes from the "Courtship of Miles Standish."

Mrs. H. T. Whitman, who represented the wife of Governor Carver, sang the beautiful "Spring Song,"—

"While with her foot the treadle,
She guided the wheel in its motion."

This spring wheel, by the way, is a very old one and was loaned by Mr. William I. Washburne.

And then there was an orchestra that played some original music. It was composed of Mr. W. M. Wight, violin; Mr. Charles B. Dickey, cello; Mr. I. W. Fannce, violin; and Mr. Joshua L. Nash, bass viol.

The committee having the affair in charge consisted of Mrs. John Thompson, Miss Farwell, Mrs. George A. Dickey, Mrs. Charles G. Farwell, Mrs. A. L. Baker and Mrs. C. E. Snow.

Better Freight Facilities.

The inadequate freight facilities from which Quincy has so long suffered, have been partially remedied under the present time schedule. Freight received at the Boston freight depot up to 2 o'clock P. M., is forwarded to West Quincy on train leaving Boston at 2.45 P. M., running express to Atlantic and reaching West Quincy at 3.25 P. M., when freight is ready for immediate delivery.

Already several of our expresses have transferred their business to this train at West Quincy, and other consignees at Quincy and Quincy Adams, are beginning to avail themselves of the facilities it affords for quick transit from Boston by daylight instead of by night service as at Quincy and Quincy Adams.

Inward-bound, the train leaves West Quincy at 6.50 P. M., reaching Boston at 7.25 P. M.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford management intends at no distant date, to change over and run on the right hand track, instead of the left as at present on the Old Colony system.

Severely Burned

A little child of Mrs. John Gregory of Brackett street was seriously if not fatally burned Wednesday. Mrs. Gregory left her infant in a cradle in charge of a three year old boy while she went out doors for a few moments. While she was out the boy became possessed with some matches, and with these he set the clothing about the helpless infant afire.

The fire thus started was burning briskly when the grandfather came in and lost no time in extinguishing the flames; thus saving the infant from a horrible death, although as it is the child was severely burned about the limbs and body, and its recovery is doubtful.

Accident To Clerk.

Howard Rogers met with quite an accident Monday and while his injuries are not so serious as at first thought it was a narrow escape for him. He was taking orders on Bigelow street and in jumping from his team before the horse had come to a full stop, he caught his foot in some way and fell, striking on his side on the curbing.

He was carried into the residence of Hazen E. Ricker. It was thought at first that he had fractured his ribs. Dr. Welch who was called said after examination that he had not, although he came near it.

Organ Recitals.

There will be a series of organ recitals at Christ's church on Thursday evenings during January, admission without card.

On Thursday evening, Jan. 24, there will be a short evening prayer and performance of a cantata "Rebeka" by Barnby, by a chorus of sixty voices, the solo parts being sustained by the soloists from the Church of the Advent. Admission free by card.

The organist for the first recital, Thursday, January 3d, will be Miss Ada G. Croft of Boston, pupil of Mr. Wrigley, assisted by Mr. Edward Phillips, baritone vocalist of Boston.

The successful competitors in the drive-whist contest at the Granite City club on Wednesday evening were Mrs. Joseph C. Morse and Mr. W. W. Ewell.

Only a few more days left in which to buy your Christmas presents, and our local storekeepers invite you to inspect their stock before purchasing out of town.

W. H. Bennett completed this week the grading about the new house of Mr. C. Theodore Hardwick on Chestnut street. It is another good job for Mr. Bennett.

Mr. J. H. Wales has presented the High school with Ridpath's Cyclopœdia of History in four large and handsome volumes. Such gifts are very acceptable.

Finer weather than that we have been enjoying the past week was never known at this season of the year. No snow, no dust; clear and pleasant. Air bracing and cool.

Mr. James O'Donovan, proprietor of the boot and shoe store in Tirrell's block, has the sympathy of the community in the loss of his wife, who died Tuesday, aged 43 years.

Franklin C. Pratt of Weymouth was again on trial at Dedham this week for stealing a horse from Stephen Penniman & Son over a year ago. He was found guilty on Thursday.

Northampton schools developed mumps, necessitating some skirmishing. This, compared to diphtheria in our own schools, seems trifling. A Northampton teacher returned here yesterday with mumps.

E. B. Souther, the newsdealer, and James McConnell, the fruit man, have just put in the National cash register. The machines are very handsome and while accurate in every particular are very simple.

Among the spectators at the City Council Thursday evening were Councilmen-elect Spear, Hayden and Dixon. The two latter gentlemen departed before the meeting closed, but Mr. Spear remained until the last gun was fired.

D. E. Wadsworth & Co. have succeeded in purchasing another assortment of those famous art pictures which they gave away souvenir week. Owing to the number who wanted to purchase them, they have decided to sell them at 25 cents apiece.

The next meeting of the Hospital Aid Association will be held in the Probate Court room, Adams building, Thursday afternoon, Dec. 27th, at 3 o'clock. This will be the last meeting of the year, and the election of officers for the ensuing year will be the chief business of the meeting.

Miss Floretta Vining presided Wednesday at the meeting of the Woman's Press association, and gracefully introduced the speakers, among the number Mrs. A. M. Palmer of New York, Mrs. Mary A. Shaw and Mrs. Sara A. Palmer. Sweet vocal and instrumental music was interspersed.

William A. Stanton and Harry Harris, who also have a number of aliases, the two men who robbed the money drawers in Derby's clothing store last summer, were convicted in the superior court at Dedham. Stanton was given 6 months and Harris 5 months, said sentenced to take effect a the expiration of the term they are now serving.

The Golden Rod for December is out today and as usual is bright and newsy. In the editorials will be found sensible advice for old and young. Then there is "A Ghost Story"; part two of "The Song of the Wind"; personals; athletic notes; "Wayside Sprays"; exchanges, and last, but not least, two columns of interesting locals about the school.

WEST QUINCY.

The Ladies Social Union of the West Quincy Methodist church held an oyster supper and apron sale Wednesday evening which was largely attended. From 6 to 8 o'clock a delicious oyster stew was served and on the several tables were aprons of all sizes and kinds which met with a ready sale.

The condition of Leslie Smith, who was stabbed by James Furmingham, is reported as comfortable and he will probably recover. Furmingham is out on bail.

The ladies of the West Quincy Methodist church are to hold an oyster supper and apron sale in the church Wednesday evening.

The Board of Health have abated the nuisance in the basement of Farnum's block. The members say they have been at work on it for some weeks but complications arose and they were able to do but little, without ejecting the tenants.

One of the most attractive show windows is that of T. L. Williams, the West Quincy jeweller. The window is prettily trimmed with crepe paper and in the centre there is a representation of the golden stairs. On each of the four posts of the stairs is a bright little electric and on the stairs and about the window are shown watches, etc., in abundance.

Atlantic is not alone in the fact of church windows being stoned, presumably by boys. Several holes have been made in the windows of the Methodist church at West Quincy, during the season. The boys stand at a safe distance, and with his little sling, makes sad havoc. We have been requested to mention this in these columns in hopes that boys would entirely efrain from this use of their rubber string and stone.

M. E. Church.

The ladies provided an ample supper of stewed oysters, brown bread and beans to all who patronized the tables in the vestry of the West Quincy M. E. church, Wednesday evening.

Mr. Charles Goucher and wife prepared the stews which is enough to say that they were delectable and toothsome. Mrs. Hobbs and Mrs. McCormick sold nearly all the aprons provided, with "Miss Piper," and the dusters. The young folks then proceeded to enumerate articles of kitchen furniture.

Badger—Campbell.

Miss Mirtella C. Campbell and Mr. Fred L. Badger were united in marriage Tuesday evening at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Hiram W. Campbell, the Rev. E. W. Virgin of the Methodist church officiating. Only the immediate relatives of the happy couple were in attendance.

Mr. Campbell, a brother of the bride, and Miss Maggie Badger, attended the couple, and there was also a little flower girl, Miss Lowe.

The presents were many and beautiful. Ice cream and cake were served, and all went merry, the climax being reached when Mr. and Mrs. Badger departed in a carriage for Boston amid a shower of rice.

Miss Campbell was one of West Quincy's most popular young ladies, and Mr. Badger one of the most progressive young men of the city. In addition to the office business of the enterprising firm of Badger Bros., granite manufacturers and machinists, he has been secretary of the New England Granite Manufacturers' Association, and is today the secretary of the Quincy Association. May prosperity attend Mr. and Mrs. Badger.

SOUTH QUINCY.

W. R. Lofgren is the builder of the new house for Mr. James Craig on Franklin street, which promises to be one of the finest houses in Ward Three.

There has been considerable talk in Ward Three as to the possible candidates for Councilman to fill the vacancy. From the present appearances neither Mr. Falconer or Mr. Clark will receive the nomination by the Republicans but a new man will be selected. Among the names mentioned are W. H. Mitchell, J. C. Murray and James Copland.

ATLANTIC.

The Atlantic Methodists have their Christmas tree Christmas night at 6 30.

Rev. Oliver M. Fisher, Ph. D., the new pastor of the Atlantic M. E. church, comes well recommended and is secretary for the United States and Canada for the evangelical society aiding Christian work in Mexico. He has also studied in Berlin, Germany, and has travelled over Europe and South America.

A party from Atlantic attended the fair aiding the Epworth settlement work at the rooms of Prof. Buell at the Boston university on Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Mr. C. J. Brown attended the funeral of Mrs. S. A. Pierce last week, Mrs. Pierce was the largest stockholder in the Atlantic Land Company.

Mr. George A. Brown has ten houses underway at Atlantic,—one of the prettiest and best villages in this city. Some of them are nearly done, and will soon be occupied. J. R. Hewett of South Boston has purchased one and will soon move in. Mr. Herrick Nash of Wollaston has bought another, which he will soon occupy. Mr. Loring of Nebraska has rented another. This suburb is growing quite fast.

The disturbance of religious meetings still continues in Atlantic. Last Sunday evening a large light of glass was broken in a window of Memorial church during the service.

Rev. Robert T. Osgood of Cambridge preached Sunday morning at the Memorial Congregational church, giving a good discourse on the theme "Universal Brotherhood."

The boys composing the members of the Squantum Yacht club were under full sail Friday evening last week, not to participate in a regatta, for the sails of their yachts had been furled for the winter, but to trip the light fantastic upon the waxen floor of Music hall.

The occasion was the first grand social of the club and it goes without saying that it was a grand success from beginning to end.

Sprague's orchestra furnished music and from 8 until 2 o'clock A. M., all thoughts of worldy cares were forgotten in the enjoyments of the occasion.

Refreshments were served during a brief intermission, and when the final notes of the orchestra had died away it was with regrets that the affair had come to an end.

Mrs. James Paul of Atlantic, stepmother of James C. Paul, who is now serving a 15-year sentence for shooting Ella Whitefield at Ashmont last September, was adjudged insane by Judge Humphrey Monday and sent to Westboro.

Mrs. Paul attempted suicide some weeks ago by taking poison, but was discovered in time to save her life.

The residents of Old Colony and Standish avenues, Wollaston, appreciate the brilliant street light which Mr. Al. Williams has had placed over the entrance to the Duck's Nest at his own expense.

Sunday's Herald says: The accidental death of the lamented Sylvester Brown, principal of the Martin school on Huntington avenue, caused a vacancy which it was indeed very difficult to fill, for Mr. Brown was an ideal teacher. There was an opportunity, however, to fill the vacancy on something like a civil service principle. The sub-master of the school was Mr. Edward W. Schnerch. The school committee promoted him, and he now presides over the Martin school.

Some of Quincy's young people are looking forward to dancing out 1894 and dancing in 1895. The german is to take place in Wollaston and Mesdames Rice, Whicher and King are to be matrons.

A meeting of those interested in the formation of a Rebekah lodge at Wollaston, was held in Odd Fellows' hall, Thursday evening, and was called to order at 8 o'clock by Chairman T. C. Graw. Ninety-one being present. The opening address was made by P. G. Master L. A. Cook, followed by P. G., Master Crawford, Past Grand Jacobs, Past Grand Stetson and D. D. G. M., Mrs. Hoyt of South Boston. Refreshments were then served under the supervision of Mr. Fred H. Coombs. The application for a new charter has now 91 signatures.

The members of the Epworth League are preparing to interject into the programme of exercises at the Methodist Episcopal church, on Tuesday evening next, a part which will be of peculiar interest to all friends of the church.

Next Sunday morning Rev. C. W. Wilder will ask all the members of his church and congregation to observe Friday, Dec. 28, as a day of special prayer for the success of the series of revival services to be inaugurated Sunday, Dec. 30.

The Saturday Shoot.

The Wollaston Trap club held its regular shoot on Saturday afternoon. Elcock, who shoots at the birds from one angle, was high man with a score of 20.

At the next shoot, which will be held on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock sharp, all of the members and their friends are invited.

Christmas at Quincy Point.

Christmas will be observed at the Washington Street church as follows: Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. Herbert A. Youtz, will preach from the subject "The Incarnation." A Christmas choir under the direction of Mr. T. B. Pollard will render music appropriate to the day.

At 7.15 o'clock Sunday evening, a Christmas concert in charge of Supt. Charles H. Sherburne will be given by the Sabbath school in the auditorium of the church.

On Monday night, Christmas eve, the exercises will be in the vestry commencing at 7.30 o'clock. These will consist of an entertainment and the unloading of the Christmas trees. Light refreshments will be served to the members of the Sunday school. Everyone is welcome to any or all of these services.

A committee will be in attendance at the vestry from 1.30 to 3 30 o'clock on Monday to receive all presents that parents or friends may desire to have hung upon the tree.

DOWNS AND PARK.

Work has commenced on a large block near the Norfolk Downs depot. There will be two stores on the lower floor and five tenements up stairs.

A Substantial Christmas Gift.

In another column Mason & Hamlin advertise one of the handsomest organs which has yet been put upon the market. The instrument is in every respect a perfect beauty, and will prove a great ornament to any house. No Christmas gift could be more acceptable than such an organ. Write to Mason & Hamlin, Boston Mass., and they will send you their fully illustrated catalogue free. 1p1w

☞The holiday stock of C. W. Guy and W. G. Shaw is large and varied. Goods in their line are always the best appreciated Christmas presents.

Christmas Music.

Many of the Quincy churches have arranged for Christmas services as will be seen in the column of church services. Below will be found some of the musical programmes and others will appear in Saturday's DAILY LEDGER.

The Wollaston M. E.

The annual Christmas concert by the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School will be held in the church Sunday evening Dec. 23, at 6 o'clock.

An interesting cantata will be given in the Methodist Episcopal church, Tuesday evening Dec. 25, at 6 o'clock by some of the children, assisted by older friends. Its title is "Catching Kris Kringle." At its close the distribution of presents from the Christmas tree will take place.

Young Men's Christian Asso.

Mr. H. M. Fillebrown, assistant State Secretary gave an interesting talk Sunday on "A favored young man." There is a growing interest in the spiritual work, and the meetings of the past few weeks have yielded good results.

Evangelist Geo. S. Avery of Wollaston, who is so favorably known to many of our citizens, especially those of South Quincy, who remember with pleasure his work in the tent last summer, has accepted a call to become assistant pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, on West Fifty-Seventh street, New York city. He will have charge of the Rescue Mission on Forty-Second street. During the past three months Mr. Avery has conducted a large Bible class of men every Monday evening, in the Association parlor. Several young men have come several miles regularly to attend this class. All who have attended have been wonderfully blessed. Monnay Mr. Avery closed the course.

A small company of Swedish young men enjoyed the hospitality of the Association last Saturday evening.

The Association rooms will be open Christmas day and evening.

Mr. William Duff, teacher of the class in monumental drafting has been elected teacher in drawing in the Barre, Vt., public schools, where he entered upon his duties the first of this week. Mr. H. W. Beattie has been secured to fill the vacancy.

"Is it Manly to be a Christian" will be the subject discussed at the men's meeting, Sunday, Dec. 23. Mr. J. Roland Corthell, will open the discussion. All young men will be welcome.

"The Music of the Iroquois" will be the subject of an illustrated lecture to be given in the Association rooms, Thursday evening, Dec. 27, by Mr. Frederic A. Lyman, director of music in the Syracuse public schools; Associate and Examiner in American College of Musicians, and Vice President of N. Y. State Music Teacher's Association. A full set of Indian musical instruments, including one over one hundred years old is used to illustrate many traditional and authentic customs and songs of the six nations. Adult members of the association and auxiliary will be admitted by showing paid up membership ticket.

The ladies of the auxiliary will keep "Open House" New Year's day, from 4 to 9 P. M. The Malden High School Harmonica club, consisting of seven members, will furnish the music.

The men's meeting, Sunday, Dec. 31, will be unique in character and unusally interesting to all young men. Mr. Roberts' subject will be, "The Young Man. His Physical and Spritual Nature, or How to make the most of life." The talk will be intensely practical, showing how, by the proper care of the body, young men can accomplish the greatest good in life. In short, it might be called "The gospel of Good Health." The meeting will be held in the gymnasium and Mr. Roberts will speak in his gymnasium suit, that he may illustrate what nature will do for the man who takes care of his health.

—Delphi lodge, K. of P., of Weymouth, celebrated its silver anniversary Wednesday night. There was an entertainment with addresses, followed by a banquet and dance.

—A man employed at Bradley's works at North Weymouth, went to the depot in that village, Thursday afternoon, to take train, when he suddenly dropped dead.

Miss Fairbanks' Exhibition.

A most interesting and creditable exhibition of decorated china was given by Miss Mabel F. Fairbanks at the residence of her father, Hon. H. O. Fairbanks, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Dainty bureau sets, tempting cake plates, jardinieres, cups and saucers were mostly beautifully arranged on tables draped in white, while water color and India ink sketches, also the work of Miss Fairbanks, formed a pleasing background, and palms also added to the attractiveness of the exhibit.

A glass bowl of violets in water colors, an "old mill," in India ink, and a pitcher decorated in pink ornamentation were perhaps the most admired of the many beautiful specimens of skill.

Miss Fairbanks has been a faithful student for the past two years, and evince much talent and love for her work.

Tea and chocolate were served by Miss Willcutts of Ashmont, and Miss Hall of Wollaston, assisted by Miss Mollie Fairbanks.

Wollaston Sociable.

The regular monthly sociable of the Wollaston Unitarian society was held in the vestry on Thursday evening. There was the usual large attendance, both at the supper and at the entertainment. The menu was out of the ordinary run of such things. It was planned after an Australian ballot.

At the entertainment which followed there was some excellent music and reading. Mrs. Frank A. Page and Mrs. Edgar A. King sang solos; Miss Packard played with her usual good taste selections upon the piano; Mrs. John H. Litchfield, Jr., held the close attention of the audience while she read a selection; and Mr. Wallace Bennett recited in good style a selection.

The committee consisted of Mrs. Thomas F. Mitchell, Mrs. Herman Wieting, Mrs. Wm. Logan, Mrs. Seymour Field, Mrs. Chas. S. Comins and Mrs. M. E. Merrill.

Dedicated.

The large and beautiful building just completed at Norwood for the use of Messrs. J. S. Cushing & Co. and Berwick & Smith, publishers and printers, was very successfully dedicated on Thursday evening by a reception and ball. The building is very large and will accommodate 200 hands. It was brilliantly illuminated within and without, and the interior was elaborately decorated wish flags and evergreens. At 7 o'clock the guests began to arrive and before 9 there were more than 2,000 persons in the building.

Stop and Ponder.

The stabbing affair as South Quincy only shows that there are growing up in our midst a crowd of boys, who if not checked in their present career will some day help to swell the number who fill the State prisons of the country.

During the past year there have been a number of these young boys arraigned in court, and their crimes seem to form a kind of step ladder, running through the various stages such as being a stubborn child, larceny, setting fires, and the top round, has been reached, by perhaps a murder. Is it any wonder then that parents should ponder and say, "What shall we do with our boys?" It is a serious question and one that should be carefully considered.

Parents now-a-days are altogether too easy with their boys. In many cases they are allowed as much freedom as though they were of age, and the companionship into which they have been thrown nightly while on the streets has done much to bring about this change, for it is no uncommon thing to see even the smallest of boys puffing a cigarette, and to hear them utter oaths at the least provocation that would make an ordinary man blush. Yet these things are apparently allowed to go on without the least effort to check.

Anyone who is about the Centre can tell you about a young boy not over 10 or 12 years of age, who should be taken care of. He is a boy, who, instead of being at school, is roaming about the streets, loafing in different places and riding on teams, singing songs of an obscene nature to a crowd of men who give their encouragement by contributing a few coppers, which the next moment find their way into the money drawers in our stores in exchange for tobacco or cigarettes, notwithstanding the 16 year law. This being so, is there any wonder that in all seriousness the question is asked: "What shall we do with our boys?"

Republican Caucus.

Fourteen of the sixteen Republican members of the next City Council met in caucus Tuesday evening to nominate candidates for the several offices to be filled by that body when it organizes in January. The two absent members were Messrs. Phillips and Sidelinger, both of Ward Two.

Mr. Shackley was elected chairman of the caucus and Mr. Pinkham, secretary.

Mr. E. W. H. Bass, the able president of the past two years, was elected as a candidate for president of the Council, and Christopher A. Spear as Clerk. J. O. Hall as auditor and Harry W. Tirrell as city messenger.

Upon the ballot for City Messenger, Harry W. Tirrell the present incumbent received the full vote of the caucus.

Mr. Bass thanked the gentlemen for the honor conferred upon him and hoped to merit the good opinion of the new as well as the old members.

Mr. Bryant hoped there would be more meetings of this kind during the coming year. When important questions came up they could be fought out in meetings of this kind rather than in the Council chamber, and see to it that the orders of the Council are carried out by the Mayor or impeach him.

Mr. Bryant also criticised the action of the Mayor in the matter of building the Hose house in Ward Two contrary to the order of the Council, and the Auditor for approving the bills. He should have refused to do so, and reported back to the Council.

Nearly Fatal Quarrel.

A school boy fight, a blow, quick to anger, a knife and a stab, tells the facts of a serious stabbing affair that occurred on Water street, Dec. 14, shortly after 4 P. M.

The principals in the affair were James Furmingham, aged 13 years, son of John Furmingham of Town Hill, and Leslie Smith aged 16 years, a son of James Smith of Packard's lane.

Both boys attended school at the John Hancock building and after school the boys with others got into a fight among themselves. During the progress of the row, the Furmingham boy got a blow in the face, which he says Smith gave him. His anger was instantly aroused and reaching into his pocket he drew forth his jack-knife and made a lunge at Smith.

The blade entered Smith's chest just over the right lung. The point struck a rib which caused it to turn downward making a long jagged cut, which bled profusely, and the boy upon being carried into the school building fainted away.

Dr. Sheahan was summoned and upon his arrival he pronounced it a very serious case and immediately removed him to his home.

For the Throat

to show signs of weakness is a condition that requires immediate care. So often it is the first sign of Consumption, — that dying by inches.

DR. W. E. CUMMINGS, now of 14 Walnut Street, HAVERHILL, formerly of SO. LAWRENCE, MASS., writes us of his experience with

Dana's SARSAPARILLA The Kind That Cures

He had chronic Bronchitis, which disease, developing into Consumption, had already carried away one brother. The Materia Medica was exhausted in the endeavor for relief; and his weight had fallen forty-one pounds. He fully expected Consumption, and thought the seeds might already be there. Reading in the papers of the wonderful CURES made by DANA'S, he grasped at the chance. He hoped that it might build him up some; a CURE he could not expect. Want of space forbids a full quotation of his interesting letter. Six bottles of DANA'S made him a new man. He recommends it heartily to other sufferers.

See that you get DANA'S.

The City Council.

The City Council handled matters in a business-like way Thursday evening. Important subjects received the consideration due them, and the full discussions prolonged the meeting until about 11 o'clock.

Twenty-one members were in attendance, the absentees being Councilmen Babcock and Litchfield.

Communications.

The Board of Registrars reported the result of the recount of votes for Mayor, Councilmen at large, and Councilmen in Ward Three.

Mayor Hodges forwarded a communication of the Commissioner asking a transfer of $300 from lights to streets. To Committee on Finance.

The Mayor also forwarded the following communication from the Principal Assessor:

We desire to call your attention to the fact that the duties of the Assessors are growing more arduous every year, and by recent legislation a portion of the duties of the Board of Registrars of Voters has been transferred to them. Although the assessors constitute one of the most important and responsible boards of the city, it is exceedingly difficult to induce proper and suitable citizens to serve in that capacity, because the time expended is so great and the salary so small, and we respectfully ask you to increase the salary of the Principal Assessor to $600 per annum, and the Ward Assessors to $350 per annum.

Councilman Bigelow offered an order amending the ordinance as asked, which was given one reading and referred to the Committee on Salaries.

Auditor Hall reported the appropriation for interest exhausted, and that for election expenses not sufficient. To Committee on Finance.

The Mayor forwarded a petition of Mrs. John La Pierre for increase in award for damages caused by widening of Fuller's lane from $750 to $1200. Referred.

Petitions of William Symonds for State Aid, and Electric Light Company for location of pole on Chestnut street were referred.

Reports.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for location of poles on Spear street. To second reading.

The same committee reported an order for relocation of Quarry street, which was given one reading.

Reference to the next Council was reported on the petition for closing Miller stile, and acceptance of Miller Stile road. Accepted.

The Committee on Streets reported that the order for extention of Walker street ought to pass. The rules were suspended upon motion of Councilman Moxon and the order unanimously passed.

The Committee on Salaries reported amendment to ordinance concerning salaries providing $3 per building for inspection of plumbing.

Fire Horses and Men.

A long discussion was opened by the report of the Committee on Finance, that the order ought not to pass, providing horse and harness and two permanent men for Hose 3 and 4.

Councilman Federhen inquired if the committee objected to the loan or the idea itself.

Councilman Moxon said the committee were opposed to expenditure.

Councilman Federhen was surprised. The trend was toward permanent men and horses, and they were expected on the completion of new hose houses. While Chief desired two men he believed one enough. The carriage weighed 3,800 and it was out of the question for men to pull, and we could not depend on a horse now.

Councilman Baker believed all wards should have permanent men and horses.

Councilman Moxon said Chief Williams had appeared before the committee and advocated two permanent men for all pieces. Ward Two, however, needed them the least, as central apparatus covered it. Mr. Moxon showed by figures that permanent men and horses for all pieces would increase the tax rate 37 cents each year.

Councilman Shackley inquired as to value of horse on streets; but Chairman Holden could give no information.

Councilman Robbins favored permanent men and horses in Wards 2, 4, 5 and 6.

Councilman Holbrook opposed report. Believed horses could be profitably used on streets.

Councilman Anderson favored report because of the tax rate. It was a question if city can afford. The needs of Wards Four and Six were the most pressing. Hoped all might soon have permanent horses and men.

Councilman Federhen asked how much the improvement in Coddington and Adams street if passed would have increased tax rate.

Councilman Anderson replied that they were to be met by loan which would not fall due until 1901.

Councilman Holden was opposed to order unless provisions were made to use horses and men upon the streets.

Councilman Adams believed they could thus be utilized, but would effect no saving in department of public works. But can we afford it? Fire Department had been efficient and had come out better than the financial end of the city. Did not think city could stand 37 cents more on tax rate.

Councilman Rooney was not in favor of mixing street and fire departments, but would rather do that than go without. Thought street sprinkling could be done by the horses and men.

Councilmen Bigelow had come to the conclusion that Ward Two was well covered, in fact he had been told that no company was needed at Quincy Point. Dorchester was no better covered than Wards One, Two and Three now are.

Councilman Johnson thought there was no question but Ward Two needed a fire company, and it was of no use without a horse.

Councilman Federhen thought the Chief had made contradictory statement. To him he had advocated using the steamer less and outlying companies more. It looked as if Ward Two could not get anything, and that the only way to secure anything was by a deal with other wards as was too often the custom.

Councilman Moxon said emphatically that the assertions of deals was an insult. He knew of no deals while he had been a Councilman. Would vote for order if horses could be utilized.

Councilmen Shackley thought the services of men and horses on streets would offset increase of 37 cents in tax rate.

The adverse report of the committee was rejected, and it was voted 14 to 6 as follows, to lay orders 172 and 173 on the table:

YEAS,—Adams, Anderson, Baker, Bigelow, Clark, Holbrook, Holden, Lennon, McKeon, Moxon, Robbins, Shackley, Snow and Waterhouse—14

NAYS,—Federhen, Johnson, Lamb. O'Brien, Rooney and Sullivan—6.

The report relative to order 174, concerning salaries was not accepted.

Orders 172, 173 and 174 were then taken up for action.

Councilman Moxon offered a substitute for the three, increasing the appropriation to $1,500 and providing horses, carts and men for all wards.

Councilman Federhen raised the point that the order could not be a substitute, and it was ruled out of order.

Councilman Baker moved amendments to order 172 which sought to accomplish the same thing, but each was lost.

Order 172 took second reading.

Order 173 for transfer of horse in Ward Four from Street to Fire Department was passed.

Order 174 concerning salary of new permanent men was lost. Later this was reconsidered, and laid upon the table.

Order 172 was amended to provide for cost of horse from receipts from sale of lot in Ward Two, and the order was passed 11 to 10 as follows:

YEAS,—Barker, Bass, Federhen, Holbrook, Johnson, Lamb, McKeon, O'Brien, Rooney, Shackley and Sullivan—11.

NAYS,—Adams, Anderson, Bigelow, Clark, Holden, Lennon, Moxon, Robbins, Snow and Waterhouse—10.

New Business.

Councilman Adams offered an order that the Mayor be authorized to issue a deed to the Commonwealth for land of the Adams Temple and School Fund, taken for the Metropolitan Park Commission. The price received to be $5,000. Passed.

Upon motion of Councilman Moxon it was voted that when the Council adjourn it be until Thursday evening, Dec. 27.

Councilman Lennon offered an order that the Commissioner of Public Works cause the Electric Light & Power Co. to remove its poles from the inside to the outside of the sidewalk on Liberty street, between Quincy streets and Brooks avenue. Passed.

Upon motion of Councilman Holden the order granting a location to the street railway on Franklin street was taken from the table, and upon motion of Councilman Moxon it was recommitted.

School Lot at Rail.

Councilman Shackley for the Committee on Public Buildings reported that a lot of land could be procured on the south-east corner of Willard and Robertson streets. There were two lots which he described which could be purchased for $2500 each. He considered the Sargent lot however the best, and that could be purchased for $3000. Report accepted.

Upon motion of Councilman Shackley, the order relating to the purchase of school-house lots in West Quincy was taken from the table.

Councilman Moxon was opposed to the Sargent lot. He had the opinion of four experts that it would cost considerable to remove the ledge on the lot. The lowest figure was $4,000 and the highest $5,000.

Councilman Shackley said he had lived among those rocks for 40 years and he could not see the obstacles. He had opinion of experts that lot could be put in condition for $1000.

Councilman Waterhouse was of the opinion that the Sargent lot was all right. He wanted to see the order passed.

Councilman Shackley said there was no need to dig a cellar, only to fill in around it.

Councilman Lamb said there was no quarry there, only a few bowlders.

Councilman Moxon still favored the two lots opposite. If you had a lot made for you it could not be better.

Councilman Holden hoped the order would not be hurried through, and that it would be put over until the next meeting that the matter could be looked up.

Councilman Rooney said the people of West Quincy were almost unanimous for the Sargent lot.

Councilman Adams moved the order be laid on the table. Voted. The vote was doubted and upon a yea and nay vote it was lost:

YEAS—Adams, Anderson, Bigelow, Clark, Holden, Johnson, Lennon, Moxon, Robbins—9.

NAYS—Baker, Federhen, Jr., Holbrook, Lamb, McKeon, O'Brien, Rooney, Shackley, Snow, Sullivan, Waterhouse—11.

Absent—Babcock, Litchfield.

The order was then passed to be ordained by the following vote:

YEAS—Baker, Bass, Bigelow, Clark, Federhen Jr., Holbrook, Johnson, Lamb, McKeon, O'Brien, Robbins, Rooney, Shackley, Snow, Sullivan, Waterhouse—16.

NAYS—Anderson, Holden, Lennon, Moxon—4.

Absent—Adams, Babcock, Litchfield.

New Ordinance.

Councilman Johnson offered an ordinance relative to the transfer of property.

City Solicitor Blackmur said the reason of this ordinance was that the mayor could have power to make conveyances and was simply in accordance with similar ordinances of other cities.

Referred to Committee on Ordinances.

Upon motion of Councilman Baker, the orders transfering $1300 from the approriation for miscellaneous school expenses to that for books and stationery, and $100 from cooking to that of transportation were taken up and passed to be ordained.

Adjourned at 10 47.

Got into the Water.

A good story is going the rounds at Wollaston about a well known gunner of that place, and an experience he had a few nights ago while at Adams' beach after ducks.

He, we will call him Mr. Dennis to hide his identity, invited his neighbor, Mr. Blank to go down to the shooting stand and lay for ducks. Arriving there the guns were loaded when a stray bird was sighted off shore and slowly tolled in. When about 75 yards from the beach both gunners fired and toppled it over. The punt was run out and Mr. Dennis kindly offered to row out and get the bird. Mr. Blank did not object as it was an exceedingly cold night with a sharp northwest wind sweeping across the bay, Dennis went out and as he turned to row back, the boat capsized and threw him into the water. He struck bottom, and, as the icy water playfully caroted around his gold collar buttons, he struggled ashore.

Mr. Blank stood on the beach kindly lending moral assistance.

"How is it out there, said Blank, "is the water very wet?"

"W-w-w-w-water w-w-w-wet you old f-f-f-fool" sputtered the half frozen sportsman, "d-d-d-do I look as if I h-h-h-had been w-w-w-walking on it?" and the chatter of his teeth drowned the roar of the surf.

Tribute to Sylvester Brown.

The Unitarian Sunday School Union met Monday evening at the Church of the Disciples, Vice President Charles H. Porter presiding.

After the routine business Mr. Porter feelingly alluded to the death of the president, Sylvester Brown, killed by an accident at Wollaston, Nov. 30. Rev. E. A. Horton read a set of resolutions outlining the upright character of the deceased, and expressing the sympathy of the union with the bereaved widow.

Mr. Frank A. Page from the Wollaston Sunday School and church, spoke of intimate social relations with the deceased, and of how he inspired the best work in the Sunday School and cheered every one by his happy disposition.

Mrs. John H. Litchfield of Wollaston also spoke on "Teachers and their Duties."

DEDHAM DESIRES to enter the metropolitan sewer district, and will act upon the matter at a special town meeting Dec. 31. Why should not Quincy take similar action?

I. O. O. F. Officers.

Mt. Wollaston lodge, No. 80, I. O. O. F., elected the following officers Tuesday evening:

N. G.,—Alex. Shirley.
V. G.,—T. W. Good.
Secretary,—Franklin Jacobs.
P. S.,—A. W. Stetson.
T.,—C. F. Pettengill.
Trustee for three years,—W. J. Williams

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BAD ADVICE.

Nothing which has been spoken during the last city campaign, contained so much bad advice, or enunciated so pernicious a principle, as did the words attributed by the LEDGER to Councilman-elect Charles M. Bryant at the caucus of Republicans to nominate the president of the Council of 1895. There is not an intelligent man in the city but will say that the business affairs of the municipality should be conducted on a non-partisan basis, and yet Mr. Bryant deliberately advises the Republican councilmen to "hold caucuses on all important measures," and "fight it out in those caucuses rather than in the council chamber." What a doctrine to establish in a place like Quincy! It seems as though the party in this city was being weighted down by acts and advice which men of ordinary intelligence would avoid.

Here are men elected to carry on the business of a little corporation, and the very first words the people hear from them are of "party caucuses and impeaching the mayor." This too, before they are entitled to occupy seats in the council chamber, or have even had time to get acquainted with each other. The language credited to Mr. Bryant is of a character which, unless withdrawn, will completely nullify his influence in the Council of 1895, and mark him as an extremely dangerous leader to follow.

The people of Quincy want no party caucuses to run their business affairs, but a free and open public discussion in the council chamber. If important measures are to be decided in caucus, then the clause of the charter which says, "all meetings of the City Council shall be open to the public," practically is destroyed. Let the conservative members of the council beware of hot-headed partisans.

YES OR NO.

Do the leading temperance Republicans of Quincy propose to allow the scandal of the last election to fade from sight without a thorough investigation? If they do, I predict it will be the wickedest blow to the temperance cause, that it has ever received since the first No vote was carried. Another week has gone, and, so far as the public has any information, nothing has been done by our proficient affidavit writers, to bring before the court those who "have libellously tried to injure the character of honest and upright citizens." Numbers of our citizens are wondering why nothing has been done and are beginning to say some pretty harsh things; if counsel has been engaged by the Republican committee they expect to hear that some steps toward a solution of this matter have been taken.

ITEMS.

Your correspondent in California, Mr. Thomas Talbot, may rest assured that his compliments for "June" were seen in Tuesday's LEDGER and appreciated. Mr. Talbot will always find the "truth without fear or favor" in any of my articles. A merry Christmas to him and to all readers of the PATRIOT and LEDGER, and to the editors and employes.

The late Mr. McGrath was one of the best versed and most interesting conversationalists that it was ever my pleasure to meet. His ideas were often original and always interesting and instructive. Few men in Quincy could duplicate his fund of general knowledge.

The business of the holidays necessitates a short article this week. JUNE.

Social Club Dramatics.

Another of those pleasing dramatic entertainment by the First Church Social club, as given Dec. 14, in the chapel. It was the first of the season of 1894-5 and ushered in a series of events which are always looked forward to with pleasure. There was a large audience which manifested approval of the rendering by the amateur actors.

The comedietta of "Old Cronies," in one act was first presented with this cast:

Dr. Jacks, a very mild old gentleman,	Mr. Crane
Capt. Pigeon, a bluff sea officer,	Mr. Boyd

It would be difficult to tell which gentleman excelled; both were excellent.

The amusing farce entitled, "That Box of Cigarettes" followed, with this cast:

Americus Vespucius Oldboy, a representative American citizen,	Dr. Davis
Christopher Columbus Oldboy, his son and a backslider,	Mr. Field
Tom Darling, a Nineteenth Century hero,	Mr. Crane
Freddy Blake, a "Soph." and one of "the fellows,"	Mr Russell
Miss Anastasia Bluebloodchester, a woman of mind and principle,	Mrs. Crane
Mrs. Christopher Columbus Oldboy, her niece, a "foreign importation,"	Miss Whicher
Molly Blake, another niece, not to be trampled on,	Miss Russell
Phyllis Darling, not yet "out" and bound to be "in it,"	Miss Adams

There were many amusing situations, and each member of the cast sustained well his or her character. There were three acts.

The Late Mr. McGrath.

As our friend passes from our sight, it may not be unseemly to give a parting word of farewell, to one of the noblest, purest and truest of men.

Oblivion shrouds us all so quickly when the hour of life is past, that we can only say Good-bye and then, we too, are lost.

He, who was almost, the incarnation of that exalted spirit, that preserves the race and keeps it from mercenary rot, has spoken to us for the last time, and we live on, under the influence of the principles he instilled and the recollection of the simple earnest life he hallowed. Broad and tolerant, bright and cheerful, free from envy and vanity, keen and observing, better than most men recognizing the "fitness of things" with a happy optimism, he was always so gladly welcomed.

No better wish can any one make, than that he or his may grow into the likeness of this man our friend Patrick McGrath.

Mrs. Ann Adams.

Mrs. Ann (Adams) Spear, widow of Alpheus Spear, and the oldest person in Quincy, died of old age Sunday morning, aged 97 years, 9 months and 12 days.

For some time past Mrs. Spear has been living with her daughter, Mrs. Abigial M. Newcomb, on Hancock street, and although having long passed the three score and ten mark, enjoyed life and took an active interests in the welfare of her children. Up to six months ago she always busied herself about her knitting, but then her health began to fail and although she was visibly growing weaker, she still retained that mild, gentle disposition that had always been characteristic with her through life.

About four weeks ago she took to her bed, and although she was able occasionally to sit up in bed, she never left it. The end came peacefully, the eyes that had looked upon the world so long, closed and she dropped to sleep as quietly as a little child, but to that sleep from which there is no awakening on this side of the river,

"And calm and peaceful is her sleep,
Rocked in the cradle of the deep."

Mrs. Spear was born in Quincy, nearly opposite the house where she died, March 4, 1797, and was the daughter of Micajah and Alice Adams. Twenty-two years later she was united in marriage by Rev. Peter Whitney, to Mr. Alpheus Spear who was one year her senior.

The fruits of this union were eight children, three sons and five daughters, namely: Charles A., who married Caroline A. Green; Ann M., who married Thomas H. Plumer; Louisa, who married Joseph W. Whitney; Sophia, who married Joseph T. Berry; Abigail M., who married James Newcomb; Warren W. who married Viana M. Moore; John M., who died unmarried and Emily E., who married James N. Blake.

Of this large family but four are now living, Mrs. Berry, Mrs. Newcomb, Warren W. and Mrs. Blake. There are however 14 grandchildren and 7 great grandchildren.

Mrs. Spear has always lived in Quincy, her husband being one of the founders of the First Universalist Society and its first treasurer. Mr. Spear died May 4, 1847, at the age of 51 years and for the past 10 years Mrs. Spear has made her home with her children. She was kind hearted, and lived to do good, and always had a pleasant word for all.

Funeral services were held from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Newcomb, Tuesday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock and was largely attended. Services were conducted by Rev. A. E. White, pastor of the Universalist church, and interment was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Patrick McGrath Dead.

Mr. Patrick McGrath, a well known resident of Quincy, and one of the pioneer marble and granite manufacturers of this city, died on Tuesday at his residence on Pleasant street in his 83d year.

Mr. McGrath has been able to be about and made trips to Boston up to two weeks ago, when he was taken ill, and since that time he has failed rapidly, his demise being due principally to old age.

Mr. McGrath was born in Ireland and came to this country, locating in Quincy where he entered into a business co-partnership in 1854 with Charles and Chester Mitchell for the manufacture of marble and granite monuments.

Mr. McGrath had charge of the marble branch, which was the first and only marble industry in Quincy. One of Mr. McGrath's first pieces of work was the granite arch over the entrance to Mt. Wollaston cemetery, which stands today as a lasting monument to his memory.

Later he withdrew from the firm and entered the marble business alone; still later taking his sons Henry and James into business with him, under the firm name of McGrath & Sons.

Eighteen years ago he withdrew from active business and the firm is now carried on under the style of McGrath Bros.

Gradually the firm has worked into the granite part of the business and is today one of the largest firms in the city.

The deceased leaves a widow, three sons and two daughters; one of the latter being Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Blake, wife of Dr. John G. Blake, and a well known literary writer.

Funeral services were held Thursday and were strictly private.

Paper, "Christmas, its origin, and methods of observance, Miss Josephine Kelley.

Several selections were sung by Misses Moxon and Coe.

The Roxbury Military Historical society elected on Friday a Board of Trustees to take charge of a fund, to be raised hereafter, to be devoted to the erection of statutes and other suitable memorials in Roxbury, and to be known as the "Roxbury Historic Memorial Fund." Col. J. P. Jordan, formerly of Wollaston, is one of the board.

A LIFE SAVER.

What it Means to be a Surfman—Hardship and Injury His Chief Reward.

From the Woonsocket (R. I.) Reporter.

One midwinter night, in a blinding snow storm, Captain Arthur L. Nickerson, in command of the gallant little schooner Allen Green, ran out from Vineyard Sound before the northeast gale and made for the open sea. The storm was at its height when the wind shifted so suddenly that before the skipper realized his situation his ears caught the sound of the breakers booming on Point Judith's treacherous shore.

Fifteen minutes after the Allen Green struck, Captain Herbert M. Knowles' crew of hardy life savers had begun the work of rescue. Captain Nickerson, when brought ashore, was in a pitiable condition. As he later stated in his official report of the disaster (see Government Report) made to Superintendent Kimball of the Life Saving Service, "I suffered much from cramps and pains caused by the bruises I received before I went ashore, having been at the wheel fifteen hours continuously."

The life savers wrapped the brave young sailor in warm blankets and gave him Pain-Killer freely. The famous old remedy accomplished an immediate relief, and Captain Nickerson slept as peacefully as a child that night and awoke next morning in a condition to face another tempest, if necessary. He feels that the prompt use of Pain-Killer after his fearful experience rescued him from unutterable suffering and even saved his life.

Brave Captain Knowles is now assistant superintendent of the life saving district He says the life savers all use Pain-Killer, and consider it the best and most reliable "all-around" remedy they can have by them.

Captains Asa Church, of Point Judith station; Albert Church, of Narragansett Pier; Davis at Watch Hill; Saunders at Quonochontaug—and their gallant crews, endorse Captain Knowles in his unstinted praise of Pain-Killer as an invaluable remedy for emergencies encountered in daily life.

School Committee.

The members present Monday evening at the special meeting of the School Committee were: Messrs. Gordon, Gurney, Sheahan, Harlow and Burns.

In the absence of Chairman Crane, who was reported sick, Dr. Sheahan presided.

The Superintendent was instructed to close the fall term Friday, at 3.30, and to begin the new term Wednesday morning, Jan. 2, 1895.

Voted, that the next regular meeting be held Thursday, Dec. 27.

The Superintendent reported that there was need of another teacher at the High school, and he was given authority to secure one.

A request was received from the High School Alumni Association for the use of the High School building Monday evening, Dec. 31, for the purpose of holding the first annual reunion.

The request was granted, the Superintendent being instructed to see that necessary care was taken of the building.

The sub-committee of the High School, together with the Superintendent and principal were empowered to attend to the matter of the lunch counter in the basement.

The resignation of Miss Rogers of the Adams school, to take effect at the end of the present term, was reported.

A petition was received from residents at Quincy Neck asking that some means of conveyance be provided for the children of that district to the Washington school. Referred to sub-committee on finance.

Adjourned at 8 45.

Magazine Night.

The weekly meeting of the Quincy Literary Society was held in Doble's building on Friday, Dec. 14, the vice president, Mr. William Traynor in the chair.

The regular business was the reading of the articles contributed to the monthly magazines and their consideration by the members.

The first one read by the editor was upon the familiar domestic theme, "Home life."

To a considerable extent, observed the writer, home is what me make it. It may be a place for meals, or a shelter for the night, but if so, the fault is with those who make it such. In our large cities, the facilities that are offered for young married people in the way of family hotels and furnished rooms are temptingly great.

The worst effect of such a mode of living is in the rearing of children. There is none of that domestic privacy and parental oversight, without which home life in its truest and best sense is a mockery. When children prefer outside society to that of home there is generally something wrong Parents should never be too old to play with their children. When the home is made cheerful with music, and instructive with entertaining books such as children can understand, it is a glorious harbor of refuge, to which the mind in after years can look back with infinite pride and satisfaction. In the criticism that followed the reading of the paper, the sentiments of the writer were sincerely approved. In the hurry and bustle of modern life, it is well sometimes to be reminded of the incomparable pleasures of home; to realize the obligations and responsibilities that accrue to home life, and the far reaching effect that its training has upon individual and national development. The inspirations that such a subject as home life suggests, are fraught with the most tender and purest ideals of life.

The next contribution submitted was of a poetical character. The new applicant for lyrical honors chose for his title the somewhat unpoetical heading of "Profit and Loss." The mercantile nature of the production was perhaps affected by the visions of trade methods and shady commercial transaction which the opening appellation suggested, as the verses were thought to smack too much of the vagueness and uncertainty that characterize the modern stock market, to be readily appreciated. Hopes were expressed however, that an opportunity for more extended examination would be afforded than was possible at one casual reading, and the editor was instructed to request the anonymous bard to allow it to be published, so as to grant members and others fuller privileges of mental dissection.

The last and most discussive paper of the evening was upon the philsophy of pain, a question that has been provocative of more diverse debate, during the centuries than almost any other subject.

Rev. William Clements.

An Ecclesiastical Council was convened at Wells Depot, Maine, Dec. 13, to consider the advisability of ordaining Mr. William Clements of South Quincy, pastor elect, to the work of the Gospel ministry. A number of churches were represented at the Council, that of Quincy by Rev. Nathan Hunt, pastor of the candidate.

After a thorough examination the council voted itself satisfied with the statements of the candidate and recommended to proceed with the ordination, which took place at the afternoon session, Rev. Nathan Hunt preaching the sermon.

The occasion was one of very great interest, and it is hoped that a large blessing will attend the labors of our former townsman in his new field of labor at Wells Depot.

An Attractive Number.

Mr. Charles J. McPherson, of the South Framingham Tribune, presented its readers last week with one of the largest and most attractive editions that we have seen for many a day. It was a holiday number, and called the "Woman's edition," and had some fifteen to twenty ladies as editors of the same.

The paper was finely illustrated and nicely printed; the covers in blue ink. The front page had a large attractive engraving of Santa Claus, with little children in his arms; making a beautiful page.

Granite Commandery.

The semi-annual election of officers of Granite Commandery 182, United Order Golden Cross, took place at Faxon hall, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 19:

Meetings are held on the first and third Wednesday evenings in each month.

Cottolene.

An important and interesting trade-mark suit, which has been before the courts for some time, has recently reached a decision in the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, Judge Townsend presiding.

The decision was in favor of the proprietors of Cottolene, a well known and high prised substitute for lard, by many of the ladies in Quincy.

It seems to be the law that when manufacturers have educated the public to ask for a certain article by its trade-mark name, they have acquired the right to insist that products manufactured by others shall not be given to the public under that name. It is just that it should be so for the benefit derived from such name can only be obtained by faithful service in furnishing articles of recognized value. Moreover, if the trade-mark name might be adopted by others, inferior articles might then be produced and sold under it; and thereby the value to manufacturers of the reputation of the name used by them as a trade-mark would be destroyed.

RENTERS OF SAFE DEPOSIT BOXES

Will consult their own interest by examining the vaults and accommodations which are offered by the

SECURITY SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY,

Equitable Building, Boston.

New Vaults, Coupon Rooms, Reading and Toilet Rooms all on the street level.

This company has, in order to afford greater security to its boxholders, demolished their old vault and substituted a new vault more than twice as large as the old one, situated on a level with the street, combining in its construction every improvement which modern science and inventive genius have been able to devise for the protection of treasure.

Extensive coupon rooms, a reading room and toilet rooms are also on the street level. A luxuriously furnished department has been prepared for the use of ladies who rent safe deposit boxes.

Christmas Wreaths.

With eager eyes and happy, joyous heart
Awaits the little child for that gay time
Which, to us all, suggests such glad sweet things;
The day to worship Christ with praise divine.
Unto the child's young brain Christmas suggests
A turkey dinner, cranberry sauce and pie,
While presents come from very far and near;
A round of constant pleasures, ne'er a sigh.

A young man greets this day with thoughtful joy,
His heart has just gone forth first love to meet,
His thoughts are given in part to Christmas day,
And part to her who makes his whole life sweet.
The day brings that loved maiden's dainty gift,
Which in his heart and care he treasures deep;
Retaining it to gaze on till he can
Have her his own, to cherish, love and keep.

With eighty winters bowing down his form
The old man sits, while Christmas speeds along
And dawns with crystal brightness o'er the earth,
Bringing with it laughter, love and song.
How Jesus came to earth—first saw the light,
Of blessings which upon that day are given.
Into the old man's mind comes first. His thoughts
Leave earth behind and flutter up to heaven.

And thus it is with child and youth and age,
Yet o'er them all the spell of Christmas falls
And gives to each a different kind of joy,
In each phase sweet,—each one some blessing calls.
The sacred light of e'en the day must give
One soothing comfort to each one on earth,
The thought of Christ who saw the world first then,
Upon the day t e dear one of his birth.

RUTH BASSETT.

Notes and Comments.

—Last year's weather reports cost a million dollars; and it was thought by many to be pretty poor weather, considering the price.

—The New York executive mansion at Albany has got to be enlarged in order to accommodate Governor-elect Morton's fifteen family servants. It wasn't built for quite so large a retinue.

—David J. Barry of Hingham has shook the dust of the town from his feet, and left many creditors behind. Also a young wife, to whom he was married only last January. She was Miss Thompson of North Weymouth.

—A petition is in circulation at Franklin, Mass., asking the Legislature to change the law so that the state shall pay the full value of the cattle destroyed by order of the Cattle Commission, instead of half, as now. It is receiving numerous signatures.

—Plans are being formulated for an Episcopal Cathedral at Washington. The Methodist University to be located there is already an assured fact, ground having been bought and a considerable sum for its construction raised. The Columbian University there is practically a Baptist institution. It is thought eventually all the great denominations will have educational institutions at the capitol.

—The United States Investor takes a sound position in opposing the reprehensible practice of New England towns in offering locations free of rent or taxes or both to attract manufacturing establishments their way. "The booming of towns in this way," it says, "has been carried 'to a dangerous point in New England, fictitious values being imparted to estate, and a general condition of unhealthiness to business as a whole."

Anecdotes.

Little Girl—"My papa has to get up awful early, so as to get to the office and see if his clerks is there attending to business."

Little Boy—"My papa don't have to. He's one of the clerks."

"Have you got any stale bread?" asked Johnny Fizzletop, sticking his head into a baker's shop up in Harlem.

"Yes, I have five or six loaves."

"Serves you right. Why didn't you sell 'em while they were fresh?"

Little Dinah—"Oh, Miss Minnie! You ain't gwine to hang up a stockin' wid a hole in it, is you?"

Minnie—"Yes, I am. And I'm a-doin' it a-purpose, too. I want Santa Claus to see that I don't want any little bits o' things. Anything that'll stay in my stocking 'll have to have some size to it."

Little Dinah—"Well, ef you gwine to do dat, Miss Minnie, won't you please, ma'am, lemme hang one o' mine under yours, so's I can ketch de drippin's?"

"So you will take him for better or worst?"

"Yes," replied the woman who had married several times, "but he can't be any worse than my last husband."

"I tell you that idleness don't pay. The surest way for a person to get ahead is to keep moving."

"Guess you're right. That's the way four or five tenants got ahead of me last week."

ASK THEM WHY?

Ask the men who are making imitations of COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening, why they give up lard and try to trade on the merits of COTTOLENE? Perhaps YOU can guess why.

ASK HIM WHY?

Ask the grocer who attempts substitution, why he tries to sell an imitation when people call for that pure, palatable and popular vegetable shortening, COTTOLENE? Perhaps YOU can guess.

ASK YOURSELF WHY?

Why should not YOU use COTTOLENE, instead of Lard for all cooking purposes? It has the highest possible endorsement; from Physicians as to healthfulness; from Cooking Experts as to superiority; from housekeepers as to economy. Use COTTOLENE and stick to it.

Sixtieth Birthday.

Our esteemed friend, Editor G. W. Prescott of the Quincy PATRIOT, celebrated his sixtieth birthday on Thursday and was given a surprise party, by his many personal friends and newspaper associates.—Revere Journal.

We should have been very much pleased to be present at the surprise party, but circumstances over which we have no control prevented. Mr. Prescott is a most estimable gentleman, of many sterling qualities, and is beloved and respected not only by his fellow citizens of Quincy and neighborhood, but by the Massachusetts and Suburban Press Association, in both of which he is an officer. We hope the surprise was an eminent success and an honor to the recipient. Mr. Prescott was in Reading at our 68th anniversary, five years ago.—Reading Chronicle.

We have received an invitation to attend a surprise party which is to be given Mr. George W. Prescott of the Quincy PATRIOT and DAILY LEDGER and regret exceedingly that we cannot be present as other engagements prevent. We have long been acquainted with Mr. Prescott and can bear evidence of his many excellent qualities —Gloucester Daily Times.

Mr. Prescott has been connected with the PATRIOT over forty-one years and is one of the most respected newspaper men in New England. His friends made his birthday a very pleasant one for him.—Charlestown Enterprise.

We wish our neighboring contemporary a brighter and more prosperous career than it has had in the past, which has been exceptional among country newspapers. And to Mr. Prescott, who has passed his sixtieth birthday yesterday, we wish many years of editorial happiness and a continued prosperity in his business.—Weymouth Gazette.

The PATRIOT has been an excellent paper and rewarded with a liberal patronage, which is no more than its deserts; the future is bright for the new proprietors of the staunch PATRIOT, which has breasted the waves of public opinion so long and so successfully. May its light still shine with a lustre that age will not dim, nor any newspaper rival will dispel.—Randolph Register.

The friends of G. W. Prescott, the veteran journalist of Quincy, gave him a cordial surprise party at his residence in that city, Dec. 13, on his 60th birthday. Mr. Prescott has ever proved himself most honorable business man and public spirited citizen. His influence has always been cast upon the right side in all local questions. For many years he has held honorable office in the different Editorial Associations of the State.—South Weymouth Sun.

Brother Prescott, editor and proprietor of the Quincy PATRIOT, was given a surprise party and reception at his home on Thursday evening. A large and notable company was present and there was abundant evidence of good will toward this veteran of the press from his home friends and those of the fraternity. The Old Colony Memorial gives him hearty congratulations on the good will evidenced toward him and the business success he has achieved.

Mr. Prescott and his amiable wife had been invited out to spend the evening, and when they were hurriedly sent for to come home, they found a whole house full of friends from Quincy and neighboring towns waiting to offer their congratulations. There surprise was complete. Music and refreshments were furnished, and the editor was made grateful by the reception of many costly and beautiful presents, one of which was a handsome easy chair presented by the seventeen employes of the PATRIOT OFFICE.—Dedham Transcript.

Brother Prescott, who has been for forty-one years connected with the Quincy PATRIOT, was given a surprise party on Thursday. There is a warm place for him—not in the next world, but in the hearts of the fraternity, and all who know him feel that he deserves the success that has come to him. Long life to Brother Prescott and the PATRIOT.—Norwood Review.

The guests began to arrive shortly after 7 and it was long after 10 o'clock before all had departed. Mr. Prescott was presented with two easy chairs and numerous smaller presents. Caterer Wales was in attendance. Rossi's orchestra of three pieces furnished music for the occasion. The Quincy Advertiser extends its congratulations to Editor Prescott upon his arrival at the three score years' mark.

Editor Prescott, of the Quincy PATRIOT, one of the ablest and best known journalists of the state, reached his sixtieth birthday on Thursday, and his friends reminded him of the fact by a genuine old-fashioned surprise party. Mr. Prescott surrendered gracefully to the invaders and a most delightful evening was passed. The Jamaica Plain News congratulates the veteran editor and hopes to see him in the harness for many a year yet.

The Dangers of a Scratch.

Scarcely a day passes that many persons do not, in some way or other, get a scratch, a small cut or a bruise that may break the skin. In most instances not the slightest attention is paid to this beyond the temporary annoyance of the pain and the possible irritation when the hands are put into water, or some subsequent blow in the same spot brings an exclamation on account of the hurt. This, while a common practice, is by no means a wise one. The air is full of floating disease germs, especially the air of cities and towns, and an injury of this sort, be it ever so slight, might furnish excellent breeding ground for some deadly bacteria. It is a good plan always to keep a bottle of prepared carbolic acid and glycerine, and frequently touch all bruises or sore spots with it. This is one of the most convenient and effective germicides imaginable. It is said by excellent medical authority that either this preparation or listerine would prevent half of the contagious diseases that afflict the country. It is believed that many cases of fever and other serious ailments can be contracted by a floating germ coming in contact with the abraded skin. Once snugly lodged in this most congenial dwelling place, the germ multiplies with amazing rapidity and soon overturns the entire system. Therefore, whenever there is a bruise or scratch or any injury of this sort, germicidal applications should be at once resorted to. Some physicians recommend the use of court plaster, but this is rank poison to so many people that its general use can scarcely be commended.—Ledger.

And one who has children will rejoice with K. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cent bottles. —A single cargo of cotton which left New Orleans a few days ago for Havre is worth $550,000. The ship carrying it is the Maroa, and the number of bales carried is 18,326, the largest number ever loaded on any ship in an American port.

Christmas Candies.

BUTTER-SCOTCH. Good butter-scotch is as rare as it is simply made. Here is an infallible receipt: Boil without stirring two cups of sugar, butter the size of an egg, and two tablespoonsfuls of water, until the mixture hardens and crisps when dropped from a spoon into cold water. Remove from the fire and pour on buttered plates to cool.

PEPPERMINT CREAMS. Boil together, without stirring, two cups of sugar and half a cup of water. When thick enough to spin a thread remove the tin to a basin of cold water and beat the mixture rapidly until it becomes of a white, creamy consistency. Flavor with peppermint, and squeeze through a pastry tube into quarter-dollar sized drops on waxed paper.

ALMOND NOUGAT. Blanch a pound of sweet almonds and when cool cut in small pieces. Melt over a good fire, in a porcelain-lined vessel, one pound of fine white sugar with two tablespoonfuls of water, stirring with a wooden spoon continually. When melted, add the chopped almonds to the syrup and stir for five minutes; take from the fire and add a little grated lemon rind. Place a well-oiled flat pan on the range in a warm but not too hot place. Pour the almonds and sugar into the mould. When brown, remove from the fire, turn out of the mould, cut into cubes and wrap in oiled paper.

BUTTER SCOTCH (very rich). One pound of sugar, one-fourth of a pound of butter, one gill of water, cream, butter and sugar together, add water and boil till ready to mould.

ICE CREAM CANDY. Three pints of sugar, three-fourths of a pint of water, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, boil till it ropes, remove from the fire and stir in any seasoning you wish and pull till white.

CREAMED NUTS. Form the fondant into balls, and place upon each shape a half kernal of shellbark (on one side only or on both), firmly pressing them in until they are retained by the edges of the bonbon.

COCOANUT BALLS. Grate a large nut and place in a cool place, then take one pound of granulated sugar, add to it a gill of water, place over the fire and boil till it is about to candy, remove at once and stir in the cocoanut. Let it cool, then make in balls the size of a small peach, put these on dishes to form, turning often till they harden. Divide the mixture and color one-half pink. These bon-bons are very ornamental on a supper or dinner table and also on Christmas trees.

CARAMEL. Three pounds of sugar, one-half of a pound of chocolate, one-fourth of a pound of butter, one cupful of cream or milk. Vanilla to taste. Cut or scrape the chocolate, put it with the other ingredients named above in a saucepan, with the exception of seasoning. Boil from ten to fifteen minutes, remove from the stove and beat well for as long a time as your strength permits, return to the fire and boil till thick enough to mould. Have ready caramel pans already greased, pour in after seasoning, when sufficiently hard make in squares.

OLD FASHIONED WALNUT TAFFY Take one quart of black molasses, put on to boil, when hot drop in a lump of butter, (teaspoonful,) try constantly if done, in cold water. When nearly done have one-half pint of walnut kernels stirred in and pour out on a large well-buttered dish. When nearly firm take a knife and divide off in two-inch squares, and set in a cold place.

OLD-FASHIONED MOLASSES CANDY.—One pint of the best New Orleans molasses and one pint of yellow sugar. Boil briskly for a few moments, then stir in one and a half or two ounces of the best butter cut into bits. Continue boiling until the bubbles grow large, then take up a few drops of the syrup in a spoon and put it on a cold plate, or, better, still a saucerful of snow. If the syrup hardens in a moment or two, you may know it has been boiled long enough. Stir in a pinch of soda (dissolved) as you remove it from the fire, and when it foams up, quickly pour it out to cool. This becomes very light when pulled and is a favorite variety. Flavoring with vanilla is an improvement. It requires about two teaspoonfuls of the strong extract for this quantity of candy.

GLAZED NUTS. Remove the English walnut from its shell in perfect shape. With a fine needle pierce each nut lengthwise through the center, leaving an end of the thread hanging. Prepare a syrup by boiling together one pound of granulated sugar and a half pint of water. Let it boil until a drop of the syrup will harden instantly in cold water. Do not stir it while it is boiling. Just before removing from the fire add a pinch of cream of tartar dissolved in a little hot water. After taking from the fire dip each nut, holding by the thread, into the syrup for a few moments, afterward suspending them in a cool place where they will not touch each other. Leave them until perfectly hard and if the syrup has been properly boiled the nut will appear as though coated with glass.

Christmas Cakes.

LEMON CHEESE CAKES. Powder two stale small sponge cakes and beat into the juice and grated rinds of two lemons, to which has been added three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Melt two ounces of butter and add to it all these ingredients; simmer over the fire for a few moments and then add very gradually two well-beaten eggs. Bake in puff paste shells.

CHRISTMAS NUT CAKES. Cream together two cupfuls of sifted white sugar and half a cupful of butter. Add the yolks of three eggs, one cupful of sweet milk, three cupfuls of sifted flour and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Stir into the beaten whites of three eggs one cupful of blanched and chopped nuts; add to the batter and bake in small tins. Ice with vanilla icing.

WHITE FRUIT CAKE. Cream one pound of butter and one pound of powdered sugar together, and to it add the beaten yolks of twelve eggs, one pound of sifted flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Grate one cocoanut, blanch and chop half a pound of almonds, and slice one pound and a half of citron. Stir into the stiffly-beaten whites of eggs, and add to the batter. Put in a pan which is lined with greased paper and bake slowly for two hours. When cold, ice with cocoanut icing.

BLACK FRUIT CAKE. Cream together one pound of brown sugar and one pound of butter. Beat the yolks and whites of ten eggs separately. Add the yolks with one pound of seeded raisins, one pound of currants, and half a pound of sliced citron, one-third of an ounce each of ground cinnamon and nutmeg, and one-quarter ounce each of ground mace and cloves, also one pound of flour that has been slightly browned. Add the whites of the eggs. Mix and beat well. Turn into a mould and bake for five hours in a moderate oven. Before using, ice and decorate with candied fruit.

APPLE TURNOVERS. One cupful of sugar, one cupful of milk, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, two large teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one egg, flour to roll. Cut in squares, lay a spoonful of apple sauce on each, turn over half, pinch the edges together and fry in deep lard.

DELICIOUS ORANGE CAKE. Rub thoroughly to a cream two cups of sugar and two-thirds of a cup of butter, adding three eggs beaten separately. Squeeze the juice of two large oranges into a cup, adding enough water to fill it. Stir this into the mixture, together with three and a half cups of flour, two even teaspoonfuls of cream-of-tartar, one of soda, and a little of the orange rind, grated. Bake in layer tins. For the filling, use one egg, yolk and white. Grate a little of the orange rind into this and the juice of half an orange, adding sugar enough to thicken.

CHRISTMAS PLUM PUDDING. The materials required are one quart of cracker crumbs, rolled very fine, three pints of milk, six eggs, half a cupful of finely chopped suet, or half a cupful of melted butter, one pound of stoned raisins, one pound of currants, one-quarter of a pound of chopped citron, two cupfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, one dessert spoonful each of ground clove and cinnamon and one grated nutmeg.

CRULLERS. Two cupfuls of sugar, rub into this, one tablespoonful of butter, add the well beaten yolks of three eggs, one cupful of sour milk, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, the whites of the eggs, beaten stiff, and enough flour to make a paste that can be rolled out. Cut oblong pieces about three inches by two, divide each into three strips, leaving them united at the top, and braid the three fingers together, pinching the ends firmly in one. Drop a few slices of raw potato into the lard to clarify it before cooking the crullers.

ALMOND MACAROONS. Blanch and pound finely six ounces of sweet almonds. Mix in a large bowl the whites of two eggs and twelve ounces of powdered sugar, and beat with a wooden spoon for fully five minutes. Drop through a pastry tube in pieces about the size and shape of a silver quarter on to sheets of buttered paper placed in baking pans. Bake in a slow oven for twenty minutes, until the cakes are of a golden brown.

SMALL ALMOND CAKES. Chop half a pound of citron and mix with it three-quarters of a pound of shelled almonds which have been blanched and sliced into halves. Beat six eggs thoroughly, and cream into them three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Add the nuts and citron, and after thoroughly mixing, sift gradually into the mixture half a pound of flour. Pour the batter into long, shallow tins, which have been well buttered. Bake in a quick oven. When done roll in powdered almonds and sugar. Packed carefully in tin these cakes will keep almost indefinitely.

LOAF CAKE. Three pounds of flour, two pounds of butter, two pounds of sugar, whites of nine eggs, small pint of yeast, some citron, two nutmegs, one pound of raisins, and a scant half teaspoonful of soda. Rub the flour and butter together, then add warm milk enough to make a soft dough. This should be done at night. In the morning, when light, add the whites of the eggs and sugar beaten together, the fruit, soda dissolved, and let it rise again. When risen put it in the pans and let it stand about twenty minutes before baking.

The Boston Stage.

Tremont Theatre.

The grandest spectacular production ever seen in Boston was presented by the Liliputians at the Tremont Theatre last week, and drew crowded houses nightly. The Liliputians are great favorites with the Boston theatre-goers, and the hits they achieved in "Humpty Dumpty Up to Date," will increase the large number of their friends and admirers. The play is sumptuously mounted, and gorgeously staged, and the clever little actors, headed by Franz Ebert, Selma Goerner and Adolf Zink, never before had a better opportunity to display their versatile talents as is offered to them in "Humpty Dumpty Up to Date." Scenery and costumes are of rare beauty and taste, combined with splendid coloring and magnificent light effects, while there is an abundance of mechanical surprises and effect.

Castle Square Theatre.

The Louise Beaudet Opera Bouffe Company, which numbers 65 singing and acting people, will come to the Castle Square Theatre next week, opening Monday night, Dec. 24, on which occasion will be produced the new Mexican comic opera "Jacinta," the maid of Manzanillo. It is from the combined pens of Alfred G. Rabyn and Wm. H. Lepere. The action of the opera takes place in the port of Manzanillo and the garrison of the Alcalde at Colima. The selection of Mexico as the scene of this opera is a very happy one in view of the fact that the picturesque scenery of that Central American country and the many colored garments effected by the subjects of Diag allows unlimited opportunities for the display of the scenic artist's brush and the costumer's art, all of which has been taken advantage of to the fullest extent.

Columbia Theatre.

The daintiest of all modern comedies, "The Amazons," by Arthur Wing Pinero, will be the attraction at the Columbia, beginning Monday next. "The Amazons" has already been seen in Boston, and made an enormous success at the Hollis street theatre. The company that will present it at the Columbia is under the direction of Mr. Charles Frohman, and is headed by Miss Johnston Bennet, who will play the part of Lady Thomasine. Miss Elaine Eilson will be seen as Lady Wilhelmina, and Miss Maud Odell as Lady Noeline. These three young ladies are eminently fitted for the three roles, and have met with the greatest commendation wherever they have appeared this season. The comedy is dainty and sparkling, and there is no reason why "The Amazons" should not make a decided hit on this, its second visit, as on its first.

Boston Theatre.

The last weeks of "In old Kentucky," the greatest of the many Boston Theatre successes, finds not the slightest decline in attendance. In the whole history of this, one of the largest playhouses in the country, it is safe to say that no dramatic production, certainly no melodrama, has had anywhere near the success, from a financial or business point of view, which has attended "In Old Kentucky." It enters now upon the last fortnight of its run at the Boston Theatre with the prestige of having broken all records, and of playing to more people and more money than any other attraction ever presented in Boston for a similar period.

"Shore Acres, Herne's beautiful comedy will follow "In Old Kentucky," Dec. 31, for a three weeks' run at the Boston Theatre.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The week beginning December 24, will be the second and last of the stay of the Della Fox opera company at the Hollis. Christmas day will be signalized by a special matinee, for which an enormous house is already assured. The success of Miss Fox in "The Little Trooper" during the last week has been unqualified, and it is hard to say when a more enjoyable comic opera has been presented here, than this one, which Miss Fox selected for her stellar debut. The bright little star is more winsome and charming than ever, and has added a host of new freinds and admirers to those she always possessed in this city. Many promises have been made regarding the magnificence of the production of "The Little Trooper," and it is a delight to be able to say that they have all been filled to the utmost.

Boston Theatre.

The season of "In Old Kentucky," which for nine weeks has held the boards at the Boston Theatre, attracting a phenomenally large attendance, is nearly at an end. But another week remains for witnessing the big, romantic melodrama, and all indications point to a crowded audience at every performance. Wednesday evening, Dec. 26, will undoubtedly prove a gala night, as signifying the 75th performance of "In Old Kentucky," and the second souvenir celebration. The souvenir on that occasion will be altogether different to that offered at the 50th performance but will be in every respect as artistic and unique, and will, besides, be characteristic "In Old Kentucky."

"Shore Acres" will follow "In Old Kentucky" Dec. 31, for a three weeks' run.

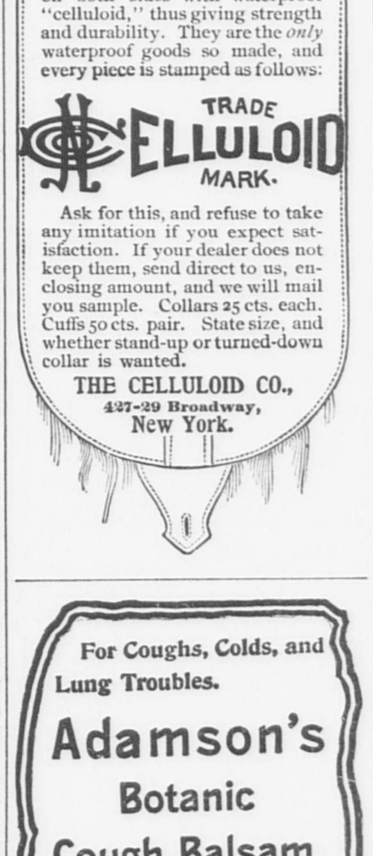
The National Peril.

I wish I could make all men who love their government see this great peril of the nation. Let us not shut our eyes to the danger. The republic must triumph over rum, or rum will triumph over the republic. All history teaches this, observation and reason confirms it. The sale and use have not ceased, nor "materially diminished," but, on the contrary, largely increased. Tens of thousands of victims go annually to the drunkard's grave from the homes of this land. Pestilence and war combined do not, in this country, equal its destructive energy. The waste of human life wrought every five years by our saloons is equal to the destruction of life by both armies—numbering millions of armed men—during the entire war of the rebellion. In their hand strong drink is a weapon so fatal that the drunkard makers are able to accomplish more in the same period than four times their number could with shot and shell, fire and sword, and all the appliances of modern warfare.

The cruelty of war is not measured by the number of those who fall in battle, by the unutterable woe and bitter anguish of broken hearts and desolated homes. Most emphatically is it true that the mere destruction of many thousands of lives every year affords no measure of the relentless cruelty of the liquor power in its war against society. To realize this you must go to the dishonored homes, question the broken hearts, read the voiceless misery in wan and haggard faces, hear helpless children cry for food, see them stricken down by drunken and infuriated fathers, and sometimes even by besotted mothers; witness the debauchery and ruin of youth, and the utter degradation, ignorance, poverty, and misery which everywhere and always accompany the victims of the saloon.—GEN. C. B. FISK.



A Clean Collar

One that you can keep clean all the time—a collar that does not wilt when you get over-heated; that does not fray on the edge, or tear out at the buttonholes, and can be cleaned by simply wiping off with a wet sponge or cloth. These collars and cuffs are made by covering linen collars or cuffs on both sides with waterproof "celluloid," thus giving strength and durability. They are the only waterproof goods so made, and every piece is stamped as follows:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Ask for this, and refuse to take any imitation if you expect satisfaction. If your dealer does not keep them, send direct to us, enclosing amount, and we will mail you sample. Collars 25 cts. each. Cuffs 50 cts. pair. State size, and whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

Harper's Weekly

IN 1895.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a pictorial history of the times. It presents every important event promptly, accurately, and exhaustively in illustration and descriptive text of the highest order.

The manner in which, during 1894, it has treated the Chicago Railway Strikes and the China-Japanese War, and the amount of light it was able throw on Korea the instant attention was directed to that little-known country, are examples of its almost boundless resources. Julian Ralph, the distinguished writer and correspondent, has been sent to the seat of war, and there joined by C. D. Weldon, the well-known American Artist now for many years resident in Japan, who has been engaged to co-operate with Mr. Ralph in sending to HARPER'S WEEKLY exclusive information and illustrations.

During 1895 every vital question will be discussed without prejudice in the editorial columns, and also in special articles by the highest authorities in each department Portraits of the men and women who are making history, and powerful and caustic political cartoons, will continue to be characteristic features. This Busy World, with its keen and kindly comment on the lesser idoings of the day, will remain a regular department.

FICTION. There will be two powerful serials, both handsomely illustrated—The Red Cockade, a stirring romance of olden days by Stanley J. Weymen, and a novel of New York entitled, The Son of His Father, by Brander Matthews—several novelettes, and many short stories by popular writers.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus.

The Volumes of the WEEKLY begin with the first number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the number current at time of receipt of order.

Cloth Cases for each volume, suitable for binding, will be sent by mail, postpaid on receipt of one dollar each. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Harper's Magazine

IN 1895.

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy, will be begun in the December Number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists, it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degree to that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc, by the Sieur Louis De Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January Number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern Papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empires. The next volume of HARPER'S MAGAZINE will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the MAGAZINE a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories, there will begin in the January Number the first chapters of A Three-Part Novelette by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the MAGAZINE.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus.

The Volumes of the MAGAZINE begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order. Cloth cases, for binding, 50 cents each—by mail, postpaid. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Harper's Bazar

IN 1895.

Elegant and exclusive designs for Out-door and In-door Toilettes, drawn from Worth models by Sandoz and Chapuis, are an important feature. These appear every week accompanied by minute descriptions and details. Our Paris Letter by Katharine de Forest is a weekly transcript of the latest styles and caprices in the mode. Under the head of New York Fashions, plain directions and full particulars are given as to shapes, fabrics, trimmings and accessories of the costumes of well dressed women. Children's Clothing receives practical attention. A fortnightly Pattern-sheet Supplement enables readers to cut and make their own gowns. The woman who takes HARPER'S BAZAR is prepared for every occasion in life, ceremonious or informal, where beautiful dress is requisite. An American serial, Doctor Warwick's Daughters, by Rebecca Harding Davis, a strong novel of American life, partly laid in Pennsylvania and partly in the far South, will occupy the last half of the year.

My Lady Nobody, an intensely exciting novel by Maartens Maartens, author of "God's Fool," "The Greater Glory," etc., will begin the year.

Essays and Social Chats. To this department Spectator will contribute her charming papers on "What We are Doing" in New York society.

Answers to Correspondents. Questions receive the personal attention of the editor, and are answered at the earliest possible date after their receipt.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus.

The Volumes of the BAZAR begin with the first number of January of each year. When no time is mentioned subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.

Cloth Cases for each volume, suitable for binding, will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $1.00 each. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Poetry.

Good Bye, Old Year.

The bells ring slow in muffled tone,
The chilly wind makes sadder moan,
The flowers are dead, and all must die—
Good-bye, Old Year, good-bye!

The laughing streams run coldly now;
Stern winter reigns, with iced crowned brow;
Fair summer is dead and you must die—
Good-bye, Old Year, good-bye!

Once you were young, but now you're old;
Our youth can n'er be bought with gold;
Your youth is dead; all youth must die—
Good-bye, Old Year, good-bye!

Your glory came; your glory's gone;
All glory fades time breathes upon;
Grandeur and pride shall surely die—
Good-bye, Old Year, good-bye!

You brought us many glittering joys
That cloyed and broke like children's toys;
Our joys you've killed, now you must die—
Good-bye, Old Year, good-bye!

You brought us much of galling grief,
But like our joys, its smart was brief;
If joys must go, then grief must die—
Good-bye, Old Year, good-bye!

Thou wast a year of hundred years,
Of glorious triumph that endears;
But ah! as others, thou must die!
Good-bye, Old Year, good-bye!

Though husks must die, the kernel lives;
So doth the truth each year e'er gives,
Thou brought's as much that will not die—
Good-bye, Old Year, good-bye!

Miscellany.

Making a Place for Herself.

If you want to understand this story, you must remember four things: (1) that Gordon & Co. and Saunders Brothers are two firms of furniture dealers opposite each other on Lincoln street, and that, as might have been expected, they are bitter rivals. Furthermore (2), you must remember that Elizabeth Conway (otherwise "Bess") is cashier for Gordon & Co.; that (3) Mr. Gordon and Messrs. Saunders have been "working" for different candidates for the school board from Bess's ward, each hoping to get the contract for furniture for the new school building; and (4) that Mr. Conway, Bess's father, has felt obliged to oppose the election of Mr. Gordon's man, as being ignorant and immortal. If you remember these four things, you may, for all I care, forget the multiplication table.

Bess came home one Saturday night with her big brown eyes flashing. That is something very hard for brown eyes to do, especially if they are big.

"Father!" she cried, bursting in on the family as they were beginning the evening meal, "Father! Mother! Grace! I've lost my position. Mr. Gordon has dismissed me."

"Dear me, Will! I was afraid of that. Why did you oppose Mr. Gordon about that school board?"

"Why, wife, dear, you wouldn't have me work for that beast of a Dawson would you? And think of him in control of our Grace's school!"

"But you needn't have said anything. Why didn't you leave it to some one else to oppose him—some one whose daughter had no position to lose? And we need the money so much these hard times!"

Here Bess broke in. "Father, I think you did just right, and mother will agree, I am sure, after she has got over my loss of my place."

"But now what are you going to do?" asked Mrs. Conway.

"Mother, dear, I'm going to find a way, or make it." was the cheery reply.

But, for all this appearance of bravery, Bess spent a sadly worried Sunday. She tried hard not to "let her heart be troubled," but into all the happy services of the day crept memories of the lost place, and thoughts of the dear household that needed so much every cent that could be brought into the family treasury.

A dozen plans were canvassed in her mind, only to be dismissed as impossible. "They say that women may take, nowadays, any place for which they have fitted themselves," groaned the brown-eyed cashier; "but what if the places are already filled?"

At last Bess had a bright idea. The more she thought of it, the brighter it seemed, and the brighter grew her eyes.

At the tea-table Mrs. Conway remarked: "Seems to me you are rather jolly, Bess, for one who has just lost her place." But Bess replied:—

"I have just found my place, Marmee, and I'm going tomorrow to ask permission to fill it. No one has ever been in it yet."

And that was all she would say about it.

Bess was not half so confident Monday morning as she was the night before, and all her bravery oozed out of her nervously twitching white fingers on the way down street.

"And to dare," she said to herself—"to dare to go to Saunders Brothers, of all men!"

Yet something told her she was in the right, and so on she pushed, down Lincoln street into Saunders Brothers', past the floor walker and clerks, right up to the business office of Mr. William Saunders himself. That gentleman was a pleasant-faced man, and listened kindly as Bess told, in a wavering voice, how she had lost he place as cashier of Gordon & Co., opposite, and thought she could be useful in his establishment.

"Why did John Gordon turn you away, Miss Conway. I have heard that you were his right-hand man—er—woman."

"For nothing that I have done, sir," said careful Bess; "and I can only guess at a reason, for no reason was given."

"Ah! I can guess, too. I know something about the stand your father took in that infamous school-board matter. But we are full here, Miss Conway. You surely don't expect me to turn off an old hand? That would be to imitate our friend over the way."

"No, indeed," said Bess; "but I think I can create a place for myself." Then she fell to an enthusiastic disclosure of her plans.

Mr. Saunders shook his head. It was something new, and novelties didn't "take" in Castlewood. He didn't know; he supposed, maybe, it might do no harm to try it. Yes, she might try it; but she must understand that it was just for this once; he would see how it would work.

That was all Bess wanted; she went out of the august presence with a leaping heart, and almost hugged Sam, the office boy, who had been given her as her assistant.

"Now, Sam," said she, taking him straight through the midst of the group of staring clerks, "You and I are going to do something that was never done before in this slow old town. We are going really to dress a show window. I am bound to outdo even some magnificent ones I once saw in New York—with your help, Sam," she shrewdly added.

Bess measured the big show window, while several of the clerks, who knew her and were not busy just then, plied her with inquisitive questions. They were all friendly, however, and very respectful to the doughty little woman, and one of the more gallant even offered to help her if she would tell him what she wanted done. But Bess had ample assistance in Sam, she assured them, and the arrival of customers soon drew them away, while Bess gave Sam his instructions.

That was a busy forenoon for the dismissed cashier. The great front curtain was down, hiding her operations from the street, and especially from the establishment over the way. Soon, moreover, the framework which Sam had erected hid her from the curious eyes inside the store; for the brisk young fellow had nailed together some long boards as a basis, and on these Bess had pasted wall paper till she had what seemed, from the front, a genuine little room.

Into this room, with all the resources of the large furniture store at her command, Bess directed Sam to bring this and that, and finally, just before noon, with a dramatic wave of her hand, she gave the signal for Sam to raise the curtain, while at the same time she stepped out of sight into the store.

A crowd quickly gathered outside the window, and Bess eagerly joined the crowd to inspect her work. This is what she saw: The great window had been transformed into the daintiest sleeping room imaginable. The wall paper was of a neutral tint, and on it were hung three choice water colors—beautiful landscapes—with that suggestion of restfulness and quiet that water colors are wont to have. The carpet was also of a dull hue, with a bright rug or two. The beadstead was of wood, but beautifully designed, painted white, with a fine line of gilt that made it look as shell-like as our grandmother's chinaware. The silken bed curtains were of a delicate pink, and were coquettishly drawn aside to disclose a wonderful bed, all white lace and the finest of white linen.

A little chest of drawers, with curved front, exquisite in its graceful outlines, stood by this fairy bed, and on it was a pretty china lamp with a light-blue shade, a Bible, and an a Kempis richly bound, a charming porcelain matchbox, and a letter lying open just where Miss Unknown had left it.

There was a marvel of a table—white and gilt, as was all the furniture—where on were my lady's calendar, her favorite poems, her choicest photographs, a box of bon-bons. There was a bewitching little bureau, with a mirror that must have been able to make a beauty out of the homeliest girl that could look into its sparkling recesses. And on the bureau were pretty bottles of perfumery, and lovely trays and boxes for pins and brushes and combs and gloves, and all the little articles a girl likes to have at her hand.

Here and there her photographs were stuck up. The pretty chairs were just where she had been using them. Why, there were her soft, fleecy slippers, just ready for her little feet! One expected the light portieres to fly aside each instant and disclose the sweet owner of this sweet room.

Everything was in such perfect taste, everything so harmonious and beautiful, and yet so simple and natural, that the little room had a genuine lesson in color and arrangement to teach all spectators. It was far more than an attractive advertisement—it was a bit of artistic education.

Bess drew a sigh of satisfaction, too, to hear the comments of the crowd; for even in the short time she dared to linger there, the entire sidewalk from which the window could be seen was filled with an open-eyed company. The fairy-like room held them as by a spell, for conservative Castlewood had never before seen such a sight. From time immemorial, the only adornment of that window had been a set of stuffy upholstered parlor furniture, and no window in the city had been better off.

Many, therefore, were the expressions of admiration. "Now, isn't that restful?" asked a tired woman. "Too sweet for anything!" exclaimed a bright-eyed girl. "Cracky!" said the small boys. "I'm just going to stand here till she comes," remarked a determined young man; whereat they all laughed.

Well, that was the first day. Bess told all her experiences to the home folks, around a laughing dinner-table, and then, of course, she and Grace must go down town in the evening to see how the dainty room looked by electric light. It was lovelier than ever; for Bess had kept that contingency in mind, and chosen her colors and grouping for night as well as day. The Gordon show windows opposite were dark and gloomy.

Tuesday morning Bess made a call on Mr. William Saunders, to learn results. That gentleman met her with a beaming face.

"Beautiful! Charming, my dear Miss Conway! You have scored a great success. Why, the sidewalk is jammed all the time, and Judge Brainard has ordered a set of that furniture for his new house. I trust I may receive his patronage now, though heretofore he has been dealing wholly with our friends opposite. And, by the way, the judge wants to engage the person who dressed that window to superintend the decorating of certain rooms in his new house. He said that every touch showed an artist's eye and hand."

Before Bess left the store she had made an agreement to dress that show window every fortnight, and for a price well worth while. That was the second day.

In the mean time, in the store on the other side of the street had been confusion and vexation. Mr. Gordon, in the first place, was disappointed in getting the person he had expected to take Bess's place. One of the clerks was acting as cashier, but that left the store with an insufficient force, and, besides, the young man was a better clerk than cashier, and made many lamentable blunders. Then, too, the success of the wonderful show window opposite was a sore trial to Mr. Gordon. The constant crowd about it, the universal admiration, and, worst of all, the attraction of some of his best customers into the clutches of Saunders Brothers—all this was gall and wormwood to the ward wire-puller.

On Wednesday morning he conceived a plan. He had heard that that novel window-dressing was the work of a young lady, and not, as he had supposed, of one of the Saunders establishment.

"Lanson," said he, to one of his brightest clerks, "I want you to inquire around and find out who it was that got up the show window opposite. Then send word to her, and tell her I want to see her. One of our clerks could dress a window just as well as she, of course; but I want to get her away from Saunders. Get her here this afternoon, if you can."

So it happened that at two o'clock that very afternoon Lanson stuck his head into his employer's office.

"That young lady is here," said he, with a twinkle of triumph in his eye. Then he entered, shut the door, and walked up to Mr. Gordon, saying, in a low voice: "She says she has had a good deal of experience as a cashier, sir."

"The very thing!" exclaimed Mr. Gordon, slapping his knee. "Send her in at once."

Young Lanson withdrew, and soon returned, opening the door for a young lady. In walked Bess!

The old gentleman was thunderstruck.

"Wh-wh-wh-at!" was all he could stammer. And, yet, to tell the truth, he was rather glad to see so soon again the fresh-faced, brown-eyed lassie he had turned away in a burst of passion five days before. When he had recovered a little from his surprise, he invited her to take a chair.

"So that was the way you took to get even, was it?" he asked rather sneeringly.

Bess reddened. "I didn't do it for revenge," she answered. "It was the only thing I could think of to do, and the only place I could think of to do it in."

"Well you'll come back, I suppose, if I want you?"

"You haven't asked me yet."

"I ask you now Miss Conway. I shall want you, to, to dress my front windows regularly, since you have shown such skill in that direction. And you must break, off, of course, with that house across the street."

"I must refuse the offer, sir. I have agreed to serve Saunders Brothers regularly in that way; and, of course, I shall not break off with those who were my friends in need. Besides, yesterday and today I accepted offers in that line from enough firms to keep me busy nearly all the time at excellent pay; and I have an opening for work in the decoration of houses. I shall be very happy to add your store to my list of customers."

"Hum! um!" grunted Mr. Gordon. "I'll think of it. Good-day."

So Bess went off with flying colors to her new work, a field she had marked out for herself, and one to which she was peculiarly fitted by nature and liking. She won distinguished success in it, and a comfortable living, with a neat little sum laid up in the savings bank. Gordon & Co. were added to her list of customers, and were served faithfully and brilliantly, though it is needless to say that Saunders Brothers received the especially choice designs.

"And all," said Bess, one day, as she returned from putting the finishing touches on an exquisite room, the library of a stately new mansion—"all this good fortune because my dear father did his duty bravely, like a man."

"Yes," added Mr. Conway; "and because my dear daughter did her duty bravely, like a woman."—Amos R Wells, in the Independent.

A Remarkable Road Project.

Probably the most daring venture in the way of earth road construction that the world has been introduced to, is the proposed highway across the Irish Sea, and connecting Torcor Point at the north of Ireland with Great Britain Deas Point, Scotland.

This stupendous sample of modern road engineering will be fourteen and one-half miles long and three hundred feet wide at the top. The most remarkable feature about it is that the filling of a part of the distance will be fully four hundred feet deep.

The wash of the sea will make it necessary to have the bottom of the embankment upward of a mile wide. As this road crossed the North Channel where the current is very strong, it is proposed to build into the embankment several power houses through which the water may pass, and act upon wheels thus furnishing a large amount of power which can be transmitted by electricity to both countries which are to be connected by this important wagon road.

It is proposed to run a double track across the artificial isthmus, on which electric cars may be operated by force of the current. (The current of water acting through the electric current)

That this is the the most unique and extraordinary scheme no one will deny. It seems extremely practical, however, being only a question of money, with a possible doubt as to whether there is enough free soil in Ireland to build the end of it.

If this thing is done, and there is no good reason for saying that it will not be, we may next expect to hear of a dirt road across the English Channel. Those who have crossed it on shipboard in rough weather will understand the advantages of a good solid road "built from the ground up." Imagine a traveler crossing the English Channel while calmly seated in a parlor car and enjoying meanwhile the full possession of his faculties (and his dinner.) It is entirely within the possibilities and those who are in good health and not too old will probably live to see it.—Real Estate and Building Record.

Well Dressed.

I once heard a mother who was criticised for her personal vanity by a somewhat gossipy neighbor, say that she made it a duty and a pleasure to keep well-dressed, for she was likely at any hour to be called upon to entertain friends whose good opinion was of such consequence that she could not afford to run the risk of having them find her in any but neat and presentable attire. The friends were her husband and children, and she was fully compensated for her care in this direction by their approval and appreciation. To be "well dressed" was not to her mind an admission of extravagance. "Good taste and good planning often stand in place of dollars and cents, and the lady in question was able to dress well on half the cost of her neighbor's wardrobe.—Laws of Life.

A Little Thought.

It is told of some mother, who was a rigid disciplinarian, that whenever her little girl particularly desired to wear one frock, she considered it a matter of duty that the child should wear another.

"It is entirely wrong to indulge children's notions," she said. "They should be trained not to think of their clothes, but simply to wear what is put on them."

"But don't you believe," some pitying on-looker suggested, "that the child really thinks more about the matter when the frock you make her wear is so distasteful?" "She must learn not to dislike it," returned the mother, carelessly, "I have told her to wear it. That is enough."

The friend remembered the little girl's screams and protests, and the flushed passionate face with which she ran out of the room and slammed the door—which "wooden oath" apparently passed unnoticed by the severe parent.

Remembering, she wondered if forcing the child into one special garment compensated for the price it cost.

"But what difference—" she timidly began.

"All the difference in the world," retorted the mother. "She hates red because she knows it is not becoming to her. Well, it isn't, but I shall not encourage vanity in so young a child."

"But you don't wear red yourself for the same reason," insisted the friend.

No; but then I have sense enough to decide wisely and then forget the matter. Grace may do as she pleases by-and-by.

Argument seemed thrown away. The friend was silenced; but took an inward vow to make a few of the prettiest frocks she could design for her own little daughters, and to chose styles and colors with special reference to their becomingness.

And when, afterward, some one remarked the extreme care she took in the matter, she repeated the little anecdote, and her own lesson drawn from it.

"It seems to me," she concluded gravely, "that the child's spirit and temper are of more consequence than the frock she wears. Red, blue, or green is of no particular consequence. Nor is the style; it is as easy to make a thing becoming as the reverse. I like, too, to see the children look pretty rather than ugly. All that is my side of the matter. On their side, it hurts their spirit to have remarks made about them by other people. It hurts their feelings to think I could so injure them, unless I was obliged to do so. And if they do have little notions about some matter of dress, it is better not to notice too much the notion, but to quietly see that there is no cause why it should torment them. I think, too, it is really easier to be good in a pretty dress than in an ugly one. I know it is easier to forget the dress and think only of the goodness, because it is easier to forget the satisfactory thing than one whose hatefulness continually torments us."

"I think," she concluded, with a laugh, "I'll make my children good in pretty dresses first. And when they've grown strong enough to bear it, I'll begin to insist that they shall be equally good in ugly ones. That's a natural development, and the other isn't."—Harper's Bazar.

A Mine of Marvels.

The vaults of the Security Safe Deposit company on Milk street, in Boston, are the strongest and best equipped in the world.

The company has recently enlarged and improved its establishment, and it now eclipses anything on the planet, and is worth a day's study and investigation.

There is a single entrance, a door studded thickly with iron boltheads, and grated with two-inch bars, through which the company's special policeman looks at the new comer. If his appearance is satisfactory the huge door swings silently open, and the visitor steps into a tiled corridor, patroled by vigilan attendants.

To reach the inside it is necessary to pass through one of two doorways. The doors are triple. The outer one is built up of layer upon layer of polished steel and looks like a section of a barbette from the Massachusetts. It is a marvel of mechanical skill and ingenuity. A sheet of plate glass covers the intricate lock mechanism on the inside surface. Here wonderful chronometers control a motor which, at 4 o'clock, shoot to a dozen huge bolts and the door is fast until 9 o'clock next morning, when the clockwork releases the powerful spring which draws the bolts. By means of a lever the door is swung back, but there are two others of steel drill work. To one of these President E. R. Andrews only has the combination; to the other Supt. F. G. Storey alone. Even if these two should work in collusion, the crash of a warning gong would apprise everyone of what was going on.

Inside are the 8,000 boxes, ranging from the great safes hired by railroad corporations to little drawers into which only a few papers can be pushed. Some are secured by combination locks, known only to the lessees and others by pass keys, but in every case a master key must first be used by the vault keeper, who has been satisfied beforehand of the right of the key-holder to open the box.

There are also pretty coupon rooms and a luxurious reading room exclusively for ladies' use. The male sex is banished, and a young woman attendant is ready to show feminine customers how to indorse a check or to aid in other ways, although it must be said that women are remarkably apt in apprehending the intricacies of business and make no more absurd bungles than careless men.

The electrical department of the vaults merits pages of description. Wires keep eternal watch and ward. Whenever a door is opened or closed a bell rings and the time is automatically registered. If the bell fails to ring or the stamp to work another gong announces the fact. Should the thief try to pry up the grating over the entrance to the place where trunks and cases of silverware and plate are stored he must inevitably touch a wire, set great gongs whirring with strident din and bring the Headquarters police to the spot on the gallop. Should by some miracle he get into the corridor and tamper with the bright doors, the vigilant electricity would detect him and the touch of a button would turn the live steam from six boilers into the pipes overhead and spurt it down upon him. To escape being boiled alive he would surrender.—Boston Journal.

For the Patriot.

Gurney's Criticism.

QUINCY FARM, Oct. 27, 1894.

On reading Mr. Gurney's Criticism on "Ships that pass in the Night."

So I have found extracts of your sermon on "Ships," etc., in the "Watchman." "All things come to those who wait," is a common saying, and is now once, at least, fulfilled, as I very much wanted to hear that sermon, being in Quincy on the day it was preached. Other influences calling me to Neponset, I lost my opportunity, but have now had the pleasure of reading your criticism, and as I do not wholly agree with you would like to express my views through the columns of the Quincy PATRIOT.

Some time last June a lady friend said to me "Have you read, "Ship," etc., I replied that I had not. She remarked that I had better not; she would advise no one with a morbid turn of mind to have anything to do with its teachings. Now, although I am not particularly "morbid," I have had my thoughts and ideas of the after life and some of them I would like to express to you through the columns of "The PATRIOT."

Of course, having a woman's curiosity my first thought was to read the book. A few weeks later, a lady, teacher in the High School, offered to loan it to me, saying she would like to have me read it, and would then like my opinion of it. As I was eager to read the book, I gladly availed myself of this opportunity, so I took it, read it, and liked it. Yes I liked it so well that I gave it a second reading.

My opinion was and is now, even after reading your sermon, that Bernardine was possessed of a Christian character. Christianity lived is my belief, better to possess it than profess it. Bernardine lived it surely in one way by forgetting self and ministering to those who needed comfort. Mr. Reffold, the invalid to whom she is attracted, I considered one of her best characters, although, I presume, were you to call the book a novel that the gentleman to whom she loses her heart would be the leading character or hero.

Having been told that the author was at present in his country, to see if a change of climate would restore to her her health I understand the book as Bernardine and Beatrice Harraden, the author, being one and the same person.

She then describes herself, her thoughts, feelings and intentions. The end of her story is unsatisfactory in a way, but again, regarding it in another light you would call it refreshing. Variety being the spice of life, as the old proverb teaches, and novels usually furnishing their heroines with their proper husbands, you are naturally disappointed at her sad death and the hero's sorrow.

Now I do not mean to infer that Beatrice Harraden died and then wrote her life, as I do not believe in the resurrection of human until the final day of judgment, but I do think she may have had an intuition that her death would result from accident, and rather anticipates it. Possibly she may be courted by man, but I should judge from the tone of the book, that she was courted only by that ruler of all mankind Death.

As regards Death, would you like to have a young girl's opinion of that, Dr. Gurney? When lying awake at night, one has time for many thoughts, and I know from experience that many ships pass in the night. Death signals to life, life upset, or sickness, is a stormy sea; our port is the new Jerusalem or The City of Destruction. Which port we will reach depends upon the captain we sail under, the crew and fellow passengers. The secret of meeting death, willingly, gladly and fearlessly is to so live that at the end we can meet our Creator without fear or or trembling, and I think "By our fruits He will know us."

Mr. Reffold had lived a selfish life, probably with no thought of his Creator whom he was so soon to meet, until he almost saw the reflection of his face in his reflections on "The little churchyard yonder.

Her character of "The Disagreeable Man." I think you cannot deny, is very well drawn. How many of us in life, not fiction, are making his "one great sacrifice." Human nature on a whole I consider selfish.

It is natural for one to consider self first, quite natural. We are more to ourselves than to any one else. If we live, our friends enjoy us, but then again, should we die, do they not find some one else to enjoy, and sometimes how soon! The character of that "man" as drawn by her is entirely unselfish, and brave, in that he is living, not for himself but his mother.

"Live for those who love you
For those whose hearts are true,
For the Heaven that smiles above you
And the good that you may do."

How many, many suicides we read of in the dailies! It takes courage to live and suicide I have always considered cowardly. Of course I make exceptions to that when the suicide is bereft of reason. Insanity, thou worst foe than death, how well acquainted I have been with thee!

And yet how true is the thought expressed in the words, "In the midst of life we are in death." It is not wise to wait until death desires an acquaintance. I believe it is best to become acquainted with the thought of death, which sooner or later over takes all mankind and women, also my grandma interposes when reading her Bible.

Those lines from Bryant's Thanatopsis written by a girl friend in my album, I always found comforting.

"So live that when thy summons come
To join that innumerable caravan
Where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death.
Thou go not like the quarry slave at night
scourged to his dungeon.
But sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust."
Approach thy grave like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him,
And lies down to pleasant dreams."

House Poison.

If condensed breath collected on the cool window panes of a room where a number of persons have been assembled, be burned, a smell as of singed hair will show the presence of organic matter; and if the condensed breath be allowed to remain on the windows for a few days, it will be found on examination by a microscope, that it is alive with animalcules. The inhalation of air containing such putrescent matter causes untold complaints which might be avoided by a circulation of fresh air.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

SATURDAY, DEC. 29, 1894.

Another Quarry Railroad.

Although business in the granite industry is unusually quiet, the manufacturers are active and on the lookout to further their business, which of course means just so much more for the workmen.

During the past few days there have been rumors of a movement on the part of some of the manufacturers to obtain better transportation facilities, and while in part some of the rumors are known to be true, the others are only in the wind.

The first rumor is that the Craig & Richards Granite Company is to move its cutting sheds from their present location on Water street, to Granite street near the works of Swithin Bros.

While it is not known for a fact that this firm is to remove its works, at present, it is a well established fact that the firm have bonded part of the Veazie property. The property bonded is situated on the south side of Granite street, just east of the Veazie block.

The next rumor is in regard to a spur track that will connect the sheds in this locality with the main line at or near the Quincy Adams station of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R.

At present the only way the firms in this locality have of shipping their goods is by team over the road to Boston, or to Quincy Adams where for the want of proper facilities it is sometimes necessary to wait hours before the use of the derrick can be obtained.

The scheme on foot, is to start among the quarries on "the Common" and from there in a southerly direction to the main line near Quincy Adams, taking in Swithen Bros'. sheds, the new sheds of Craig & Richards and others along the line.

If this project is carried through, its benefits will be great, and a new impetus will be given to the granite industry in this section.

Private German.

Mr. Theophilus King gave his daughter, Miss Zayma, a Christmas gift this year in the shape of a German on Saturday evening to which she invited about seventy-five friends from Quincy, Braintree and Boston. The house was handsomely trimmed with Christmas greens. Music for dancing was furnished by Loud's orchestra. Pretty little sprigs of holly bright with red berries and tied with ribbon were used for the favor german and looked festive in the button holes of the young men and on the handsome and many colored gowns of the young ladies. The ladies looked charming being in evening dresses of the daintiest of silks, crepes and muslins. Five or six germans were danced and the figures for each were very new and novel, and much enjoyed. A good old fashioned Virginia Reel was indulged in at eleven o'clock and wound up the evening's festivities, all scattering soon after for their homes. Those present were:

Miss Fay M. Hitchcock, Miss Jennie B. Field, Miss Sadie H. Whicher, Miss May Rice, Miss Mary Wales, Miss Remick, Miss Alice K. Prescott, Miss Marion Sherman, Miss Gertrude Sherman, Miss Kate Lincoln, Miss Lora Noyes, Miss Edith Noyes, Miss Jennie H. Richardson, Miss Ethel Keith, Miss Mary A. Souther, Miss Baxter, Miss Mary Huse, Miss Edith Huse, Miss Annie Eaton, Miss Edith Eaton, Miss Louise Farrington, Miss Katharine Lombard, and Miss Florence R. Emery, Miss Ethel Burke, Miss Mollie Dewson Miss Fairbanks.

Mr. Arthur Sibley, Mr. Harry Rogers, Mr. Harry W. Porter, Mr. Robert B. Porter, Mr. Frank Southworth, Mr. Harry E. Russell, Mr. Barker, Mr. Ernest Wales, Mr. Harvey A. Field, Mr. Carl C. Lane, Mr. George Wendall, Mr. Remick, Mr. John Whicher, Mr. John Wood, Mr. Eaton Pierce, Mr. Arthur Holden, Mr. Edwin B. Dime Sale at Wollaston.

It was a very happy thought on the part of the Sunny Hour club to hold a dime sale and entertainment to secure money to be used to pay for patching old clothes and shoes and give them to needy people.

The Sunny Hour club is composed of two classes of young men at the Wollaston Unitarian Sunday School,—Mrs. W. E. Simmons' and Mrs. F. A. Page's. Mrs. Simmons kindly gave the use of her house to the boys for the sale and it was held on Friday of last week. The boys had entire charge and made all of the articles displayed. Avery Bennett made a very tempting cake, and also poured the chocolate with the assistance of Freddie Thayer, Tyler Brigham and Ernest Armstrong; and Horace Thomas and Fred Mitchell dispensed the lemonade. Jack Simmons and Henry Hervett presided over a table that netted something like five dollars, and of course it was the candy table. That kind of merchandise always goes when boys are around. And then there were three fancy tables with stuffed Brownies and kittens galore, holders and kindred things which a boy can deftly turn his hand to. These three tables were in charge of Harry Schumacker, Waldron Schumacker, Ernest Arnold, Lawrence Loring, Eddie Mitchell, Fred Jacobs, Fred Damon, George Judkins, Dwight Fenno, Richard Polson, Albert Armstrong and Harry Holmes.

At eight o'clock the boys gave a "bang up" entertainment, as they would express it. Tyler Brigham opened it with a piano solo, "A song without words;" this was followed by Harry Schumacker reciting "A Thanksgiving Dinner;" then a chorus of boys sang a Christmas Carol, Freddie Thayer singing a solo; Albert Armstrong then played on his violin "Little Romanze," and in responding to the encore played that wierd "Arkansas Traveller;" Horace Thomas recited "Good at Christmas;" and Avery Bennett closed the entertainment by playing on the piano Parcher's "Austrian Song," and in responding to the encore played Mendelssohn's "Song without Words."

The Furmingham Case.

The case of James Furmingham, for assault with a dangerous weapon on Leslie Smith, a schoolmate, came up on continuance for final disposition in the District Court on Thursday.

The court decided to continue the case one year, the boy in the meantime to be placed in the House of the Angel Guardian on Vernon street, Boston, under the charge of the State agent.

The Smith boy is reported as doing as well as could be expected and his recovery is only a matter of time.

The Sunday School scholars and teachers of St. John's church held their Christmas festival Wednesday afternoon at Hancock hall, and had a grand good time.

Nearly all of the cars of the Quincy and Boston street railway are now supplied with electric heaters, and even on the coldest days they are warm and comfortable.

Mr. H. H. Faxon has been assisting Santa Claus as usual in distributing Christmas gifts, and many young ladies are thanking him for the very handsome presents they received.

At the drive-whist contest by the Granite City club, in Durgin and Merrill's block, on Wednesday evening, the first prize was taken by G. W. Prescott and the second by Warren H. Rideout.

The article in Saturday's LEDGER on cigarette smoking among boys, meets with general approval and will have a good effect upon local dealers, who in the future will exercise more care in selling tobacco and cigars.

At the conclusion of the business meeting of the School Committee, Thursday evening, Dr. Sheahan made a few brief remarks, presenting Dr. Gordon, the retiring member, with two volumes of Holmes Autocrat illustrated by Pyle.

If the ward lines are not changed in 1895 no change can be made for ten years. This should be borne in mind by the officials who will have authority in the matter. It would be more satisfactory to divide Wards One, Two and Three into precincts.

The Congregational church will dedicate its new Chapel Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. There will be addresses upon the themes: "Our Chapel a Memorial," "Memories of Earlier Days," "Our Plant," and "Our New Opportunity. There will also be appropriate music.

Mr. Andrew Erickson lost a valuable horse of black-water Wednesday. The attack was an exceptionally severe one; the hind legs being completely paralyzed. If teamsters would only stop the horse at the first sign of weakness the mortality from this common trouble would be almost done away with.

We begin to wonder where our old Quincy Shakespeare club is. The President Z. S. Arnold, was lately asked if there were a vacancy in it. Twenty-five, was the humorous reply. As change is the natural order, may be it needs only to be recruited with some fresh blood. Let us hear from it. It is too valuable a piece of Quincy to be allowed to run to seed.

Anoher Crossing Fight.

The Braintree and Weymouth Street Railway, after failures to negotiate with the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., as to crossing the tracks of the latter corporation at Commercial street, East Braintree, stole a march on the railroad by quickly putting in the rails.

It had just been completed when President Kelly was summoned into the equity court to show why the rails should not be removed. The hearing took place Thursday.

The Selectmen of Braintree had granted a location across the railroad providing that frogs might be inserted, if the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. agreed otherwise in any other way.

The Street Railway people opened negotiations with Supt. Allen and Counsel Benton and claimed to have had an agreement with them, but at the hearing it was set up that application should have been made only to the N. Y,, N. H. & H. R R directors. The Court so ruled, and therefore the tracks are illegally laid.

President Kelley of the street railway will not, however, take up the tracks unless so ordered. It would not be surprising if the railroad removes them, but it is only a question of time when they will be legally laid.

Rev. Francis M. Hart of West Quincy, who was ordained to the priesthood Friday, Dec. 21, celebrated his first mass, Sunday, at St. Mary's church. The services were largely attended by many of his neighbors and former schoolmates.

Thomas Lamb, father of Councilman Thomas J. Lamb, died at his residence on Common street, Saturday, aged about 74 years. Mr. Lamb has been in feeble health for some years. The funeral took place on Monday. The interment was at Mary's cemetery.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Officer Ferguson, who has been on the sick list for two days, has returned to duty.

The installation of Rev. Robert Westly Peach as pastor of the Presbyterian church, occurred December 21st and was largely attended. The interior of the church was very prettily trimmed, especially about the altar, where there were numerous potted plants. The motto on the wall back of the altar was draped with evergreen, and the chandeliers also held sprays of holly and evergreen. The exercises were of an interesting nature and were listened with marked attention. The order of exercises as published last week was carried out.

Funeral Services of Mrs. Hubbard.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Priscilla C. Hubbard were held her son-in-law's, Mr. Washington I. Godfrey, Elmwood avenue, Wollaston, on Friday, Dec. 21. The services were conducted by the Rev. Edward A. Robinson, pastor of the Congregational society. The singing was by Mrs. Ralph J. Saxe and Mrs. N. G. Nickerson. Delegations were present from Ocean lodge, N. E. O. P., Beachmont, and the W. R. C. of Quincy. The floral tributes were beautiful. The body was interred at Hampton, N. H.

Mrs. Hubbard was born at Bradford, Mass., in 1814, and was for many years a resident of this town. Her husband, H. H. Hubbard was one of the contractors who build the old Boston & Worcester railroad, now known as the Boston & Albany. A daughter survives her, Mrs. Washington I. Godfrey of Wollaston.

High School Reunion.

The Board of Government of the Alumni of the Quincy High School feel that the time is now short to give proper notice of the first annual reunion to be held on Monday evening next, but they have arranged for a banquet to be furnished by Hendrie which will be enlivened by Baldwin's music. Patterson, the florist, will furnish the floral decorations. The post prandial exercises will include short speeches, and an impromptu dance will follow.

WOLLASTON.

The employes of the Tubular Rivet Co., of the room in charge of Mr. Joseph Lizotte, kindly remembered Mr. Lizotte on Christmas by presenting him with a beautiful solid silver mounted carving set as a token of their regard. The gift was a complete surprise to Mr. Lizotte, who thanked them in a hearty manner for this expression of their kind feelings toward him.

Mr. Edward H. Austin and Miss Harriet A. Knowles of Wollaston are to be married at the Wollaston Congregational church, Wednesday, January 2, at 1.30 o'clock.

Petitions are being circulated at Wollaston, requesting the management of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., to place a gong at the Wollaston depot and also one on the waiting shed opposite, to warn people of approaching trains.

The Guild of the Good Sheppard connected with the Wollaston Unitarian society gave a very pretty dancing party at the Knights of Honor hall, Wednesday evening. Mr. Percy A. Hull had charge of the arrangements, and Mrs. Hull, Mrs. Chas. T. Baker and Mrs. George W. Bennett was the matrons. The music was by Sprague's orchestra.

Councilman elect Bryant of Wollaston has just received two valuable second prizes from the Country Club Brookline. One is a beautiful pottery mug, silver mounted, won for a quarter mile dash with his black polo pony "Mouse." The other is a sterling silver cup of unique design, and was awarded for the best heavy weight polo pony, and was won by his chestnut pony "Beaulah." Both prizes are appropriately inscribed.

ATLANTIC.

Rev. J. H. Yeoman received a Christmas purse of $30 from his parishioners.

A letter-box at the corner of Newbury avenue and Depot street is much needed.

The Fortnightly club will meet with Miss Coe, Billings street, next Wednesday evening.

The Compass Whist club will meet next Tuesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Hall.

Dr. J. A. Bruce and wife of Everett, spent Christmas with his brother, Dr. D. A. Bruce.

The Atlantic Social club by request of many will give one of their popular dancing parties sometime in January.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Hall have returned from their wedding trip and taken up their residence in Atlantic on Walker street.

The Brownie Whist club composed of the society belles of Atlantic, entertained their gentlemen friends at the home of Miss Moxon Wednesday evening in a most happy manner. After two hours at the whist tables the merry party repaired to the dining room where a most tempting table was in waiting for them, which was most tastily decorated in white and gold. The ices were served by Miss Moxon and the chocolate poured by Miss Coe. At the close of the repast a short time was spent in the merry dance and all departed for their homes feeling they had passed the evening in a most joyous manner. The prizes were carried away by Miss Sadie Melzard and Mr. Fred Moxon.

Memorial church had not even standing room for the crowd that came to the Christmas night festivities. The Cantata "Santa Claus' Vision" was a pronounced success given by the young folks under the direction of Miss Annie Hall. The gifts from the tree were distributed by Misses Florence Gray and Minnie Kolb, assisted by Messrs. E. G. Hall and Theo. Parker.

In the sketch published of Councilman-elect Theodore Parker the date of his birth was given as 1853, when it should have read 1858.

Mr. W. H. Owen of Atlantic is away on a business trip to New York city.

When the janitor of Memorial church went to the church Sunday morning he found that some of the windows had been opened and a quantity of stones, onions, dog meat and other refuse thrown in. The windows were left open so that it was impossible to heat the church again before morning service.

Patrick Danahy of Dorchester was run over by the 7.05 outward train from Boston Monday evening at the Atlantic depot. He came out on one of the earlier trains and was waiting for a branch train for West Quincy. He busied himself walking back and forth across the tracks when he was struck and thrown, the wheels of the engine passed over him taking off his right leg just above the ankle. He was also severely bruised and cut. He was removed to the Massachusetts General Hospital, and may recover.

Quincy, Dec. 29. 1po-1t

—Letters of administration were granted Wednesday on estates of Eliza French and S. M. Norton, late of Weymouth; the former to J. H. French and the latter to Royal Norton.

DOWNS AND PARK.

The attendance at the song service at Norfolk Downs seems to be larger each Sunday, and by the way the people are taking hold of the movement, it promises, in the near future, to be a society that will compare favorably with many of the churches of our city. The address Sunday was by Rev. H. L. Cummings of Boston, Mrs. Parker of Weymouth sang two contralto solos and Miss Haynes of the Downs acted as pianist.

The damage at Wollaston will amount to hundreds of dollars. A house owned by Thomas Atkins of Wollaston Park, and which he was building for himself near the Vinton place, was demolished. The house had the roof on and was boarded in. At about 10 o'clock A. M., Thursday, when the hurricane was at its height it went over with a crash. Mr. Atkins had been at work on it for some time and outside of what lumber that can be saved out of the wreck, it will be a total loss.

School Committee.

An adjourned meeting of the School Committee was held Thursday evening, those present being Messrs. Crane, Gordon, Gurney, Burns, Sheahan, Porter and Harlow.

The chairman reported that the City Council had granted the transfers asked for.

Notice was received of the resignation of Miss Rogers of the Adams school.

Two petitions were received to transport the pupils of the Quincy school, [illegible] were referred.

Miss Perkins of the Washington school was granted an indefinite leave of absence, without pay.

Mr. Porter offered an amendment to Rule 1, changing the time of holding the annual meeting to the Tuesday following the first Monday in January.

The Superintendent reported that coal must be procured immediately for the High school.

A letter was read from Dr. George B. Rice, resigning as a member of the board.

The resignation was accepted and the chairman instructed to notify the City Council that a joint meeting could be held to fill the vacancy.

A vote of thanks was extended to Chairman Crane for the faithful and impartial manner in which he had presided over the meetings of the board during the past year.

Mr. Harlow for the sub-committee read the annual report of the board which was accepted. The report was brief and together with that of the Superintendent which was also read, will appear in full in the annual City Book.

Y. M. C. A.

Presumably on account of the storm, Prof. Lyman telegrabped Thursday afternoon that he would not be present that evening to deliver his lecture on "The Music of the Iroquois."

Mr. J. Roland Corthell gave a very interesting talk on the subject "Is it manly to be a Christian?", Sunday afternoon. He said that to be a Christian meant to take Christ: first, as a teacher; second, as an example; third, as a master; fourth as a Saviour.

Next Sunday will probably witness one of the most interesting meetings ever held in the Association rooms. The speaker will be Prof. R. J. Roberts, physical director of the Boston Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, the originator of the Roberts system of exercises and the author of "One Hundred Health Hints." Mr. Roberts will speak on the subject of body building and good health, and their relationship to the development of character. It will be filled with helpful suggestions and practical illustrations. The meeting will be held in the gymnasium, so as to accommodate all who attend. This talk will be well worth paying an admission of fifty cents, but no charge whatever will be made, although a collection will be taken. All young men are cordially invited.

All the young men of the city, as well as the friends of the Association, both ladies and gentlemen are invited to the New Year's reception Tuesday, from 4 to 9 P. M. when the members of the Women's Auxiliary will be "At Home" in the Association rooms, to receive callers. During the evening music will be furnished by the Malden High School Harmonica club, consisting of seven members.

Laid at Rest.

Although William M'Ewan of Braintree died suddenly without a relative in this country, a large number ventured out in the inclement weather of Thursday to pay the respects of friendship. The services were held at the Union church and the gathering included neighbors, town officials and many newspaper men. The latter included George W. Prescott and Frank F. Prescott, publishers of the OBSERVER, QUINCY PATRIOT and QUINCY DAILY LEDGER; W. A. Kane of the Reporter; A. W. Blanchard and M. L. Hawes of the Gazette; D. H. Huxford of the Randolph Register; H. F. Perry of the Associated Press; George T. Magee of the QUINCY DAILY LEDGER; Joseph F. Costello of the Globe; W. H. Cobb of the Herald; T. J. Collins of the Journal; Frank P. Hill, Thomas J. McGrath, Edward L. Goodidge, Maynard C. King, Edward B. Brown, Napp F. Bertherman, Edward H. Austin, Frank O'Connor and Hiram A. Hayden, Mr. M'Ewan's late associates in the PATRIOT office.

The remains were enclosed in a rich casket and there was a profusion of flowers. There was a wreath with the inscription "Braintree OBSERVER" encirling the dates "1834-1894," from the employes on the paper; a pretty pillow with the simple word "Mac"; another wreath of ivy and rose buds, and still another of pinks and choice flowers; a bunch of violets, and a sickle of ivy leaves, all from friends.

Rev. W. H. Alexander, the pastor, opened the services, reading from the Scriptures and offering prayer.

Rev. A. A. Ellsworth of the North Congregational church was pleased to take part in the services. Of late ministers had discouraged eulogies at funerals, but this was an exceptional occasion for eulogy; an occasion for kindly words. He spoke of his early acquaintance with the deceased. When Mr. M'Ewan came to this country, twenty-five years or more ago, he became an earnest worker in the Union church of which I was then the pastor. He told me he came over to fight infidelity. While of an excitable independent character, there was also a shyness. We are drawn to him today by the suddenness of his death. He was a man of human sympathy. He was well informed on all subjects and one never idled away his time when in his company. Then there was a kindly feeling for young people.

Mr. M'Ewan's town feeling was strong. It was an element of patriotism. His interest in Braintree was shown quite as much in the impurities he suppressed as in his pointed utterances. He was a lover of nature and these flowers today speak of fragrance. He was a religious man; not perfect or without weakness, but when all had been said he was more an enemy to himself than anyone else. It could not be said that he from malice ever said or did a mean act. He had a warm Scotch heart, and was a lover of poetry.

People were inclined to underestimate the home paper. It is often a wonder that they are as good as they are. The paper Mr. M'Ewan had given us was open to criticism, yet it had done much for the town and had faithfully chronicled its history. We loved Bro. M'Ewan for his sincerity and independence.

The interment was at the Plain Street cemetery, and four of his Scotch friends acted as pall bearers, viz: John Radclift, Michael Preston, William McGregor and James Wilson.

The Friday Club.

This ladies' club is in its fourth winter, and it is doing earnest work which is also a pleasure to its cultivated members. This year history is rampant; everywhere the attention of people seems to be turned to the past. We stumble over German emperors at every turn, and Napoleon confronts us at every step out of our beaten track.

The Friday club meets fortnightly in the afternoon, and imitates men's clubs in a bit of eating and drinking after the serious work of the hour is attended to. They have taken up the study of France, Italy, Spain, and this winter, Germany is receiving attention. A winter's session does not exhaust the study of a country, but much valuable knowledge can be gained in this time.

Well prepared original papers are read; extensive talks are given; old records, histories, maps, illustrated books, all help in the study of their subject. We think Quincy has never had a club exactly like this one, and although the members are generally young in years, good mental work is being done. A Scotland club is just peeping this winter, from which we may hear more in time.

The officers of the Friday club are:
President,—Mrs. George W. Morton.
Secretary,—Mrs. George G Saville.
Executive Committee,—Mrs. G. W. Morton, Mrs. G. G. Saville, Miss E. Randall, Mrs. H. Gurney, Mrs. F. Illsley.

The members for 1895 are: Mrs. Z. S. Arnold, Mrs. W. T. Babcock, Mrs. L Bass, Mrs. E. Crane, Miss G. Flint, Mrs. C. T. Hardwick, Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Mrs. F. Illsley, Mrs. G. W. Morton, Miss E Randall, Mrs. A. E. Sproul, Mrs. G. G. Saville, Mrs. F. A. Tupper, Mrs. J. F. Welch, Mrs. T. H. Wason, Miss C. E. Small, Mrs. H. Barnes, Miss M. E. Hardwick and Mrs. H. Gurney.

Their work commences with the physical features of Germany, next taking Saxon and Franconian emperors. The first great period of architecture and literature follows. The Reformation and the Thirty Years' War come next. The age of Frederick the Great and Maria Theresa come then. The Seven Years' War, Napoleon and Europe, and the fall of Napoleon are next in turn. Lessing, Goethe, Schiller are added. The revolution in Germany, the rebellion of 1848, the Austrian Empire and Kingdom of Prussia, the establishment of the new German Empire are the next numbers. Then come German home life, education, universities, scientists, cathedrals, painters, sculptors, architects, famous men, German political leaders, and Germany from 1871 to the present time.

This is only part of their comprehensive programme made out for this winter's work, and "unfinished work" which is last, makes one pleased at the determination to do thorough work in this admirable line. We hope the Friday club has come to stay and that these plucky and able members will extend their personal influence and efforts in other fields of excellence.

Death of Wennerberg.

Mr. G. Edward Wennerberg, a well known friend among good many citizens and Swedes in this city and Boston, died in his room, No. 281 Stevenson street, San Francisco, Cal., the 10th of December. Coming from a concert in the evening accompanied by another friend, both went to his room about 10 o'clock in the evening. They read poems and one specially "The Death's Angel," and looked over some of his various photos. His roommate, Charles Johnson, was already asleep. His friend left about 11.30, and Wennerberg went with him as far as the door said "good night, sleep well," and those were his last words.

In the morning the cigar store that was owned by Mr. Wennerberg was found locked, and it was thought something was wrong.

Then Johnson was found dead. Wennerberg was alive but died shortly. The gas valve was half turned on and his collar, necktie and vest was hung on the bracket, so probably when he hung up these articles he must have accidently turned the valve.

Mr. Wenneberg was an Odd Fellow and was captain in the Golden Banner. The funeral took place Dec. 16 from the Golden Banner's Hall, and hundreds of friends followed him to the last resting place.

Mr. Wennerberg came to Boston from Sweden in company with Mr. W. R. Lofgren, when he made his visiting trip to his home six years ago. He was cabinet maker by trade, and worked in different shops in Boston. Then he went to work for the Edison Electric Company and worked there till he left for San Francisco, about 15 months ago.

He was a member of an athletic club and gymnastic club in Boston. At the last presidential election he was captain of the Scandinavian club in Quincy, and also captain of the Scandinavian tug-of-war team in Quincy, which defeated the Clan McGregors two years ago. He was also a member of a tug-of-war team in San Francisco, on which he was the anchor on the winning side in the great $20,000 contest on Aug. 3. He was 25 years of age, single, but leaves a broken-hearted father and mother in Sweden, with despair at never seeing him at home again.

Skaters Get Into Canal.

There came near being a bad drowning accident on Quincy Canal Wednesday afternoon but fortunately, beyond being frightened and taking a bath in the cold water, no serious results will follow.

The tide was about half out and a number of young people were skating near the locks. Two girls Mary Foy and Miss Harkins were together when the ice broke beneath them and they went into the water.

Arthur Mitchell started to the rescue when he went in and sank nearly up to his neck in mud and water.

Then Dr. C. W. Garey started to the rescue and he also got in, and before he could get out Harry Slade had waded in and drawn one of the girls ashore, and Channing Furnald had rescued the other by means of a pole.

When all were once more on dry land, the doctor looked them over and advised that they get home as soon as possible, which they did, the doctor setting the example.

Harness Stolen.

Some one evidently needs harnesses and not being willing to get them in the legitimate way, has resorted to stealing and have selected J. W. Dennen at the John Quincy Adams farm as their victim.

The first visit made was Monday evening when an express harness was taken. Wednesday evening the thief made another call at Mr. Dennen's and carried away another harness with the exception of the bridle. The fellow was seen as he was making away across the field and was chased, but he got away. Meanwhile Mr. Dennen had driven to the police station and notified Officer Hanson who drove toward Neponset in hopes to head him off. Officer Holloran of Atlantic was also notified, but although sharp watch was kept the fellow got away.

Mr. Ira P. Wetmore a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy in his family for several years as occasion requires, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home.

For sale by Druggists and Dealers Everywhere.

The Storm this Week.

The storm which swept along the coast on Wednesday night and Thursday was one of the severest known in this section for years. The storm developed over the Gulf States Wednesday morning and moved slowly northeastward with increasing force during the day, the outer edge reaching here at about nine o'clock Wednesday evening, when snow accompanied by a heavy wind set in. Early Thursday morning the temperature moderated and the snow changed to rain and sleet. The storm continued with unabated fury up to Thursday noon. The barometer dropped to 29.25, and the wind at the Blue Hill observatory attained a maximum velocity of 100 miles an hour, with an average of 78 miles at 10 o'clock, A. M., Thursday. The wind at Wollaston at that hour registering the almost unprecedented velocity of fifty miles.

The electrics were blocked for sometime and pedestrianism was almost out of the question.

Many of the telephone wires were blown down or crossed, and as usual the local lines suffered to some extent.

A chimney on the house of Henry C. Weeden at Germantown was blown over and a hole torn in the roof.

At Johnson's lumber yard the boards and joist were thrown about as though they had been straws,

About 75 feet of the tin roofing of T. A. Whicher's factory was torn off and the smoke stack blown down.

Windows by the score were blown in at Wollaston. A large show window in Judson L. Smith's store in the Emery building was one. Glaziers were kept busy all day setting glass.

The stories that are told at Wollaston of the destruction by the wind are almost beyond belief. Large cedar posts were snapped off like pipe stems; hen yards and fences were blown down; and it is even said that a pung was blown upon a horse's back, and the horse ran home carrying it in that position. The last story needs a little salt to make it easily swallowed.

Bowling at Wollaston.

Teams C and D of the Wollaston Bowling Club, bowled on the Duck's Nest alleys Wednesday evening. Team C defeated D easily by 2096 to 1975. Fairbanks was high bowler, knocking over a total of 440 pins. Brock made the highest single score, 174 pins.

Steward Williams served a substantial lunch of hot coffee, doughnuts, pilot bread and cheese to the contesting team.

The score:

Anyone who has children will rejoice with K. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cent bottles. Christmas Wedding.

A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday, at the First Baptist church, Wollaston, the contracting parties being Miss Leila May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Pinkham, and Mr. Charles Eliot Goodspeed of Wollaston.

The ceremony was performed at half past seven o'clock by the Rev. Preston Gurney, pastor of the First Baptist society in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends of the bride and bridegroom.

The edifice was beautifully decorated with palms and ferns, and cut flowers.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a Swiss muslin trimmed with white satin ribbon, and the bridemaids, Miss Rippey and Miss Florence G. Olney, wore Swiss muslin with pink chiffon.

The maid of honor was Miss Ida Goodspeed, sister of the bridegroom, and the best man was Mr. J. Arthur Sparrow.

A pretty feature of the ceremony was that of eight young girls, gowned in white, who marched from the vestry of the church to the main entrance to meet the bride and her attendants, singing the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin.

The ushers were Mr. Walter S. Pinkham, a brother of the bride; Mr. Thresha A. Kiffey, Mr. Frederick E. Litchfield, and Mr. William Myers.

After the ceremony a reception was given at the residence of the bride's parents on Warren avenue to friends from out of town. Mr. and Mrs. Goodspeed were assisted in receiving by the maid of honor and bridemaids.

On Wednesday, Jan. 16, a reception will be given to friends in Wollaston. Mr. and Mrs. Goodspeed will be at home at their house No. 5 Warren avenue, Wollaston, after Feb. 1.

Doctors and Diphtheria.

The Board of Health held a meeting Monday afternoon at which the physicians of Quincy were present by request, to devise some plan to more effectually cope with that dread disease diphtheria, now so prevalent.

The physicians responded and offered many valuable suggestions as to the manner in which the disease should be treated should an epidemic break out as was feared at one time.

The most feasible plan was to build a separate hospital for the treatment of those afflicted with the disease, that they might be more effectually treated and to prevent as far as possible from contagion; also that a thorough system of fumigation be adopted.

There were a number of other valuable suggestions offered which will be fully considered by the board at its next meeting.

Skater Drowned.

About eight o'clock Monday evening, William Smith of Braintree went upon the ice at Little Pond. The ice was thin and he broke through and was drowned before he could be rescued. He had been upon the pond but a few minutes, and being unfamiliar with the place he skated too near an open spot and broke through. He called loudly for help, but becoming numbed with the cold he sank.

A boat was put out from the shore by a young man named Whiting, who seized the coat of the unfortunate young man and pulled him into the boat, while his companion drew it to the firm ice.

The body of Smith was taken into the engine room of the pumping station and restoratives applied, but without avail.

Christmas Giving.

Beginning with Sunday, the sermons at the Presbyterian church, Water street, were upon "The Christ Child," morning, and "Christmas Giving," evening. The latter discourse aroused a lively interest and has been followed by much favorable comment. The text was Col. 3:17: "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus.

The speaker severely arraigned the practice of the Christmas exchange of valuable gifts. This is not true giving, but trading; and either party to the trade feels aggrieved if what he receives falls greatly below what he has sent in probable value.

Among friends and relatives who are all in comfortable circumstance, and all the more emphatically when they are rich, the presents should be mere mementoes, of little intrinsic value; while such people should all remember the poor and needy with substantial and wisely planned relief.

True Christmas giving is Christ-like giving, which expects no recompense. See the Saviour's teaching about the banquet Luke 14; 12:14. And all giving should be "in the name of the Lord Jesus." This forbids the custom of giving to the children in the name of Santa Claus. It is robbing childhood of its sweetest story to substitute a myth for the beautiful history of the Babe of Bethlehem. Surround Christmas giving to children with all the pretty mystery at your command, so long as you keep to the truth. But teach the little ones that the gifts come from or for the sake of the blessed Jesus, who loves them as he did when he bade them come to him. Thoughtful children when they are undeceived about Santa Claus, either feel hurt that their parents should have deceived them, or else believe that it is right to tell untruths if no harm is meant; but nothing untrue can be told "in the name of the Lord Jesus."

Pretty Masquerade.

The masquerade at Faxon hall on Christmas night was a grand success and an enjoyable occasion. About 40 couples participated in mask and ten to twenty more couples joined in the festivities later. The grand march was led by Mr. Arthur Metcalf, as Little Lord Flaunteroy, and Miss Beatrice Porterfield as Baby. The fat boy and the fat girl were there, also the chevalier, the clown and Mexican, the milk maid and Bo Peep, the military man and Uncle Sam, Little Red Riding Hood and the darkey society girls, and a genuine cane and dude.

Prof. Holmes, violin, and Mrs. Rhines, piano, gave excellent music. Ice cream and cake were served at intermission. It was an enjoyable time, and the Roslindale, Weymouth, Braintree and Boston dancers will come again Feb. 22, when another party will be held.

Among those in costume were:

Miss Grace Cain, Grace Batson, Edith Chapman, Cora Dyer, Jennie Reith, Grace Spear, Mary Jilbert, Flora Gomez, Bessie Reith, Bertha Foss, Mrs. Porterfield, Mrs. Rice, Eva Bryant.

Mr. J. I. Condon, Horace Souther, Alice White, James Matherson, Frank Tarbox, Edward Myett, Louis Chapman, Harry Berry, B. J. Langhorn, Bert Halbert, Charles Merrill, John Bigelow, Charles Hobart, George Brackett, Monroe Perry, James Gillespie, Bert Curtis.

The Literary Society.

The "Philosophy of Emerson" was the subject of an essay read before the Quincy literary society, Dec. 21, by the able editor of the society's magazine, Mr. A. M. Craig. The vice president, Mr. William Traynor, occupied the chair, and the audience although not large was appreciative, and followed the essayist closely throughout.

Among American literary men Ralph Waldo Emerson stands preeminent as a thinker and teacher, appearing upon the world's stage at a period prolific of gifted writers, he assumed a position, and taught a philosophy peculiarly his own. Although opinions may differ upon the merits of his doctrines, there can be no question but he has wielded a vast influence upon the thought of the present century, both at home and abroad.

In the course of his essay Mr. Craig said: In treating of the philosophy of Emerson it will be necessary in the first place to define the term as simply as possible; and I know of no better definition than that given by Emerson himself." All the facts of natural history taken by themselves have no value, but marry them to human history and the result is full of life." In other words philosophy collects together all the facts that have been learned about nature from every available source, and applies the lessons thus derived to perfecting human thought. Emerson was well qualified for such a task. Receiving a liberal education. Possessing extensive knowledge of the results of scientific investigation, thoroughly independent in judgment, and unprejudiced by national or political liars, he constituted an ideal teacher. He had absolute faith in human nature; trusted implicitly in the supremacy of moral convictions, and never questioned the progressive triumph of good over evil. Of his unfaltering aptimism of his is one of the principal characteristics of his thought. Like an eternal star of hope its beams shine through every written page. To him earth itself was a heaven to which the human race was slowly but surely coming into harmony. To Emerson man seemed to have a dual personality; a spiritual and a material existence. Whatever was outside of man himself was unreal and indefinite; his own consciousness was all he could affirm."

After quoting Macaulay's remark that "to give the human mind a direction which it shall retain for ages is the rare prerogative of a few rare individuals," Mr. Craig proceeds: This prerogative is manifest in an unusual degree in the writings of Emerson. All that is sacred and noble in man's nature is irresistably lifted upwards in the perusal of his words. There is in them a lesson, an encouragement, an inspiration for the most lowly reader. His most eloquent language is used when impressively showing the blessings of self-respect, and urging the absolute necessity of self reliance. The pictures presented by Emerson stir up the dormant faculties to renewed activity; they inevitably bring to the surface all the latent power and strength that the reader is possessed of. He cannot fail to respond to the uplifting tendencies which engross him. The philosophy of Emerson is not an elaborate series of details for general adoption. It might briefly be summed up in the compound word "self-trust." Concluding the essayist said: There is in the writings of Emerson an inexhaustible supply of mental nourishment, an original insight that is profoundly infectious in its results, an accumulation of applied facts, a modest determination to stand firmly on revealed truth, and a dependence on moral obligation, "that time cannot dim nor criticism overcome."

Mr. Craig's paper which was exhaustive, and gave evidence of much study and research, was well received and as a literary production was very favorably commented upon. The remarks upon the subject of the essay indicated that among the members generally the writings of Emerson had not received that amount of attention which would enable them to give an intelligent estimate of the merits or demerits of his philosophy; but all agreed that in the essay read, ample proof had been given that a systematic study of the writings of the sage of Concord would well repay the time and effort thus expended.

The City Council.

Considerable business was transacted by the City Council at its meeting of Thursday evening, although in session but an hour. There was a unanimity of feeling and no debate and several orders were sent to the Mayor.

There were more absentees than usual, the list including Councilmen Clark, Holbrook, Johnson, Lamb, Lennon, Litchfield, Robbins, Snow and Sullivan.

Jurors Drawn.

The first business was the drawing of jurors and Mayor Hodges and City Clerk Keith were in attendance to take part. The names of John McKenna, Edward McDavitt and George W. Newcomb were drawn.

Reports.

Upon report by the Committee on Licenses, a license for an intelligence office was granted to C. F. Carlson.

The Committee on Ordinances reported that the proposed ordinance authorizing Mayor to make transfers of property ought to pass. Passed unanimously under suspension of rules.

Inexpedient to legislate was the report of the same committee as to amending Ordinance concerning Fire Department as to salaries. Accepted.

The recommendation of $6 per month State Aid to William Symond and $4 to Mary McCarthy were adopted.

The Committee on Finance reported inexpedient to legislate on order to transfer $300 from lights to streets. Accepted.

Mrs. La Pierre was given leave to withdraw on her claim for increased damages on Fuller's lane.

The Committee on Finance reported that the order to increase salaries of Assessors ought to pass. Passsed unanimously.

The same committee reported an order for transfer of $390 to election expenses and it was given one reading.

An order appropriating $3,500 additional for interest was reported and given one reading.

Councilman Waterhouse offered an order, that a committee be appointed by the President to inquire into the manner in which the money has been expended for play grounds for the city.

Upon its passage, President Bass appointed Councilman Waterhouse, Shackley and Baker.

Councilman Moxon offered an order appropriating $1,250 for permanent men and horses for the fire department in Wards Two, Four, Five and Six, on a six-year loan. It was provided that the horses and men work on the streets, and that the Commissioner reimburse the Fire Department for their services.

Orders Passed.

Transfer of $200 from Liquor Laws to Snow

For laying out of Clive street.

For laying out of Goddard street.

Allowing Fahey & Milford to run wire guy across Bates avenue.

Granting Electric Light company location on Sumner street.

Granting Telephone company location on Spear Street.

Amendment to ordinance establishing salary of Inspector of plumbing.

Relocating a part of Quarry street.

Councilman Lennon called for report of Committee on Sewers on reservoir on Water street, and Councilman Anderson promised a report at the next meeting.

Adjourned at 8.30 to Thursday, Jan. 3.

Church and Chapel.

The Sunny Hour Club of the Wollaston Unitarian Sunday school netted $32 at its sale and entertainment, which was held last Friday afternoon and evening.

The Wollaston Congregational society has collected about $190 for the Quincy City Hospital.

Rev. Preston Gurney of the Wollaston Baptist society, preached an excellent sermon from Luke 2: 10. This was one of his happiest efforts and was greatly appreciated by his congregation. The choir was assisted by a chorus of twenty voices and the singing was very fine. Mr. Chas. B. Dickey's tenor voice was admirably displayed in the song, "The Holy City."

The four o'clock vesper services at the Unitarian church are becoming very popular and the attendance is on the increase. The church Sunday was handsomely trimmed with evergreen and holly and the special Christmas music was finely renered. Many were present from other churches.

The Sunday evening service at the West Quincy Methodist church was a Christmas vesper service, entitled "The Babe of Bethlehem," during which the pastor gave a short discourse upon the "Star of Bethlehem," illustrated by blackboard designs.

The services of the Independent church in Wilson's hall, were interesting, instructive and largely attended. In the morning Rev. John Moore of Boston having unexpectedly come in, preached an able sermon from Acts. 10: 38, "He went about doing good." In the evening Rev. Wm. Steele spoke on "Nutshell Troubles from many Lands." Text: 1 Samuel, 24: 13. The song service and solo singing by Mrs. Steele, were pleasing features of the evening service. Come. Christmas tree entertainment tonight.

West Quincy Methodist church, Rev. E. W. Virgin, pastor. On account of his many engagements already made Santa Claus was not able to be at the Methodist church, West Quincy this week, but he has promised to attend the combined Christmas and New Year's entertainment which will be given in the church New Year's eve, Dec. 31, and he will not forget to bring his packs full of good things for the children in the Sunday School. Rev. Edward W. Virgin preached to a good congregation Sunday morning in the West Quincy Methodist church, on "The Meaning of Christmas and Santa Claus. He pointed out the lessons to be taken from this universal time of good cheer and showed the derivation of our Santa Claus from the Saint Nicholas the patron saint of children and also of the Dominican Friars.

How He Celebrated.

As usual, on the night before a holiday there were numerous incidents that were not all pleasure.

About 6 o'clock Officer Ferguson was notified that a man under the influence of intoxicants had fallen into Town brook in the rear of J. R. Wild's manufactory. Investigation by the officer showed that a one armed man named Timothy Sheahan had rolled into the brook. He was taken to the police station wet, and his face and clothing covered with blood, which was flowing from a cut over the left eye probably resulting from striking against a rock on the wall when he fell over. City Physician Welch was summoned and dressed Sheahan's wounds.

Good Shooting.

The Wollaston Trap club held a successful shoot on Tuesday forenoon at its grounds off Elmwood avenue.

Federhen was high man and made a remarkable score. On the team shoot he broke 24 straight and missed the 25th. He followed that up on the first string with 25 straight, thus breaking 49 out of 50 birds and eclipsing all previous records at the club's matches. On the second string he broke 23, making a total of 72 out of a possible 75.

In the team shoot Federhen's defeated Prescott's, 108 to 100. The Eddy brothers of Dorchester, who are considered crack shots, came over, Lewis being on Federhen's team (broke 15), and Darius F. on Prescott's (broke 19) Morse, who happened to be in Wollaston heard the shooting and went over to the grounds. He did not have his own gun and consequently made an indifferent score. Olney has been out of practice so long that his score in the team shoot was unusually low for him, but in the first string he sent it up higher. Tucker was there with his new Choke bore L. C. Smith gun and broke 10 on the team shoot and 13 on the first string. Prescott did not show up to good advantage until the second string and then he retrieved his bad luck by breaking 23.

The next shoot will be held on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Saturday Shoot.

Saturday's sharp wind reduced the scores at the Wollaston Trap club shoot. Prescott was high man with 18 on the first string and 19 double on second. Elcock, who is still suffering from his old malady, rheumatism, has to shoot his birds at a known angle. If it is pleasant the club will hold a shoot on Christmas forenoon at 10 o'clock and extends a cordial invitation to all to participate. The score:—

Court in Quincy.

Dennis Whalan of Randolph was fined $6 for drunkenness.

John Walsh for drunkenness at Quincy was fined $5.

Timothy Sheahan for drunkenness at Quincy was placed on probation.

Otis O. Bishop, William Dunn, and Thomas Shiney, were each arraigned for drunkenness, Bishop at Quincy and the other two at Braintree. The court gave them their choice of paying $5 each into the County treasury or spending Christmas at Dedham jail.

William Connors of Weymouth was sent to the Massachusetts Reformatory for being a vagrant.

Charles Johnson for being a vagrant at Quincy, was sent to the State Farm at Bridgewater for 6 months.

The case of William Flannigan of Milton for non-support, came up again Saturday, when after a hearing he was fined $12, from which he appealed.

A Pertinent Inquiry.

Whose business is it to look after City property? I see that vandals have broken one hundred panes of glass in the windows and doors of the old steamer house, and the whole structure is on the road to ruin. Where are the vigilant police? Are they color blind to sin?

The Christmas Ice Cream.

Caterer Wales has awarded his ice cream prizes for the most whales, as follows:

First prize,—Miss Mildred Willett, 296.

Second prize,—Miss Audrey W. Rhines, 157.

Several have been brought in since the polls closed.

☞ The largest body of cavalry that ever charged at the same time was the one under command of Sultan Saliman, that charged the Christian army at Nice during the first crusade. It is said that 200,000 men figured in the charge.

A Few Facts

are worth a wagon-load of claims, and speak louder than a volume of words. MR. N. G. NELSON of 46 Chelmsford Street, LAWRENCE, MASS., writes as follows: "For thirty years I have been troubled with a sort of Rheumatism, affecting my limbs and back; mostly in back and hips. I have used gallons of liniments, many bottles of medicine, and scores of plasters, all to no good. My backache was constant. The first two bottles of

Dana's
SARSAPARILLA
The Kind That Cures

I took improved my appetite, but not my back to any great extent. I continued taking DANA'S; and when I had taken eight bottles, the pain began to diminish. I took fourteen bottles during the season, and my backache left me entirely, and IT HAS NOT RETURNED SINCE. I took four more bottles, mainly as a preventive. I am now sixty-one years old, hale and hearty, and can do a big day's work. These are facts."

See that you get DANA'S.

Christmas in the Churches.

It was a Merry Christmas for the Sunday School children of Quincy who generally observed the Christmastide. Many of the services and festivals are reported below.

First Church.

The children of the First church had a grand time Monday in the chapel which was tastefully trimmed for the occasion with evergreen.

From five o'clock until nearly six o'clock there were numerous games, in which all of the children participated. Then their came supper, and down stairs they went, where tables loaded with good things to eat had been arranged by the ladies.

At seven o'clock all assembled in the chapel once more where they were entertained with a little play entitled "The Ruggles." It was during this play that Santa Claus was introduced and he made it lively for the little ones, for he showed them a beautiful Christmas tree loaded with pleasing gifts for each and all.

It was a grand time, and if the truth was known, it was equally as enjoyable to the older persons present as to the children.

St. John's Church.

Special Christmas services were held at St. John's church Tuesday, mass being celebrated at 5, 9 and 10.30 o'clock. The church about the altar was handsomely trimmed with cut flowers and palms for the occasion.

At the 10.30 mass Gounod's Sacre Chœur mass was sung, the regular choir being augmented by Mr. Daniel Padula, Mr. Sullivan of Boston and Mrs. Ita Welsh Donovan.

At 8 o'clock in the evening special vesper services were held conducted by Rev. F. M. Hart, assisted by Rev. John J. Garrity and Rev. J. P. Cuffe, with Rev. F. A. Friguglietti as master of ceremonies. Generalis vespers were sung by the choir. A special feature of this service was the singing of Rossini's Creation by Mr. Daniel Padula and Mrs. Ita Welsh Donovan.

Presbyterian Church.

Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock occurred the Christmas concert of the Sabbath school. There were many pretty recitations and dialogues, the singing included duetts and quartettes, besides the beautiful carols, and Sullivan's "It came upon the midnight clear" as a solo by the pastor. Then followed the gifts of fruit and candy to the children, including the many little visitors. The attendance was large.

Swedish Lutheran Church.

The Sunday School of the Swedish Lutheran church, celebrated Christmas, Tuesday evening, at the church on Granite street. The church was appropriately decorated for the occasion with evergreen and on front of the platform were two trees heavily loaded with good things. Before these were distributed there was a concert by the children consisting of recitations, etc., singing by the male choir and music by the Lutheran band.

Independent Presbyterians.

The Independent Presbyterian society held a Christmas tree entertainment at the residence of Mr. Neil McDougall, Granite street, Monday evening. About 100 were in attendance. The scholars, with the aid of a magic lantern, gave an enjoyable entertainment. The tree, loaded with toys, fruit and "little houses that Jack built" filled with candy, was stripped. The good things were received with enthusiasm. The organist, Miss Lizzie Essons, was presented with a tiny purse containing a shining gold piece, as a token of appreciation. After thanking all who contributed to such a pleasant time for so young a society. The meeting was closed with the doxology and benediction.

Christ's Church.

All the children of the Sunday School of Christ's church received a present from a bountiful laden tree on Christmas eve, and each was also the recipient of a bag of candy. The tree festival occurred in the church. The rector spoke briefly, and carols were sung.

Christmas day there was a special service at 10.30 with excellent music, which will be repeated next Sunday morning.

At Quincy Point.

Monday night was a perfect Christmas eve and the large number in attendance at the Washington Street Congregational church proved how much it was appreciated. The vestry was prettily decorated with green and the Christmas trees were gorgeous with their bright decorations and many colored candles.

The entertainment was in charge of Mr. George A. Sidelinger and passed off successfully. At the intermission between the first and second parts of the program, cake and cream were served to the members of the Sunday school. Mrs. A. F. Kelley kindly furnished the ice cream for the occasion. Santa Claus was personated by Mr. C. F. Randall, and he made an excellent Kris Kringle as all will attest.

The several committees and aids fulfilled their parts perfectly and everything passed off in a satisfactory manner.

Superintendent Charles Sherburne who has always labored so assiduously in the Sunday School was made the recipient of an easy chair.

At Atlantic.

The Christmas music was given as published in the LEDGER. Mr. Charles F. Merrick gave a practical address on "The origin and proper observance of Christmas." At the evening service, in place of the sermon, the following were given:

A Christmas greeting—Abbie Mann.
Trio—Marion Evans, Mabel Dorman and Nellie Moffat.
Chime on Sweet Bells—Flora Drew.
Star of the Orient—Bertha Mills.
Anthem—School.
O Happy Earth—Etta Harding
If anyone is cross to you—Ida Alger.
Christmas joy—Marion Carver.
I'm a Little Temperance Girl—Louise Wilde
In Bethlehem—Nellie Shaw.
Why Xmas comes—Florence Hill.
Papa, and Rosie and Me—May Nelson.

At Wollaston.

Christmas was observed by all of the Wollaston Sunday Schools this year.

Christmas was observed at the Methodist Episcopal church by a pleasing and successful concert by the Sunday School at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. One of the best concerts ever given by the school was enjoyed by the large audience present. The music was by an orchestra of four pieces, and the choir and school. The speaking was excellent, and participated in by the primary department, and some of the classes and pupils of the larger school.

On Tuesday evening a cantata entitled "Catching Kris Kringle" was given at the Methodist church. After the children succeeded in catching him he proved to be the same saint who had visited them so many times in former years, under the title of Santa Claus. Presents were distributed from the Christmas tree to all the members of the school and many other friends.

The pastor was remembered by his parishioners who presented him with a generous sum of money. The greatest surprise of the evening, however, was a gift to the church from the Epworth League of $65 81, earned in various ways during the past two months by the members of the league. This is to be used in payment of the current expenses of the church.

On Christmas eve the Unitarian Sunday School held its annual festival in the vestry. A little play, "The Old Woman in a Shoe" was given by Mrs. Charles T. Baker and half a dozen bright children. Then Santa Claus, Mr. W. E. Simmons, appeared and distributed presents from a well laden tree.

The First Baptist Sunday School also held its festival on Christmas eve. Santa Claus, E. S. Litchfield, dropped down from the roof, by a rope and after distributing the presents disappeared as mysteriously as he came, to the great delight of the children. Mr. Corthell, who is at present in Italy, did not forget the Sunday School which he has been superintendent of for so many years, and had a liberal supply of ice cream sent out from Boston.

The Congregational Sunday School celebrated Christmas on Christmas night. The vestry was crowded with little ones eager to catch a glimpse of Santa Claus,—Mr. A. L. Baker—as he scrambled out of the huge fire place. But when he did come a dozen little ones screamed with terror at the sight and had to be carried home. The Santa Claus in rhyme and story is always pictured as being dressed in white or gray fur, but this one wore a buffalo coat and cap, thus striking terror to the hearts of the children who had expected to see the regulation Santa Claus. But Santa Claus was a jolly good fellow and soon dispelled the fear as he distributed the presents from the great Christmas tree.

Sylvester Brown Inquest.

Judge Humphrey filed his return last Monday on the inquest on the body of Sylvester Brown of Quincy, who was killed by the cars at Wollaston Nov. 30.

The report says: Sylvester Brown came to his death Nov. 30, 1894 in consequence of being struck by the engine of train No. 792 on the Old Colony system of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., while attempting to cross the track of that railroad at the Wollaston station in Quincy.

The deceased had called at the Wollaston post office, and on the way home had come upon the westerly platform of the station just as the southbound express train was seen to be approaching, and, as soon as it had passed, he stepped upon the north bound tracks and was struck by the engine, before he had taken more than a second step, and thrown forward, nearly 75 feet, falling lifeless upon the westerly platform.

The train which caused the death of Mr. Brown, ran express from South Braintree, was due at Wollaston at 5 22 o'clock P. M., but was two minutes late, and was running at the rate of 40 miles an hour, or more. Its engine passed the rear car of the southbound train, either while under the Beale street bridge, or within a few feet of it, and the time which elapsed between the instant when the tracks of the railroad, at the point where Mr. Brown attempted to cross them, were clear from the southbound train, and the instant at which he was struck was scarcely more than three seconds.

No signals of the approach of this train was given, except the ringing of the engine bell, and this was ineffectual to give warning, since it appears by the act of Mr. Brown, and by the testimony of two witnesses, who were waiting on the platform to cross the tracks, that neither of the three had recognized the sound of it, up to the moment when Mr. Brown stepped from the platform.

It also appears that the projection of the westerly abutment of Beale street bridge shuts off the view of the headlight of that train from a person standing a few feet back from the edge of the westerly platform.

I find that the death of Mr. Brown was accidental, and that no person was guilty of criminal negligence in respect to its occurrence; but this death of an estimable citizen emphasises the fact that this point is dangerous beyond almost any other on this line of railroad and demands the immediate adoption of measures to diminish its hazards.

Cigarette Smoking.

Something should be done, and done immediately to put a stop to cigarette smoking among small boys. The extent to which this habit has grown has become alarming, and unless a check is made we shall have a generation of cigarette smokers.

Until one makes it a business to look into the matter no idea can be formed of the number of boys who are victims of this habit, yet it is a fact that nearly half of the young boys who are attending school in Quincy have acquired the habit and smoke whenever they can find money to buy cigarettes with, or some one who will treat.

These boys have no difficulty, providing they have the money, of purchasing all the cigarettes they want. To be sure there is a law against selling tobacco in any form to a boy under 16 years, but in face of that law there are dealers in Quincy who are so greedy for the almighty dollar that they do not hesitate or refuse to sell any boy, who has five cents, a box of cigarettes.

And the boys! They know as well as the storekeeper that every time a man sells them a bunch of cigarettes he violates the law; but they will not betray him. On the contrary they will tell any amount of lies, that the party who is administering to them the slow poison may be protected from the punishment at the hands of the law which he deserves.

One day last week Mr. Faxon found that through the acts of boys he was minus something like twenty-five panes of glass in one of his houses on Water street, and while at the Adams school building trying to find the boys who broke the glass he learned the extent to which cigarette smoking in that building is carried on.

Later with the assistance of Principal Nowland a number of the boys were interviewed to ascertain to what extent the boys were indulging in the habit. In nearly every instance the boys interviewed admitted after considerable questioning that they smoked. Only two or three of them would tell where they purchased.

The answers given by some of the boys served to show that they were on the road to ruin and would ultimately bring up behind the prison bars unless checked in their mad career. Some of the boys said they picked them up on the streets and smoked them; others said they had them given to them, and smoked every day, but the climax was reached when one boy made the sage remark, "If I told the man's name he would not sell me any more."

The boys all knew the law, but it was next to impossible to get any facts out of them, for they did not hesitate, or show any appearance of shame, at telling a lie about the matter.

What are storekeepers thinking of when they knowingly and openly violate one of the best laws, (if enforced) that was ever made? Something should be done, and that immediately, to prevent these storekeepers who thus disregard all semblance of honor from continuing to sell tobacco to boys under 16 years.

It is the duty of every parent to look carefully after their boys, and if they find that they have acquired this habit, find out from whom they purchase and bring the violators into court and punish them as they richly deserve. If one conviction is not enough keep it up until they have had their fill, and will be glad to abandon the business.

Stringent methods should be adopted, and the first thing to do is to shut off the supply, then to administer punishment to every boy caught smoking and the sooner parents wake up to this fact, the sooner respectable people will be spared the spectacle of constantly meeting on the streets and corners, boys with cigarettes and pipes between their teeth, or a cud of tobacco stowed away in the cheek.

It is also hoped that storekeepers who have been violating the law, will take warning unless they want to be brought before the courts.

In Chicago they are trying to suppress the sale of cigarettes, and have under consideration an ordinance which will fix the the license at $500. But they have a worse evil, boodle aldermen, who for $25,000 would prevent the passage of the law.

The City's Credit Good.

City Treasurer Burgin, Thursday borrowed $75,000 on a temporary loan at 2 5-8 per cent., which was the lowest rate any city has borrowed within the past 60 days.

He also sold $6,600 of bonds at 4 per cent., for the purchase of school house lots at "The Rail" and Norfolk Downs, to E. Rollins & Sons for $6,735 96.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therfore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address. F. J. AN IMPORTANT CLUB OFFER

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

BY special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE for 1895 and a full year's subscription to . . . . .

The Quincy Patriot

For $4.75.

If purchased separately these periodicals would cost $5.50.

IT IS THE PLAN OF SCRIBNER'S to give its readers next year a history of the past 25 years in the United States. (1869-'95). These years have been unparalleled in the history of the world for national development and material progress. The narrative will be written in a graphic and picturesque style by President Andrews of Brown University, and capable artists will illustrate it.

ROBERT GRANT, whose "Reflections of a Married Man" will long be remembered, has written a series of articles on the "Art of Living," in which he sets himself to solve, as far as such problems can be solved, questions which beset every well-to-do family: The Income—The Dwelling—Household Expenses—Education of Children—Married and Single Life—The Summer Problem, etc., etc. Beautifully illustrated.

GEORGE MEREDITH, whom more than one good authority has pronounced the greatest of living novelists, has written a strong serial, "The Amazing Marriage," to begin in January.

W. D. HOWELLS will contribute a novel entitled, "The Story of a Play."

IN THE LAND OF DON QUIXOTE will be a series of three sketches illustrated by a number of Daniel Vierge's wonderful drawings.

SINGLE ARTICLES in great variety have been arranged for and the illustrations will be elaborate.

SCRIBNER'S FOR 1895 WILL BE BETTER THAN EVER.

If You desire only SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE remit $3.00 to the Publishers:

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach." CARLOS MARTYN, D. D., New York City.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Eructation, Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion, Without injurious medication.

"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results." EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., 125th Street and 7th Ave., New York City.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, DEC 29, 1894.

For the Patriot.

Christmas.

'Tis Christmas Eve!
All nature sleeps
'Neath Heaven's star-lit sky;
Bright little heads,
(In downy beds,)
To sleep now vainly try.
Visions of day,
Drive sleep away.
No thoughts of sorrow
On the morrow
Their little hearts will try.
With minds intent
On Santa bent
Beneath his load of toys,
A Christmas tree
In fancy see;
Ah, me! What lots of joys
In store for you
My little girls and boys!
* * * 'Tis Christmas day!
They gather now
Beneath the Christmas tree,
With anxious brow,
All eager now
Their presents for to see.
With joyous sound
They cluster round,
Their voices loud and gay,
And wait impatiently to hear
What "Santa" has to say.
Dear children:
May your youthful life
Be ever free from care and strife,
May Christmas joys
Be always thine,
No stormy days,
But all sunshine!

BARBARA TRUE

Upon the Threshold.

Once more we stand, with half reluctant feet
Upon the threshold of another year;
That line where past and present seem to meet
In stronger contrast than they do elsewhere

Look back a moment, does the prospect please,
Or does the weary heart but sigh regret?
Can recollections smile, or ill at ease
With what is past, wish only to forget?

Say, canst thou smile when memory's lingering gaze
Once more recalls the dying year to sight?
Wouldst thou live o'er again those changing days,
Or bid them fade forever into night?

A solemn question, and the faltering heart
Scarce dare say "Yes," yet will not quite say "No;"
For joy and saddess both have played their part
In making up the tale of "long ago."

Here memory see the golden sunlight gleam
Across the path of life and shine awhile;
And now the picture changes like a dream,
And sorrow dims the eye and kills the smile.

So—it has gone—where all has gone before;
The moaning wind has sung the dead year's dirge,
Time's waves roll on against the crumbling shore,
And sinks the worn-out bark beneath the surge.

Here ends the checkered page of prose and verse,
Of shapely words and lines writ all awry,
There they must stand for better or for worse;
So shut the book and bid the year goodby!

—CHAMBERS' JOURNAL.

—Mrs A. Prescott Nash of Weymouth, a native of Quincy, has moved into her new house.

—Pray & Kelly, manufacturers of folding paper boxes, in Weymouth, shipped one day recently 55,000 boxes.

—Dedham is talking of giving $8,000 to secure a horse breeding and horse racing company to locate in the town.

—The gunners at Oldham pond in Abington have killed over one hundred and fifty geese since November 1.

—The fact that ten special deputies will be needed to collect the income tax of this state will bring to the minds of many men, that they would like to be one of the ten.

—As a consequence of the general use of soft food, it is predicted that the future man will be toothless. If that is really so, the men who make false teeth are going to have a snap.

—Reports are received of great distress among the farmers of the drouth stricken districts of Nebraska. It is stated that about 3000 families will need assistance to carry them through the winter.

—The practice of wrecking trains as an aid to railway strikes will be discouraged by recent sentences. A California court lately sentenced such a criminal to the gallows, and an Iowa court has sentenced another to the State prison for life.

—Archbishop Satolli has promulgated an edict from the pope placing three secret societies, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and Sons of Temperance, under the ban of the Roman Catholic church, along with the Masonic order.

—Two hundred farmers and cattle owners, representing 15 towns and 57 granges and farmers' clubs, met in Worcester, Monday, and effected an organization for the purpose of bringing about a change in the cattle law, so far as it relates to tuberculosis.

—The Georgia legislature has taken action on the Cotton States and International Exposition by making an appropriation for an exhibit. This endorsement will, of course, help to secure favorable action in other States. The appropriation is $17,500, but this will be supplemented in various ways and the exhibit will be a handsome one.

—In the valedictory of the Newark, N. J., Morning Times, which recently suspended, Thomas C. Barr observes that all he has to show for his investment of $200,000 are copies of the first and last issues, which he will preserve as mementoes. It is always expensive business trying to publish a newspaper that the people do not need or want.

—The Beverly Citizen, a smart, wide-awake weekly in Essex County, celebrated the birthday of the new city by appearing last week in 20-page form. It contained 1764 inches of advertising, almost exclusively of Beverly merchants, which speaks well of the business capacity of the citizens, and the life and energy of its publisher, Mr. Charles A. King.

—The world ought to move in an uneven fashion, when one considers the lack of balance in its affairs. While Chancellor Hohenlohe of Germany declines a $24,000 increase in his salary, and John Wanamaker says no to the offer of a $50,000 railroad presidency, men desirous of digging in the streets at $1 or less a day are met by the same disheartening sight of a former season, plenty of work, and plenty of other people doing it.—Boston Home Journal.

—If the cattle commissioners carry out the campaign they have inaugurated, the N. E. Farmer says, one-fifth the cows in Massachusetts will be slaughtered. Cows free from tuberculosis will bring high prices. The raising of heifers from good cows will again become profitable. There will be no surplus milk in Boston or anywhere else, and farmers will be able to secure what they have not had for years—a paying price for their milk. It will take time, possibly two or three years, to apply the test to all cattle in the State.

Fatal Accident.

Braintree was shocked on Christmas eve by a horrible accident to one of its best known citizens, Mr. William M'Ewan, for many years editor of the Braintree Observer. Death relieved his sufferings a few hours later at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Editor M'Ewan had just obtained his mail at the Braintree post office and intended to take the 6 24 outward train for East Braintree. He noticed, he said, the train approaching but thought he had time to cross, although warned to keep back. He was struck by the train and thrown some distance, landing between the platform and rail. At first it was thought he had been killed, but there was life and the unfortuate man was taken into the depot.

Dr. Henry L. Dearing attended him and found a bad cut on the head, his right arm nearly severed so that it must be amputated and other severe injuries. The shock alone was sufficient to cause death. The doctor telegraphed to Boston for an ambulance to meet the train, and Mr. M'Ewan was placed upon the 7.06 train, Officers Damon and Qualey attending him to the Massachusetts General Hospital. There it was found that the injuries were even more serious, and he passed away about ten o'clock.

The body was taken in charge by Undertaker King of Weymouth, and the funeral services were held Thursday at 2 P. M. from the Braintree and Weymouth Union church.

Mr. M'Ewan was born at Dimshalt, parish of Antermuchty, county of Fife, Scotland, June 28, 1834, making him in his 61st year. He located in Brainree in 1863, and for some years was the village grocer. He was also depot master for awhile. In the old country he had done some newspaper work, and he followed it up in this country by becoming Braintree correspondent for the Weymouth Gazette. In 1879 he began the publication of the Braintree OBSERVER. For five years it was printed at the office of the Randolph Register, and for the past ten years at Quincy, George W. Prescott & Son being the present proprietors.

Everybody in Braintree knew "Mac." He had many friends among all classes. In giving Braintree a good local paper for nearly a score of years he has done much for the town: in preserving its history; in working for its upbuilding, its advancement, and its good name. Braintree was his pride, and his work should not be underestimated. His talents were above the ordinary man. Some years ago he was active in church work and a member of the Union church, and was a God fearing man. He is not known to have any relatives in this country, but the publishers of this paper and other friends have interested themselves in the deceased.

Dinner Tables, Old and New.

The old English dinner table was a massive thing and was heavily loaded for dinner. There were huge joints, enormous game pies and the carcasses of poultry. It was considered the correct thing for the hostess to carve and to press the guests to gluttony and the host to pass the bottle several times too often. With such display of food there was little room for floral decorations. In the course of time the vegetables were banished from the table and handed by the attendants. Then the made dishes were dubbed entrees and were cleared off the table and brought in by the attendants, piping hot. Finally the meats were taken off, and at last the guests were permitted to eat or not to eat, without any influence on the part of the host or hostess, while at the same time the praising of the viands, which used to be the practice, no longer became proper. The appearance of the table, as well as the conduct at the table, has changed. The table is not so massive and the floral decorations are frequently of the most elaborate and costly description. People who cannot spend much money on floral decorations, yet devote time and taste to them, using such as may be picked wild, ferns, berries, etc., besides such cultivated ones as may be obtained.—Good Housekeeping.

Stage Superstitions.

"The show business beats the sailors for superstition," said the actor. "We are the greatest believers in omens that you can find anywhere on the face of the earth, and say what you please, the after-happenings invariably carry out the teachings of the signs.

"You know it is certain bad luck to have a funeral procession cross the line of march of a minstrel parade. That thing happened to us in Effingham, Ill., and by all odds that night was the worst we had ever struck. If a man comes into the room where a crowd of minstrels are, and if that man has an umbrella, he had better run for his life.

"Umbrellas are sure hoodoos. If we get into a car and find a humpbacked man, we must rub his hump or have bad luck.

"It is very comical to see thirty or forty of the boys rush up to the poor cripple as soon as they catch sight of him and greet him with a 'How are you, Mr. Smith?' and at the same time slap him affectionately on the back.

"This is done for an excuse to scratch his hump, and if done properly always brings good luck."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A New Mineral.

A new mineral has been discovered in Texas, which, it is thought, may prove immensely valuable in numerous industrial lines. It is claimed for this new substance that it is the most perfect insulator yet discovered; that it may be used as a paint that will resist the action of heat, salt air, salt or fresh water, gases or the other influences that destroy the paints now in use; that it will make a perfect varnish which the ammonia gases of the stable will not tarnish, and that it will remain undisturbed under all atmospheric conditions; that it may be rolled into a tissue, that it is entirely free from odor and practically indestructible when employed in the making of mackintoshes, canvas belting, waterproof tent, etc; that it possesses peculiar powers of penetration when applied at high temperature, enabling it to enter and fill the pores of iron and steel, making these metals absolutely impervious to acids, etc; and making common leather entirely waterproof, and that it may be applied to wood pulp in such a way as to transform that material into what looks and acts like ebony, or horn.

—A ring studded with diamonds and pearls hangs suspended to a silken cord around the neck of a statue in one of the most frequented parks in Madrid. It is safer there than in one of the strongest rooms in the Bank of England. Thousands of people pass it every day and admire its beauty, but the greatest thief in Spain hesitatas even to touch it. It is believed to deal out death to whom it belongs. The ring was especially made for the late Alfonso XII, who gave it to his cousin Mercedes on the day of their betrothal. Upon her death it passed into the possession of the king's grandmother, Queen Christina. Three months afterward she died. The king passed on the deathly band of gold to his sister, who died a month after she received it. The king then placed the jewel in his own casket of precious relics, and lived less than a year after he had done it.—Boston Herald.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. Va. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure.

Who is Old.

A wise man will never rust out. As long as he can move and breathe, he will be doing something for himself, his neighbor, or for posterity. Almost to the last hour of his life, Washington was at work. So were Franklin, and Young and Howard, and Newton. The vigor of their lives never decayed. No rust marred their spirits. It is a foolish idea to suppose that we must lie down and die, because we are old. Who is old? Not the man of energy; not the day laborer in science, art, or benevolence; but he only who suffers his energies to waste away and the spring of life to become motionless; on whose hands the hours drag heavily, and to whom all thing wear the grab of gloom. Is he old? should not be asked; but is he active? can he breathe freely, and move with agility? There are scores of gray-headed men whom we should prefer, in any important enterprise, to those young gentlemen, who fear approaching shadows, and turn pale at a lion in their path—at a harsh word or frown.

The Wonders of Hypnotism.

Prof. Currier almost took my breath away, says a writer in The Boston Sunday Herald, when, as I sat in his study at the Institute a few days ago looking out upon the Hudson, he announced it to be his belief that through the agencies of hypnotism a man who has been deaf from the day of his birth may be made to hear distinctly.

"The prophet of the Israelites spoke truly," said Prof. Currier, "when he predicted thousands of years ago the coming of the day when the eyes of the blind shall be opened, the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped, the tongue of the dumb shall be unloosed and the lame made to run and leap as an hart. My friend, this day is at hand. It is already here. Gradually a force in nature—a force first mocked and ridiculed, next wondered at, now studied and made useful—has been accepted by science. And now is heralded the news that through hypnotism the latant senses are to be made healthy and vigorous and the nerves which from birth our ignorance has hitherto allowed to slumber in him who through some defect in nature's processes has been unable to operate them, are to be made to convey messages of the mind as the electric wires convey messages."—Boston Sunday Herald, Dec. 13, 1894.

What Shall I Cook Today?

The women of New England are loud in their praises of the practical cook recipes which are printed every day in The Boston Daily Globe. "What shall I cook today?" the question that worries more women that any other, is also answered every day in The Boston Globe. The Globe prints every day a simple bill of fare, giving three meals, and will do so all through 1895. For this reason alone The Boston Daily Globe is the paper for you to take in 1895.

—A new charter for Boston has been the burden of the talk of the Municipal League of late, and the next Legislature will be asked to grant one on new lines. It is proposed to elect a mayor for a term of three years. Also, to abolish the present common council and to leave the legislative duties in the hands of a board of aldermen of twenty-four, so elected as to serve three years, eight candidates being elected annually for this term. The third principal proposition is to have a board of estimate and appointment, comprising the mayor, the chairman of the board of aldermen, the auditor and some business man to be nominated by the board of trade.

☞Philadelphia has a painter named John Indig. He has a porcelain letter sign over his door which reads, "Use Indig's Vermilion." Some mischievous boys took off the apostrophe and s and substituted the letter o. The painter is nearsighted he didn't know what the people were laughing at until he was asked for a pound of blue red paint for town-painting purposes.

☞Caycay, a West India island, is inhabited exclusively by turtles, some of which grow to an enormous size. Attempts to establish human habitations on the island have always failed. The turtles undermine the foundations of the houses, and not infrequently attack the inmates.

Anecdotes,

Miss Ethel, aged four, had retired for the night, when her mother asked if she had said her prayers.

"No, mamma," was her reply. I was tired, an' I asked God to 'scuse me. He said, 'Certainly, Miss Ethel; don't mention it."—New York Times.

Little Ethel—"I wish I had a new doll."

Mamma—"Your old doll is just as good as ever."

Little Ethel—"Well, I am just as good as ever, too, but the angels gave you a new baby."—Good News.

Porter of sleeping car.—"Your berth is the top one, lady."

Passenger.—"What do you take me for? A bundle of old fashioned dry goods that you want to put out of sight on the top shelf?"

Porter of sleeping car.—"No, madam: only an angel, who ought to be as near heaven as possible."

Arthur.—"Oh, papa, baby sister was born on Christmas, wasn't she?"

Papa.—"Yes, dear. She is a little Christmas gift."

Arthur.—Let's name her Eve, papa."

Papa.—"Why, dear?"

Arthur.—"'Cause then she'll be a Christmas Eve. And if we have Christmas eve every day, we can hang up our stockings every night; don't you see?"

—There are at least two sides of the woman question, and here is one which we quote:

"A woman's place is at home," So says the publication. Does he say it to his bar-maid?

Does he say it to the poor wife out washing, earning money which her husband spends at the bar?

Does he say it to the poor, lost girl spending the price of her shame in another glass of his fiery liquor?

No! He only say it to the women who, constrained by love for home, come forth to save and protect the home.

The Boston Stage.

Boston Theatre.

"Shore Acres," James A. Herne's great play which follows "In Old Kentucky" for a three weeks' engagement at the Boston Theatre, beginning Dec. 31, scarcely needs an introduction. Since its great run at the Boston Museum, "Shore Acres" has scored a triumph in New York, where it was presented 257 consecutive times. Arrangements are also under way for its production in London. In Brooklyn it broke the record. In Philadelphia it met a like fate. Mr. Herne is heartily congratulated on a success that has hardly been achieved by any similar play in this country. The scenery is entirely new, and was designed especially for this Boston Theatre production.

Columbia Theatre

Arthur Wing Pinero's dainty comedy, "The Amazons" has had its second representation in this city, and has scored a hit equal to the distinct and emphatic success it made on its first appearance. It will be remembered that on the latter occasion Mr. Daniel Frohman's Lyceum company gave the comedy at the Hollis. Since then, Mr. Charles Frohman has acquired the rights to the play, and a company under his management headed by Miss Johnstone Bennett has begun an engagement of three weeks at the Columbia theatre. Miss Bennett has taken the part of Lord Tommy, formerly assumed by Bessie Tyree. Miss Maud Odell is seen as Lady Noeline, in which Miss Cayvan appeared, and Miss Elaine Eilson is the Lady Wilhelmine, of which Catherine Florence was the original. The comedy has lost nothing by the change of cast, and the Columbia has held large and brilliant audiences at each performance.

Tremont Theatre.

For New Year's week, Messrs. Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau will send to the Tremont direct from Abbey's Theatre, New York, the entire grand production of Offenbach's "La Grande Duchesse," with the very beautiful artiste, Miss Lillian Russell, in the title role. The famous work has received a glorious presentation in the metropolis, and every journal, without exception, gave the most enthusiastic praise both the production, and, or course, to the fair prima donna. Miss Russell's chic, her dashing characterization, and her beauty all unite to her rendering of the becoming role of The Grand Duchess such as few probably could furnish on our stage today. At all events every writer has once more become enraptured over her beauty and grace, and it seemed like the earlier triumphs of her career.

Park Theatre.

The week before Christmas is universally acknowledged by managers to be the worst in the year for the theatrical business, but to the surprise of everybody, the attendance at the Park Theatre in Boston nightly taxed the capacity of the cosey auditorium, and this week people are being turned away from every performance for want of room. Charles H. Hoyt's latest play "A Black Sheep," which is the attraction at the Park, has achieved a success fully equal to that attending the production of the most popular of his preceding works. In this piece the brilliant young author has again demonstrated his wonderful ability to comprehend and cater to the tastes of the theatre-going public.

Hollis St. Theatre.

The annual engagement of Julia Marlowe-Taber will begin at the Hollis on Monday, December 31. In accordance with Julia Marlowe's usual custom, she will present at least one new character during her Boston engagement, and this occasion is to be signalized by the assumption of two new roles. The repertoire for the first week, beginning December 31, is as follows: Monday and Tuesday evenings and Saturday matinee, "School for Scandal;" Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, "Romeo and Juliet;" Saturday evening, "Twelfth Night.". Second week, beginning January 7: Monday and Saturday evening, "As You Like It;" Tuesday evening, "Much Ado About Nothing;" Wednesday, "Virginius;" Thursday and Friday evenings, a double bill consisting of "The Belle's Strategem" and "Chatterton;" Saturday matinee, "Romeo and Juliet."

Castle Square Theatre

"Jacinta," a recent addition to the list of light operas written by Americans was given its first Boston performance at the Castle Square Theatre Monday evening. One of the chief requisites nowadays for works of this class is an elaborate environment of costumes and scenery, both of which had been liberally supplied in "Jacinta," by manager Whitney. The work is full of color and love making. The two scenes are laid in Mexico, where revolutions are supposed to occur hourly; intrigues of various kinds, military and tender, are introduced, and the comedy element is supplied by a would-be ruler and his attendant, a censor of morals. The plot is not new, although Mr. Lepere has succeeded in presenting some new bits of busness by characters of a familiar mold.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

American invention has three times revolutionized the art of war.

The oldest existing oil well is the Rockland, four miles from Oil City.

A goose in Harrison county, N. Y., adopted a brood of motherless pigs.

The peacock is found in a wild state in India, Ceylon, Madagascar and many other parts of Asia and Africa.

The robin is always the last bird to go to bed in the evening. Its eyes are large, and it can see well by a dim light.

The bodies of moths are covered with a thick down because these insects fly by night and need protection from the dampness.

It is harder to blow out the candle with a cotton than with a flax wick, because the porous cotton absorbs so much more of the tallow.

According to a French journal, a Geneva firm is manufacturing phonographic clocks which talk the hour instead of striking it.

Signals used by ships at sea date from 1665. They were invented by the duke of York, afterwards James II, and so far as known were the only things he ever did invent.

PALE, THIN AND EMACIATED PEOPLE.

The country is full of them. They do not know what it is to feel well like other folks. Medicines of all kinds have been tried without good results. Cod Liver Oil and the preparations of Malt have all failed. What is the reason? These emaciated people cannot digest starch foods. The fat of the body is produced with bread, potatoes and other starchy food. If they will eat food that is artificially digested they will grow fat, strong, plump and robust. They will commence gaining flesh at once. The Flesh Forming Food is called Paskola. You can buy it at any drug store. Send your name to the Pre-Digested Food Co, 30 Reade Street, New York, and get their interesting pamphlet.

Household Receipts.

COLD SLAW. Put two beaten eggs into a tin cup; add to these four tablespoonfuls of vinegar, an even teaspoonful of mustard, two tablespoonfuls of salad oil and one of sugar. Stir this mixture over the fire until it becomes a smooth, slightly thickened sauce. Pour this over shredded cabbage, and place on the ice to cool.

BEEF SALAD. Cut fine, cold boiled beef, and to each pint add a tablespoonful of chipped onion, a teaspoonful of celery seed (or two sticks of celery, cut fine), one hard-boiled egg cut up, a handful of light bread, broken small, with skimmings from the pot in which the beef was boiled, and enough of the liquor to make it soft—a cupful of beef gravy will do as well, or a tablespoonful of butter rolled in flour, with a half cupful of hot water. Add two or three cold potatoes, sliced fine, and, after mixing all thoroughly, put in a deep pan and bake 15 minutes; serve hot with cold slaw.

SPICED APPLES. Pare, but do not quarter them; pierce each apple with two or three cloves, make a syrup of one quart of water, one cup of vinegar and one of sugar, with two or three sticks of whole cinnamon. Boil down a little and then drop the apples in and cook slowly on the back part of the stove for two or three hours. When clear and rich-looking, lift the apples carefully cut and turn the syrup over them.

ESCALOPED TOMATOES. For this dish use one can of tomatoes, one teaspoonful of salt, one-third of a teaspoonful of pepper, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one of sugar. one teaspoonful of onion juice and one cupful of dried bread crumbs.

Reserve one-fourth of a cupful of the bread crumbs and one tablespoonful of butter. Mix all the remaining ingredients and turn them into an escalop dish. Sprinkle them with the crumbs which were saved and dot with the reserved butter. Bake in a moderate oven for half an hour, and serve without delay.

CHOCOLATE MACAROONS. Six ounces of powdered sugar, one-fourth pound of grated and sifted sweet chocolate, two ounces of flour, whites of four eggs (beaten). Drop on buttered tins. Bake in a slow oven.

MARSH MALLOWS. Dissolve one-half of a pound of gum arabic in one pint of water, strain, add one-half of a pound of sugar; place over the fire and stir constantly till the syrup becomes of the consistency of honey; then, add gradually the whites of four eggs well beaten, stir till the mixture will not adhere to the fingers, have a pan dusted with starch at hand, pour into this, and when cool enough divide into forms usually seen. Marsh mallows are delightful if they are placed when a little stale in the stove and slightly browned.

A SIMPLE CANDY OF SUGAR AND NUTS. Blanch one-half pound of almonds; while moist cut into long strips, then dry thoroughly in an open oven over night. Melt one pound of granulated sugar over a slow fire, watching closely that it shall not boil; add the nuts and turn out on a buttered plate or tin. When half cold, roll flat with a greased rolling-pin and cut into squares. The slightest degree of boiling will produce a hard brittle candy disagreeable to eat. Otherwise it is not difficult to make. Hickory nuts, peanuts or pecans may be used instead of almonds.

Temperance.

Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. U.

A Net Loss to Humanity.

Where the truimphs of this rum property, its mines opened, its wilderness reclaimed, states created, or cities builded? Where its schoolhouses and churches, its railways, its canals, and its telegraph lines? Where one item contributed to the general weal? Where its revelations in science, art, or inventions? Where its blade of grass "made to grow where none grew before?" Shall we be pointed to here and there a towering manufactory of rum, or a palatial mansion builded by its profits?

The logic of cause and effect with relentless figure points from such a manufactory to a background of almhouse, jail, and penitentiary; of scaffold and potter's field; of blighted fields and squalid huts; from the princely mansion to the hells of domestic woe, where weeping Niobes vainly seek to shield there offspring from the deadly shafts.

For every child educated and clothed from the profits of the business, we will point to thousands beggared and entering the battle of life with but a heritage of poverty and sorrow. For every wife and mother clothed in affluence coined in the crucible of the still, we will point to tens of thousands who writhe in want and despair. For every man who accumulates wealth by the traffic, we will point to a vast army whose substance it has wasted, whose bodies it has enervated, minds imbruted, morals debauched, pestilent in life, and dishonored in death.

Its triumphs are achieved at the hearth and over defenceless women and children, portrayed in desolation, and chiselled in marble in the cities of the dead. If it builds towns and paves streets with gold, they are inlaid with blood and tears, and every passing footfall bears upon some broken tie. If it builds aqueducts, the tears it has caused will fill them. If it plants groves, each morning shall find leaf and branch glistening with tears. If it erect statuary, the slow unwasting finger is the humiliating index of a people's disgrace.

Harper's Magazine
IN 1895.

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy, will be begun in the December Number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists, it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degree to that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc, by the Sieur Louis De Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January Number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern Papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empires. The next volume of HARPER'S MAGAZINE will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the MAGAZINE a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories, there will begin in the January Number the first chapters of A Three-Part Novelette by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the MAGAZINE.

Harper's Bazar
IN 1895.

Elegant and exclusive designs for Outdoor and In-door Toilettes, drawn from Worth models by Sandoz and Chapuis, are an important feature. These appear every week accompanied by minute descriptions and details. Our Paris Letter by Katharine de Forest is a weekly transcript of the latest styles and caprices in the mode. Under the head of New York Fashions, plain directions and full particulars are given as to shapes, fabrics, trimmings and accessories of the costumes of well dressed women. Children's Clothing receives practical attention. A fortnightly Pattern-sheet Supplement enables readers to cut and make their own gowns. The woman who takes HARPER'S BAZAR is prepared for every occasion in life, ceremonious or informal, where beautiful dress is requisite. An American serial, Doctor Warwick's Daughters, by Rebecca Harding Davis, a strong novel of American life, partly laid in Pennsylvania and partly in the far South, will occupy the last half of the year.

My Lady Nobody, an intensely exciting novel by Maartens Maartens, author of "God's Fool," "The Greater Glory," etc., will begin the year.

Essays and Social Chats. To this department Spectator will contribute her charming papers on "What We are Doing" in New York society.

Answers to Correspondents. Questions receive the personal attention of the editor, and are answered at the earliest possible date after their receipt.

Harper's Weekly
IN 1895.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a pictorial history of the times. It presents every important event promptly, accurately, and exhaustively in illustration and descriptive text of the highest order.

The manner in which, during 1894, it has treated the Chicago Railway Strikes and the China-Japanese War, and the amount of light it was able throw on Korea the instant attention was directed to that little-known country, are examples of its almost boundless resources. Julian Ralph, the distinguished writer and correspondent, has been sent to the seat of war, and there joined by C. D. Weldon, the well-known American Artist now for many years resident in Japan, who has been engaged to co-operate with Mr. Ralph in sending to HARPER'S WEEKLY exclusive information and illustrations.

During 1895 every vital question will be discussed without prejudice in the editorial columns, and also in special articles by the highest authorities in each department. Portraits of the men and women who are making history, and powerful and caustic political cartoons, will continue to be characteristic features. This Busy World, with its keen and kindly comment on the lesser idoings of the day, will remain a regular department.

FICTION. There will be two powerful serials, both handsomely illustrated—The Red Cockade, a stirring romance of olden days by Stanley J. Weymen, and a novel of New York entitled, The Son of His Father, by Brander Matthews—several novelettes, and many short stories by popular writers.
